TEXT OF KIM IL-SONG'S NEW YEAR'S ADDRESS

SK010430 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0405 GMT 1 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 1 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, made a new year address for 1982 on January 1. The new year address reads in full:

Comrades: We have victoriously wound up the battle of the first year of the general march for the implementation of the decision of the Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea and greet the hopeful new year 1982.

On the joyous New Year's Day, the urban and rural communities of the whole country and all homes are overflowing with joy and happiness of the people who enjoy a fruitful life to their hearts content under the care of our party, and all our working people are firmly determined to fight on more stoutly along the road of victory shown by the party.

Greeting the year 1982 which will shine with new victories and honour, I offer warm congratulations to our heroic working class, cooperative farmers, valiant men and officers of the People's Army, working intellectuals and all other sections of the people who are launching out on the new year's vigorous march with warm enthusiasm and high loyalty to the party and the revolution.

Seeing the new year in, I extend militant greetings to the revolutionaries, youth and students, patriotic democrats and people from all other walks of life in South Korea who are fighting valorously for the democratization of South Korean society and the reunification of the country in defiance of the military fascists harsh repression.

I send wholehearted greetings to the 700,000 Koreans in Japan and all other Korean nationals abroad who are greeting the new year in far-away foreign lands, looking towards the socialist homeland as the beacon of hope, and wish them greater happiness in the coming year.

1981 was a year of glorious struggle for carrying into effect the grand programme of socialist construction put forward by our party at its sixth congress. Last year our heroic working class and the entire toiling people who are boundlessly loyal to the party and the revolution carried on the ideological, technical and cultural revolutions vigorously under the militant slogan "Let us all march forward to carry out the decision of the Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea!" and thus made great progress in the work of modelling the whole of society on the chuche idea.

Last year the work of revolutionizing and working-classizing the whole of society made good headway in an atmosphere of political upsurge. In the course of the fruitful struggle to carry out the decision of the sixty party congress, the revolutionary enthusiasm of the working people ran very high, the popular masses' faith in the party further deepened and the unity of our revolutionary ranks in thinking and purpose became as firm as a rock. The entire people are firmly united around the party with one mind and one will and go through fire and water to implement its lines and policies. This is a proud trait of our society today.

Last year great successes were registered in socialist economic construction.

Through its mass technical innovation movement and devoted labour endeavours, our heroic working class developed industrial production rapidly and built a large number of grand monumental structures in all parts of the country. Our farming population, infinitely faithful to the party, successfully overcame the adverse weather conditions and raised crops well in keeping with the requirements of the chuche farming method. Thus, they reaped a splendid harvest. In hearty response to the party's call for greater fish catch, our plucky fishermen worked vigorously and scored an unusually big success in the winter fishing season.

All people came out to step up production and construction work and carry on the technical revolution actively, with the result that the chuche-orientation, modernization and scientization of the national economy made good progress and the country's economic power increased further.

Last year witnessed a brilliant success in the building of socialist culture, too. School education made further progress, the cultural and technical levels of the working people rose considerably, and many excellent works of literature and art were created. Our scientists and technicians, in particular, conducted energetic research work strictly from the chuche standpoint and made various inventions and registered successes in their researches, which are of great significance in economic construction and in the development of national culture.

The valiant men and officers of our People's Army and people's security forces carried out the party's military line thoroughly. Thus, they improved the combat readiness of their units, increased their combat power in every way, frustrated the enemy's military provocations at every step and creditably guarded the country's line of defence and the gains of the revolution.

All the victories and successes achieved in the revolutionary struggle and construction work last year were a result of the devoted struggle waged by the entire people under the correct leadership of and in close unity around our party. Our workers, farmers, soldiers, working intellectuals and all the rest of the people displayed boundless loyalty to the party and the revolution in scoring great achievements in the first year of the struggle to implement the decision of the sixth party congress. For this I would like to express warm thanks to them.

Comrades, 1982 is a year of great significance which marks the 50th anniversary of the founding of the anti-Japanese guerrilla army and the start of the armed struggle against the Japanese imperialists by the young Korean communists. The start of the anti-Japanese armed struggle by the young communists of Korea was a historic event which advanced our people's national-liberation movement and the Korean communist movement to a new higher stage. During the past half century since the first gun report in the glorious anti-Japanese armed struggle, our revolution has followed a proud road shining with victory and glory and advanced to a very high stage where the modelling of the whole society on the chuche idea is the order of the day.

This year we should bring about a new, great upswing in all fields of the revolution and construction, so that a remarkable progress is made in the modelling of the whole society on the chuche idea and this meaningful year becomes most brilliant in the history of our people's revolutionary struggle.

Striving devotedly for the completion of the revolutionary cause of chuche started by the young Korean communists is a sacred duty of our party members and working people. All of them should arm themselves with the chuche idea, the revolutionary idea of our party, and fully display great loyalty to the party and the revolution and revolutionary enthusiasm, thus making a high political atmosphere prevail in the whole country and working new wonders and innovations on all fronts of socialist construction.

The most important task facing us in socialist economic construction this year is to push on actively with the grand nature-remaking projects. Upholding the decision of the fourth plenary meeting of the sixth party Central Committee, we should make energetic efforts this year to carry out the four nature-remaking tasks -- tideland reclamation, cultivation of new land and construction of the Nampo lock gate and the Taechon power station. These tasks are grand nature-remaking projects to enlarge our territory and convert our country into a more beautiful and better land for the people. They are a work honourable and worthy to develop our socialist system and hasten the complete victory of socialism and national reunification. This year the whole party, the whole country and the entire people should turn out as one in the struggle to carry out these four tasks.

All builders and assistants who come out for this work in response to the call of the party should perform brilliant feats of labour on all sites of construction. To do so, they should display the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and fortitude, with great pride and a high sense of honour in participating in the worthwhile struggle to build the structures of lasting value for the prosperity and development of the country.

The great nature-remaking projects are a gigantic undertaking which requires large amounts of materials, equipment and manpower. In all fields of the national economy precedence should be given to the production and supply of cement, steel and various other materials, machinery and equipment needed in these projects. They should give powerful material, technical and labour assistance in these projects by tapping every reserve and possibility.

We should wage an energetic struggle to carry out this year's assignments of the Second Seven-Year Plan ahead of schedule in all fields of the national economy.

There are only three years to go in the Second Seven-Year Plan. Only when we work well this year, can we open up wide vistas for the preschedule fulfillment of this plan. This year in all fields and all units of the national economy we should put production on a high, normal basis through a powerful mass technical innovation movement and meticulous organization of economic work, and fulfil the state plans without fail daily, monthly, quarterly and in all indices.

This year we should exert our primary efforts to attain the goal of the chemical industry. Attaining this goal has great importance in developing light industry and agriculture rapidly and raising the people's living standards still more. This year the chemical industry should make the maximum use of the existing production capacities and reconstruct and expand some of the production facilities to bring about a new turn in the manufacture of chemical products including chemical fibres, chemical fertilizers and synthetic resin. Along with this, we should build many small and medium-sized chemical factories to increase the production of various kinds of auxiliary raw materials, chemical drugs and paints.

The metallurgical industry is one of the most important branches to which we should direct our efforts this year. Only when we reach the production goal of the metallurgical industry by directing our efforts to it can we meet the ever-increasing demands for iron and steel and nonferrous metals and rapidly develop various branches of the national economy.

This year we should give definite priority to the production of mineral ores by concentrating efforts on large, promising iron and nonferrous-metal mines, and markedly increase the output of steel, rolled steel and nonferrous metals by improving and reinforcing the equipment for metal production. In particular, we should increase the operation of the existing chuche-based facilities for iron production, extend the output of coking and calcined coal and actively introduce a new method of coke production to make the ferrous metallurgy more independent.

To raise the people's living standard steadily is an invariable policy of our party and one of the basic tasks of socialist economic construction put forward by the party at its sixth congress. Only when the people's life is steadily improved will we be able to bring the advantages of our socialist system into full play and press forward with the revolution and construction work. Today we have the solid economic foundations for fully meeting the increasing needs of the people in life. If all leading personnel make effective use of the existing economic foundations with a correct view about the people, they can make our people far better off.

This year we should bring about a new change in grain production by thoroughly implementing the farming-first policy and devote efforts to the fishing industry to catch more fish. Meanwhile, we should develop light industry so rapidly as to increase the production of mass consumer goods remarkably and build more houses and cultural and welfare establishments in towns and villages in an all-mass movement. By so doing, we should better solve the problem of food, clothing and shelter for the people.

In order to push forward socialist economic construction successfully, we should improve the guidance and administration of the national economy. Last year our party took the radical step of reorganizing the system of guiding industry in keeping with the requirement of the developing realities. The new system of industrial guidance is the best system of industrial guidance which is of our own style. It makes it possible to fully apply the Taean work system by bringing the economic guidance closer to the realities and correctly combining the unified central guidance and the local initiative. This year we must raise the functions and role of the state bodies of economic guidance including the provincial committees for economic guidance in keeping with the requirements of the new system of industrial guidance, improve the work method of the leading economic workers, and thus bring about a marked change in economic guidance.

Vigorously carrying out the ideological, technical and cultural revolutions is the decisive earnest of success in socialist construction. On the basis of the successes achieved in the three revolutions, this year the party organizations at all levels and the three-revolution teams should develop these revolutions in depth and carry on the three-revolution red flag movement and the movement to follow the example of the unassuming heroes effectively. In this way, they will see to it that the revolutionary spirit pervades the whole of society and a new upswing takes place in all fields of socialist construction.

At present, our people's revolutionary enthusiasm and fighting spirit is running very high, and the general situation in the country is also very good. All the party organizations and leading personnel should organize and carry out all work in a responsible way in the attitude of the master of the revolution, and should actively rouse the revolutionary zeal and creative initiative of the masses, thereby bringing about brilliant victories in this year's work.

To fight for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country is the greatest national task for all Korean people. Last year the South Korean people, youth and students waged a tenacious antifascist, democratic struggle for the right to existence and national reunification in the teeth of unprecedented fascist repression. Our overseas nationals from all walks of life widely took part in the struggle to achieve national concord and union and form a great national united front under the banner of national reunification. The struggle waged for national reunification at home and abroad last year clearly proved the correctness and vitality of the new reunification proposal advanced by the sixth congress of our party. The aspirations for national reunification are growing among the broad sections of our compatriots with each passing day, and the dawn of reunification is approaching. This year all the fellow countrymen in the North, the South and abroad should energetically struggle in firmer unity, regardless of the difference in ideology, social system, party affiliation and political view, to open up a new phase on the way to national reunification. To do so they should check and foil the "two Koreas" plot of the partitionists and establish the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo.

It is a consistent revolutionary line of our party to strengthen solidarity with the international revolutionary forces. Last year our party and the government of our republic registered great results in the foreign relations by conducting positive external activities under the banner of independence, friendship and peace. Last year the symposium of non-aligned and other developing countries on increasing food and agricultural production was held in our country and heads of state and personages of different social circles from various countries visited our country. As a result, friendship and cooperation among the countries of the new-emerging forces further developed and the international solidarity of our revolution grew stronger. Today loud voices are raised on the international scene to expose and condemn the U.S. imperialists' moves of aggression and intervention in our country, and a powerful solidarity movement is going on in support of our people's cause of national reunification. This greatly inspires our people.

Seeing the new year in, I offer my warm congratulations and new year greetings to the peoples of all countries and our friends the world over who are giving active support and encouragement to our people's revolutionary cause of socialist construction and national reunification. This year, too, our people will strive to strengthen solidarity among the anti-imperialist, independent forces, to develop friendship and cooperation among the peoples of the newly-emerging countries and to defend world peace and security in keeping with the consistent foreign policy of our party.

Comrades, our revolutionary tasks this year are very honourable and worthwhile. All the party members and working people should continue to make innovations and advance with great revolutionary enthusiasm and high loyalty to the party and revolution and bring about a fresh upswing in socialist construction and thus adorn this significant year with glorious victories. Let all of us march forward vigorously to hasten the complete victory of socialism and the country's independent, peaceful reunification, firmly united behind the party Central Committee under the revolutionary banner of the chuche idea.

HENG SAMRIN NEW YEAR MESSAGE LAUDS PAST EFFORTS

BK030654 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1449 GMT 1 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 1 Jan (SPK) -- On the occasion of the new year, Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State, addressed to the entire people a message hailing the patriotism and heroism they have displayed in their efforts to achieve prosperity for the country of Angkor. The message said:

At present, when peoples throughout the world welcome the new year with joy, the Kampuchean revolution celebrates the new successes it has recorded in the past year. The past year was a period in which cadres and combatants, men and women, and the entire Kampuchean people showed heroism and abnegation in their efforts to overcome difficulties, defend the revolutionary gains and build an independent, peaceful and sovereign PRK with territorial integrity, thereby actively contributing to the cause of peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

On this occasion, I would like to express my profound thanks to the peoples of the fraternal socialist countries, in particular Vietnam, Laos and the Soviet Union, and to the progressive peoples throughout the world, for their devoted moral and material assistance and for the sacrifices they have made to defend the revolutionary cause of Kampuchea.

General Secretary Heng Samrin called on Kampucheans at home abroad to overcome difficulties to implement the resolutions adopted by the Fourth KPRP Congress and the third front congress.

GOVERNMENT CONDEMNS THAI 'ACT OF AGGRESSION'

[Text] Phnom Penh, 2 Jan (SPK) -- The spokesman of the PRK Foreign Ministry publicly issued the following declaration today:

On 28 December 1981 around 1700, three Thai Navy vessels intentionally violated the territorial waters of the PRK in Koh Kong Province to a distance of 15 km and fired on a Kampuchean vedette boat during a regular patrol. It was sunk by the Thai aggressors, who forcibly took into custody five members of the crew and the vedette boat.

The Government of the People's Republic of Kampuchea strongly condemns this deliberate act of aggression by the Thai Navy and insists that the Thai Government immediately free the members of the crew and the vedette boat, and definitely put an end to daily violations and acts of aggression committed by its armed forces against the People's Republic of Kampuchea.

FOUNDING ANNIVERSARY OF VPA COMMEMORATED

KPRP Greetings Letter

BK231235 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1434 GMT 21 Dec 81

[Text] Phnom Penh, 21 Dec (SPK) -- On the occasion of the 37th anniversary of the Vietnamese People's Army (VPA), 22 December, the KPRP Central Committee sent a letter to the Vietnamese combatants stationed in Kampuchea and their families, wishing them good health and conveying to them greetings of solidarity, friendship and victory.

The letter reads: During the past decades, the party, government and people of Vietnam have shared weal and woe with us and sent to Kampuchea their outstanding sons and daughters to fight shoulder to shoulder with our people and defeat the enemy of the two nations, thus making a positive contribution to the liberation of Kampuchea and to peace in Indochina and the rest of Southeast Asia. We are especially grateful to the party, government and people of Vietnam for their assistance to our struggle against the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang and to our victory on 7 January 1979.

Vietnam's outstanding sons and daughters are contributing to the firm defense of Kampuchea's national independence and construction. You have constantly fostered the tradition of solidarity between our two peoples, making it durable and as beautiful as a spring flower.

The entire party and people of Kampuchea are forever grateful for the VPA's exploits and have recorded them in golden letters in the history of the Angkor land. The Mekong River might run dry and the Truong Son (Long Range) wear down, but the militant solidarity between our two nations will last forever and be evergreen.

May the relations of friendship and militant solidarity between our two peoples develop every day.

Chan Si Greeting

BK280420 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1456 GMT 22 Dec 81

[Text] Phnom Penh, 22 Dec (SPK) -- On the occasion of the 37th anniversary of the VPA, Chan Si, minister of defense and member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, sent his warmest and most fraternal greetings to Van Tien Dung, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and minister of defense of Vietnam. Minister Chan Si said in his message:

Under the clear-sighted leadership of the VCP and the SRV Government, the VPA fought valiantly against the French colonialists, the Japanese militarists and the U.S. imperialists -- the greatest imperialism in the world -- and triumphed over the latter in 1975. Upholding its tradition of heroic struggle, the VPA foiled the aggression by the Chinese expansionists against Vietnam in February 1975 [year as received].

The VPA is able to defend the national independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of its country. It has fulfilled its international obligation by liberating the Kampuchean people from the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime and helped the Kampuchean combatants defend their independence. The Kampuchean people and their People's Revolutionary Army express profound gratitude to the people and heroic army of Vietnam for their assistance to the defense and reconstruction of Kampuchea. Kampuchean and Vietnamese Armed Forces are closely cooperating in foiling the perfidious maneuvers of the enemy, and defending peace and security in Southeast Asia.

Minister Chan Si conveyed his warmest wishes to his Vietnamese counterpart and through him, to the families of the Vietnamese combatants now on an international mission in Kampuchea. May the bonds of friendship, militant solidarity and cooperation between our two peoples and armed forces be further strengthened, the message said.

Soy Keo Greeting

BK271517 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 23 Dec 81

[Greetings message from Soy Keo, member of the KPRP Central Committee, vice minister of national defense and chief of the General Staff of the KPRAF, to his Vietnamese counterpart, Gen Le Trong Tan, on the VPA's 37th founding anniversary -- date not given]

[Text] On the occasion of the 37th anniversary of the founding of the VPA, on behalf of all cadres in the General Staff of the KPRAF and in my own name, I would like to extend my most joyous greetings and warmest congratulations to you.

During the past 37 years, under the correct and wise leadership of the VCP and the SRV Government, the VPA has never ceased to grow stronger and develop and to temper itself in vigorous struggles full of lofty heroism, crushing one enemy after another, particularly the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists who, in collusion with U.S. imperialism, attempted to destroy your beautiful socialist fatherland. The heroic VPA has punished and completely smashed all the maneuvers and aggressive acts of the enemy on the battlefield, successfully safeguarding the sovereignty and integrity of the country.

All the Kampuchean people and the KPRAF are extremely elated and we are sincerely grateful to the heroic VPA for sparing no efforts and sacrificing virtually everything to help free the Kampuchean people from the danger of genocide and for continuing their present precious internationalist duty on Kampuchean territory in militant cooperation to smash the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists, U.S. imperialists and their lackeys in order to defend peace and security in Indochina and Southeast Asia.

We take this opportunity to wish the comrade chief of the General Staff and the cadres and male and female combatants of the VPA the best of health and long life and, through you, we would like to send our greetings to the families of all VPA cadres and male and female combatants who are doing their precious internationalist duty on Kampuchean territory. We wish them the best of health and success in all work. May the bonds of friendship, solidarity and militant cooperation between our two armies grow stronger and firmer every day.

Chey Sophea Message

[Text] Phnom Penh, 27 Dec (SPK) -- In a message sent to the VPA on the occasion of its 37th founding anniversary, Chey Sophea, vice minister of information, culture and press, conveyed his greetings and profound thanks to the Vietnamese combatants for their sacrifices for the Kampuchean revolution. The message said in part:

The Vietnamese party and people have sent their best sons to fight alongside the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Army and liberate the Kampuchean people from the hands of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique on 7 January 1979.

The Vietnamese combatants, called to accomplish their proletarian internationalist task, are now continuing to defend Kampuchea's revolutionary gains and struggle against the enemies who are trying to sabotage the Kampuchean revolution.

Phnom Penh Meeting

[Text] Phnom Penh, 21 Dec (SPK) -- The Kampuchean people and armed forces have forever engraved in their hearts the aid and support given them by the Vietnamese people and army during the most difficult period of the Kampuchean revolution, said Peng Path, commander of the Phnom Penh Armed Forces, at a meeting held on Monday [21 December] by the Phnom Penh City Military Command in honor of the 37th founding anniversary of the Vietnamese People's Army [VPA], 22 December.

During the past 37 years, Peng Path said, the VPA, with its tradition of struggle, has won successive victories over French colonialism, Japanese militarism, U.S. imperialism and, recently, Beijing expansionism. Tested in successive wars, the VPA has not only victoriously defended and rebuilt its fatherland, but has helped the Kampuchean and Lao peoples safeguard their sovereignty and independence against foreign threats, he stressed. With the VPA's assistance, the Kampuchean people and the People's Revolutionary Armed Forces have achieved great successes in all domains -- political, economic, cultural and so forth.

The bonds of friendship and militant solidarity between Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos, he added, have been further consolidated despite the acts of sabotage of the Pol Pot clique and other reactionaries.

For his part, Vu Nha, military attache of the Vietnamese Embassy, highly praised the victories won by the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Armed Forces, particularly those of Phnom Penh city. Vu Nha denounced the perfidious maneuvers of Beijing expansionism, which, in collusion with U.S. imperialism, has threatened to give Vietnam a second lesson. Faced with this situation, the strengthening of friendship and militant solidarity among Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos and among the three Indochinese countries and the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries is all the more necessary, he stressed. On behalf of the party, people and People's Armed Forces of Vietnam, the military attache expressed his gratitude to the party, people and People's Revolutionary Armed Forces of Kampuchea, which are helping the Vietnamese People's Armed Forces in the accomplishment of their national and international tasks.

Participating in this meeting were Soy Keo, deputy minister of national defense; Lim Nai, secretary of the Phnom Penh City Party Committee; Chan Ven, secretary general of the Council of State and chairman of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association; Meas Kroch, deputy director of the General Logistics Departments; and other personalities. Also present were Vietnamese Ambassador Ngo Dien and Vietnamese officers.

Heng Samrin Visit to Soldiers

[Text] Phnom Penh, 24 Dec (SPK) — The bonds of friendship, militant solidarity and cooperation among the Indochinese peoples are a fortress for the defense of security and stability in Indochina and Southeast Asia, said KPRP Central Committee General Secretary Heng Samrin to the Vietnamese combatants whom he visited on the occasion of the VPA's 37th founding anniversary.

General Secretary Heng Samrin expressed his profound gratitude to the Vietnamese combatants for their assistance to the Kampuchean Revolutionary Army in the overthrow of the genocidal Pol Pot regime and for their sacrifices in defending the security and reconstruction efforts of Kampuchea. He praised the traditions of solidarity of the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao peoples who, he said, have always been close together in their struggle against the French colonialists, the Japanese fascists, the U.S. imperialists and Beijing expansionism. He affirmed: We continue to strengthen solidarity with Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union, other countries of the socialist community and progressive and justice- and peace-loving peoples in the world, in order to defend the revolution.

On this occasion, the delegations of the Council of State, the Council of Ministers, the Ministry of National Defense, the Phnom Penh City Party Committee and women visited Vietnamese combatants in various provinces and combatants hospitalized in Kandal Province and Phnom Penh. Various services in the capital city have organized talks and the Ministry of Information, Press and Culture has organized evening movie and art shows and sports activities to welcome the VPA's anniversary.

Soy Keo Visit to Units

[Text] In order to strengthen the bond of militant solidarity between Vietnam and Kampuchea, on the occasion of the 37th founding anniversary of the VPA, which is also the memorial day of the Vietnamese people's struggle, a delegation of the Ministry of National Defense led by Comrade Soy Keo, member of the party Central Committee, vice minister of national defense and chief of the General Staff, called on cadres and male and female combatants at various VPA units who are fulfilling international tasks on the Kampuchean soil.

On the morning of 21 December this Defense Ministry delegation visited cadres and combatants of the Vietnamese military expert unit and presented a number of souvenirs, signifying the firm bond of solidarity between the two countries, parties, governments and armies of Kampuchea and Vietnam. On that occasion, on behalf of the entire army, Comrade Soy Keo expressed the great joy and gratitude the Kampuchean army and people felt for the heroic VPA, which helped the Kampuchean army and people in liberating the country from the claws of colonialism, old and new imperialism and the Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan demons. The comrade stressed: This was not the first, but the third, time that the Vietnamese people and army provided facilities for the Kampuchean people in their struggle to liberate their territory from Beijing's neocolonialist yoke. Now and in the future, our two armies will resolutely stand with each other, shoulder to shoulder, and fight against all types of enemies.

On 22 December the delegation visited cadres and combatants of VPA Unit No 9. The head of the delegation conversed with and thanked the Vietnamese armymen for their sacrifices made for the Kampuchean revolution and people. The comrade head of the delegation also expressed salutations to their Vietnamese forefathers of the past several generations who sacrificed their lives for the international cause on Kampuchean territory. He stressed that the VPA and the Kampuchean army have united closely and fought in the same trench against their common enemies, namely, the French colonialists, Japanese fascists and the U.S. imperialists. Recently, the VPA defeated Chinese expansionism. The Kampuchean Revolutionary Armed Forces and people will never forget and will always remember the benefactions of the VPA and the party and Government of Vietnam, which have brought about our firm militant solidarity.

Later, Comrade (Nguyen Bo), representative of cadres and combatants in Unit No 9, thanked the PRK party and government for extending facilities that have enabled the VPA to fulfill its international tasks on the Kampuchean soil successfully. He also expressed sentiments of militant solidarity between Vietnam and Kampuchea in order to defeat all collusions of the U.S. imperialists and Chinese expansionists, and contribute to the defense and construction and lasting peace in the three fraternal countries.

In conclusion, the delegation presented souvenirs to cadres and combatants of Unit No 9 as a sign of militant solidarity and friendship between the two fraternal armies. The ceremony proceeded in a joyful and intimate atmosphere.

Bou Thang Visit to Troops

[Text] Phnom Penh, 22 Dec (SPK) -- The Kampuchean people are forever grateful to the Vietnamese people and army for having liberated them from the genocidal Pol Pot regime's clutches and for contributing to the building of a new, independent and free Kampuchea advancing toward socialism, said Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau.

During a visit on 21 December to a unit of the Vietnamese combatants on the occasion of the VPA's 37th founding anniversary, Bou Thang, who headed a delegation of the KPRP and the PRK Government, praised the Vietnamese army's victories over French colonialism, Japanese fascism, U.S. imperialism and Chinese expansionism. The Vietnamese combatants, Bou Thang stressed, have fulfilled their noble international duty in Kampuchea.

Bou Thang recalled the bonds of friendship and militant solidarity between the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao peoples, who are struggling side by side against the common enemies and for the building of socialism in Indochina. He denounced the Beijing expansionists, in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces, for plotting to sabotage the friendship and militant solidarity between Kampuchea and Vietnam and the Indochinese revolution.

Vietnamese Ambassador Ngo Dien, who accompanied the delegation, expressed his conviction that the bonds of special friendship will be consolidated with every passing day, thus contributing to the common revolutionary cause. On behalf of the Vietnamese party, government, people and armed forces, the Vietnamese ambassador thanked the Kampuchean people and armed forces for helping the Vietnamese combatants on an international mission in Kampuchea to fulfill their duty.

The Kampuchean party and government delegation presented gifts to the Vietnamese combatants. Vu Nha, military attache of the Vietnamese Embassy, was present on this occasion.

Bou Thang Visit in Siem Reap

BK280824 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0419 GMT 27 Dec 81

[Text] Phnom Penh, 27 Dec (SPK) -- On 25 December, on the occasion of the 37th founding anniversary of the VPA, a party, government and front delegation led by Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Propaganda and Education Commission, visited the Vietnamese and Kampuchean combatants on the frontline in the border province of Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey, about 250 km northwest of Phnom Penh. Bou Thang was accompanied by Chan Ven, secretary general of the Council of State and chairman of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association; Vandy Kaon, member of the Council of State and secretary general of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association; and Prum Thao, representative of the Ministry of National Defense.

Bou Thang highly praised the internationalist spirit of the Vietnamese combatants who are fighting the common enemies alongside the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Army, to defend the independence, peace and freedom of the two countries. On behalf of the party, government, front, people and army of Kampuchea, he congratulated the heroic Vietnamese combatants for their sacrifices for the Kampuchean revolutionary cause. Bou Thang extolled the merits of the Vietnamese combatants, stressing that the Kampuchean people inscribe these merits in the annals of the Angkor country.

A representative of the Vietnamese combatants thanked the Kampuchean party, government and front delegation for its visit and expressed the determination of the Vietnamese combatants to uphold the spirit of proletarian internationalism and strengthen militant solidarity with the Kampuchean combatants in the struggle against the common enemies for the victory of the revolution of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos and of socialism.

On the same day, the delegation called on the Kampuchean combatants at Samraong. On this occasion, Bou Thang urged the Kampuchean combatants to further heighten revolutionary vigilance, overcome difficulties, imbue themselves with the party's political line, maintain discipline and uphold the banner of patriotism and international solidarity with the brother Vietnamese.

Journal Editorials

[Text] Phnom Penh, 21 Dec (SPK) -- In its editorial to mark the 37th Vietnamese People's Army [VPA] anniversary (22 December), the journal KAMPUCHEA said that the Kampuchean people will never forget the numerous sacrifices the heroic VPA combatants have willingly endured to contribute to defending Kampuchea's revolutionary cause.

The central organ of the Kampuchean Front for National Construction said: Under the clear-sighted leadership of the VCP during the past 37 years, the VPA has relentlessly struggled against all sorts of enemies. Together with the people, it overthrew the feudal regime, put an end to the domination of the French colonialists and Japanese fascists, drove the U.S. imperialists out and foiled the aggression of the Chinese expansionists.

With these great victories, the VPA has contributed to reinforcing the world socialist system and encouraging the peoples who are struggling in the national liberation movements in the world.

The journal praised the traditions of solidarity between the combatants of Kampuchea and Vietnam in the struggle against their common enemies. The journal continued: The VPA came to assist the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Armed Forces [KPRAF] in liberating our country from the claws of the genocidal Pol Pot clique paid by the Chinese expansionists.

Displaying the banner of proletarian internationalism, the Vietnamese combatants have fulfilled their noble international tasks by cooperating with their Kampuchean comrades in the defense and construction of Kampuchea. The revolutionary gains acquired in Kampuchea cannot be dissociated from the lofty sacrifices made by the VPA. The noble acts of Vietnamese combatants have won the Kampucheans' hearts.

The journal affirmed that the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea answers the Kampuchean people's aspiration and is in conformity with the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation between Kampuchea and Vietnam. It is an affair concerning these two countries alone, and no one has the right to interfere with it. Our army and people are proud to have a loyal comrade in arms -- the heroic VPA. On the occasion of its 37th founding anniversary, the Kampuchean people and army convey to it their warm greetings and wish it new, even greater victories.

The journal concluded: The Kampuchean people and army are determined to continue to further beautify the traditions of struggle between the two peoples and armies to contribute to the defense of peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the rest of the world.

The journal KAMPUCHEA PEOPLE'S ARMY said in its editorial: The heroic Vietnamese army is participating in the building and defense of the Angkor country. It has won the Kampuchean people's confidence through its modesty and generosity. The Kampuchean people as a whole are profoundly grateful to it for its sacrifices for the Kampuchean people and revolution. The KPRAF is resolved to further strengthen the bonds of solidarity with the VPA, which are decisive in the victory of the struggle for their common cause, the army journal stresses.

DK PRIME MINISTER CONVEYS NEW YEAR MESSAGE

BK011G30 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 30 Dec 81

["Greetings message from Khieu Samphan, chairman of the State Presidium and prime minister of Democratic Kampuchea, to the Kampuchean nation and people on the occasion of the end of the 1981 international year" -- recorded]

[Text] Esteemed and beloved compatriots; dear comrades in arms: the year 1981 has come to an end. On the occasion of the international new year 1982, I have the great pleasure to give this message of greetings through our Radio Voice of Democratic Kampuchea to all the esteemed and beloved compatriots and comrades in arms. May you enjoy good health for more vigorous struggle, and more victories in the struggle against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators and for the defense and preservation of our Kampuchean nation, territory and race.

In 1981, all of us united closely, fought shoulder to shoulder against the Le Duan Vietnamese aggressors and scored many victories. Our struggle has developed favorably in all fields -- military, politics, diplomacy, social affairs, public health, education, mores and customs, and production. Meanwhile, the Le Duan Vietnamese aggressors have been deeply and inextricably bogged down on the Kampuchean battlefield. The Le Duan Vietnamese clique has not only been deeply bogged down on the Kampuchean battlefield, but it is also facing more serious difficulties at home. Its economy is collapsing. The Vietnamese people have opposed the clique more vigorously, and insecurity has widened.

On the international arena, the clique has become even more isolated. The world has condemned the clique — which has sold out Vietnam to the Soviet Union for use as a military base, and which poses a threat to peace and stability in Southeast Asia — as a warmongering expansionist and a satellite of the Soviet international expansionists.

By the end of 1981, we can surmise that the Le Duan Vietnamese aggressors are suffering strategic defeats. Some movements attempted on the military field were just tactical efforts. Aside from this, they have tried to improve their situation by:

1. Continuing to massacre our people in a planned and systematic manner;
2. Continuing to contain our people in strategic villages;
3. Continuing the policy of inflicting famine on the people;
4. Continuing to forcibly recruit Khmer soldiers to die in their places; and
5. Intensifying the use of chemical weapons and toxic chemicals on a larger scale in the forested and mountainous areas, countryside, populated areas and in various towns against both the armymen and ordinary people.

All the people and the Khmer administrators, militiamen and soldiers forced to serve the Vietnamese enemy have nurtured greater indignation at these barbarous and criminal acts of the Vietnamese aggressors and have fought back valiantly and courageously.

On this occasion, I would like once again to make an appeal to the fraternal Khmer administrators, militiamen and soldiers. All of you have seen with your own eyes how the Vietnamese enemy has barbarously and cruelly massacred our compatriots. You yourselves have also suffered at the hands of the Vietnamese enemy. The enemy will never allow you to enjoy peace and happiness, even though you have given away your gold and served as its militiamen, administrators and soldiers. Therefore, the only way to survive is to join with our people and our Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas and wage a struggle in all forms against the Le Duan Vietnamese aggressors in revenge for your nation and the more than 2.5 million people that have been massacred and the remaining people who are being massacred by the hundreds every day. I would also like to appeal to all of our compatriots to heighten their vigilance constantly and try to avoid being recruited to fight and die for the Le Duan Vietnamese clique. If you have already been recruited, you should find a way to escape back to your villages or turn your guns against the enemy.

Esteemed and beloved compatriots, dear comrades in arms: Since 1979, when the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy invaded Kampuchea, our Government of Democratic Kampuchea has made every effort to implement the political program of the PDFGNUK and the new strategic line with a lofty sense of responsibility for the fate of our nation and people, steadily progressing in the efforts to rally the great national union forces both inside and outside the country and transform them into a powerful fighting force against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy. This force has caused the more than 300,000 aggressor forces of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors, both armed soldiers and civilian administrators, to find themselves inextricably bogged down in the Kampuchean battlefield. Not only have we made efforts to rally the forces of the Kampuchean people at home, but we have also worked for the rallying of Kampuchean personalities abroad as well. For this reason, we have been very persistent in seeking meetings with the other Kampuchean parties.

Although Democratic Kampuchea is the sole authentic force which is shedding blood in the fight against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors on the battlefield, and although Democratic Kampuchea is the only force which has a role in the Democratic Kampuchean state — the legal and legitimate state of Kampuchea and a member of the United Nations — Democratic Kampuchea, with a lofty spirit of patrictism and placing national interests above all else, is willing to share the role in the Democratic Kampuchean state with the other Kampuchean parties on the basis of a sincere union, in order to increase the fighting forces against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors, for the defense and preservation of the Kampuchean nation, people and race, and for a quick end to the untold misery and destruction of our Kampuchean people. At the same time, our Democratic Kampuchean side desires for the other parties also to pursue an authentic coalition. As a matter of fact, the formation of the tripartite coalition Democratic Kampuchean government must be based on the Singapore joint statement and the significant principles agreed upon and approved in writing by the ad hoc tripartite committee, which are fair and reasonable principles of equality.

Only by using the Singapore joint statement and the principle of equality, fairness and mutual respect as a basis, can a genuine coalition be ensured in order to increase the resistance forces for fighting against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors. Therefore, on this occasion I appeal to all other Kampuchean parties to avoid doing anything, by words or actions, which might impair or disperse the forces of Democratic Kampuchea, including both the forces actually resisting the enemy on the battlefield and those resisting the legitimacy of the state of Democratic Kampuchea. If the forces of Democratic Kampuchea, which are the concrete forces resisting the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors right on the battlefield, are impaired or dispersed, the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy would be able to occupy our territory forever and would massacre our people and exterminate our nation.

On the occasion of this international new year, on behalf of the Democratic Kampuchean Government, the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas, and the whole Kampuchean nation and people, I would also like once more to express my deep thanks to all peace- and justice-loving countries all over the world, especially the ASEAN countries, which have assisted and supported the cause of the just struggle of the Kampuchean people to defend their nation, territory and race.

Democratic Kampuchea has retained its seat at the UN with increased assistance and support from more countries than in previous years. The international conference on Kampuchea was held in July 1981. The 36th UN General Assembly called for the complete withdrawal of Vietnamese aggressor troops from Kampuchean territory with more voices than in previous years. All of these are common victories of the struggles of the Kampuchean people and of all countries which oppose the aggressive and expansionist strategies of the Vietnamese and their Soviet bosses in Southeast Asia. They are all common victories for all countries which are defending international law, the UN Charter, the five-point principle of peaceful coexistence and the principles of the Nonaligned Movement.

We are confident that peace- and justice-loving countries all over the world will become more aware of the dark maneuvers of the Le Duan Vietnamese and their Soviet bosses who have attempted to divide the international front supporting the just struggle of the Kampuchean people. They have also tried to disperse the Democratic Kampuchean forces because if they succeed in their aims, the Vietnamese aggressors will be able to improve their situation on the Kampuchean battlefields. They will change the situation and continue to occupy Kampuchea forever, and through this they will continue to implement their expansionist strategy southward.

Therefore, we strongly believe that all peace- and justice-loving countries in the world will continue to unite to bring pressure to bear on the Le Duan Vietnamese — politically, diplomatically, economically and financially — in order to force them to respect the resolutions of the United Nations and the international conference on Kampuchea by withdrawing all their aggressive armed forces from Kampuchea and allowing the Kampuchean people to determine their own destiny by themselves without any external interference. The problems resulting from the Le Duan Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea cannot be corrected, nor can peace be restored in Kampuchea, nor can peace and stability in Southeast Asia be guaranteed, unless all peace- and justice-loving countries the world over unite to bring pressure to bear on the Le Duan Vietnamese until they respect the resolutions of the United Nations and the international conference on Kampuchea.

In conclusion, I would like to appeal to our Kampuchea patriots of all social strata and to the Democratic Kampuchea National Army and guerrillas on all battlefields all over the country to stand firm on our victories in all fields that we have scored in our struggle against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators during the past 3 years. I ask all of you to unite with each other shoulder to shoulder to struggle to achieve complete victories in our duties in 1982 with a lofty sense of responsibility toward the future of our nation and people.

Once more, I would like to wish all esteemed and beloved compatriots and comrades in arms the best of health. May you have a vigorous spirit of struggle and may you score more successive victories in your struggle against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators to defend and preserve our Kampuchean nation, territory and race.

VODK: VIETNAMESE HARVESTING RICE IN BATTAMBANG

BK300618 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 26 Dec 81

[Text] At the end of December the Vietnamese enemy transported its civilians to harvest our people's rice in the area from north of Moung market to Poum station, Moung District, Battambang Province. The Vietnamese enemy ordered the soldiers of its 7th Brigade, which is posted along the Moung-Pursat railway, to defend its civilians during their robbery and crime in harvesting our people's rice.

Our people in Moung District are very angry with the Vietnamese enemy for its robberies and crimes. These Vietnamese acts also allow our people to realize the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy aggressor's policy of starving our people to death, which it has implemented barbarously throughout our country during the past 3 years. Since its invasion and control of Kampuchea, the Vietnamese enemy has applied its policy of starving our people to death. It robs and destroys our people's paddy, rice, other crops, cattle and even agricultural tools. Moreover, during the rainy season, which is the time of year when our people plant rice, the Vietnamese enemy confines our people in their villages and does not permit them to go out to plant rice or other crops. During the harvesting season, the Vietnamese enemy gathered all rice crops that our people planted secretly. Our people throughout the country have been suffering from starvation during the past 3 years because the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy aggressor has implemented its policies of destruction of foodstuffs and economy.

Therefore, in order to permanently solve the problem of starvation, as well as other issues in Kampuchea, it is necessary for our Kampuchean people of all ethnic groups and from all social strata to unite with each other under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government to fight the Vietnamese enemy aggressors until they are quickly driven out of our Kampuchean territory.

PREM ADDRESSES NEW YEAR MESSAGE TO NATION

BK011132 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 31 Dec 81

[New Year's speech by Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon — recorded]

[Text] Dear fraternal Thai people: On this auspicious occasion, marking the beginning of the new year 1982 and the bicentennial of Bangkok, and to express our profound gratitude to all the great heroic kings of the Chakkri Dynasty, let us humbly extend our best wishes and pray to the three holy gems [the Lord Buddha, the Buddhist monks and the Buddha's teaching], the guardian spirit of Siam and all sacred beings to protect and bless their majesties the king and queen with happiness and longevity so that they will always be among us to ensure the well-being of the people and the prosperity of the nation. May his majesty the king's powers protect his Thai subjects forever.

On the occasion of the 200th founding anniversary of Bangkok, the government has organized a grand celebration to remind us of the great heroic kings of the Chakkri Dynasty, our national sovereignty and the cultural identity they have established for us. Therefore, I invite my fraternal Thai people to join hands and hearts to defend and develop our country because our ancestors sacrificed their blood and lives to save this country, its sovereignty and Thai culture for us. Let us be proud of being Thai. We must be grateful to our beloved land and further develop it to fulfill his majesty the king's wishes.

My team and I have been in office for nearly 2 years, during which time we have been trying to solve the problems that are engulfing our country. Although my working team required readjustment a few times, I am confident that everyone in my team is sincere and determined to do his best to seek solutions to the country's problems with the common desire for the Thai fraternal people's well-being.

During the past year, the worldwide economic recession had a very adverse effect on the Thai economy. The government has been trying to manage the country's economy in such a way that the people in the country, particularly the poor, will suffer the least, by implementing various measures such as the readjustment of the baht value, the taxation system, the budgetary allocation system, oil prices and projects to boost the price of agricultural products. We have every intention of creating an economic system that gives justice to all -- farmers, workers, traders and the people. We hope that equal justice for all parties will bring national stability.

The development of the economy and society is a matter of concern for all Thai people. We must admit that our economic and social systems are still far from perfect. However, our country has abundant valuable natural resources. All the 47 million Thai people must play a role and closely participate in the development of our economic and social systems, which cannot merely be concentrated on particular groups or areas. Continuous attention must be given to dependent and poor people, who now number more than 10 million. Therefore, the most important guideline for development of the country is the improvement of the living conditions of the poor fraternal people in rural areas. This is the first year of the government implementation of development projects in the rural poverty zones. A budget of 1,150 million baht has been set aside for this purpose next year to ensure the continuation of the development of the rural poverty zones, which is aimed at raising the living standards of the people in those areas as prescribed in the Fifth National Economic and Social Development Plan. In addition, the government has also given top priority to efforts to boost the country's agricultural and industrial production so that we can effectively compete with other countries.

The government will try in every way to readjust the country's production structure, particularly the exploitation of natural resources for the benefit of the majority of the people, and especially for the development of the eastern seaboard. Moreover, the government will readjust its international trade policy to help our farmers receive fair prices for their products.

I would like to inform you that the government is trying to solve the economic and social problems at the source. However, it is unlikely that the government will be able to eliminate the people's difficulties and hardships immediately. I would like to reaffirm that the measures in the past and in the future will bring benefits to the people and country in the long run. I thus appeal to the fraternal people to cooperate with the government, and be diligent, patient and practice austerity. The government and I have a sincere intention of thoroughly and directly solving the country's problems. We will work tirelessly to achieve our goals.

This coming new year is an important turning point for the Thai people throughout the country. I appeal to all fraternal Thai people to be determined to cooperate with each other in solving the country's problems with patience, self-sacrifice and a sense of responsibility, be law-abiding citizens and industriously fulfill your jobs for the survival and prosperity of the nation to fulfill the noble wishes of his majesty the king and the other heroic kings of Thailand. On behalf of the government, I pray to the three holy gems and all sacred beings and the majestic power of all the heroic kings of Thailand, particularly of his majesty the king, to protect the fraternal Thai people and our foreign friends who are living in Thailand and bring them happiness, prosperity and long life and enable them to help realize more progress for our beloved country.

GENERAL DENIES RADIO HANOI REPORT ON RED GAUR

BK020811 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 2 Jan 82

[Text] The spokesman of the Supreme Command, Lt Gen Som Khattaphan, has denied a Radio Hanoi report that members of the Red Gaur movement are receiving arms training in China. He said Radio Hanoi, quoting a report in a newspaper in Singapore, said the militants were to be sent back to Thailand to carry out sabotage in Kampuchea and Laos. Radio Hanoi said that the arms training was conducted in Yunnan. A correspondent of the Singapore newspaper visited Yunnan recently and met some Thai people who claimed to be members of the Red Gaur movement and were getting arms training there.

Lieutenant General Som said that the accusation is groundless. The Red Gaurs themselves are rightists and are not friends of the leftists. He added that the Vietnamese accusation is only aimed destroying the image of Thailand.

POST: CAPTURED KAMPUCHEAN SAILORS INTERVIEWED

[Text] Chanthaburi -- Five Kampuchean sailors, captured from an armed trawler sunk by the two Thai Navy gunboats on Monday, have brought horror stories from the other side of the border. At a news conference staged by the Chanthaburi-Trat command yesterday morning, they said that they were forcibly recruited from various parts of Kampuchea by the Vietnamese occupation forces. They were later gathered along with hundreds of other youthful fellow countrymen at Kong Island, where they were ordered aboard an armed trawler, seized from Thai fishermen a few years ago, under command of Vietnamese naval officers.

One of them, Seng Lai, a 20-year-old farmer from a small town called Saleng Bell, told reporters that he was assaulted by one of the Vietnamese officers during the clash with the Thai Navy gunboats, when he refused to man a 12.7-mm machinegun. He said he did not know how to handle the gun. Asked to name the Vietnamese commander of the armed trawler, he said he did not even know his name because he had only recently been sent to the boat.

Six Vietnamese naval officers and two Kampuchean sailors were believed to be among the casualties.

The captured sailors, now being detained for further interrogation at the Taksin Marine Base in Chanthaburi, said that under the Vietnamese occupation Kampucheans have been forced to work hard and are starving. They said they had never received any form of training before they were taken aboard the trawler and charged with looking after the engine below the deck only about a week ago. The other four captured sailors are Keam Sophea, 18; Cheng Cheang, 25; Chan Vuthi, 18; and Moeung Sarit, 17. They came from Kompong Som, Saleng Bell and Svay Rieng.

At the news conference, Lieutenant Saksit Choetbunmuang RTN, the commander of the Long Lom, which sank the armed trawler encroaching on Thai waters, gave an account of the incident. He said a Thai fishing boat, Meksuwan 8, radioed the Navy Operations Command that it was being chased by an armed trawler, and that after receiving an order from the command, the two Thai gunboats gave chase to the trawler.

When the armed trawler was spotted about eight miles to the south of Kut Island, the two Thai gunboats fired a few warning shots ahead of the vessel's bow, and the trawler fired back at the Thai gunboats, he said. The gunboats then returned fire, hitting the trawler three times, starting a fire which was followed by explosions. Most of the officers and sailors jumped overboard, many of them suffering from severe burns.

Lt Saksit said several captured Thai fishing trawlers with good speed and equipment had been modified into gunboats used to harass or capture Thai fishing boats in the area.

Asked about claims by the Vietnam-backed Heng Samrin regime that Thai gunboats and fishing trawlers frequently encroached on Kampuchean waters, the lieutenant said most Thai gunboats could not afford the fuel to waste on encroachments. However, he said, Thai trawlers could possibly sneak in to fish in Kampuchean waters, although Thai authorities have repeatedly warned them not to do so. "But what can we do about it? We have limited naval forces, but fleets of Thai trawlers go anywhere," he said.

Meanwhile, the Phnom Penh regime yesterday demanded that Thailand return the five Kampuchean crewmen. The official SPK news agency protested against the Thai action and accused the Thai Navy boats of violating Kampuchean territorial waters, REUTER reported.

SUPREME COMMANDER HEADS BURMA BORDER GROUP

BK261023 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 25 Dec 81

NHAN DAN HITS PRC REJECTION OF TET CEASE-FIRE

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 1 — NHAN DAN today strongly condemns China for obstinately pursuing its policy of pressure and tension provoking in awaiting for the first opportunity to invade Vietnam again. The paper is commenting on China's rejection of Vietnam's new ceasefire proposal on the Tet Lunar New Year festival. The paper notes that this is the third such rejection since 1979. NHAN DAN recalls that last year China repeatedly rejected Vietnam's proposals for the resumption of bilateral talks unilaterally broken off by China two years ago.

"On the other hand," the paper goes on, "China has not ceased to disturb peace and security in Vietnam's border. Chinese troops have continued their intrusions to burn forests, destroy houses, plunder, kidnap and murder civilians and kept firing artillery into Vietnamese territory. Chinese vessels repeatedly violated Vietnamese waters. China has also unilaterally changed the time schedule for the operations in dangerous sea areas surrounding Vietnam's Truong Sa [Spratly] Archipelago. [Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese at 1100 GMT on 1 January, in its report on this NHAN DAN comment, renders the last sentence as follows: "China has also unilaterally changed the time schedule for operations in areas of dangerous undercurrents in Vietnam's part of the Truong Sa Archipelago."] 1981 also saw thousands of Chinese intrusions into Vietnamese airspace. Chinese spies and hundreds of scouts and commandoes have infiltrated into Vietnam to cause disturbance and engaged in all kinds of psychological warfare. China has increased its supplies to the Pol Pot remnants and manipulated the most reactionary circles in the Thai authorities to oppose Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries. It has also intensified effort to get some light-hearted people in Southeast Asia to oppose Vietnam, while working hard to obstruct and undermine the trend for dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN groups of countries."

"In short," the paper notes, "the reactionary circles in Beijing in collusion with the U.S. imperialists have continued and intensified their all-sided war of destruction against Vietnam, using the most cruel and cowardly means. They don't want to see the relations between the two countries improved."

SOVEREIGNTY OVER SPRATLYS, PARACELS CLAIMED

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 4th -- The coral archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa, located respectively at 170 nautical miles from Danang and 250 nautical miles from Cam Ranh, are Vietnamese territories as has long been known by Western navigators, who called them Paracels and Spratlys. Vietnam's sovereignty over these islands is recorded in official texts as well as in numerous historical documents still preserved not only in Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City but also in major libraries in Paris, Tokyo, London, Washington, Moscow, and even in Beijing, unless they have not been destroyed. [as received]

The People's Republic of China, which has long coveted these territories, has given to the Hoang Sa Islands (literally Yellow Sand) the name of Xisha (Western Sand) and to the Truong Sa Islands (literally Long Sand) the name of Nansha (Southern Sand). It has in two stages occupied the first archipelago when the latter was still under the control of the Saigon administration. Seizing the eastern group of islands in 1956, and fifteen years later, in 1974, the western groups of islands, while continuing to claim ownership of the second archipelago. Having occupied Hoang Sa, China has orchestrated a propaganda campaign to justify its act, interpreting historical texts in its own way, distorting documents and even invoking the so-called "archaeological excavations at Xisha."

Anxious to safeguard peace, the Vietnamese side has on many occasions invited the Chinese side to open talks on this subject, but each time China has turned a deaf ear.

To put its readers in the picture, the Hanoi monthly VIETNAM COURIER has published the following dossier entitled "The Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes", which comprises 6 articles: 1) geographical data; 2) the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes are Vietnamese territory; 3) from map war to hot war; 4) argumentation or sophistry?; 5) Chinese archaeology in service of expansionism; and 6) summary chronology.

The following article is the first in the series:

Geographical Data

In the past it was known that in the Bien Dong, also called Eastern Sea (by Vietnamese) and China Sea or South China Sea, lay a vast area which was very dangerous for navigation because of its numerous reefs upon which boats can go aground or capsize. The Vietnamese called it variously Bai Cat Vang, Hoang Sa, Truong Sa, Dai Hoang Sa, Dai Truong Sa, Van Ly Troung Sa.... For many centuries Western navigators, particularly the Portuguese, Dutch, British and French, called this area Pracel, Paracel or Parcel, and recorded it on the maps by a dotted line in the Bien Dong. Thus, both the Vietnamese living on the shores of the Eastern Sea and the Western navigators gave one name to what are now, thanks to the advances in navigation and geography, two separate archipelagoes in the Eastern Sea: Hoang Sa (Paracels) and Truong Sa (Spratly or Spratley). Hence such names as Bai Cat Vang, Hoang Sa, Truong Sa, Dai Hoang Sa, Van Ly Truong Sa on ancient Vietnamese maps or in old geography or history books, and Pracel, Parcel, Paracels in the books and maps of Western navigators and missionaries in the 19th century encompass both archipelagoes.

These archipelagoes occupy different positions in the Eastern Sea but share some common features:

First, all their islands are coral islands.

Second, all these islands are low and small, about 5-6 metres at most above the water, and spread over a large area. Truong Sa covers 160,000 square kilometres, 12 times the area of Hoang Sa. The biggest island in Hoang Sa is Linh Con (Lincoln) -- about 2 square kilometres; the biggest in Truong Sa is the Ba Binh (Itu Aba) -- about 0.6 square kilometres. The total land area of each archipelago is about 10 square kilometres.

Thus, both archipelagoes are taking on increasing strategic importance, for they lie on the routes linking the Pacific to the Indian Ocean, Asia's crucial eastern flank to the rest of Asia, and to Europe and Africa. To control these archipelagoes is to control the maritime and aerial navigation routes of the Bien Dong. Before launching its war to conquer Southeast Asia and South Asia, Japanese militarism occupied Hoang Sa and set up a submarine base in Truong Sa.

Fourth [as received], both archipelagoes are rich in natural wealth: guano (estimated at several million tonnes), marine products from fish to lobsters, tortoises, abalone, shellfish, and above all large potential oil and gas reserves.

Hoang Sa Archipelago

Hoang Sa (Paracels), which the Chinese call Xisha, lies near the entrance of Bac Bo Gulf, about 120 nautical miles from Re Island, a Vietnamese offshore island, and about 170 nautical miles from Danang. The archipelago lies approximately between 111 0 and 113 0 longitude east of Greenwich, 15045' and 17005' latitude north. [figures as received] The total number of islands depends on the method of counting them for, apart from the islands proper, there are numerous shoals and reefs which lie awash or which only emerge when the tide ebbs. In all, there are roughly 30 islands, shoals and reefs.

There are large reefs some 10 to 20 metres below the water like Bremen Reef, Jehangire Reef, etc. There are immersed flat-topped islands at shallow depths; typical of these is Discovery Reef 30-35 km long and 6-7 km wide. There are also crescent-shaped reefs with an outer ring (often emerging at low tide) enclosing a calm lagoon 8-10 m deep, such as Antelope Reef, Dao Bac (North Reef), Bong Bay (Bombay Reef).... The islands proper are of various types: bare sand banks or sand banks with sparse vegetation or clumps of trees.

The archipelago includes two groups:

The Eastern Groups, also called Amphitrite Group, after the name of a French boat which was stranded there on its way to China in 1698. It has about 10 small islands, including: Dao Tay (West Bank); Dao Cay (Tree Island); Dao Bac (North Island); Dao Giua (Middle Island); Dao Nam (South Island); Dao Hon Da (Rocky Island); Dao Phu Lam (Woody Island); Dao Linh Con (Lincoln Island).

The Western Group, also called Crescent Group, after its shape. It has the following main islands: Dao Hoang Sa (Pattle Island); Dao Huu Nhat (Tobert Island); Dao Quang Anh (Money Island); Dao Quang Hoa (Duncan Island); Dao Tri Ton (Triton Island); Dao Duy Mong (Drumond Island).

The easternmost island is Lincoln; the southernmost is Triton.

After a scientific survey conducted in 1926 by Krempf, the director of the Nha Trang Oceanographic Institute, French hydrologists concluded that:

"The Paracels are but the end of a continental shelf which, owing to submarine terraces, prolongs the Annamese (Vietnamese) Cordilera from Cloud Pass between Hue and Tourane (Danang). To the west, the sea floor is less than 1,400 metres deep, while to the east the islands are bordered by depths reaching 5,000 metres, and even more to the south.

"Geologically, the Paracels are part and parcel of Vietnam".

Meteorologically, Hoang Sa Archipelago has no cold season, only a rainy season from June to December and a dry season from January to May. The mean temperature in January is 230C, in July 2809 C. [figures as received] The annual average rainfall is about 1.170mm (according to 1933-43, 1948-62 figures). From June to August, the Hoang Sa area is hit by tropical storms. Storms also break out occasionally from September to January.

The islands' original vegetation has been destroyed by man. Most common now are coconut trees and filao pines; besides these there are bang bien (sea almonds) and mu u (calophyllum inophyllum). Under the taller trees grow convolunlaceae, gramineae, and a number of other plants. According to Father H. Fontaine, all the plants on Hoang Sa Archipelago are to be found in Vietnam, particularly central Vietnam, from which they were imported by various means. There are no indigenous species.

The waters around the islands abound in a great many fish, shellfish, lobsters, tortoises and various kinds of algae. On the islands seagulls are the most common birds.

Guano is an interesting resource. After the 1926-1927 survey, French geologists concluded that guano deposits on Hoang Sa Archipelago may run to 10 million tonnes. According to the Ministry of the Economy of the former Saigon administration, the deposits on Hoang Sa (Pattle), Huu Nhat (Tobert), Quang Anh (Money) and Duy Mong (Drumond) Islands vary between 3,200,000 and 4,200,000 tonnes.

Administratively, Hoang Sa Archipelago (including both Hoang Sa and Truong Sa) formerly belonged to Quang Nghia District, Quang Nam Province, as recorded in Do Ba (alias Cong Dao) and Bui The Dat's maps. On 30 March 1938 King Bao Dai signed Ordinance No 10 whereby Hoang Sa Archipelago was merged with Thua Thien Province.

On 15 June 1938 Governor-General of Indochina Jules Brevie set up an administrative unit in Hoang Sa Archipelago called the Hoang Sa administrative delegation attached to Thua Thien Province. On 6 May 1939 he signed a decree amending that of 1938 and establishing two administrative units the Crescent Group and dependencies, on the one hand, and the Amphitrite Group and dependencies, on the other. Their seats lay respectively on Hoang Sa (Pattle) and Phu Lam (Woody) Islands. On 13 July 1961 the Saigon administration merged Hoang Sa Archipelago with Quang Nam Province and created an administrative unit for the entire archipelago called Dinh Hai Commune attached to Hoa Vang District. On 21 October 1969 it merged Dinh Hai Commune with Hoa Long Commune of the same Hoa Vang District.

Truong Sa Archipelago

Truong Sa Archipelago (Spratly or Spratley), which the Chinese call Nansha and the Filipinos Kalayaan (excluding Truong Sa Island — 'Spratly'), lies about 250 nautical miles from Cam Ranh Bay and 210 nautical miles from Hon Hai Island. It is about 1,150 km from Haiman Island (China) and about 1,780 km from Taiwan. It lies south of Hoang Sa Archipelago, between approximately 111030' and 117020 longitude east of Greenwich, 6050' and 120 [figures as received] latitude north.

Like Hoang Sa Archipelago, Truong Sa Archipelago includes islands lying above water, islands and reefs which are awash or underwater reefs which emerge when the tide ebbs. In all there are about 100 islands, shoals and reefs. The main islands are: Song Tu Dong (Northeast Cay); Song Tu Tay (Southwest Cay); Thi Tu (Thitu); Loaita (Loaita); Nam Ai or Nam Yet (Namyit); Sinh Ton (Sin Cowe); Truong Sa (Spratly); An Bang (Amboyna Cay); Ba Binh (Itu Aba); Vinh Vien (Nanshan); Ben Lac (West York); Cong Do (Commondore).

All the islands, shoals and reefs are coral, a few metres above or under the water. Their climate, resources, vegetation and fauna are similar to those of Hoang Sa Archipelago.

According to the survey made by the French laboratory-ship De Lanessan in 1926 and 1933 in the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa area, Vietnam's geological limit follows the 100-fathom isobath. This is the limit of Vietnam's continental shelf. It thus encompasses both the Hoang Sa and the Truong Sa Archipelagoes as well as the entire submerged area within the 100-fathom isobath.

Worthy of mention in Truong Sa Archipelago is the Tizzard Shoal and Reef, a sizeable area of islands and atolls lying upon a socle 80 m below sea level.

As for fish, according to the Naga expedition (California University) to the Truong Sa area, there are many kinds of mid-waterfish. There are also numerous flocks of birds and shoals of fish near the surface of the water. The expedition concluded that the area is extremely rich in fish.

According to the Japanese laboratory-ship Kyochio Maru 52 operating in the Bien Dong, most of the fish in this area and particularly in the Truong Sa area migrate following seasonal winds in small scattered bands, except for the halibut.

Administratively, according to a decree of Cochinchina's Governor J. Krautheimer (21 December 1933), Truong Sa Archipelago was merged with Ba Ria Province. Then by a decree of 22 October 1956 altering the boundaries and names of Saigon-Cholon and the provinces and provincial capitals of South Vietnam, the Saigon authorities merged Truong Sa Archipelago with Phuoc Tuy Province. Finally, on 6 September 1973, they signed a decree merging the islands of Truong Sa (Spratly), An Bang (Amboyna Cay), Ba Binh (Itu Aba), Song Tu Dong (Northeast Cay), Song Tu Tay (Southwest Cay), Loaita, Thi Tu, Nam Ai (Namyit), Sinh Ton (Sin Cowe) and other adjacent islands with Phuoc Hai commune, Dat Do District, Phuoc Tuy (now Dong Nai) Province.

MATERIALS ON SESSION OF NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

Pham Van Dong Speech

OW311215 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 30 Dec 81

[Report on speech by Pham Van Dong, Council of Ministers chairman, at the closing meeting of the Seventh National Assembly Second Session on 30 December]

[Text] Comrade Pham Van Dong's speech points to issues closely related to the implementation of the 1981 State Plan and particularly those of the 1982 State Plan. He expressed the opinion that in our country's current situation, particularly in the economic field, the question of management has become an urgent requirement of the working people and an extremely important task of the socialist state. The good experiences acquired in this respect in 1981 prove that we are capable of studying and gradually adopting a new management system for our national economy.

The central factor of the national economic management system is the state plan. The state plan is a manifestation of the party's line and main policies and a reflection of the people's will and interests. At the same time the state plan reflects the most rational use of the people's work force, the cadres' capabilities, the country's natural resources and our existing technical material supplies. In a word, it must provide for steady development of the national economy and improvement of the people's material and cutural life.

We advocate formulating plans at the three fundamental levels with the district level assuming a particularly important position. In formulating plans, we must start from the grassroots units — cooperatives and enterprises. From there on we should formulate sector plans and regional plans to finally combine them into a state plan. In order to arrive at a good plan, we must give importance to the following points:

1. The plan must reflect balance among the various aspects of the national economy, among the various sectors and regions, starting from the grassroots units. This will ensure the firmness and realism of the plan.

2. The plan requires that we carry out auditing on the basis of advanced economic and technical norms.

3. The plan must promote the awareness and business capabilities of the various sectors and echelons, particularly at the grassroots level, aimed at overfulfilling it and satisfying the three interests [the interests of society, the collective and the individual], with attention given to the interests of those who are directly engaged in production.

Thus, we must link planning to finance, link the implementation of plan norms to the application of scientific and technical achievements and link the plan to the market. This is the domestic market, whose importance we must grasp.

In a word, the formulation and implementation of the plan is an effort aimed at developing the national economy according to the laws of socialism. It is an effort aimed at promoting the creative labor capability of the working people, the scientific and technical cadres and the managerial cadres, incessantly raising labor productivity, reducing production cost and increasing the effectiveness of investment. This will lead to ever increasing social production, national income, accumulation and consumption.

The speech of the comrade chairman of the Council of Ministers also points to our country's difficulties and its favorable conditions. As is generally known, we are faced with many difficulties, big and mounting difficulties coming from various directions.

They not only add up but also multiply and have often caused many among us to worry. We must very clearly realize the deep origin and direct cause of these difficulties, realize their disastrous effects and forecast their developments. In the final analysis, these are difficulties of a backward agricultural economy which has sustained the heavy consequences of 30 years of war and which is presently the target of extremely vicious sabotage by new and old enemies. It is these big and mounting difficulties which have given rise to the serious and diverse imbalances which we have known.

Under such circumstances, overcoming these difficulties constitutes precisely our party's and state's revolutionary task and the objective of our people's struggle as reflected in the party's line and policies, in the Constitution and laws adopted by the National Assembly, in the state plan and in the management and organization of the Council of Ministers as well as of the various sectors and echelons.

Considering the aforementioned situation, the 1982 State Plan aims at partially resolving a number of most serious and urgent imbalances in the national economy and the people's livelihood. Herein lies a question of great significance. We must achieve at all costs a balance between requirements and capabilities, that is, the important and urgent requirements set forth must be compatible with the realistic capabilities of the economy and the country. This requires that we clearly and vividly see the comprehensive and extremely great capabilities we have not yet fully utilized, actual as well as latent capabilities in terms of labor, cadres, the people's creativeness and in international cooperation, particularly in cooperation with the Soviet Union, with the two fraternal neighbors and with the socialist countries in CEMA. Here are actually capabilities whose scope and effect we have not yet fully realized.

On the other hand, while worrying about the imbalances in the economy, we have not been paying adequate attention to the SRV's strength and powerful position in the political field. This concerns the clear-sighted leadership of the party, the superiority of the socialist regime -- the regime in which the people are masters of their own destiny -- the relations with other countries, the all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries and our country's international prestige.

Knowing how to fully utilize the aforementioned powerful position and strength, we will be fully able to overcome, gradually and in a planned manner, in the long and short term, the difficulties and imbalances in order to advance and successfully build socialism and firmly defend our socialist fatherland and to gradually bring a plentiful, civilized and happy life to our people, thus fulfilling revered and beloved Uncle Ho's sacred testament and contributing to the cause of revolution and peace of the people of the world.

VNA Report on Speech

OW312040 Hanoi VNA in English 1458 GMT 31 Dec 81

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, December 31 -- Speaking at the closing meeting yesterday of the Second Session of the National Assembly, Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong stressed that there are every ground to believe that the Vietnamese people will overcome the present difficulties and imbalances and succeed in building socialism throughout the country.

The chairman said:

"In 1981 our people have achieved many inspiring successes in agricultural and industrial production as well as in the whole national economy. These successes have convincingly demonstrated the great and diversified capabilities of our people at the production establishments, at the district level as well as in all localities. However, we must also admit that we might have done more and better in many fields of the economic and cultural life."

On the 1982 State Plan, Chairman Pham Van Dong said: "We must concentrate all efforts to develop a comprehensive agriculture along with forestry and fisheries in the whole country, as well as in each major economic zone, of which the district is of primordial importance. Along with the development of agriculture we must care better for the expansion of consumer goods.

"At present our exports consist chiefly in agricultural, handicraft and small industrial products and minerals. But we should at the same time realize the export potentials of some industrial branches. We must strive our best to increase exports in order to import the necessary items through the working out of new policies aimed at encouraging the different branches, localities and production establishments to achieve better results in this work under the centralised management of the state. "We will give special attention to the oil and natural gas industry and do our best in our cooperation with the Soviet Union in this field.

"We must attach importance to rationally distributing the abundant work force of our country aimed first of all at exploiting all the agricultural lands still left waste and all exploitable forest lands. This is a job having strategic significance in many fields, economic and defence in the short-term as well as long-term interests, in order to lay the basis for developing a comprehensive agriculture closely associated with forestry.

"In the present situation of our country, especially in regard to the economic situation, the question of management has become the most urgent requirement of the working people and a very essential task of the socialist state. Central to the system of management of our national economy is the state plan. The process of working out and implementing the state plan is a process of struggle aimed at developing the capabilities of our working people, our scientific, technical and managerial cadres, and at constantly raising work productivity, reducing production cost and increasing the efficiency of (?investments -- hence) to increase social production, national income as well as the accumulation and the consumption funds."

Chairman Pham Van Dong went on: "As you have known, we are facing many and very big difficulties from many sides. We must see very clearly into the deep-lying sources as well as the immediate causes of these difficulties in order to fully realize their harmful effects and foresee their resolution.

"Based on the situation described above, the State Plan for 1982 aims at achieving a step in overcoming the serious and immediate imbalances in the national economy and the people's life.... We must see clearly and deeply the very big capabilities in many fields which we have not yet fully tapped, the real as well as potential capabilities in manpower in cadres, in the creative power of the people, the prospects offered by our international cooperation, first of all with the Soviet Union, the two fraternal neighbouring countries, with the other socialist countries in the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance, because there actually lie [as received] those capabilities of which we have not fully assessed the magnitude and effect."

The chairman concluded: "If all these forces and potentials can be put into play, we are fully capable, step by step and in a planned way, according to our long-term and short-term plans, of overcoming the present difficulties and imbalances and continuing our advance toward successfully building socialism and firmly defending our socialist motherland."

Truong Chinh Speech

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, December 30 -- At this session, the National Assembly of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam considered the reports of the Council of Ministers, passed two new laws, decided on the immediate problems concerning the national economy, and the direction, tasks and main objectives of the 1982 State Plan, etc.

This was summed up by President of the Council of State Truong Chinh in a speech at the closing session of the National Assembly today. He said: "In the conditions of our country, fraught with heavy consequences of over 30 years of war, and where efforts are exerted daily against activities of sabotage, provocation and encroachment of the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists in collaboration with U.S. imperialism, the achievements made by the Vietnamese people in 1981 are very significant. They prove that the Vietnamese people, industrious, courageous and creative by nature, are fully capable of putting to use national resources, bringing into play positive factors of the national economy, and taking the revolution unceasingly forward".

On the tasks of 1982, Truong Chinh said: "1982 is a year of special importance in the political life of our people. The Fifth National Congress of the Communist Party of Vietnam will be convened in the first quarter. Looking forward to the congress with confidence that its success will accelerate our revolution, our people, by promoting the right of socialist collective mastery and the spirit of self-reliance and self-support, and making good use of international aid and cooperation and overcoming the immediate difficulties, will strive to fulfill the 1982 State Plan, thereby creating conditions for the stabilization and improvement of their living conditions.

In order to achieve that objective, in production and construction we must concentrate our forces on fulfilling our central task, which is agricultural production; strive to achieve self-sufficiency in food on a national scale, and vigorously step up the growing of fibre crops in order to gradually ensure an adequate supply of dry goods for the people. We must step up the production of consumer goods, especially textiles, paper and medicines, and expand small industries and handicrafts. We must strive to increase exports; turn to accounts the existing capabilities of heavy industry, especially electricity, coal, mechanical engineering, and fertilizer; accelerate the exploration of oil and gas; consolidate and increase communications and transport; reorganize capital construction; accelerate scientific research and the application of science and technology to production.

We must attend to economic efficiency, raise the quality of products, and reduce their cost, and re-distribute labour on both local and national scales with the aim of making better use of the enormous potentials of our country in labour, land and occupations. We must continue to improve the supply and distribution of goods, overcome our shortcomings and errors in order to promptly solve the difficulties concerning the problem of prices.

It is at the same time necessary to continue stepping up socialist transformation in the southern provinces, perfecting the socialist relations of production in the northern provinces, and developing and consolidating them in the whole country.

In order to carry out these tasks satisfactorily we must pay attention to all the three interests — the interest of the state, or of the entire people, that of the collective and that of individual labourers — and promote initiative and creativeness. There must be joint efforts of both the state and the people, of the central and local levels.

We should organize livelihood and consumption of the whole society in conformity with the capability of our national economy. On the other hand, the state, including both the central and local levels and particularly the goods-circulating and distributing branches, must meet the people's demands for essential consumer goods and supply rationed goods to ensure the livelihood of cadres, workers and other employees, on the basis of boosting production, controlling sources of goods and improving business and services.

We must strictly practise thrift in production, capital construction, and administrative and other expenditures. Alongside driving home the significance of thrift to all state offices and the entire people, it is necessary to rapidly perfect consumption quotas for materials, labour and capital, and to organize a regime of strict inspection and a strict but just system of rewards and fines."

"It is necessary to enhance the quality of cultural, educational, medical, social, sporting and tourist activities in order to improve the cultural and moral life of the people; build a socialist type of man; struggle against the enemy's psychological warfare; and get rid of all vestiges of decadent culture and superstition.

A decisive measure to improve the present economic situation is to firmly change our economic management system; to eliminate the bureaucratic economic management based on the administration of subsidies; apply economic accounting and socialist business, taking planning work as the core and combining and business [as received]; organize three planning levels (particularly the district level); and apply the principle of distribution according to work done.

Throughout the execution of the state plan and the improvement of economic management, the organization and direction by the administration at all levels, particularly the Council of Ministers, are very important.

In 1982 it is necessary to launch a mass movement of socialist emulation to satisfactorily carry out the state plan, record good achievements to welcome the fifth party congress, and create a driving force for the implementation of the Third Five-Year State Plan.

For socialist construction and national defence to be successful it is necessary to continue strengthening national defence, maintaining political security and social order and security, enhancing the effectiveness of the state of proletarian dictatorship, and enforcing the socialist legislations. We must severely punish reactionaries, intruders, spies and saboteurs of all kinds while stepping up the struggle against all negative aspects in social life, firmly protecting socialist property, combating extravagance, corruption, and appropriation of public property, and severely punishing speculators and smugglers for upsetting the market."

On the international situation President Truong Chinh said: "The revolutionary cause of the Vietnamese people is closely connected with the entire world people's struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism. 1981 marked a new development in the three currents of revolution of this era. This struggle, taking place on a world scale, has become more difficult, more complicated. Yet the balance of forces is incessantly tipping in favour of peace and revolution.

U.S. imperialism and other forces of international reaction, though arrogant and bellicose, have failed to reverse the 'post-Vietnam' course of history. Moreover, it is the aggressive policy of the Reagan administration and the Sino-American collusion which are fanning up the flames of the world people's struggle against the arms race, against preparations for a nuclear war, and in favour of peace, international detente and disarmament. In the West, especially in Western Europe and North America, the struggle for peace is at its strongest since World War Two. This means that the movement against war and for peace has deeply taken root in the life of people in all countries, and although the U.S. global strategy and the foreign policy of the Reagan administration are posing a big danger to peace, it is clear that there is a greater chance now for the world people's to ward off the danger of war and safeguard peace.

We are very glad at the growing strength and advance of the socialist community in all fields, economic and social. The Soviet Union, with its very strong economy, very great defence potential, and its constructive foreign policy as shown in the 'Peace Program for the Eighties,' and the important peace initiatives advanced by Comrade Leonid Brezhnev, general secretary of the C.P.S.U. Central Committee and president of the Presidium of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet, is playing more and more effectively its role as the solid buttress of world peace and the reliable mainstay of the national liberation movement and the movement for welfare, democracy and socialism.

We fully support the Polish Council of State for having declared martial law and taken other necessary steps in the whole country to crush all sinister plots and moves of domestic and foreign reaction, in defence of socialist Poland and its foreign cooperation."

"We firmly support the heroic people of Cuba who are building socialism and defending their socialist country, and strongly condemn U.S. imperialism's aggressive policy vis-a-vis that country. It is certain that U.S. imperialism will meet with defeats many heavier than what they sustained at the Bay of Giron if, heedless of history, they recklessly tamper with this outpost of socialism on the Western Hemisphere.

We express militant solidarity with the peoples of Nicaragua, Grenada and El Salvador in their just struggles against Washington's intervention, threat, embargo and aggression, and fully support the legitimate aspirations of other countries in Central America and the Caribbean for a life in peace, independence and freedom.

We voice vigorous support for the fraternal people of Afghanistan in struggling to defend and follow up the achievements of the April Revolution, against the intervention of the forces of imperialism and international reaction.

We vehemently condemn the criminal actions taken by U.S. imperialism and Zionism against the Arab people, the Palestinian people in particular, as well as the recent annexation of Syria's Golan Heights by Israel.

We strongly condemn the apartheid clique in South Africa for their savage crimes against the people of that country, their repression of the struggle of the Namibian people, and their attacks on Angola. We rejoice at the new success of the three Indochinese peoples in building and defending their countries and in strengthening their solidarity and cooperation in all fields. The expansionists and hegemonists in Beijing, working hand in glove with the U.S. imperialists, have initially failed in their scheme to weaken, divide and annex Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea and will certainly sustain heavier setbacks.

All people of conscience in the world are very glad at the wonderful regeneration of the Kampuchean people from the genocide perpetrated by the clique of Pol Pot and Ieng Sary, henchmen of Beijing. Never has the militant solidarity between the peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea been so strong, and more and more people in the world have come to see that the danger to peace and stability in Southeast Asia comes from China. The Vietnamese people resolutely defend their country's independence from the expansionists and hegemonists in Beijing, but they consistently treasure their friendship with the Chinese people.

Regarding relations among the Southeast Asian countries, it is the stand of the three Indochinese nations that the countries in the region should discuss and agree with one another, on the principles of equality, mutual respect non-imposition and without any intervention from outside, with a view to establishing a zone of peace and stability in Southeast Asia, as desired by the people of each country and in the interest of peace and prosperity in Asia and the world at large.

We welcome the important contributions made by India, a country with a time-honoured civilization, to the cause of peace in the world, in Asia and in Southeast Asia."

President Truong Chinh said in conclusion: "The Vietnamese people have won very glorious victories and are facing good prospects. Even so we, while living in peace, have to gird ourselves against a kind of war by sabotage conducted under different aspects by the expansionists and hegemonists in Beijing in collusion with U.S. imperialism, while providing against the possibility of a major war. The economy is unbalanced in many respects. Living conditions, especially those of state employees, are still poor. There are still many shortcomings in economic and social management. Yet, the entire people are endeavouring to overcome difficulties, determined to score new, still bigger successes.

The Fifth National Congress of the Communist Party of Vietnam will sum up the revolutionary struggle undertaken over the past five years; it will concretize the line for socialist construction in the next state."

"We believe that under the leadership of the Communist Party of Vietnam, headed by General Secretary Le Duan, with the socialist collective mastery of the working people, with the good lessons learned from the implementation of the line and policies of the party and the state, with the all-sided assistance of the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, and with the sympathy and support of all progressive people in the world, our people will certainly succeed in building socialism, firmly keeping socialist Vietnam safe, and discharging our international obligations, thus carrying out to the full the sacred last testament of the great President Ho Chi Minh".

Nguyen Huu Tho Closing Speech

[Closing speech by Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the National Assembly, at the 30 December closing meeting of the Second Session of the Seventh National Assembly -- recorded]

[Text] Comrade National Assembly deputies: Today we are successfully closing the Second Session of the Seventh National Assembly. All of you, displaying your sense of responsibility, have worked intensively and realistically and have contributed your views and suggestions aimed at boosting production and stabilizing the people's lives, especially the lives of workers and civil servants.

In line with the spirit of the new Constitution, during the period from the first session to the current session delegations of National Assembly deputies, the Council of Nationalities and National Assembly committees have made enormous efforts to better organize research on and study of the economic situation, to meet with voters, to inspect the activities of state agencies and to promote the functions of government agencies. We are confident that the comrade deputies will strive hard to meet our people's requirements in an increasingly better manner.

Comrade deputies, our country's tasks of building and developing the economy and society for 1982 are very weighty. We have learned valuable lessons from the organization and leadership in implementing party and state positions and policies. The resolutions of the coming Fifth VCP Congress will serve as a guide and will be a great source of encouragement for our people. Let all our compatriots across the country uphold the spirit of socialist collective mastery and self-reliance, promote the good experiences and new factors of 1981 and strive to carry out successfully the 1982 State Plan so as to create conditions for achieving greater progress during the subsequent years of the 1981-85 5-Year Plan.

Comrade deputies, back in your localities and units, you should report to voters the spirit and substance of this session so as to make the compatriots of all walks of life clearly aware of the situation and tasks and whip up among them a vigorous socialist movement on a national scale to vie with each other in carrying out outstandingly the resolutions approved by the National Assembly. I cordially wish all the deputies good health and great success in implementing their noble tasks in the new year. I herewith declare the Second Session of the Seventh National Assembly closed. [applause]

PHAM VAN DONG ATTENDS FINAL LAO SOCCER MATCH

OW011700 Hanoi VNA in English 1455 GMT 1 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 1 -- The visiting soccer team of Vientiane, capital of Laos, played its final match here this afternoon with the team of the Quang Ninh coal miners before a capacity audience of 30,000. Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong and Lao Ambassador Khampheun Tounalom were among the audience. The match ended in a 1-1 draw with each side scoring in each half-time.

MARCOS URGES MEASURES FOR SPORTSMAN'S RELEASE

HK040418 Manila Domestic Service in English 0400 GMT 4 Jan 82

[Text] The president has ordered all military regional commanders to try everything to secure Manotoc's safe release. This includes the use of underground contacts to get in touch with the kidnappers. The official statement said President Marcos was very much concerned about the safety of Manotoc. It said this should be the primary concern of all the military and police elements assigned to the case. At the same time, Malacanang called on the Manotoc family as well as the media to cooperate in efforts to solve the case, and cautioned against the circulation of wild and false speculations, insinuating the involvement of the president and his family in the matter.

The statement explained that instead of fully cooperating with investigators, the members of the Manotoc family have been more concerned with efforts to establish the real identity of the kidnappers and the authenticity of the ransom note which Mr Manotoc had allegedly written. Obstacles have been posed and all kinds of absurd statements have been issued which in turn have raised speculations about a possible plot to embarrass the president and his family, the statement added. Notwithstanding these problems, the chief executive assured that every effort was being taken by the government to search out the truth and to close the case. President Marcos made it known to all that he is going to utilize all facilities and exert all efforts to recover Mr Manotoc alive, so he can tell his own story.

Further on Marcos Involvement

HK040043 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 3 Jan 82

[Excerpt] President Marcos has taken a direct hand in the Manotoc kidnapping case and has ordered the military and police authorities to save sportsman Tommy Manotoc from his kidnappers. Malacanang explained that the president stepped into the kidnapping case after authorities disclosed that the kidnappers demanded a 20 million-peso ransom and the release of top subversive leaders. The kidnappers also demanded amnesty for them in a ransom note sent to Manotoc's family. Malacanang also said that [words indistinct] much concerned for Manotoc's safety. At the same time, the president called on Manotoc's family as well as the media to cooperate in efforts for a speedy solution of the case.

MARCOS SAYS NPA, MNLF POSE NO SERIOUS THREAT

HK230635 Manila Domestic Service in English 0400 GMT 23 Dec 81

[Text] President Marcos has stated that both the New People's Army and the Moro National Liberation Front have failed to establish strong control in the country. Addressing Malacanang newsmen, the chief executive said both rebel groups are now even encountering problems in recruiting new followers. Thus, he said, the security threat posed by these two dissident organizations has ceased to be serious. On the other hand, the president stressed the government has been very successful in persuading rebels to leave the hills and return to the folds of the law. Proof of this, he said, is the fact that thousands of MNLF and NPA followers have rejoined the government, even converting themselves to useful and cooperative individuals supporting government programs. [NODONG SINMUN 2 January editorial: "Let's Make 1982 the Most Glorious Year in the History of Our People's Revolutionary Struggle"]

[Text] We have entered the glorious third year of the 1980's. Seeing out a year shining with fruitful struggle and victory and greeting a new year overflowing with hope, the entire country is covered with boundless gratitude and pleasure.

The year of 1982 is a significant and historic one in which felicitous events will be added to the annals of the chuche cause. Entering the new year, all the people throughout the country extend warmest greetings with endless reverence and admiration to the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song, who has devoted his whole life to the fatherland and the revolution, built a people's paradise on this land and provided the people with a bright future.

Comrade Kim Il-song -- the great leader of our party and people -- on the morning of the new year delivered a New Year's message to all the people. In the New Year's message, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song reviewed the successes attained in the struggle of our people to implement the decisions of the sixth party congress and put forward militant tasks to glorify the new year with greater victory.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's New Year's message provides programmatic guidelines for enacting another upsurge in socialist construction and making new progress in the struggle for the fatherland's prosperity and development and achieving the people's happiness. These brilliant, militant tasks greatly encourage all party members and the people to confidently perform exploits in a new struggle.

The year of 1981 was one of fruitful struggle for implementing the program for socialist construction advanced by the sixth congress of our party. Unanimously rising under the slogan reading "Let Us Make All-Out Advance To Implement the Decisions of the Sixth KWP Congress," last year our people vigorously carried out the three revolutions -- ideological, technical and cultural. Thus, they attained successes in socialist construction and made great progress in carrying out the cause of imbuing society with the chuche idea.

Under the correct leadership of our party, the work of revolutionizing and turning workers into the working class was successfully carried out. As a result, their revolutionary zeal has remarkably increased.

In the course of victoriously accelerating the all-out movement to implement the decisions of the sixth party congress, our people came to profoundly understand the greatness of the party and the leader and to more warmly trust the party. It is the proud trait of our society that all the people firmly believe and follow their party and leader in all circumstances and that they devote everything to the struggle to implement the party's lines and policies with a firm resolve to follow the leadership of the party.

It is a success of incomparable value that the dignity and prestige of the party have been unprecedentedly enhanced among the people and that the unity of the entire party and people around the party and the leader has been firmly consolidated.

Last year, great successes were attained in socialist economic and cultural construction. Thanks to the dedicated labor struggle of our working class and workers, industrial production rapidly developed, and many great monumental edifices were built throughout the country. Overcoming the unfavorable weather conditions, the rural economic sector reaped bumper harvests. The fishery sector gained unprecedented successes in its winter fishing operations.

With the acceleration of production and construction and with the vigorous conduct of the technical revolution, the work of making the people's economy chuche-oriented, modern and scientific was successfully carried out, and the country's economic might was further strengthened, thus laying a firm foundation for fulfilling the Second 7-Year Plan ahead of schedule.

Thanks to the correct policy of our party, and under its leadership, there were further developments in education work and many fine literary and art works were produced. In particular, research with valuable results was undertaken and there were various valuable scientific and technological inventions.

With the victorious progress of the revolution and construction, the might of our republic increased and was strengthened, and its international prestige was further enhanced. Last year, state leaders and delegations from many foreign countries visited our country. Unprecedentedly large international meetings were held in our country last year. This is a manifestation of strong international support for and solidarity with our people's revolutionary cause.

Last year, when the first battle to implement the line and tasks set forth by the historic sixth party congress was vigorously waged, our people, under the party's leadership, carried out much work and attained new successes in the fields of politics, economy, culture and foreign policy. These successes unfolded a more brilliant prospect on the road of our revolution and construction. Last year's struggle and victory constitute a great demonstration of the correctness and vitality of the revolutionary line and policy set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the sixth party congress and of the leadership of our party for their realization.

Last year, the situation at home and abroad was very complicated and our people were faced with unprecedentedly heavy and vast tasks. Even under such circumstances our people were able to vigorously advance the revolution and construction without any slackness, stalemate, deviation or twists and turns. This was due totally to the wise leadership of the party and the leader.

With his extraordinary wisdom and scientific insight, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song clearly elucidated the tasks and methods for the struggle to thoroughly carry out the revolutionary line set forth by him at the sixth party congress, and wisely led our people to carry out the cause of modeling the whole society on the chuche idea.

Firmly grasping the overall work of revolution and construction and energetically carrying it out, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, last year, too, led our people to increase production in all fields of the people's economy and to improve economic guidance and enterprise management. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song constantly gave an on-the-spot guidance to many provinces, plants, enterprises and cooperative farms throughout the country to lead party members and working people on a road of innovation. Thus, he saw to it that all people vigorously struggled with lofty revolutionary zeal and militant fighting spirit.

Brilliantly embodying the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's plan, last year our party unfolded various bold operations and vigorously organized and mobilized the entire party, country and people to the struggle to implement the decisions of the sixth party congress.

Our party saw to it that party organizations at all levels enhanced their combat capability and strengthened their party guidance over economic work. It also saw to it that party organizations at all levels effected a new change in their party ideological work and vigorously waged various mass movements.

In particular, by effecting a great turn in the work to see to it that youth and the working class perform their mission and duties in the implementation of the revolutionary tasks of chuche, our party further accelerated the new general march.

Apart from the correct policy of our party center and its tested leadership, we could not contemplate last year's brilliant success in making the whole country seethe with a surging militant mood, in strengthening the party and in accelerating the revolution and construction.

The practical experience obtained last year when proud successes were achieved in all fields of the revolution and construction vigorously proves again that a people blessed with the wise leadership of the party and the leader can carry out any tasks and brilliantly pioneer the road of revolution under any circumstances.

Greeting the rewarding new year, our party and people are now faced with the heavy but honorable task of effecting an epochal change in the struggle to implement the decisions made at the sixth party congress, based on the victory and success achieved last year.

The new year, 1982, is a particularly significant year in the glorious history of revolutionary struggle of our people. This year we will greet the 70th anniversary of the birth of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. We will also significantly commemorate the 50th anniversary of the founding of anti-Japanese guerrillas and of the start of armed struggle against the Japanese imperialists by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The history of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary activities is a most glorious history of a great leader of the working class -- one which has been embroidered with significant events and immortal achievements.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who led the van of revolution in his early days, pointed out the genuine road of the Korean revolution based on the chuche idea, organized and led the anti-Japanese armed struggle and developed our people's national liberation movement and the Korean communist movement onto a new higher stage.

Since then, our revolution has advanced fast and entered a new historic period for extensively realizing the cause of modeling the whole society on the chuche idea. Thanks to the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who led the sacred struggle for national liberation, for class liberation and for human liberation to victory, shouldering the fate of the fatherland and the nation, a rewarding new era of revolution has unfolded and the brilliant future of revolution has been guaranteed in this land. Everything of value that our people possess today is closely connected to the name of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

Having entered the new year, all party members and working people are now recalling the protracted road of struggle traversed by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the immortal exploits achieved on this road and are filled with the burning determination to make this year the most brilliant one in the history of our revolutionary struggle.

In his New Year's address, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who has always led our people to victory and glory, unfolded a brilliant blueprint to make greater progress again in our revolution and construction. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's New Year's address reflects his lofty will not only to expedite the complete victory of socialism and the country's reunification following the revolutionary line set forth at the sixth party congress but also to ensure that our people lead a more abundant and happier life.

To our people today, there is no work more important than thoroughly implementing the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's New Year's address, thus making this a glorious year. All party members and working people should vigorously struggle to implement the militant tasks advanced by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his New Year's address with lofty loyalty and burning revolutionary zeal. Thus, they should effect new upsurges in the revolution and construction.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught; This year we should bring about a new, great upsurge in all fields of the revolution and construction, so that epochal progress is made in the work of modeling the whole society on the chuche idea and so that this meaningful year becomes the most brilliant one in the history one of our people's revolutionary struggle.

Completing the revolutionary cause to the end under the banner of great chuche idea is an honorable revolutionary duty of our people today. The future of the Korean revolution and the fate of the nation rest on whether the cause of modeling the whole society the chuche idea is properly carried out.

All party members and working people should be firmly armed with the chuche idea and vigorously continue the struggle to extensively embody the chuche idea in all fields of the revolution and construction.

As taught by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the most important task we confront this year in socialist economic construction is to vigorously wage nature-remodeling work. The party, the nation and the people, all rising as one, should turn our country into a richer, more powerful and happier paradise by vigorously accelerating the struggle to implement the 4-point program for the remodeling of nature set forth by the fourth plenary meeting of the sixth party Central Committee.

This year we mark the fifth year of the Second 7-Year Plan. Only when we properly carry out this year's struggle can we open the way to fulfilling the Second 7-Year Plan ahead of schedule. All domains and all units of the national economy should vigorously struggle to normalize production at a high level and to fufill the state plan without fail.

We should increase the production of various chemical products by giving priority to occupying the chemical heights this year. We should actively struggle to rapidly develop the metallurgical industry.

Epochally upgrading the people's lives is one of the most important tasks which our party strives to carry out this year. We should decisively increase the production of consumer goods by increasing agricultural and marine products and by promptly developing light industry. We should more smoothly resolve the question of people's clothing, food and shelter by building more houses and cultural and welfare facilities.

The tasks we confront this year are gigantic. They require strenuous struggle and revolutionary efforts by the entire party and people. Cherishing lofty political awareness and enthusiasm for brilliantly implementing the lofty intent of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song to register a turning point in socialist economic construction, all the party members and workers should vigorously advance.

All domains and units should brilliantly fulfill the assigned revolutionary missions under any circumstances by fully displaying the spirit of absoluteness toward the party's policy, and the spirit of self-reliance and of arduous struggle. Everyone should actively contribute to glorifying this year through brilliant and valuable exploits and by winning substantive successes in their respective revolutionary outposts.

The party's expectations for leading functionaries in carrying out this year's grave tasks are indeed great. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Party organizations and leading functionaries at all levels should organize and execute all work with an attitude of being the masters of the revolution. They should win brilliant victory in this year's struggle by actively inspiring the masses' revolutionary zeal and initiatives.

Bearing in mind the fact that they have the key to the victory of this year's struggle, all leading functionaries should carry out all tasks in a responsible manner by assuming the attitude of being masters and should vigorously lead the masses.

Economic guidance functionaries should decisively improve the management and guidance of economic work as required by the Taean work system, substatively organize economic work and abide by the rules of cooperative production. State economic guidance organizations, including, in particular, the provincial economic guidance committee, should strengthen guidance over lower units to have them couply with the new year's gigantic tasks, flexibly (?manage) production and display the might and superiority of the new industrial guidance system by resolving in timely fashion problems which arise in real life operations.

The three revolutions are the general guidelines of socialist construction. Only when we vigorously carry out the three revolutions can we guarantee victory. By deepening and carrying forward the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture, all domains and all units should substantively carry out the movement of winning the Red Banner of the Three Revolutions and movement of following the examples of the unheralded heroes.

The active struggle to reunify the divided fatherland is an important task laid before us. Last year the South Korean people and students vigorously struggled for democratization of society and for national reunification in a difficult situation under unprecedented fascist oppression by the U.S. imperialists and their stooges. Compatriots of all strata overseas actively supported our party's new proposal for national reunification and broadly rose in the struggle to attain national reconciliation and cohesion and to form a front of great national unity.

All compatriots in the North and South and overseas should crush the splittists' two-Koreas plot in firm unity and should more courageously struggle to achieve at an early date the plan for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo, transcending differences in ideologies and systems, party affiliation and political views. We should open a new phase in the struggle to expedite national reunification, the ultimate national aspiration.

Independence, solidarity and peace are the basic ideas of our party's foreign policy. As in the past, we will strengthen unity with anti-imperialist, independent forces, develop cooperative relations with the peoples of the developing nations and actively struggle to safeguard peace and security of the world in the new year.

An important question in guaranteeing victory in the new year's struggle and in making this year the most glorious one in the history of our people's revolutionary struggle is to firmly establish the party's unitary ideological system within the entire party and whole society and to strengthen the unity and cohesion of our revolutionary ranks, which are firmly united around the party and the leader.

The unity and cohesion of our people united around the party and the leader with one idea and one will is a source of invincible strength and is a decisive factor for the victory of the revolution. Today, the unity and cohesion of our revolutionary ranks have reached standards higher than ever before. The entire party and people are firmly united around the party Central Committee with one idea and one will. The party's organizational and ideological foundation, on which we can accomplish the revolutionary cause to the end, is being consolidated.

The unity and cohesion of our party and our people, which will not be destroyed by anything, are the most precious achievements made in the course of the long arduous revolution by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who has made every effort and endured all pain.

Safeguarding and strengthening this unity and cohesion are the basic methods for achieving a constant upsurge in our revolution and constitute a genuine road to boundlessly glorifying this year of significance. Cherishing firm faith that they only know the party and the leader, wherever they may be, and boundlessly pure of heart, all the party members and workers should uphold the party and the leader.

By firmly grasping the work to perfect the party's organizational and ideological foundation, we should constantly advance this work and should register greater progress in it. It is important in successfully implementing the glorious new year's militant tasks to enhance the role and function of the party organizations. It is our people's lofty desire to glorify this year, which marks 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, as an unprecedentedly great political festival. Today our people's revolutionary zeal and spirit of struggle are very lofty. The nation's overall situation is very good. All the party organizations should inspire the masses' revolutionary enthusiasm and encourage them to create constant miracles and renovation in all battle sites by aggressively waging political and organizational work to brilliantly achieve the new year's rewarding tasks.

The party organizations should explain the New Year's message of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to the party members and workers and should vigorously organize and mobilize them to the struggle to implement the tasks put forward in that message. By encouraging all party members and workers to study and understand the glorious revolutionary history of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, his immortal achievements and our party's greatness and invincible strength, we should make them fight to the end with loyalty only on the road indicated by the party and the leader.

The targets of our struggle are clear and the future of our revolution is brilliant. Thanks to the refined leadership of the party and the leader who correctly lead all the people and thanks to the loyal people who uphold the leadership of the party and the leader, victory in this year's struggle is certain. Let us all glorify 1982 with great victory and proud exploits by vigorously advancing in accord with the party's leadership and upholding the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

KIM IL-SONG ATTENDS NEW YEAR'S CELEBRATIONS

[Text] Pyongyang, January 1 (KCNA) -- Grand New Year's celebrations of school children in Pyongyang were held on the evening of December 31 at the Pyongyang indoor stadium. Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of our party and our people, was present at the New Year's celebrations.

Set up in the entrance hall of the indoor stadium was a picture of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song commanding a view of the country from the top of Mt. Paektu, the holy mountain of revolution.

Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of our party and our people, arrived at the indoor stadium amid the playing of the welcome music. That moment the enthusiastic cheers of manse (hurrah) burst forth and waves of flowers rolled on. Kindergarten and school children offered New Year's greetings and presented bunches of flowers to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. He congratulated the school children on the hopeful New Year.

Attending the new years celebrations were Comrades Kim Il, O Chin-u and Yi Chong-ok, members of the Presidium of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea; Comrades Pak Song-chol, Yim Chun-chu, So Chol, Kim Chung-nin, Kim Yong-nam, Yon Hyong-muk, Kim Hwan, O Paek-yong, Chon Hun-sop, Kang Song-san, O Kuk-yol and Paek Hak-nim, members of the Political Bureau of the KWP Central Committee; Comrades Ho Tam, Hyon Mu-kwang, Yun Ki-pok, Choe Kwang, Chong Chun-ki, Kong Chin-tae, Kye Ung-tae, Choe Chae-u, Chong Kyong-hui, Choe Yong-nim, So Yun-sok and Kim Kang-hwan, alternate members of the Political Bureau; Comrades Hwang Chang-yop and Ho Chong-suk, secretaries of the Central Committee of the party; Comrades Hong Si-hak, So Kwan-hui, Kim Hoe-il, Hong Song-yong, Kim Tu-yong and Kim Pok-sin, vice-premiers of the Administration Council; and members and alternate members of the Central Committee of the party in Pyongyang; directors of departments of the Central Committee of the party; chairmen of the commissions and ministers of the Administration Council; leading personages of working people's organizations; generals of the Korean People's Army; and leading personnel in the domains of science, education, culture and art, public health and the press; and school children and working people in the city.

Also present there were the members of delegations of the General Association of Korean Residents in Japan (Chongnyon) including the congratulatory group of Koreans in Japan, the delegation of Chongnyon functionaries and the delegation of young workers of Chongnyon staying in the homeland. Invited there were diplomatic envoys and embassy officials of various countries in Pyongyang and foreign guests on a visit to our country.

When the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song appeared in the box amid the playing of the welcome music, the stormy cheers of manse and thunderous applause rocked the hall. School children presented a basket of flowers carrying boundless reverence to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. A performance celebrating the New Year was given by school children.

Put on the stage, which raised the curtain with the chorus and dance "New Year's Greetings to the Respected Father Marshal Kim Il-song," were colourful numbers including the poem and dance "Let Us Glorify the Revolutionary Cause of Chuche Generation After Generation!"

The performers sang with deep emotion of their infinite honour and pride of growing up in happiness with nothing more to desire under the loving care of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and our party and the proud successes registered by our people in the socialist construction and impressively showed the unshakable determination of the school children to firmly prepare themselves as dependable heirs to the revolutionary cause of chuche under the guidance of the glorious party.

At the end of the performance the cheers of manse burst forth again. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song waved to the cheering crowd and congratulated school children on their successful performance.

RODONG SINMUN Article

SK310855 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0800 GMT 31 Dec 81

[Text] Pyongyang, December 31 (KCNA) -- RODONG SINMUN today carries a signed article titled "Cuba on 23rd Anniversary of Victory of Revolution." The Korean people warmly congratulate the Cuban people on the 23rd anniversary of the victory of the revolution, it says, and goes on: With the victory of the Cuban revolution, the colonial system began crumbling and the first socialist state came into being on the Latin American Continent. This made a great contribution to the promotion of the struggle of the Western Hemispheric people for freedom and liberation.

Since the victory of the revolution the fraternal Cuban people under the leadership of the Communist Party of Cuba headed by Comrade Fidel Castro, the supreme guide of the Cuban revolution, have achieved many successes in their struggle for courageously repulsing the continued policies of aggression, intervention and blockade of the imperialists, defending the gains of revolution and building a new society.

The people's power bodies have been firmly built up and national cohesion and unity strengthened.

A great progress has also been made in the struggle for socialist economic construction.

The Korean people sincerely rejoice, as over their own, over the successes registered by the fraternal Cuban people in the revolution and construction.

Our people extend firm solidarity with the Cuban people in their just struggle for terminating the U.S. troops occupation of Guantanamo and achieving territorial integrity, their struggle against the imperialists anti-Cuban policy of blockade and isolation and manoeuvres of aggression and interference in the Latin American and Caribbean region.

As in the past, so in the future, too, the Korean people will advance shoulder to shoulder with the fraternal Cuban people in the joint struggle against imperialism and for the victory of the cause of socialism.

MINJU CHOSON carries an article introducing the achievements of the Cuban people on the 23rd anniversary of the victory of the Cuban revolution.

[Editorial: "Drawing Fresh Air"]

[Text] The year 1982 began with a series of momentous and refreshing changes. They are breathing fresh air into many aspects of our national life. The proven responsiveness of the government to the wants and needs of the people and its decisiveness in satisfying them are bound to have salutary effects on our national consensus and well-being.

A partial ministerial change opened the first business week of the administration. In an abrupt reshuffle the prime minister and five Cabinet members were replaced. The Cabinet reform is primarily intended to reorient and strengthen the making and execution of economic policies.

The appointment of a seasoned banker-government economist-turned businessman to the vital post of prime minister lends further weight to the overriding considerations given the economic sector of the administrative establishment. This may well indicate the direction in which the government will be moving this year.

Affected by the latest Cabinet reappointment were, besides the top economic planner, the ministers of finance, of energy and resources, of construction and of national unification. The former minister of national unification was named to become chief aide to the president.

Announcing the reshuffle, the senior presidential press secretary observed that President Chon Tu-hwan wanted a new team of economic experts to carry out "with fresh vigor and vitality' the Fifth Five-Year Economic and Social Development Plan that starts this year. A shot in the arm was meant by the partial Cabinet change in pursuing the goals of steady and stable economic growth ahead.

We in Korea, as well as people in most other nations, are just about nearing the end of a long tunnel of economic slowdown. Last year saw Korea coming out of a quagmire of a minus growth and runaway inflation. Momentum from the moderate rebound should be kept alive and accelerated this year so that our economy can stand on its own feet. This is a most urgent yet formidable task indeed.

Our economic policy took a major turn toward increased private initiative and heavier emphasis on stability, rather than fast expansion. The general direction was well taken and timely. It is now time to steer specific programs and projects along the broadly defined line with imagination and realism. This calls for more dynamic leadership and liberal outlook on the part of our high economic planners and administrators.

The refurbished Cabinet under Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun is believed to answer the call at this vital turning point. Most of the new faces in the economic portfolios boast a wide range of exposure to the marketplace over an extended period of time to round out their academic and bureaucratic training. This on-scene feel of the economy will serve as a definite asset in their future performance.

The new chief assistant to the president will also bring his copious store of diplomatic experience to his new job. Recruitment of persons of tested and recognized caliber no doubt adds to the resourcefulness and dependability of the president's Cabinet and his secretarial staff.

KOREA HERALD Commentary

[By Kim Ki-sok]

[Text] The Cabinet reshuffle carried out during the new year holiday period bears significant political and economic consequence in view of the composition of the new lineup and the timing of the shakeup, by affecting the post of the prime minister and six other ministerial posts.

Politically, the shakeup which followed the announcement of the lift of the 36-year-old nightly curfew is aimed at renewing the image of the Cabinet of the Fifth Republic which observes its second anniversary in March, according to political observers. Economically, the Cabinet revamping affected most economic ministers and expressed President Chon Tu-hwan's will to pursue another economic takeoff with renewed efforts while tackling effectively the recent economic setbacks.

As senior Presidential Press Secretary Yi Ung-hui noted, the chief executive "wanted a new economic team to carry out the Fifth Five-Year Socio-Economic Development Plan." New acting Prime Minister Yu Chang-su and four other new economic ministers are economic experts with a broad range of experiences in business circles.

In view of this, the Cabinet's approach toward the execution of future economic development projects would be somewhat different from that in the past which was mostly led by a scholar turned economic minister, the observers viewed. They predicted that dialogues between the government and business would be conducted more smoothly in view of the past experiences of the new Cabinet appointees. The president's appointment of a renowned economic expert to the post of prime minister indicates that Chon will place heavier emphasis on economic problems in the execution of state affairs, they said.

The Cabinet shakeup this time, the first major one since Chon became the 11th term president in August 1980, is of great political significance in that it has changed the image of the Cabinet that was led by Nam Tok-u who played an important role in executing the government's economic policy programs, the observers viewed.

Many people in the majority Democratic Justice Party (DJP) have reportedly called for a Cabinet reshuffle with a view that such a move would refresh the Cabinet by employing more "reformative elites" as well as promote party-Cabinet cooperation to realize the aims of party politics in the real sense, they noted. Three of the six new Cabinet figures are affiliated with the majority party. This clearly signifies President Chon's views for the of the DJP in carrying out state affairs in the Fifth Republic, the observer said.

In the eyes of the observers, President Chon's appointment of Yi Pom-sok, ambassador-turned minister, as his secretary-general is consistent with Chon's pursuance of a series of "internationalization" policy project.

Followup reshuffle and personnel changes are expected in the ruling camp and the government agencies concerned. With the major Cabinet reshuffle following the shakeup of the Chongwadae Secretariat late last month, President Chon has completed the necessary preparatory steps for the implementing of the programs of the Fifth Five-Year Economic and Social Development Plan and other domestic and foreign policy programs with a renewed determination, the observers remarked.

CONTINUATION OF CHEA SIM FRONT CONGRESS REPORT

Part Two

BK291347 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 25 Dec 81

[Text] A 3-year period is a short time with respect to the rebuilding of a country that amounted to nothing more than heaps of debris and mountains of grief for the people who survived the genocidal regime. However, the achievements and successes realized in all fields during this time by the Kampuchean people, cadres and combatants are tremendous. The congress heartily hails the precious sacrifices made by the people of all strata and classes in the cause of national defense and construction. [applause] All of us are extremely proud of these successes and clearly understand that they were possible because of the following factors:

1. The party, government and front have a correct political line; consequently, the people have confidence in the revolution and are enthusiastically participating in the revolutionary movement.
2. Our people of all strata and classes have a tradition of solidarity and patriotism and have valiantly struggled through all trials and tribulations in national defense and reconstruction.
3. We have enjoyed the sincere assistance of friendly peoples and countries throughout the world -- particularly Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries.

These constitute principal factors determining our victory and defeating all the maneuvers of the enemy, who is attempting to reverse the situation in Kampuchea. The enemy is trying to sabotage these three forces by slandering our revolutionary line, and trying to create divisiveness within our nation and destroy Kampuchean-Vietnamese solidarity. Our entire nation has given its assurances that the enemy can in no way impede or oppose our revolutionary cause. Despite the use of ill-intentioned propaganda, divisive maneuvers or arms and ammunition, the enemy has failed, is failing and will fail totally. This is a law that present reactionary forces of all stripes cannot evade.

The 11-point political program put forward by the first congress on 2 December 1978 and the 5-point program adopted by the second front congress at the end of September 1979 were fundamentally implemented with success. The Kampuchean National United Front for National Salvation fulfilled its mission. In the new situation, our front must have a new essence and a new image to conform with its new tasks, new statements and new statutes. The front is clearly aware of this. The front Central Committee, therefore, proposes to the congress the adoption of a name change for the front, from the Kampuchean Front for National Construction to the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense. [applause]

II. The general tasks of the Kampuchean revolution:

The Fourth KPRP Congress prescribed the fundamental tasks of the Kampuchean revolution, which are: To firmly defend national independence; and to build the fatherland so that it will advance step by step through the period of transition to socialism. The defense of independence is an urgent and very necessary task of an independent, sovereign nation with territorial integrity. Despite the fact that the enemy of the Kampuchean revolution has already been toppled and power has already fallen into the hands of the people once and for all, the enemy -- taking refuge on Thai territory -- continues to intrude into the border region and loot and kill people in remote villages and districts; Thai spies continue to sneak into our territory; Thai Armed Forces have repeatedly violated our airspace and territorial waters and fired artillery barrages into our territory.

The Chinese hegemonist-expansionists, in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other international reactionaries, have not given up their grandiose ambitions vis-a-vis Southeast Asia. They use reactionary Khmers of all stripes in an attempt to cover up the Pol Pot image in order to continue employing the Pol Pot gang as their mercenaries to sabotage our young country.

The road of our national reconstruction is a very long one. The cause of our national defense still has many great tasks to fulfill. We must continue to fight while building the fatherland step by step through the period of transition to socialism in accordance with authentic Marxism-Leninism, responding to the sacred aspiration of the people who want to live in freedom and happiness in complete contrast with the sham so-called socialism of the Pol Pot reactionaries, which was aimed only at serving their Beijing boss as a model of Chinese style people's communes and as a base for Beijing to swallow up the Indochinese Peninsula in its expansionist push southward toward the Southeast Asian region.

Our people's important task is to restore the economy, and in particular to produce as much rainy-season rice as possible to ensure a stable existence for the people and have goods for export. Agriculture plays an important role in the economy of Kampuchea. Therefore, we must regard agricultural production as the key element of the economic front to improve the living conditions of the people and provide raw materials for the industrial sector. We must pay a great deal of attention to establishing and expanding production solidarity groups aimed at developing the agricultural movement to fulfill all the plans set by the party and state. We must expand crop area and strive to increase production of all kinds of crops, expand animal husbandry, [words indistinct] and practice thrift and avoid wastefulness for the improvement of the living conditions and for a brilliant future of the fatherland and the younger generations in accordance with the slogan: "Production is patriotism and practicing thrift is loving the people."

The struggle to build and defend the nation is a struggle full of trials and tribulations, considering that our country was ravaged by the Pol Pot traitors and by natural calamities, and that the enemy is attempting to sabotage our Kampuchean revolution. For this reason, each member of the front must be a combatant of the forces of solidarity of all the people, and a model of good solidarity and good work. No matter how difficult this work is, we must not hesitate or cringe in the face of difficulties.

Cadres at all levels, employees and revolutionary combatants must make every effort to serve the people, help the people improve their living conditions and resolutely oppose such unhealthy phenomena as rankism, hooliganism, despotism, nepotism, regionalism and clanism, which may harm the revolution. They must love the people, serve the people and refrain from intimidating or bullying the people, and must respect the people's right to mastery. [Words indistinct] are extremely proud of their all-out persistent struggle to serve the fatherland. Their national defense and construction efforts are certainly going to be crowned with a brilliant success. [applause]

III. International solidarity is an important policy of the front:

Esteemed comrades, the Kampuchean revolution is part and parcel of the revolution in the Indochinese Peninsula and the global revolution. The PRK is a country in the community of the world's socialist countries. It is a loyal member of the world's Nonaligned Movement. Our revolutionary line is one of independence, peace, freedom and happiness of the Kampuchean people. The victory of our people cannot be separated from the immense and generous support and assistance of Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries. To maintain close solidarity with Vietnam, and with the two fraternal countries in the Indochinese Peninsula, is our people's duty of major strategic significance. The geographic and historical situation has bound the peoples of the three countries in their struggles against common enemies.

Concrete facts of the revolutionary struggle during the past 30 years have taught us that the militant solidarity and fraternal friendship of the peoples in the three countries constitute a factor for victory, an objective requirement [words indistinct] in the revolution of each country fighting for the liberation of the country and national economy as well as in the cause of national construction and defense. As prescribed in the resolution of the Fourth KPRP Congress, to be truly patriotic is to adhere to international solidarity, especially with regard to solidarity in cooperation in all areas with Vietnam and Laos. This constitutes the strategic spirit of our party, an objective and historically necessary aspiration and a determining element in the realization of Kampuchea's future.

Our people are intensifying solidarity with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries; participating in the communist movement and international workers' movement; actively contributing to the struggle of the Nonaligned Movement to defend the independence and sovereignty of nations; and actively supporting the world people's struggle against imperialism, colonialism, neocolonialism, Beijing hegemonism-expansionism and racism in the interest of peace, national independence, democracy and social progress. This correct foreign policy, pursued since the founding of the Kampuchean National United Front for National Salvation, has contributed to the victory of our people's revolutionary cause.

Our people have endured untold suffering and hardship and have won great achievements in the cause of building and defending the fatherland. The favorable situation of the Kampuchean revolution is irreversible.

Lately, the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists, U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries have stepped up their complicity, used various perfidious maneuvers and resorted to pressure to maintain the seat of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary clique at the United Nations. They are using the United Nations to force and impose a so-called total political settlement on Kampuchea. All this constitutes gross interference in Kampuchea's internal affairs, an encroachment on the principles of the UN Charter, opposition to the present actual situation in Kampuchea and antagonism to the will and interest of the Kampuchean people. These events at the United Nations can only encourage the provocations by Beijing and the reactionary Pol Pot gang, prompt the ultra-rightist forces in Thailand to play with fire and render the situation in Indochina and Southeast Asia more tense.

Our people categorically denounce, vehemently condemn and demand an immediate end to all activities that interfere with and undermine the independence and sovereignty of Kampuchea. The PRK is the sole authentic and legal representative of the Kampuchean people. The National Assembly of the PRK elected in the general elections of 1 May 1981 is the supreme representative state institution of the PRK. No force can wipe out this reality. The Kampuchean people will not permit anyone to violate their right to mastery. [applause]

At the recent 36th Session of the UN General Assembly, on behalf of the three Indochinese nations, the LPDR put forward the fundamental conditions of the relations of peaceful coexistence between the two groups of countries — the Indochinese and ASEAN countries. They are new proposals in continuation of the main initiatives presented by the Indochinese countries at the conferences of the three Indochinese foreign ministers. These proposals once again confirmed the good will of the three Indochinese countries, which sincerely wish to settle all important problems in the region and promote talks between the two groups of countries — the Indochinese and ASEAN countries — in order to realize a Southeast Asia with peace, stability, friendship and cooperation. The interests of each country and the common interests of the entire region demand that the people of all countries in Southeast Asia join hands against the subversive and divisive maneuvers of the imperialist and international reactionary forces with the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists as the most real and dangerous enemy.

Pursuing a foreign policy of independence, peace, friendship and nonalignment, the PRK has expressed its desire to establish relations of friendship and long-term cooperation with all countries — in particular, countries in Southeast Asia — on the basis of the principles of respect for independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, noninterference in each other's internal affairs and settlement of all disputes through peaceful negotiations. On the basis of this judicious foreign policy, the PRK has on many occasions expressed its good will and readiness to negotiate with the Thai Government on urgent measures aimed at immediately ending the tense situation in the border region between the two countries and other questions of common interest in order to establish good relations between the two neighboring countries and contribute to turning Southeast Asia into a zone of peace and stability. The Thai authorities, however, have stepped up collusion with the Beijing expansionists, U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries in providing protection to and support for the Pol Pot remnants, the Sereika bands and other reactionary Khmer groups, allowing them to use Thai territory as a support, training and logistics base and as a springboard for attacks against the PRK. Thailand has launched several armed attacks against Kampuchea and fired artillery shells and H-12 rockets from Thai soil into Kampuchea. Thai aircraft, ships and armed vessels have violated Kampuchea's airspace and territorial waters, creating a tense situation along the Kampuchean-Thai border and disturbing the security and sovereignty of the PRK.

Recently, the Thai authorities overtly authorized the reactionaries to meet in Bangkok to prepare a farce about establishing a coalition government in exile. We deem it necessary to clearly stress that Kampuchea and Thailand are neighbors and will remain neighbors forever. We have always desired peace and friendship, but the Bangkok authorities have gone too far on the road of hostility and belligerency. The Kampuchean people are by nature peaceful and patient, but they are a self-respecting people and are determined to defend their sovereignty. With resolution the Kampuchean people will not remain indifferent to the hostile activities that have taken place repeatedly. The opportunistic policy of the ultra-rightist forces in Thailand is fraught with dangerous threats to peace and stability in Southeast Asia and to the relations between the two neighboring countries. It is possible that the ultra-rightist circles in Thailand either nurture some yearning for the northern and western parts of our country or want to use the armed Pol Pot bandits and other armed reactionary Khmer groups as border defense forces in their country. The peace- and stability-loving Thai people are certainly not blind to the interference of Beijing hegemonism-expansionism in Thailand in the form of the Pol Pot reactionary armed forces on Thai territory, or to Beijing's fifth column planted among the Chinese residents and the Maoist Red Thais in Thailand. All this constitutes direct and permanent serious threats to Thailand's political and economic life and security.

We note that it is a little too late now. If the Thai authorities, however, recognize the threats, look at the reality and respect the truth and the legitimate aspiration of the Thai people in order to proceed with negotiations, there is still time for us to sit down for talks and, together, help promote peace and friendship.

Part Three

BK300603 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 26 Dec 81

["Text" of Part Three of the report of the front Central Committee read by Chea Sim — recorded]

[Text] IV. The future work of the front:

To mobilize the people of all strata, without distinction as to class, nationality, political tendency, religion or sex, to take part in the revolutionary movement for national construction and defense in order to increase our strength for opposing the Chinese hegemonistic expansionists, imperialists headed by the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys — Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan, as well as all other reactionary Khmers, who are traitors to the nation; to stimulate the spirit of patriotism; to muster all abilities to enhance living conditions in economic, cultural and social fields; to make every effort to firmly strengthen and expand the revolutionary power; to build and strengthen the revolutionary armed forces so as to crush all the dangerous maneuvers of the Beijing Chinese and the United States; to maintain security and social order; to eliminate all interference, espionage and subversive schemes and all the reactionary forces; to promote close cooperation between cadres and the people in order to create mutual trust and mutual assistance; to bind patriotism with international solidarity; to more firmly consolidate the Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos solidarity and cooperation; to vigorously expand the bond of solidarity with the socialist countries in the world; to strive to surmount all difficulties and obstacles; and to implement the Constitution and the resolutions of the Fourth KPRP Congress, in order to defend and build Kampuchea so that it will progress step by step through the period of transition to socialism.

In the cause of national defense and construction, the front's role is immense. The front must strive to consolidate national unity and international solidarity; urge the people of all strata to heighten the spirit of patriotism, solidarity, national unity, independence, self-mastery and mutual assistance; promote the worker-peasant alliance, and solidarity between the manual workers and intellectual workers and between the political cadres and specialized cadres; encourage the people of all strata to sincerely close their ranks and cordially promote cooperation and mutual assistance; respect the people's right to religious beliefs and democratic rights and freedoms so as to increase their confidence in the revolution, which is a just and humane regime; and encourage them to voluntarily and actively take part in the construction and defense of our beloved fatherland.

In addition to firm solidarity, it is necessary for the front to strictly maintain relations of international solidarity aimed at attracting, to the greatest degree possible, the sympathy and support of all the international organizations for our revolutionary cause in order to resist and crush all the perfidious maneuvers of the international reactionaries interfering in the PRK's internal affairs at the instigation of Beijing and Washington. We must strengthen and firmly maintain the militant solidarity of the three Indochinese countries, as well as vigorously enhance the effectiveness and significant benefits of the Kampuchea-Vietnam treaty of friendship and cooperation dated 18 February 1979. Sincere solidarity with and assistance to the fraternal VPA troops and the Vietnamese experts in our country constitute a firm guarantee of our national cause as well as the cause of friendship between Kampuchea and Vietnam. We must actively take part in the maintenance of security and public order; stimulate the people to grasp the significance of national defense and voluntarily take part in the militia, guerrilla, regional and regular forces in order to crush all acts of aggression by the enemy; join with the security forces in crushing all acts of interference, espionage and sabotage of the enemy; effectively maintain social order; and protect the people and their property so as to enable the people to rebuild their lives and contribute to the rehabilitation and development of national economy, and increase the people's confidence in the strength of our revolution.

The front pays attention to effectively fulfilling the tasks in the rear area by assisting the families of cadres and combatants who are in difficulty, families of the fallen combatants and the disabled cadres and combatants so as to enable our brothers and sisters in the forefront to be at ease and stable in their tasks to defend the fatherland. The front strives to mobilize forces to rehabilitate the agricultural production work, and to expand [words indistinct] solidarity production groups in accordance with the people's wish. Agricultural production is [words indistinct], but we must not underestimate the reconstruction and expansion of industry, particularly the handicrafts and exchange trade and circulation systems, to serve production and people's needs and for providing foodstuffs, (?clothing and other items) to outlying, remote areas facing difficulties and shortages. We actively take part in developing culture, public health and a mass artistic movement.

In order to accomplish these tasks the front has the following principles:

1. To link itself closely to the people; to inculcate the people in the outlying, remote areas in the policies and Constitution so that everyone understands and correctly abides by the state laws and decrees.

2. To send groups of cadres and personnel to the localities to visit and help the people, draw experiences from the people and learn about the people's wishes and opinions in order to report them to the authorities. This is a task of immense significance in the front's work.

3. To organize networks of combatants of the front in villages and communes. Each village will have a front combatant. Each commune will have a group of front combatants led by a commune cadre. They are in charge of popularizing the political line and opposing the psychological warfare of the enemy. The cadre responsible for the propaganda and education service of the district gives instructions to these groups.

4. To organize regular meetings to strengthen unity and increase mutual understanding. Everyone must make self-criticism, improve himself and take measures to achieve progress. To make frequent contacts with bonzes, teachers, cadres, health workers and students and bring them material and moral assistance. We should help the bonzes to be well aware of the line and policies of the front.

5. To intensify the activities of friendship, in particular to inculcate the masses in the indestructible friendship and solidarity with the socialist countries and particularly in the militant solidarity, friendship and close cooperation with the Vietnamese people and the Vietnamese army and experts in Kampuchea. To make preparations for the month of activities for Kampuchean-Vietnamese friendship and solidarity in order to celebrate the third anniversary of the signing of the Kampuchea-Vietnam treaty of friendship and solidarity, which falls on 18 February.

6. To hold provincial and municipal front congress in the first half of 1982 and congresses of the representatives of the population in each district or each region in the province under the sponsorship of the provincial front committee.

7. The front asks the authorities to provide facilities for and assist all the organizations, trade unions, women's associations, youth associations and mass movements in order to jointly carry out the common objectives of the revolution.

8. The front Central Committee will announce the implementation of the policy to award any sector that has done good work in the emulation drive and any individual who has performed outstanding feats. The policy of commendations and awards will mark the good merits of the families that have done good deeds for the nation.

9. As of now, 4 days mentioned below will be regarded as commemorative days of the front for a broader and in-depth mass stimulation movement: 2 December, the day of the union of all of the people; 18 February, the day of solidarity with Vietnam; 22 March, the day of solidarity with Laos; and 19 June, the day of the solidarity of the people and army.

10. On the occasion of the front's anniversary, to stimulate the entire population to launch an emulation movement, from now to the end of March 1982, aimed at implementing the five good actions and avoiding the five bad ones.

The five good actions are:

1. To tirelessly disseminate the policy of national solidarity and socialist international solidarity;
2. To carry out whatever is in the interest of the revolution and the fatherland;
3. To denounce the enemies in disguise and false informers;
4. To prevent exploitation and corruption; and
5. To respect the ethnic minorities.

The five bad actions are:

1. To work in the interest of the enemy;
2. To corrupt the cadres;
3. To spread false information;
4. To waste foodstuffs and materiel; and
5. To cause losses of public property, foodstuffs and arms.

Dear comrades and friends, the more progress our revolution makes, the more all of us are required to use our might and main to accomplish our historic mission. More than ever before, all the people must unite as one in accordance with the correct line and policies of the party and dare to sacrifice anything for the cause of the revolution.

The congress of the KUFNCD appeals to all compatriots, cadres, male and female combatants and fraternal peasants in all the solidarity production groups throughout the country to jointly defend and increase the revolutionary gains, strive to surmount all difficulties in the advance of our revolution, make every effort to successfully implement the resolutions of the fourth party congress, firmly defend national independence and build the country in order to advance it step by step through a period of transition to socialism.

On behalf of all the people, the congress seriously warns those obstinate elements who serve as mercenaries and spies for Beijing hegemonism and expansionism and imperialism that the attitude of the people is to strongly punish those elements who are the ringleaders of the counterrevolutionary groups and the reactionaries who, up to today, continue to commit crimes against our nation and people, and to pardon any misled element who, despite his past crimes against the people, has repented and turned to the people in order to earn his living in an honest way and receive reeducation. The front commands any element in the enemy ranks who tries to do good deeds in order to make up for his wrongdoings.

Under the banner of unity of the front, we are convinced that our people, who possess a tradition of valiant struggle and the glorious Angkor civilization, will strive to resolutely surmount all difficulties in fulfilling all tasks and foiling all perfidious maneuvers of the enemy. Let the millions of people rise up simultaneously as one man and vigorously concentrate on the cause of building and defending the beloved fatherland for even greater victories! [applause] United, we live; divided, we die! [applause] National unity and international solidarity will certainly triumph! [applause]

DK BROADCAST ON MILITARY RANKS TERMED 'FARCE'

BK041214 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 31 Dec 81

[Text] Dear comrades and friends: On 23 December the so-called Voice of Democratic Kampuchea — stationed in a forested area south of China — repeatedly broadcast in its program intended for the armed forces a special communique of murderer Pol Pot on the formation of his armed forces. According to this communique, the Pol Pot remnant troops are formed into three categories of armed forces — namely, the army, navy and air force — consisting of units ranging from 3-man groups to divisions of over 1,000 men. The ranks of their officers range from sublieutenant to marshal [senapramukh].

This farce is most despicable. Pol Pot created this farce in an attempt to encourage his henchmen, who are greatly demoralized after being hit directly by our armed forces and people during the early weeks of this rainy season. This is excessively illogical. Actually, these murderers who killed 3 million of our people have been crushed since the beginning of 1979. Their officers and men fled in disarray and have become beggars in foreign countries. Now that they have been fed on the trash thrown by their excellencies Deng and Reagan, these murderers have loudly ballyhooed about the formation of their brigades, divisions, generals. All of this makes an awe-inspiring sound, but where are their lands? Where are their people and fatherland? Are they in Beijing, or in Bangkok? Are they in Washington?

It seems that the Voice of Democratic Kampuchea has not yet broadcast anything about these things. On our Kampuchean soil at present, there are only the revolutionary people and the revolutionary armed forces. Our people and the entire army are uniting firmly. All of us are uniting as one man under the leadership of the KPRP headed by Comrade Heng Samrin.

BATTLE SUCCESSES AGAINST 'REMNANTS' REPORTED

BK041500 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 31 Dec 81

[Text] During the first 3 weeks of December 1981 our armed forces put more than 600 Pol Pot remnants out of action. These remnants tried to infiltrate our country each time there was an attack by Thai artillery. We killed more than 300 of them and seized more than 200 assorted weapons.

Those who had already wormed their way among our people — setting up spy networks and creating fifth columns while waiting for an opportunity to rise up against the revolution — were also surrounded and arrested by our local forces in cooperation with the people. In a number of areas, many of them were forced to surrender because of hunger and lack of clothes or medicine, or because they could no longer endure the attacks by the people.

Let us cite some examples from the southeastern part of the three-border region: On 24 November the remnants who crossed the border to create disturbances were intercepted. A company of some 50 bandits was crushed. On the same day, at a point southeast of Trapeang Kol, we killed 51 others. At Hill 336, on the border of Pursat Province, after smashing remnants who were attempting to cross the border on several consecutive days, we killed 39 of them in a single blow on 24 November. On 21 December, at a point north of (Anlung), 70 remnants stealthily crossed the border into our country. When they reached the ambush site, our indignant combatants competed with each other in firing at them, killing 33 on the spot.

These victories are excellent feats of arms contributing to the celebration of the third anniversary [words indistinct].

PHNOM PENH VIEWS 1981 AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENTS

BK030225 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 30 Dec 81

[Text] At the beginning of this year there was sufficient rain for our peasants to grow rice quite well. However, during the rainy season there were floods and prolonged drought. Between 15 and 20 percent of the transplanted rice was destroyed in regions close to the Tonle Sap, such as Kompong Thom, Siem Reap and Battambang Provinces. In the plains regions of Kandal, Kompong Cham and Prey Veng Provinces, between 14 and 30 percent of the transplanted rice was damaged. Between 6 and 10 percent of the transplanted rice and many thousands of hectares of other crops, such as grain and beans, were destroyed in other areas. Nationwide, 14.84 percent of the cultivated area was damaged, or more than 197,000 ha of land; 30,670 ha of rice and other crops were destroyed by paddy diseases and insects.

Agricultural work was generally carried out on time. Our peasants throughout the country worked very hard from the end of August to mid-October. In other places, they continued to work very hard until November. This delay affected the output of rice. After harvesting the early, floating and ordinary rice crops, on the whole we obtained a nationwide average yield of only between 800 kg and 1 ton per hectare, as in Svay Rieng Province.

The northwestern region of the country: Battambang Province planted 260,100 ha of rice, 100 ha more than planned; Siem Reap Province planted 139,000 ha of rice. The eastern region: Kompong Cham Province planted 134,900 ha of rice; Prey Veng Province planted 174,790 ha.

There were more than 1.33 million ha of rice planted in the country as a whole. The area devoted to ricefields was larger than in 1979, during which there were only 682,200 ha of rice planted. It was, however, a little less than the 1980 rainy season, when 1,410,500 ha of rainy season-rice were grown. There was a small number of ricefields where rice could be planted twice a year.

Concerning the production of grain, in 1981 there were 95,000 ha of grain planted. This exceeded the figure for 1979, during which 20,490 ha of grain were grown. It is, however, 3,490 ha less than during the 1980 rainy season. In general, our peasants' crop was not so good. The yield is no more than 700 kg per hectare. This year, our peasants preferred planting all types of vegetables as subsidiary crops.

Concerning the industrial crops, such as sugarcane and tobacco, there are a few in Kompong Chhnang, Kandal, Prey Veng and Kampot, and some more in Kompong Cham Province. In total there are only 6,600 ha. Most of the rubber plantations — 200 ha -- are in Kompong Cham Province. There is some coffee in Battambang Province. As for hemp, there have been no attempts to plant it. Kapok, in negligible quantities, can be found on some plantations. No big effort has been made to restore coffee grain production, either.

Nevertheless, growth in animal husbandry has been remarkable [words indistinct]: In 1981 our peasants raised more than 956,000 oxen, 158,000 more than in 1980 and 217,000 more than in 1979. In 1981 there were 404,700 buffalo, 35,220 more than in 1979. Although there was no collective farming and careful breed selection of pigs, chickens and ducks, our peasants have been raising 222,782 pigs, 90,500 more than in 1980. There are more than 2,600,000 chickens and more than 521,500 ducks.

According to the 1980 statistics, the standard of living of our peasants was better than in 1979. In general a peasant received nearly 220 kg of paddy without taking into account the quantity reserved as seed. Our peasants faced many difficulties and obstacles caused by the genocidal Pol Pot regime after liberation. On the other hand, many peasants still use traditional methods to grow rice. The system of irrigation is not well organized. The selection of rice seed for high output is not yet fully developed. The techniques of using chemical and natural fertilizers, as well as the use of insecticides, are not yet completely known and applied. The potential to increase production has not been tapped to the maximum, particularly in the regions where economic conditions are favorable.

Our revolutionary state power has been giving considerable moral and material assistance to the peasants during the past 3 years. In 1980 the state distributed more than 57,764 tons of rice seed, more than 706 tons of red corn seed and many tons of various materials. In 1981 the state made timely distribution of 25,323 tons of rice seed, 57,721 tons of all types of chemical fertilizers and many tons of vegetable seed, insecticides and farm equipment. The state offered 1,665,900 liters of fuel to be used for mechanical pumps to combat drought. The tractor intervention groups also helped the people in their agricultural work in Battambang, Kompong Thom, Pursat, Takeo and other provinces.

According to the report of the Ministry of Agriculture, by taking into account the output of dry-season rice and the bad conditions experienced during the past rainy season, our people face shortages of nearly 500,000 tons of foodstuffs in 1982. In spite of these difficulties, the output of agricultural production has clearly shown the heroism of our people in overcoming difficult situations during their passage through successive crises of starvation.

In conclusion, in 1981 our peasants have overcome all obstacles and have advanced their agricultural production. This is evidence clearly showing the determination of our peasants to realize great successes in the implementation of the resolutions of the Fourth KPRP Congress.

The family-run economic sector has also developed well. After distributing the output of the 1980 production, our peasants sold 160,022 tons of paddy to the state. Kandal and Kompong Cham Provinces sold 15,000 tons of grain to the state. At present our peasants throughout the country are proud and elated to be harvesting the rainy-season rice crop and start growing dry-season rice in order to welcome the third congress of the front and the 7 January Independence Day.

CORRECTION TO ITEM CITING HARVESTS, DAMAGE

An error was inadvertently made in the item entitled "Agriculture Report Cites Harvests, Damage," published in the 29 December DAILY REPORT, page H 4. In paragraph one, line two, the figure on rice cultivation during the main crop season should be 1.33 million ha, rather than 13.3 million ha.

BANGKOK PAPER REPORTS KHMER ROUGE BATTLE LOSSES

BK031345 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 3 Jan 82 p 2

[Text] Khmer Rouge forces, led by Deputy Prime Minister for National Defence Son Sen, suffered heavy casualties when they lost in a fierce battle with Vietnamese-led troops in their stronghold near the Thai-Lao-Kampuchean border in mid-December, reliable sources told the NATION yesterday. The sources said the battle raged for several days, starting with the Vietnamese forces making their way through the Khmer Rouge bases and finally reaching the Laotian frontier. Vietnamese soldiers later moved from Laos and attacked the same Khmer Rouge troops and forced them to flee southward.

The sources added that the defeated Khmer Rouge troops which were severely attacked had to go through a Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) camp in Nam Yun near the Thai border in order to join other Khmer Rouge forces, led by Ta Mok -- vice chairman of the Supreme Command of the National Army and chief of General Staff of Democratic Kampuchea's army. In June 1981 the KPNLF camp of Nam Yun was subjected to a severe attack by Khmer Rouge troops. This time KPNLF forces let the defeated Khmer Rouge troops pass through the camp to rejoin to Ta Mok's army further south.

Diplomatic observers consider the recent battle in the three border areas as one of the most important events since the Vietnamese army invaded Kampuchea in January 1979. The battle took place at the same period when Vietnamese fighter-bombers -- AN-26's -- attacked one of the Khmer Rouge largest bases in the Phnum Malai area, south of Aranyaprathet. In the three border battles, the Vietnamese not only inflicted heavy human casualties on the Khmer Rouge, but also captured large stocks of arms.

The Khmer Rouge's defeat takes a particular importance at a time when there is every indication that Democratic Kampuchea is going to reject a proposal for a loose coalition of the Khmer anti-Vietnamese groups as suggested by the Association of Southeast Asian Nations. Recent Democratic Kampuchea's "opinion polls," as broadcast by the clandestine Voice of Democratic Kampuchea, indicated further reluctance from the "rank and file" (expressing, in fact, more than likely the opinion of the Khmer Rouge leadership) to agree on the "loose coalition."

"There can be no genuine coalition if it is not based on the four principles imposed by the Khmer Rouge during the Khmer ad hoc committee meetings last November. Without these it would only be a coalition in form. It would be a farcical coalition which would allow the other parties to dispute over the legal statutes of the Democratic Kampuchea state and to destroy our Democratic Kampuchea as they have successively and openly declared," said a motion from cadres and people from Sisophon, Mak Hoeun and the Phnum Malai battlefields.

SPEECH BY SOUPHANOUVONG, GREETINGS MARK NEW YEAR

Souphanouvong Address

BK021400 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 1 Jan 82

[Speech by LPDR President Souphanouvong delivered at an audience granted to members of the diplomatic corps in Vientiane on the occasion of the new year — date not given; recorded]

[Text] Beloved dean of the diplomatic corps; beloved excellencies, comrades in the diplomatic corps and representatives of the international organizations in Laos; beloved ladies and gentlemen, comrades and friends:

In a warm atmosphere of friendship on the occasion of the beginning of the international new year, I am very happy to meet all of you — excellencies, comrades, friends, ladies and gentlemen — and to join with you in a fine tradition of welcoming the new year. On behalf of the Supreme People's Council [SPC] and the LPDR Government, and in my own name, I would like to extend my profound thanks to your excellencies for your heartfelt greetings filled with friendship toward the Lao people and for your best wishes that have been extended to us.

In 1981 our Lao people strove to develop and enhance our love for socialism and patriotism. We endeavered to implement the consistent domestic and foreign policies outlined by the LPRP and persevered to overcome numerous difficulties and trials in the initial implementation of the first-year goals of the First 5-Year State Plan.

As you well know, the Lao people have tried to resist and smash all schemes implemented by our enemies, who wish to destroy the fruits of the Lao revolution. Thanks to the correct and resolute leadership of the LPRP, the Lao people have managed to safeguard and defend their own country, score numerous victories in various fields and score great achievements in the political, economic, cultural and other sectors in accordance with the party's line and policy of building the foundations for socialism. You have witnessed the numerous achievements of the LPDR when it marked its sixth founding anniversary recently. These developments demonstrate the LPDR's firm advancement along the path of socialism.

The LPDR has pursued a foreign policy of peace, independence, friendship and nonalignment. Adhering to this policy, the LPDR has sought, through its own efforts and in conjunction with other fraternal countries, to promote creative proposals aimed at guaranteeing the achievement of peace, stability and cooperation in Southeast Asia and the world. The LPDR's policy has gained sympathy and support from various nations and various forces that cherish peace, justice and social progress.

The successes scored in various fields by our Lao people are the result of the special solidarity among the three Indochinese nations and the invaluable support and assistance rendered by the Soviet Union, various socialist countries and various friendly countries and international organizations. I would like, therefore, to reiterate the thanks and gratitude of the party, government and people of Laos to these countries and international organizations. We are convinced that in the new year of 1982 our Lao people will continue to promote and expand their fine traditions and will score new successes in the implementation of the second year of the First 5-Year State Plan. We firmly believe that the support, assistance and cooperation of the various fraternal and friendly countries will be an important factor in furthering our Lao people's cause of national defense and construction and serving the interests of peace, stability and cooperation in this part of the world.

On the occasion of the beginning of the new year of 1982, I wish the comrade dean of the diplomatic corps, your excellencies and comrades in the diplomatic corps, the representatives of international organizations, ladies and gentlemen, comrades and friends, good health, happiness and successes in carrying out your burdensome tasks. On behalf of the SPC and the Government of the LPDR, the Lao people and in my own name, I would like to avail myself of this glorious occasion to ask you comrades, your excellencies and friends to convey the consistent friendship and best wishes of good health, happiness and prosperity to the leaders and peoples of your countries.

May the long-standing friendship between our republic and your countries and various international organizations, which are represented here, be daily developed and strengthened for the cause of peace and cooperation in Southeast Asia and the world! Happy New Year! [applause]

Foreign Envoys' Greeting

[Text] Vientiane, 2 Jan (KPL) — [Words indistinct] diplomatic corps and representatives of international organizations in Vientiane, on the first day of the year presented President Souphanouvong New Year wishes.

Also present with Souphanouvong, president of the republic and of the People's Supreme Assembly, on this occasion were Phoumi Vongvichit, vice premier and minister of education, sports and religious affairs; Khamsouk Keola, vice president and secretary general of the People's Supreme Assembly; Souvanna Phouma, government counselor; Khamphai Boupha, deputy minister for foreign affairs; and representatives of various mass organizations.

On this occasion, Jambyn Nyamaa, Mongolian ambassador, in his capacity as acting dean of the diplomatic corps, formulated best wishes to Lao leaders and people. In his address, the acting dean hailed achievements of the Lao people in fulfilling basic tasks of the first year of the State 5-Year Plan, reflecting, among other things, increased output of rice production this year. The dean further praised the contribution of Laos in its efforts to secure peace and stability in the region.

In his return speech, President Souphanouvong informed the well-wishers of the determination of Laos in carrying out a foreign policy of peace, independence, friendship and non-alignment aiming to ensure peace, stability and cooperation among nations of Southeast Asia, and the world. The Lao president also thanked fraternal socialist and friendly countries for their moral and material support to the Lao people.

The reception took place in an atmosphere of warm friendship and cordiality.

KAMPUCHEAN FINANCE DELEGATION PAYS VISIT

Nouhak Phoumsavan Meeting

BK280419 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 28 Dec 81

[Text] On the afternoon of 26 December Comrade Nouhak Phoumsavan, member of the Political Bureau of the LPRP Central Committee, deputy prime minister and finance minister, received at the Prime Minister's Office the visiting delegation of the PRK Finance Ministry and National Bank. The delegation is led by Comrade Chan Phin, secretary in the Secretariat of the KPRP Central Committee and finance minister, and Comrade Cha Rieng, chairman of the PRK National Bank.

Accompanying the delegation to pay the courtesy call on Comrade Deputy Prime Minister Nouhak Phoumsavan were Comrade Maisouk Saisompheng, member of the LPRP Central Committee and minister of industry and trade; Comrade Sot Phetlasi, director of the State Bank; and Comrade Boutsabong Souvannavong, deputy minister of finance. Comrade Neou Samon, PRK ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Laos, also joined the delegation in calling on the deputy prime minister.

On this occasion, Comrade Nouhak Phoumsavan chatted with Comrade Chan Phin and Comrade Cha Rieng in a cordial and fraternal atmosphere. On behalf of the visiting delegation, Comrade Chan Phin expressed salutations and deep thanks to Comrade Nouhak Phoumsavan and other Lao comrades for their welcome. Comrade Chan Phin highly valued the official friendly visit to the LPDR by the delegation of the PRK Finance Ministry and National Bank. He noted that it marks an important step in the development of the friendly relations and cooperation between the parties, states and peoples of the two countries, particularly between the two Finance Ministries and National Banks. At the same time, Comrade Chan Phin expressed thanks and deep gratitude to the Lao party, government and people for supporting and assisting the revolutionary cause of the Kampuchean party, government and people in the past as well as at present.

On this occasion, Comrade Nouhak Phoumsavan expressed profound thanks for the statement. He took the occasion to hail and praise the great achievements recorded by the party, government and fraternal people of Kampuchea in the cause of defending and building Kampuchea. At present, parallel with the cause of firmly defending Kampuchea, the economic construction and the people's living conditions throughout society have been firmly restored. Comrade Nouhak Phoumsavan stressed: This success is regarded as a common success of the three fraternal peoples of Kampuchea, Laos and Vietnam. No enemy can break this success.

The PRK delegation arrived in Vientiane on the afternoon of 26 December for an official, friendly visit to the LPDR at the invitation of the Finance Ministry and the State Bank of the LPDR. On hand to greet the delegation at Wattai Airport were Comrade Sali Vongkhamsao, secretary in the secretariat of the LPRP Central Committee, deputy prime minister and chief of the National Planning Committee; Comrade Maisouk Saisompheng; Comrade Sot Phetlasi; Comrade Boutsabong Souvannavong; and many senior cadres of the Finance Ministry and the State Bank. Comrade Ambassador Neou Samon was also present at the airport.

[Text] On the evening of 27 December Comrade Sali Vongkhamsao, secretary of the Secretariat of the LPRP Central Committee, deputy prime minister and chairman of the National Planning Committee, hosted a reception at the Office of the State Bank in Vientiane, the capital, in honor of the visiting delegation of the PRK Finance Ministry and National Bank, led by Comrade Chan Phin, secretary in the Secretariat of the KPRP Central Committee, and Comrade Cha Rieng, chairman of the PRK National Bank.

Attending the reception were Comrade Nouhak Phoumsavan, member of the Political Bureau of the LPRP Central Committee, deputy prime minister and finance minister; Comrade Maisouk Saisompheng, member of the LPRP Central Committee, minister of industry and trade; Comrade Sot Phetlasi, director of the State Bank; Comrade Boutsabong Souvannavong, deputy minister of finance; Comrade Tnudon Phonsena, deputy director of the State Bank; and several high-ranking cadres of the Finance Ministry and the State Bank. Comrade Neou Samon, PRK ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Laos, was also at the reception.

During the warm reception, Comrade Nouhak Phoumsavan, Comrade Sali Vongkhamsao and Comrade Chan Phin took turns delivering speeches. The three comrades highly valued the outcome of the current visit to the LPDR by the delegation of the PRK Finance Ministry and National Bank, which has greatly contributed to the exceptional cooperation and friendship between the Finance Ministries and National Banks of the two countries. At the same time, they also wholeheartedly hailed the time-honored special solidarity and friendship and all-round cooperation and assistance among the parties, governments and peoples of Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam. They said this solidarity, which is being strengthened and fostered with every passing day, can never be destroyed by any enemy. In addition, the three comrades hailed the victories scored in the national defense and national construction of the peoples in the socialist countries, which are also considered the common victories of the peoples of Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea.

The reception proceeded in an atmosphere of profound cordiality and friendship.

OFFICER COMMENTS ON SRV AIRCRAFT INTRUSION

BK050144 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 5 Jan 82 p 3

[Text] Chanthaburi -- A senior military official yesterday described as "a new trend of aggression" the first violation of the Thai airspace here by a Vietnamese aircraft in mid-December. Commander of the Marine Regiment Vice Adm Yuthaya Choetbunmuang told the NATION the marines in Pong Nam Ron District here were put on alert following the air incursion in the middle of last month. Intruding Vietnamese aircraft dropped bombs into a jungle, about five to six kms from the border, in Pong Nam Ron, according to the commander. Vice Admiral Yuthaya said that no Vietnamese aircraft had ever encroached the Thai airspace in this border province before. "Previously, some Vietnamese helicopters flew along the border areas, but they had never infringed our airspace," he said.

He said that the incursion could be either intentional or accidental. "The Vietnamese pilot might not be familiar with the terrain and could have lost his way," he said. However, he added that the pilot might have intentionally trespassed the Thai airspace to jettison the bombs into the jungle where there were no Thai troops.

The marines reportedly did not make retaliatory move against the Vietnamese incursion "because the foreign aircraft flew back into Kampuchea immediately after it dropped the bombs."

AFP REPORTS SRV TROOP BUILDUP NEAR THAI BORDER

BK041614 Hong Kong AFP in English 1546 GMT 4 Jan 82

[Text] Bangkok, 4 Jan (AFP) -- Vietnam has beefed up its troop strength in southern Laos over the past few weeks, while its troops in Cambodia are working methodically to build up a cordon in the west of the country along the Thai-Cambodian border, according to Indochinese and diplomatic sources here.

No major battles have yet been reported between the Vietnamese expeditionary forces in Cambodia and Laos and the anti-Vietnamese Indochinese forces, while, as happens every year at the beginning of the dry season, both sides try to regain control of the positions and strategic zones they were forced to abandon during the rainy season. However, Vietnamese troops in the extreme west of Cambodia have tried to position themselves much closer to the Thai-Cambodian border than during the last two dry seasons, reports from the border area said.

Vietnamese forces are now settling in only five kilometres (three miles) from the Thai border, compared with 15 kilometres (nine miles) away in the two previous years. This brings them much closer to the bases of the ousted Cambodian Khmer Rouge, toppled after a Vietnamese military intervention in Phnom Penh in January 1979, and the camps of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), headed by former Premier Son Sann, thus increasing risks of confrontation.

Several thousand Vietnamese troops were moved in December to southern Laos' Champassak Province west of the Mekong River close to the borders with Cambodia and Thailand. This has put them [word indistinct] proximity with a major Khmer Rouge base headed by the regime's defence minister, Son Sen. But so far only minor clashes have been reported in the region, Thai and Indochinese military sources said.

Three years after Vietnamese troops entered Phnom Penh, the Khmer Rouge are estimated to have around 30,000 troops pitted against Vietnam's estimated 200,000 men under arms in Cambodia. Hanoi is also estimated to have 40,000 troops in Laos.

Observers have dismissed as vastly exaggerated a map of Cambodia issued by the Khmer Rouge "high command" and made available to AFP here, showing the area "provisionally" controlled by the pro-Vietnamese Phnom Penh government as occupying no more than five percent of Cambodian territory, although it is true that anti-Vietnamese guerrillas are still active.

The Khmer Rouge, however, claim to be in total control of over 50 percent of Cambodia, ruling over some 1,700,000 Cambodians, or one-quarter of the country's estimated population of 6,590,000 with even the Phnom Penh region supposedly in the middle of a guerrilla zone.

They also claim to have killed 21,400 Vietnamese troops during last year.

The map further makes the claim that Khmer Rouge troops have "almost" reached a "balance of forces" with the Vietnamese expeditionary force.

13-19 DEC INSURGENCY, BORDER SITUATION REPORTED

BK041133 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 3 Jan 82

[Text] The Supreme Command Information Office has reported on the insurgency and border situation for the period from 13-19 December as follows:

During the period, there were 10 clashes with the insurgents; 4 communist landmines were detonated; 2 government outposts came under insurgent harassment; 2 government helicopters were attacked; and there was 1 communist ambush. An insurgent production camp was captured by government officials. There were three clashes with the terrorist bandits.

During the period, the Khieu Samphan soldiers continued to be on the offensive, using small units to harass and attack the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin positions. They ambushed strategic points on various routes, inflicting casualties and damage on the opposition's manpower and equipment. There were also clashes between the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin and Khieu Samphan soldiers and other anti-Vietnamese forces near the Thai-Kampuchean border. These clashes resulted in violations of the Thai border and clashes with Thai troops on three occasions.

The following is the breakdown of insurgency activities by region: In the area under the jurisdiction of the 1st Army Region -- in the central region -- there were no significant insurgency activities during the period under review. At the Kampuchean border, armed Kampuchean forces intruded into Thai territory and clashed with Thai officials three times, all in Prachin Buri. The Thai units suffered no casulties; a member of the Khmer forces was killed.

In the 2d Army Region area -- in the northeastern region -- armed activities by insurgents decreased considerably from the previous week. There were three clashes with the insurgents in Udon Thani and Nakhon Phanom. No significant activities occurred on the border in the area under jurisdiction of the 2d Army Region during the period.

In the northern region under the jurisdiction of the 3d Army Region, there were four clashes with the insurgents in Phetchabun and Chiang Rai Provinces. The insurgents fired at a government outpost in Chiang Rai Province and at a helpcopter in Phetchabun Province. There were no significant border activities during the period.

In the southern region under the responsibility of the 4th Army Region, there were three clashes with the insurgents in Krabi and Surat Thai. The insurgents ambushed a government unit in Nakhon Si Thammarat. An insurgent production camp in Trang, consisting of a rice farm and 20 permanent living shelters, was captured. The insurgents shot at a government helicopter in Phatthalung. A government outpost in Surat Thani came under harassment fire.

During the period, there were three clashes with the terrorist bandits in Yala and Narathiwat. A booby trap exploded in Narathiwat.

SPOKESMAN PROTESTS THAI NAVAL ACTION AGAINST PRK

OW041507 Hanoi VNA in English 1455 GMT 4 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA January 4 — A spokesman for the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry today issued a statment protesting against the Thai authorities' recent hostile action against the People's Republic of Kampuchea. The statement reads:

"According to S.P.K., three boats of the Thai Navy on December 28, 1981, intruded 15 kilometres into the territorial waters of the People's Republic of Kampuchea in the Province of Koh Kong. They opened fire on a Kampuchean patrol boat and forced five crew members on board to steer the boat to Thailand. Along with the systematic hostile acts of the Thai authorities at the Thailand-Kampuchea border, this is another serious military act infringing upon the territorial sovereignty of the People's Republic of Kampuchea and undermining peace and security in Southeast Asia.

The Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam energetically condemns the above hostile military act of the Thai authorities against the People's Republic of Kampuchea. It fully supports the correct stand of the Government of the People's Republic of Kampuchea as expounded in the January 2 statement of the spokesman of the Kampuchean Foreign Ministry which demands that the Thai authorities return immediately to the People's Republic of Kampuchea the five crewmen and the boat and stop without delay and for good similar hostile acts against the People's Republic of Kampuchea".

LEADERS' MESSAGES MARK 23D CUBAN NATIONAL DAY

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, December 31 — Vietnamese leaders today sent greetings to their Cuban counterparts on Cuba's 23rd National Day. One message is signed by Le Duan, general secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee; Truong Chinh, president of the Council of State; and Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers; and addressed to Fidel Castro Ruz, first secretary of the Communist Party of Cuba Central Committee and president of the Council of State and of the Council of Ministers. It says:

"Under the correct leadership of the Communist Party of Cuba, headed by you, and promoting to the full the strength of the nation which they combine with the strength of the time, the Cuban people have, over the past 23 years, recorded great achievements in building and defending their socialist country, thwarting all hostile schemes and acts of the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries. Now, faced with the new hostile policy of the Reagan administration, the party, people and armed forces, in light of the resolutions of the second party congress and in the spirit of 'patria o muerte', are enhancing vigilance and striving to promote production, intensify national defence, and stand ready to smash all adventurous, bellicose moves of the U.S. imperialists so as to firmly defend their beloved country. The Cuban people's brilliant success in national construction and defence, together with Cuba's outstanding contributions to the world revolutionary movement and its active efforts as president of the Non-Aligned Movement, have constantly enhanced its position, role and prestige in the world.

"As a close comrade-in-arms of the Cuban people, the Vietnamese people rejoice at these great, all-sided achievements. We admire and take pride in them and consider them as our own.

"More than ever before the Vietnamese people resolutely stand by the fraternal Cuban people in their struggle against U.S.-led imperialism and other international reactionary forces, in the interests of our two countries and of the noble objectives of our times. We strongly believe that with the great support and assistance of the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries and the vigorous sympathy and support of progressive mankind as a whole, the indomitable Cuban people will firmly defend their country -- the outpost of socialism in the Western Hemisphere -- and will succeed in socialist construction and continue to contribute actively to the strength of peace, national independence, democracy and socialism throughout the world.

"We avail ourselves of this opportunity to sincerely thank the party, the government and the people of Cuba for the assistance they have given to the Vietnamese revolution out of pure proletarian internationalism. May the fraternal Cuban people obtain still greater success in their glorious revolutionary cause. May the friendship, militant solidarity and fraternal cooperation between Vietnam and Cuba consolidate and develop fruitfully. The best of health and happiness for the new year."

Another message, signed by National Assembly Chairman Nguyen Huu Tho, is sent to Flavio Bravo Pardo, president of the National Assembly of People's Power. It wishes for the constant consolidation and development of the militant solidarity and fraternal cooperation between the two peoples.

Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has also sent greetings to his Cuban opposite number, Isidoro Malmierca Peoli.

VCP COMMEMORATES CHILEAN COMMUNIST ANNIVERSARY

OW011704 Hanoi VNA in English 1451 GMT 1 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 1 — The Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam today sent a message to its Chilean counterpart greeting the 60th anniversary of the Chilean Communist Party. The message reads:

"Working during the past 60 years for the interests of the working class and the labouring people, for national independence and freedom, and for socialism's victory, your party has persistently struggled and steadily marched forward in spite of many difficulties and sacrifices. The military coup d'etat and bloody terror campaigns conducted by the Pinochet fascists, lackeys of the North American imperialists, failed to stamp out the flame of struggle of the Chilean revolutionaries, democrats and patriots, especially the Chilean Communists, who have always been in the frontline of the struggle.

"Tempered in the revolutionary struggle, with experiences of 60 years of activities basing itself on invincible Marxism-Leninism, firmly upholding the banner of national independence and socialism, broadly uniting the national, democratic and other progressive forces, and enjoying sympathy and support from the fraternal parties, the Latin American people and the whole progressive mankind, your party will certainly win glorious victory, smash fascism, and take Chile onto the road of independence, freedom, peace, democracy, and social progress.

"May the militant solidarity between the Communist Party of Vietnam and the Communist Party of Chile be constantly consolidated and developed. Victory to the Chilean revolution."

ANNIVERSARY OF PALESTINIAN REVOLUTION MARKED

Do Muoi at Hanoi Reception

OW302349 Hanoi VNA in English 1550 GMT 30 Dec 81

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, December 13 — Sa'id Khalil al-Masri, acting representative extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) in Vietnam, and his wife gave a reception here this evening in honour of the 17th anniversary of the revolutionary day of Palestine (January 1). The delegation of the Palestinian Fatah National Liberation movement led by 'Ali Fayyad was present.

Also present were Do Muoi, alternate member of the Political Bureau of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee, Phan Anh, vice-chairman of the National Assembly, many ministers, vice-ministers, high-ranking officers, and others. Members of the diplomatic corps and representatives of international organisations in Hanoi attended.

At the reception Sa'id Khalil al-Masri and Do Muoi praised the Palestinian people's indomitable struggle against the U.S.-backed Israeli expansionists to regain their fundamental national rights, including the right to set up an independent and sovereign Palestinian state on their territory. Sa'id Khalil al-Masri and Do Muoi proposed toasts to the glorious anniversary of the Palestinian people and to new successes of the Vietnamese and Palestinian peoples in their revolutionary cause.

Pham Van Dong Greets 'Arafat

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, December 31 — Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong today sent a message of greetings to Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the P.L.O. Executive Committee, on the 17th revolutionary day of Palestine (January 1). The message says:

"On behalf of the people and the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and in my own name, I wish to convey my warmest greetings to you and to the heroic people and combatants of Palestine. As Israel, U.S. imperialism and international reaction are stepping up their collusion against the advance of the movement of national liberation and independence in the Middle East, the heroic struggle of the Palestinian people has an important role. For years many generations of Palestinians have fought to liberate their country, proving that no evil schemes and designs of Israel and U.S. imperialism can dampen the Palestinian people's determination to fight for independence and freedom.

"We wish to assure you again of the unshakeable militant solidarity and firm support of the people and Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam for the Palestinian people's just struggle for their unalienable national rights, including the rights to self-determination, to return to their homeland and found an independent state. We hold that a correct solution to the Middle East problem must have the full, equal participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization, the sole authentic representative of the Palestinian people.

"The Vietnamese people firmly believe that the Palestinian, people despite many difficulties and hardships, will obtain final victory with their militancy and strong international support. May the militant solidarity and friendship between the Vietnamese and Palestinian peoples consolidate and develop incessantly".

VFF Holds Get-Together

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, December 31 — The Central Committee of the Vietnam Fatherland Front held a get-together here today to celebrate the 17th anniversary of the revolutionary day of Palestine (PLO). Present were Hoang Quoc Viet, member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and president of the Presidium of the host organization; the visiting delegation of the Palestinian Fatah National Liberation Movement led by Ali Fayyad; and Sa'id Khalil al-Masri, acting representative of the PLO in Hanoi.

Speaking on this occasion, Prof. Pham Khac Quang, Presidium member of the V.F.F. Central Committee, reiterated the Vietnamese people's vigorous support for the Palestinian people's just struggle under the leadership of the P.L.O., the sole authrentic representative of the Palestinian people. In reply, 'Ali Fayyad thanked the Communist Party, the Fatherland Front, the government and the people of Vietnam for their support. He expressed the determination of the Palestinian people and their armed forces to side with the Vietnamese people in national construction and defence.

BURMA'S NATIONAL DAY ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED

4 Jan NHAN DAN Article

OW040821 Hanoi VNA in English 0745 GMT 4 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 4 — NHAN DAN today devotes an article on the Burmese people's achievements over the past 34 years. Writing on the national day of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma, the paper says: "Since they became independent, the Burmese people, industrious and gifted, have striven to build their own economy, scoring considerable achievements. In recent years Burma's economy has developed at a fairly great tempo. Agricultural production has been pushed up and a number of industries expanded".

The paper notes that for years now the Chinese expansionists have armed and commanded rebels in minority ethnic groups. As a result Burma has had to divert a considerable part of its budget to national defence to the detriment of economic development.

"As a peace-loving country", NHAN DAN says, "Burma pursues a foreign policy of neutrality. It upholds the five principles of peaceful co-existence and respects the independence and sovereignty of other countries. It stands for non-interference and the settlement of disputes by peaceful methods".

Noting that Burma wants to co-exist with the Southeast Asian countries in peace and friendship, the paper says: "The friendship between the peoples of Vietnam and Burma has existed for a long time now. The leaders and people of Burma gave a big welcome to Premier Pham Van Dong in April 1980. Sharing weal and woe and having the same enemies — imperialism and international reaction — Vietnam and Burma sympathize with and support each other. Their friendship has strengthened incessantly in the interests of both peoples and of peace, and stability in this region". NHAN DAN concludes by wishing the Burmese people prosperity and happiness and the Vietnamese-Burmese friendship constant development.

Present on this occasion were Vice-Chairman of the Council of Ministers Huynh Tan Phat, Minister of Labour Dao Thien Thu, and members of the diplomatic corps and others. Ambassador Aung Myint and Vice-Chairman Huynh Tan Phat proposed toasts to the Burmese people's success in the defence of their national independence and in the building of a peaceful and happy life and to the consolidation and development of the friendship and cooperation between the two nations.

U.S. VIETNAM VETERANS DELEGATION ARRIVES 18 DEC

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, December 18 — At the request of the Vietnam Veterans of America, a delegation of this organisation led by its executive director, Robert O. Muller, arrived here today to work with the National Commission for Investigation on Effects of U.S. Chemical Warfare in Vietnam and the Vietnam Office for Seeking American Missing Personnel. The aim of the trip is to gather data on effects of U.S. chemical warfare in Vietnam to denounce it to public opinion and to study the problem of seeking remains of Americans missing in the Vietnam war.

AFP Report on End of Visit

BK241326 Hong Kong AFP in English 1259 GMT 24 Dec 81

[Excerpts] Hanoi, 24 Dec (AFP) — Four American veterans of the Vietnam war wound up a week-long visit to Vietnam, securing a pledge from the Hanoi government to cooperate with U.S. veteran groups in tracing American servicemen reported missing in action during that conflict.

The four U.S. veterans, who were leaving today for Bangkok, had a 90-minute meeting with Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach yesterday before they departed for Ho Chi Minh City. They said Mr. Thach had indicated that Hanoi would deal directly with U.S. veteran groups and not with Washington regarding the MIA issue.

"We will cooperate with you on the MIA issue on a humanitarian basis without any condition and not with (U.S. President Ronald) Reagan and his government. We are not enemies; we are all victims. Between Vietnam and the American people, there is neither victory nor defeat... We are all victims," Mr. Thach reportedly told them. He also criticized Washington's hostility toward Vietnam and denied that his government was withholding information on the estimated 2,500 U.S. MIA.

Vietnamese sources said the remains of all traced U.S. war casualties had been turned over to American authorities. "Even our own MIA's have not all been traced. However, we must still devote time, resources and manpower to trace missing Americans despite the topographic havoc caused by the carpet-bombings of U.S. Air Force B-52 planes during the war," they added.

Mr Thach also indicated that Hanoi was eager to have normal relations with Washington but deplored that President Reagan "is playing the China card against Vietnam."

"Some say that Kampuchea (where an estimated 200,000-strong Vietnamese expeditionary corps is deployed) stands in the way of a normalization between Vietnam and the United States. But we ourselves do not regard the war waged by the Americans in Vietnam (in the sixties and seventies) as an obstacle," he added.

VFF CENTRAL COMMITTEE CONFERENCE OPENS 4 JAN

BK050843 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Text] The seventh VFF Central Committee conference opened in Hanoi yesterday, 4 January. In his opening speech, Comrade Hoang Quoc Viet, chairman of the VFF Central Committee Presidium, described the achievements scored by our people in national construction and defense during 1981. These achievements, he said, have reasserted the great potentials and creative power of the masses and demonstrated the great significance of the task of mass motivation and the role of the front at all levels.

The conference will review the 1981 activities of the front at all levels, study the essential spirit and main contents of the 1982 State Plan — which was recently adopted by the National Assembly — and set forth the 1982 tasks for the front at all levels.

Comrade Hoang Quoc Viet emphasized: At this time the VCP is conducting party congresses at the grassroots, district and provincial levels in preparation for the fifth national party congress, which will be held sometime in the first quarter of this year. The congress will define the tasks to be carried out by our entire people in the first stage of their transition toward socialism. As for this VFF Central Committee conference, it will study a draft political report of the VCP Central Committee and contribute its opinions to this document. This VFF Central Committee conference will also issue a directive, based on the VFF's statute, on convening the Second National VFF Congress and set up a preparatory committee for the congress.

On behalf of the conference Presidium and Secretariat, Comrade Nguyen Van Tien presented a report on the 1981 activities of the front at all levels and its tasks for 1982.

Speaking next was Comrade Xuan Thuy, who briefed the conference on the basic contents of the VCP Central Committee draft political report to be presented at the fifth party congress.

BUILDING OF MILITIA, SELF-DEFENSE FORCES URGED

BK300944 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2330 GMT 27 Dec 81

[Unattributed article in recent issue of QUAN DOI NHAN DAN: "Build Firm and Strong Militia and Self-Defense Forces To Meet the New Situation and Tasks"]

[Text] Under new conditions, the war in defense of the socialist fatherland will be conducted in two forms: the local people's war and the people's war fought by mobile main force corps. The armed forces and the people are always the key to victory. Arming the entire people is a strategic issue in our party's military line. In the past, as well as at present and in the future, the militia and self-defense units always constitute a strategic force. It is very wrong indeed to contend that today, since we already have a modern regular army, the role of the militia and self-defense forces in national defense will become less important.

Our country has a border thousands of kilometers long, including our border with China which stretches more than 1,000 km. It also has a sea coast measuring more than 3,000 km and a vast continental shelf. For this reason, in carrying out the tasks of safeguarding our country's sovereignty over its land, its airspace and its territorial waters both in peacetime and in wartime, we cannot rely only on the standing army but must also rely on the aggregate strength of the people's armed forces, in which the militia and self-defense forces play a very important role.

Along with building regular and modern army, we must urgently make use of all our capacities in socialist construction to build large and strong militia and self-defense forces in all grassroots units. These forces must be capable of serving as the core of the movement of the entire people fighting the aggressors and closely coordinating with main force corps to resolutely defeat the enemy under any circumstances. The militia and self-defense forces must be made increasingly stronger and built increasingly more widely. They must be politically pure, endowed with a sound political awareness, tightly organized, equipped with a necessary fighting ability and capable of fulfilling any task with which they are entrusted by the party and the state both in peacetime and in wartime.

To meet this demand, our primary task is to raise the political awareness of the militia and self-defense forces. The militia and self-defense forces must be educated and profoundly imbued with their specific combat duties. They must be seriously trained and equipped with courage, staunchness and an unwavering fighting will and must display initiatives in destroying the enemy. In the situation in which the militia and self-defense forces must hold fast to their localities in combat and must fight against stronger and larger forces, morale is an all-important factor.

On the other hand, as production and the efforts to improve the people's living conditions are still besieged with activities — there exists an even bigger need for us to carry out political and ideological work satisfactorily among the militia and self-defense forces so as to ensure that all units are equipped with the will to attack the enemy and to prevent enemy infiltration and sabotage.

The task of educating and raising political and ideological awareness must always be closely combined with organizational work. The militia and self-defense forces must comprise people who are absolutely loyal to the cause of socialist revolution, who voluntarily join the forces, and who resolve to make sacrifices and to fight in defense of the fatherland and socialist system.

The militia and self-defense organizations must be regularly infused with more VCP and Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union members and demobilized soldiers. At the same time, all people failing to meet the political criteria must be resolutely expelled from these organizations. Organizationally and operationally, the militia and self-defense forces must be placed under the direct leadership of local party committee echelons.

Currently a prominent problem is the need for all echelons and localities to correctly perceive and settle the relationship between quality and quantity and between consolidation and development in the process of building the militia and self-defense forces.

To settle this relationship, at the present and during the coming years we must concentrate on consolidating the militia and self-defense forces and raising their quality. Any unit that we organize must be consolidated, must be of good quality and must really be capable of operating effectively. We must avoid organizing large-scale, ostentatious units which have a poor fighting ability. The militia and self-defense forces must be developed only in those localities where it is absolutely necessary to do so and where proper conditions exist. But even the standards of these forces must be absolutely guaranteed and the tendency to pursue only quantity must be avoided. We must ensure that every unit is placed under tight control and consolidated as soon as new members are induced and must oppose the tendency of merely seeking to fulfill norms and bending rules solely to meet a quota.

The form and scale of organization and staffing of the militia and self-defense forces must, (?first and foremost), simultaneously conform with the production characteristics and production organizations and structures of each kind of grassroots unit and suit the conditions, capacity, equipment and managerial and command standards of the responsible echelons and local topographical features.

Units must be rationally organized to ensure a balance between the combat and support forces, between the mobile and stationary forces, and between the infantry and other armed services. The organization of units must be based on the demands of combat plans and the actual conditions of each district and grassroot establishment and should not be carried out according to a fixed pattern for all localities. Attention must be paid to building really strong militia and self-defense units for combat and support duties in each hamlet, each village, each street and each workshop.

We must make painstaking efforts to build and consolidate militia and self-defense force companies, platoons and squads. Particularly, we must build platoons and squads which include a number of especially well-trained teams and detachments. Reality has shown that in the organization of the militia and self-defense forces, the size of a unit does not necessarily mean greater combat efficiency. If we can organize and build a large number of strong companies, platoons and squads, we will be able to carry out well-organized activities and regular operations, satisfactorily resolve the problem of combining the activities of these units with productive labor and the organization of production, and achieve high combat efficiency.

The organization of productive labor in all sectors and grassroots units of the state and at the district level must always be closely combined with the organization of militia and self-defense forces. Every development of the production organizations of the state economic sectors and localities will result in the development of the militia and self-defense organizations. For this reason, in organizing the militia and self-defense forces in the new situation and under new conditions, aside from observing the principles established in the past, we must pay attention to shaping and developing the militia and self-defense organizations according to the ways production is reorganized and labor is divided.

Strengthening the contingent of militia and self-defense force cadres at the grassroots level is the principal factor in the efforts to raise the quality of the militia and self-defense forces. This stems from the decisive role played by cadres. In combat, as the militia and self-defense forces normally operate in small units which fight independently, the role of command cadres at the grassroots level is all the more decisive. On the other hand, in carrying out their work, cadres often encounter no small difficulties in daily life. Therefore, an urgent demand at present is that people with good political qualities who are steadfast, willing to make sacrifices and capable, especially demobilized soldiers and soldiers already reassigned to another sector -- people who have been tempered and tried in combat -- should be chosen to serve as cadres.

The training of cadres must be carried out according to plan and in several different ways, including formal, short-term training in various military schools.

We must pay attention to the living conditions of cadres and help militia and self-defense force cadres at the grassroots level resolve difficulties encountered in their work and their daily life.

In the process of building the militia and self-defense forces we must also settle their relationship with the reserve forces. According to our experience and tradition, most of the soldiers who have fulfilled their military obligation are induced into the militia and self-defense forces to serve as their core after returning to their localities. All of these soldiers, however, must register and be placed under the management of the reserve forces. As such, they are obliged to undergo annual training in the reserve forces. For this reason, the organization, staffing and operations of the militia and self-defense forces must be determined according to these factors so as to bring into play the capacity of demobilized soldiers and soldiers reassigned to other sectors in building the militia and self-defense forces, in defending installations and localities and in ensuring the mobilization of large numbers of troops for the army while maintaining the local fighting strength of the masses' armed forces.

The process of consolidating and building the militia and self-defense forces must be closely combined with the military training task and the strengthening of discipline. In peacetime, training is a very important task designed to build and consolidate the militia and self-defense forces and to enhance their fighting ability. Giving military training to the militia and self-defense forces is an effort aimed at enabling them to meet the demands of their combat duties, maintain political security and protect public order and safety in the present situation while standing ready to cope with a large-scale war of aggression that may be launched by the enemy, assume on-the-spot combat duties, defend their localities and, at the same time, participate in combat operations immediately after being induced into main forces units.

All echelons are dutybound to make painstaking efforts in studying a particular fighting tactic for the militia and self-defense to ensure that it suits the characteristics of each area. On this basis, they must give both technical and tactical training to the militia and self-defense forces. Tactical training, however, must be considered the key task. Due attention must be given to training them in the use of improvised weapons such as punji stakes, mines and boobytraps; in the techniques and methods of maintaining public order and security, and so forth.

The training of the militia and self-defense forces must be carried out according to the basic training program, which should be adjusted whenever necessary to suit the characteristics of each area and each kind of militia and self-defense forces. In carrying out the training task, we must be imbued with the guidelines that training should be closely combined with maintaining combat readiness, that training must be done seriously and realistically and in accordance with the demands of specific combat duties of the localities concerned, and that it must be effective in raising the quality of the militia and self-defense forces. Moreover, we must prevent and overcome all manifestations of formalism and perfunctoriness as well as the tendency to pursue massive training projects designed solely to score quantitative achievements.

We must review the combat experiences of the militia and self-defense forces in the anti-French and anti-U.S. wars of resistance as well as our fresh combat experiences in the northern and southwestern border areas and disseminate them widely among the militia and self-defense forces.

In view of our extremely urgent production tasks and of the fine economic efficiency resulting from the wide application of product contracts with laborers, we must combine the training of the militia and self-defense forces even more closely with the new mode of production.

Local military organs and militia and self-defense forces cadres at all echelons in production installations must work in close coordination with all production organizations to devise concrete plans and establish rational schedules so as to ensure that training is consistent with the production tasks and conditions of the localities and establishments concerned, prevent wastes of time and labor, and avoid hindering production.

All the problems concerning the building and operations of the militia and self-defense forces in the new situation can be satisfactorily resolved only on the basis of strengthening the leadership of party committee echelons and the direct guidance of local military organs in all respects.

We must satisfactorily build the system of party committee echelons leading the military task of localities in general and the militia and self-defense in particular. Particularly, we must build and fully develop the leadership of grassroots party committees, party chapters and party members.

To increase the effectiveness of their leadership, party committee echelons and party chapters in all localities must consider the building of the militia and self-defense forces as an important regular task. Every year, they must issue periodic resolutions and directives on this task, review and assess their work in this field so as to develop timely policies and amendments, and avoid leaving everything to the discretion of local military organs.

Close unity and cooperation between the standing army and the local forces is a fine tradition of our people's armed forces. In the new situation, the standing army, especially the local and border defense forces, must pay even greater attention to constantly and effectively fulfilling their responsibility for participating in building and guiding the militia and self-defense forces in combat and construction in every area, every cluster of combat positions and even every battlefield.

As the militia and self-defense forces are placed under the direct leadership and command of the local military organs at all levels, we must effect a truly drastic and far-reaching change in these military organs regarding the building of local armed forces and the preparation for the people's war at the grassroots level. District, precinct and city military organs must maintain close contact with grassroots units and consider them as their main base of operation. We must eliminate the practice of entirely entrusting the task concerning the militia and self-defense forces to the militia and self-defense forces committee in the case of provinces and municipalities, or to a few comrades staff assistants for militia and self-defense forces in the case of districts and cities.

Turning toward the Fifth National VCP Congress with full confidence and enthusiasm, all the militia and self-defense forces must uphold their spirit of revolutionary offensive, actively strive to increase their quality and fighting strength, and resolutely struggle to achieve new and greater victories in construction, combat readiness, fighting, and in maintaining public order and security as well as in production, thereby contributing to the common efforts of the entire armed forces and people in smashing all enemy schemes in any circumstances.

VFF, PEOPLE'S COMMITTEES MEET IN HANOI 2 JAN

BK040400 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 2 Jan 82

[Text] The VFF and People's Committees of Hanoi Municipality held a grand meeting at the municipal theater on the evening of 2 January to warmly welcome the fine success of the Second Session of the Seventh National Assembly. A large number of representatives of the Hanoi constituency participated in the meeting.

Comrade Truong Chinh, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of State, attended. Also present were Comrades Nghiem Xuan Yem and Nguyen Xien, vice chairmen of the National Assembly; Tran Vy, alternate member of the VCP Central Committee and chairman of the Hanoi Municipal People's Committee; and many other officials.

Addressing the meeting, Comrade Tran Vy pointed out: 'Over the past few days the people in the capital have attentively followed the Second Session of the Seventh National Assembly. They have launched a vigorous emulation movement to successfully fulfill the 1981 plan and to score achievements in honor of the National Assembly session and the Fifth VCP Congress. In this session, the National Assembly unanimously noted that the achievements recorded by our people in 1981 were highly significant. The year 1982 occupies an especially important position in our people's political life. Enthusiastically greeting the Fifth National VCP Congress of delegates, we firmly believe that its success will help further advance the revolution in our country.

Comrade Pham Loi, deputy head of the Hanoi legislators in the National Assembly, informed the representatives of the Hanoi constituency of the results of the Second Session of the Seventh National Assembly. The representatives unanimously adopted a letter of resolve addressed to the VCP Central Committee, the National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers. In their letter, the representatives pledged to actively develop their socialist collective mastery, to uphold self-reliance and to strive to successfully fulfill the 1982 State Plan, so as to stabilize and gradually improve the people's living conditions. They also vowed to constantly uphold their fighting spirit, consolidate the armed forces, satisfactorily implement the military obligation law, stand ready to fight to frustrate all enemy schemes of sabotage and firmly maintain political security and public order and safety.

[Text] Sixteen bodies believed to be of communist terrorists have been discovered near Kampung (Katip) in Betong. This was disclosed by the Perak State secretary, Datuk Sri (Mohamed Halil Haji Hussein), in Ipoh today.

According to intelligence reports, four of the bodies were found last Tuesday, a day after a group of communist terrorists tried to attack the security post near the immigration complex in (Bukit Seratus) in Kroh. He told newsmen after chairing the state's Security Committee meeting that the remaining 12 bodies, which were decapitated, were found near the same area 3 days ago. All the bodies were covered with leaves. Datuk Sri (Halil) believed the communist terrorists suffered casualties when security forces returned fire during the incident at the security post last Monday. The security forces did not suffer any casualties.

PAHANG COMMUNIST STRENGTH SAID TO BE DECLINING

[Text] The security forces have curbed the communist terrorist threat in Pahang. At present only 81-95 [as heard] communist terrorist remnants are known to be operating in the state.

The Pahang special branch chief, Assistant Commissioner Mohamed Osman Ibrahim, said there were between 183 and 200 communist terrorists in the state at one stage in the 1970's. Assistant Commissioner of Police Mohamed Osman was opening a police station at Sungai Serdang new village 17 kilometers from Raub. He called on the people to give their fullest cooperation to the security forces by providing information on the movement of the communist terrorists and their elements so that they could be completely eliminated. The cruel and inhuman acts of the communist terrorists, the latest of which was the killing of a civilian in Cheroh on Monday, were aimed at making things difficult for the people.

LEE KUAN YEW INTERVIEWED ON MALAYSIAN RELATIONS

BK291140 Singapore NEW STRAITS TIMES in English 28 Dec 81 p 16

[Interview with Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew by Noordin Sopiee, group editor of the Kuala Lumpur NEW STRAITS TIMES -- date not given]

[Text] Q: "Breakthrough" is a much-abused word. It is an over-dramatic view of human affairs to see progress in terms of a series of breakthroughs. It is often much more insightful to understand great changes in terms of a long process, across a broad front, over a long period of time. Even so, don't you think that the recent changes in Malaysia-Singapore relations do add up to something of a breakthrough? A decisive, dramatic one?

A: Malaysia-Singapore relations have been improving for several years. Despite some bumpy patches over air traffic rights to Penang and the implementation of ASEAN industrial projects, there has been growing understanding of each other's problems. The reasons for the positions taken by one were gradually perceived by the other. We stopped arguing for the sake of justifying a position.

Malaysia's lead role in ICAP was a significant turning point. Under Dr Mahathir's chairmanship of the ASEAN economic ministers' meeting, Malaysia demonstrated that she was prepared to close ranks with Singapore on an issue in which her interest had so far been marginal.

When Malaysia's interests were at stake, on issues such as the siting of the headquarters of the International Natural Rubber Organisation in Kuala Lumpur, Singapore supported Malaysia and withdrew her own bid as the site of the HQ.

Whether my meeting with Dr Mahathir is called a breakthrough is a matter of semantics. What is important was that at this first meeting, there was a meeting of minds. We solved nearly all the bilateral issues besides reaching broad agreement on our perception of regional problems. If there had been no meeting of minds, these relatively minor bilateral issues could have become major irritants. I am hopeful that we can keep our differences down to their true proportions and importance, by placing them against the background of our larger common interests.

Q: How would you characterise the state of relations between KL and Singapore now? Would you say that we have an entente cordiale? That we are more than just friends?

A: The state of relations between KL and Singapore is very good. They will improve further as the understanding which Dr Mahathir and I have achieved percolates down to senior and middle-level officials on both sides. It is usually at middle-level officials that differences emerge and problems first take shape.

The mass media can help to bring Singaporeans and Malaysians up to date on changes in each other's attitudes and circumstances. Perceptions each has of the other can change for the better. Entente cordiale is too formal a term to describe relations between us. It is not important how our relationship is termed, so long as we remain good neighbours, aware of our basic common interests and confident of each other's good faith.

Q: You used to say and Singapore's leaders used to say, over and over again, that Malaysia's well-being was essential for Singapore's own well-being. During his visit to Singapore, the Malaysian prime minister said that he rejoiced over the rapid progress and prosperity of Singapore because it also meant that Malaysia would continue to have a happy and stable neighbour.

He said: "An unhappy Singapore can be destabilising to Malaysia." Were you surprised by Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir's explicit statement of this fundamental reality?

A: I was not surprised by Dr Mahathir's explicit statement. I have known him for many years and had discussions with him on several issues when he was deputy prime minister. He is open and forthright by nature. He belongs to that self-made and self-confident generation that has taken over positions of command in Malaysia. It requires a self-confident and realistic Malaysian prime minister to state that despite Singapore's small size and population, a Singapore gone wrong can destabilise Malaysia.

Q: But do you agree that there continues to be a substantial residue of mistrust, suspicion and other negative attitudes on both sides of the causeway?

A: I agree there is a residue of distrust, suspicion and other negative attitudes on both sides. The residue is settling down like coffee dregs. The further down from the top, the more the dregs. The mass media can educate our respective peoples on the changes that have taken place in the last 16 years amongst both Malaysians and Singaporeans. In five years, if the empathy that exists between the two leaderships percolates down from high to middle-level officials, the opinion formulators, especially the mass media, can sense these changes. They can alter the mindsets into which both sides were moulded during the angry, emotional and traumatic years immediately before and after separation.

Q: In what specific ways and over what specific matters do you think Singaporeans misunderstand Malaysia and Malaysians misunderstand Singapore?

A: I do not think it useful to rake up old embers. These stereotype reflexes should be consigned to the past. Let us start afresh, on a clean page. The future is not without dangers common to both of us and to our immediate neighbours in ASEAN. Cooperating to meet these dangers is more relevant and more important than going over old quarrels.

Q: Given that they are there, how do you think the misunderstanding, the mistrust and the suspicion can be minimised?

A: Misunderstanding, mistrust and suspicion can be dispelled once each is convinced that one side is not out to do the other side in. For instance, on problems over Malaysian air space and FIR, I had a categorical assurance from Dr Mahathir that there is no intention on Malaysia's part to disrupt or disturb commercial flights to Singapore, nor to inconvenience direct flights from Bangkok, Hong Kong and Manila to Singapore. I conceded at the outset that it was Malaysia's right to revoke delegation of her territorial air space, to Singapore air traffic control, and that we will have to re-route the approach to Changi airport. Dr Mahathir said this was not necessary. Once leaders do not suspect the other of ulterior motives, officials can easily resolve the technical details which will ensure navigational safety.

Q: During Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir's visit, you said: "I had little doubt that I would one day greet you as the prime minister of Malaysia." Could you expand a little bit on that?

A: Tun Hussein Onn told me soon after he took office that he had a heart condition. The chances, therefore, were that I would continue as prime minister after he had stepped down. In assessing the men likely to succeed him, I had little doubt that, barring accidents, it would be Dr Mahathir and that one day I would greet him as prime minister of Malaysia. I had sensed in Dr Mahathir a quiet determination to do something important rather than to be somebody important. He wants to be prime minister in order to implement his convictions of how the interests of the people of Malaysia can be advanced.

Q: In a recent interview, you said that unlike their predecessors, both Datuk Mahathir and Datuk Musa were "non-u." What do you exactly mean by that and do you think that it makes a difference — either in Malaysia or in terms of Malaysia-Singapore relations?

A: The British used to have a traditional upper class that provided the men who led successive British Governments from both parties of the House of Commons during this century. They all came from certain top public schools and Oxbridge or Sandhurst. They were the ruling class. Of Malaysia's first three prime ministers: The Tunku came from royalty, and Tun Razak and Tun Hussein came from traditional Malay ruling households.

Dr Mahathir and Datuk Musa come from ordinary families without the mystique of royalty or of association with royalty. The difference is already self-evident for Malaysia: An open pursuit of desirable work ethics, with an enthusiasm and keenness to get things done expeditiously and efficiently.

As for Malaysia-Singapore relations, I felt our meeting was rewarding because we spoke frankly and explicitly and because we were both realists. I stated my basic position and related it to the issue at hand. He responded in the same way. Had we tried to blur or slur over crucial matters on which concessions would be very difficult, then suspicions of sinister motives would grow at the back of each other's minds. The speed with which bilateral issues were resolved came from this frank and open approach.

For instance, I could tell Dr Mahathir that I welcomed the Royal Malaysian Navy's stay in Woodlands indefinitely, without my intentions being misunderstood. I felt that we were at ease dealing with each other. I hope he felt the same.

Q: You have elsewhere expressed admiration of the fact that Malaysia has had no succession problems in its history as an independent nation. There have been three smooth transitions. Do you see — in the foreseeable future — any fundamental change in the present structure of power, at present based on massive Barisan Nasional domination of the Malaysian political system?

A: The structure and procedure by which power is transferred in Malaysia has been settled over the last 24 years since 1957. I do not expect any fundamental changes in the system which has ensured stability and continuity.

Q: Mr Lee, what are your views about the second line of Malaysian leaders and about Datuk Musa Hitam?

A: I have met Datuk Musa. He is of the same cast of mind as Dr Mahathir. Both are modernisers, with shrewd and serious political minds.

Q: There is a great Malaysian interest, of course, in your own succession planning. Some say Anson indicated that the men at present being groomed for future top leadership in Singapore who were put in charge of the Anson campaign, may not have adequate political skills (although they may be outstanding in other areas). What is your own view?

A: As they interact with each other dealing with the flow of problems, the team will jell. Singapore is a compact society of only 2.4 million persons. The talented cannot be missed. We have six-eight men with strong qualities of character, intellect, motivation. They have to agree on a captain. He has to be a scorer of goals. At present, they would find it hard to choose from among three who are equally good but with different strong points. The leader must be able to mobilise Singaporeans behind temporarily unpopular policies. And it is possible that the leader may join the team in the next few years before the old guards step down.

SUZUKI PREVIEWS 1982 PROSPECTS WITH PRESS

OW011111 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 2345 GMT 31 Dec 81

[Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's New Year press conference with reporters at his official residence -- recorded; date of recording not indicated]

[Excerpts] [Question] Happy New Year, Prime Minister. Thank you for holding this New Year press conference. We feel that 1981 was an eventful year marked by many incidents, including the year-end developments in Poland and various trade problems. It appears that 1982 is going to be another eventful and tumultuous year both domestically and internationally. First of all, what are your views of prospects for this new year?

[Suzuki] I agree; I also feel that we are going to have another eventful and tumultuous year, following last year. The international situation is not very favorable: The Afghan issue has reached a deadlock; the developments in Poland are becoming increasingly grave and tense; and the Middle East situation is extremely unstable as a result of Israel's move to annex the Golan Heights. The international economy is still in an impasse. Many countries, including advanced nations, have encountered difficulties, such as slow economic growth, inflation, unemployment and international payments deficits. According to an OECD forecast, bright economic prospects are unlikely until the latter half of this year. Under these circumstances, there are growing international expectations that Japan will play role commensurate with its national strength and status in promoting world peace and stability as a leading member of the international community. Japan will make further efforts to improve its economic management and accelerate its domestic economic recovery. It will make utmost efforts to reduce and remove economic and trade frictions with foreign countries.

[Question] I would like to ask about your view of economic prospects for 1982. The government has set the rate of real growth at 5.2 percent. Some people think that this is rather too high, compared with forecasts made by the private sector. Are you confident that Japan can attain this growth rate?

[Suzuki] I know that there is a gap of 1 percent, roughly, between the figure forecast by private economic research institutes and the government-set economic growth rate of 5.2 percent. However, I believe that through strenuous efforts we will be able to attain this growth rate. In this connection, I would like to refer to the reduction of our official discount rate on two occasions last year. As a consequence, the official discount rate has now been lowered 0.75 percent. In addition, we have successively reduced various loan interests as well. I believe that the government should conduct its banking and monetary operations flexibly in order to invigorate private economic activity. I also believe that in carrying out public works, priority should be given to projects of high economic effectiveness, such as housing construction. In carrying out public projects, large portions of the budgets should be used for the actual construction of facilities and installations, rather than for land rentals and so forth. We should also strive to carry out various public projects ahead of schedule in 1982. By taking these measures and studying plans carefully, I would like to emerge from our current economic impasse and hasten our economic recovery.

[Question] The 5.2 percent growth rate includes a 1.1 percent growth attainable through meeting foreign demand and consumption. Looking at Japan's actual record in 1981, I doubt that Japan can achieve this growth through meeting foreign demand at this 1.1 percent level. I feel that it would be a very difficult task. What do you think?

[Suzuki] A large share of Japan's economic growth last year was definitely realized through meeting foreign demand. This is why foreign countries criticized Japan and held it responsible for trade frictions. In fact, in our economic management we should place emphasis on promoting domestic demand so that we can, practically, reduce and remove these economic frictions. Based on this belief, the government, in compiling its 1982 budget, has paid particular attention to budget allotments for housing and other similar projects that can increase domestic demand. The government is continuing this effort.

[Question] According to newspaper reports, a considerably large number of people are now demanding that their income taxes be reduced. In this connection, I would like to ask you three questions: First, what do you think about these growing voices among the people? Second, do you really have no intention of reducing income taxes in 1982 in order to satisfy these voices among the people and promote domestic demand? Third, is it true, as rumored, that should you decide to reduce income taxes, you will introduce a new indirect tax so as to offset the resultant revenue loss?

[Suzuki] As you said, there are growing complaints about "heavy levies" with regard to income taxes. As many as 5 calendar years have passed since minimum income tax levels were set. Furthermore, the current progressive income tax system makes people feel that they are taxed heavily. I am humbly listening to demands for a tax reduction. However, as I have done in the Diet in the past, I would like to point out that income tax rates in Japan are lower than in the United States, Britain and West Germany. France is the only country with lower income tax levels than Japan. But France levies a value added tax separately.

Therefore, I would like to ask the people to be a little more patient and wait until conditions conducive to the reduction of taxes have been created. Therefore, in compiling the 1982 budget, we have left intact the current income tax system. However, as I have said, I am fully aware of the people's expectations for a tax reduction and of their request that minimum income tax levels be raised.

I will be cautious in handling this issue in the future while observing the outcome of drastic administrative reforms and curtailment, listening to opinions from various quarters and trying to obtain popular consensus.

[Question] In other words, are you saying that it is possible to have income taxes reduced in 1983 if administrative and financial reforms prove successful?

[Suzuki] I hope that through administrative and financial reforms we will be able to find measures to prevent further burdens on the people. Furthermore, I hope that through these reforms we will even be able to reduce taxes. I know that this is what the people want. Therefore, I will continue to strive for administrative and financial reforms. Through efforts for administrative curtailment and rationalization, I would like to create conditions conducive to the reduction of taxes.

[Question] Turning to another subject, I would like to ask you about defense spending in connection with the adoption of the 1982 budget toward the end of last year.

Through "political negotiations" and the "judgment of the prime minister," it was decided that defense spending for 1982 be increased 7.75 percent, surpassing the originally-set ceiling and rate of increase for 1981. As a consequence, only defense spending will increase conspicuously, whereas other areas of the budget will be subjected to extremely severe belt-tightening. Thus the 1982 budget is markedly unbalanced, I believe. Why was it necessary for the government to increase defense spending only, and to such a conspicuous extent, in compiling the budget? Furthermore, the rate of increase in social welfare appropriations is the lowest thus far. Therefore, it is hard to avoid the impression that the defense budget has been increased at the expense of welfare programs. I also feel that the defense budget has been decided on without substantial talks on actual issues and that it is merely the result of a numbers game. In this context, I would like to ask you if the government has a firm sense of purpose regarding national security.

[Suzuki] Your question concerns defense spending and the defense budget. Regarding our country's defense, I have taken every opportunity to seek public understanding of our defense policy through the Diet and by other means. On these occasions, we have made the following points: The people of Japan must have the spirit of defending the country ourselves. In this sense, Japan is dedicated to purely defensive capabilities and will have only the minimum defense power necessary. Even if Japan is an economic power, it will not possess a defense power that might pose a threat to its neighbors. It will hold fast to the three nonnuclear principles as a national policy. I have also explained that to achieve the minimum defense capability necessary, the government will make steady defense efforts to approach, as soon as possible, the level envisaged in the outline of the defense buildup program adopted by the Defense Council and the Cabinet in 1976.

In compiling the 1982 budget, the government has been guided by this basic policy. It is true that in explaining that defense efforts would be made in line with that basic policy, I stated that from that viewpoint I would like to secure a 1982 defense budget with a rate of increase over the 1981 defense budget that would be in the neighborhood -- remember the word neighborhood -- of the rate of increase of the 1981 budget over the preceding defense budget. In your question you implied that this statement served as a momentum for increasing the defense budget by 7.75 percent. I believe that I have never deviated from the stance I mentioned earlier, that is, that our defense capability should be steadily consolidated to reach the level envisaged in the defense buildup program.

I want to take this opportunity to stress that in this volatile, tense international situation, Japan, as a member of the world community, has the responsibility of possessing the minimum defense power to defend itself. We cannot entrust this matter to others. Other countries are indeed criticizing us for not making sufficient defense efforts despite the fact that Japan accounts for 10 percent of the gross national product of the world. At the same time, however, since Japan cannot contribute militarily other than by defending itself, we must compensate through budget allocations in overseas development assistance -- ODA -- and other external economic cooperation programs, and render economic cooperation to the Third World, thus contributing to the peace and stability of the world. I believe that this is an obligation imposed on Japan in a manner commensurate with its national strength and national capability. I am appealing to the nation to understand. Under these circumstances, the 1982 budget was formulated within the framework of a zero ceiling, but those aspects were taken into consideration. I hope the nation will understand.

If some quarters criticize Japan, saying that [in [illegible]ating the 1982 budget] it was swayed by the United States, and yielded to a f[illegible]ei[illegible] pressure, I think this is a big mistake. Japan and the United States concluded a mutual security treaty. The Japan-U.S. security arrangements serve as a main pillar in the defense of Japan. It is quite natural that under these security arrangements Japan and the United States set up a system in which joint actions with the U.S. forces stationed in Japan are carried out smoothly, satisfactorily and closely in the event of an emergency. From this viewpoint, I think that it is a natural turn of events that the United States has an interest in Japan's defense efforts. However, there was no instance in which the U.S. side cited concrete figures and insisted that Japan act in a particular way, or anything of the kind. I mean to say that I have not been told about that type of thing. In formulating the 1982 budget, the government and the Liberal-Democratic Party made decisions wholly and independently after holding prudent consultations and examinations.

Some have said that the government merely fitted figures while not considering the content of the budget. But, according to what I have been told, final negotiations were held on the questions of frontal equipment [shomen sobi], the capability of resisting war [teisen noryoku] and, in the final stages, the question of maintenance of office buildings and other facilities of the Self-Defense Forces.

I think the criticism that the government simply fitted figures without paying due consideration to the content of the budget is unwarranted and impossible.

[Question] What is your basic position on the forthcoming ordinary Diet session?

[Suzuki] The Diet is scheduled to resume its ordinary session in late January. I think our greatest task in the ordinary Diet session will be to get the proposed 1982 budget and related budgetary bills approved. The 1982 budget is important in that it contains administrative and financial reform programs worked out on the basis of recommendations made by the Provisional Commission for the Survey of Administrative Reforms [RINCHO]. Therefore, I hope to get it approved without any modifications.

As I mentioned earlier, if RINCHO proposes a second package of recommendations suggesting the streamlining, integration and/or abolition of the procedures for granting approvals and licenses, and if it is necessary to write them into law, I would like to handle this at that ordinary session as well.

Another important task to be carried out this year is to take appropriate and concrete measures to cope with trade frictions. To check the trend of impulsively jumping to protectionism, we must help preserve and develop the free trade system to the bitter end by helping to activate the world economy again not in the direction of a reduced equilibrium, but toward an expanded equilibrium. I hope that necessary measures will be taken at the Diet session in this regard as well.

[Question] In that case, in connection with the House of Councillors election scheduled for next year, are you planning to propose to the Diet that it deal with the question of reforming the House of Councillors election system at the forthcoming session?

[Suzuki] That has been my public pledge since my inauguration. I want to see an election system that does not cost money. The question of reviewing the national constituency system of the House of Councillors election remains an agenda item requiring the Diet's continued deliberation. I hope, therefore, to achieve this at the Diet session and ensure that the House of Councillors election next year is held under the new system.

[Question] Mr Prime Minister, now that you have talked about elections, I would like to ask you a question which, I think, might be too risky for you to answer but to which, I hope, you will give a meaningful reply. In the Lockheed trial, the judgment of the first instance is expected to be handed down by this autumn. In view of the sting of a bee [referring to the testimony of a prosecution witness, Mieko Enomoto], the verdict is likely to be unfavorable for the LDP. Taking this into consideration, some people in the LDP say that the party may dissolve the Diet and hold general elections before the court hands down its verdict in the Lockheed trial. Mr Prime Minister, could you please frankly state your views on this matter before the nation?

[Suzuki] Trials fall outside the jurisdiction of the executive branch and are subject to the judgment of the judiciary. Therefore, frankly, I do not at all think that Japan's government operations will be affected by this sort of problem. As for the question of dissolving the Diet and holding general elections, I think that we should set store by the 4-year term of office for members of the House of Representatives as best as we can. Therefore, I do not harbor any such notions as you said, such as rashly dissolving the Diet and holding general elections.

[Question] The LDP is scheduled to hold its presidential election in autumn. Could you please tell us whether you intend to run in that election?

[Suzuki] It is now only the beginning of the new year, and that election will take place about a year from now. I am not thinking about it at all. I am fully preoccupied with the desire to do my best to fulfill my assigned duties on a daily basis. But when the time comes, I will consult you about it and I hope that you will extend your favor then.

[Question] At the outset of this press conference you said that you will do your utmost to ease and eliminate trade frictions. At present, measures are being worked out, such as lowering tariff rates ahead of the agreed schedule and reducing nontariff barriers. If and when these measures fail to reduce the huge trade surplus, what are you going to do? If you have any concrete plan, could you please tell us about it?

[Suzuki] I would like to see what Japan can do voluntarily to eliminate these trade frictions, and I would like to find out what Japan should do to obtain the understanding of people abroad and foreign government officials. In the case of lowering tariff rates 2 years ahead of the schedule agreed on at the Tokyo round, for instance, Japan is putting this into practice voluntarily regardless of whether other countries do likewise or not.

The government is also energetically endeavoring to make improvements in the area of nontariff barriers, such as by reviewing import procedures and inspection criteria for imports. The party has established a special research council on external economic measures and the council, headed by Mr Esaki, has already met a dozen times thus far and is making energetic efforts. The government is also making a study on the matter and we are dealing with it in the hope of introducing a finalized package to the Cabinet council on economic measures by the latter part of January for its adoption.

If we put these measures into practice, I believe that we can at least eliminate the criticism or denunciation directed at Japan -- criticism that Japan is unfair in the field of trade competition.

You asked what we should do in the event these measures still fall short of removing the trade imbalances. I think that this kind of question cannot be resolved by the efforts of Japan alone. Nations trading with Japan should accelerate rationalization, increase productivity, produce inexpensive goods of fine quality and strive to sell products that meet the needs of the Japanese people. Since Japan is making efforts to respond to their request to totally eliminate nontariff barriers, I would like them to make efforts also to explore the market and expand their participation in it. Only by doing so can the balance in international payments be improved; Japan's efforts alone are insufficient to correct the situation.

Furthermore, I think that Japan should help develop the world economy not in the direction of a reduced equilibrium, but in the direction of an expanded equilibrium. Therefore, I think that Japan should render active cooperation -- industrial cooperation in various forms, such as investments, joint ventures and joint research and development of frontier technology. I am planning to eliminate these trade frictions and trade imbalances by making these efforts and to continue efforts to help maintain and develop the free trade system.

[Question] Prime ministers have made it a rule to visit the United States annually during the series of holidays in May. Are you also planning to visit the United States this year to discuss the trade, defense and other issues you mentioned, or are you planning to hold talks with President Reagan in one form or another, putting aside the question of when such talks are to be held?

[Suzuki] Both the Japanese and U.S. Governments are making efforts to keep in close contact with and promote mutual understanding between each other. This is particularly true today, when the international situation is extremely volatile. As of now, there is no plan whatsoever either for Mr Reagan to visit Japan or for me to visit Washington for talks. However, since a summit meeting of advanced countries is scheduled for early summer in France, I will naturally have an opportunity to meet him there. Therefore, although there is no plan worked out as of now, I would like to maintain this close contact between Japan and the United States at all times.

[Question] I would like to ask you about Japanese-Soviet relations. The working-level consultations will be resumed this month and, by coincidence, the ambassadors of the two countries will be replaced. In light of these facts, some people hope that a new phase will be reached this year. In this connection, Mr Prime Minister, could you please tell us your basic view of Japanese-Soviet relations and their prospects?

[Suzuki] An agreement was reached last year between then Foreign Minister Sonoda and Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko on resuming working-level consultations. In accordance with this agreement, high working-level consultations are scheduled to be held in Moscow 20-21 January, that is, this month. I believe that at these consultations the two countries will exchange frank views on issues of mutual interest as well as on the international situation, including questions related to the Far East. However, to lay a firm foundation for true friendship and cooperative relations between Japan and the Soviet Union, it is necessary to conclude a Japanese-Soviet peace treaty before anything else. To this end, adequate consultations should be held to examine the question of the four northern islands — inherently Japanese territory -- which remains an unresolved issue between the two at the moment. It is my cherished desire to see this issue resolved and to establish a relationship of true friendship and cooperation between Japan and the Soviet Union.

At any rate, the Soviet Union is an influential nation in Asia and I believe that the establishment of friendly and cooperative relations between Japan and the Soviet Union will contribute to peace in Asia as well as to the peace and stability of the world. Therefore, for its part Japan is eager to resolve the pending issue of the northern islands, conclude a peace treaty and establish a lasting relationship of friendship and cooperation between Japan and the Soviet Union. Japan will persistently continue to make endeavors in this direction.

[Question] Could you please state your views regarding ways to break the deadlock in Japan-ROK relations?

[Suzuki] Of late a friendly atmosphere has emerged in Japan-ROK relations. I want to treasure this atmosphere and exert continued efforts toward settling the issue of cooperative relations between Japan and the ROK, particularly the pending issue of bilateral economic cooperation as strongly requested by the South Korean side. The ROK is a friendly neighboring country and historically an important nation inseparable from Japan. Therefore, I think it is important that the two countries resolve the economic cooperation issue as quickly as possible and thus seal their ties with friendly, fraternal bonds and join efforts in working together for the peace of Asia. I think that the two countries should exert efforts in that direction.

[Question] Mr Prime Minister, thank you. Although we still have more questions to ask you, our time has run out, and I think we should end this conference now. Thank you very much.

[Suzuki] Thank you very much.

JAPAN SEEN SHARING U.S.-FRG POLISH PERCEPTIONS

OW060347 Tokyo KYODO in English 0332 GMT 6 Jan 72

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Jan 6 (KYODO) — The Japanese Foreign Ministry Wednesday said the result of the summit meeting between U.S. President Ronald Reagan and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt showed that the two countries are in basic agreement on the Polish situation. It said Japan will consult closely with Western European nations on possible sanctions to take against Poland and the Soviet Union should martial law continue.

The Japanese Government closely watched the Washington summit following the appearance of differences between the United States and Bonn over responses to the Polish crisis. A Foreign Ministry spokesman termed the apparent mending of the break between the two nations as extremely significant.

"As U.S. and West German perceptions (of the Polish situation) are now in agreement, it is necessary that Japan also shares this perception," a Foreign Ministry spokesman said. "We will continue to hold close consultations with Western bloc countries on sanctions and other concrete responses against Poland and the Soviet Union."

The spokesman observed that the U.S.-West German statement singled out the responsibility of the Soviet Union in the events leading up to martial law in Poland. He said the meeting was important in achieving the unity of the United States and its European allies on the Polish question.

'COMMON FRONT' WITH EC ON POLISH SANCTIONS

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 5 (KYODO) -- The government decided Tuesday to make a common front with the European Community (EC) on sanctions against Poland and the Soviet Union.

At a regular Cabinet meeting, it was agreed to take concrete measures based on the 12-point communique announced at the EC foreign ministers conference in Brussels on Monday. The communique said the Polish situation would be further aggravated if it led to open intervention by Warsaw Pact countries and issued a warning against any such intervention. It warned that possible economic sanctions may be taken if the Soviet Union intervenes in Polish affairs, although the EC will not immediately join the U.S. in taking such steps.

Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi briefed the Cabinet members on the communique and said Japan planned to act together with the United States and Europe, particularly the latter, on the Polish issue. He revealed a study will be made on possible sanctions against Poland and the Soviet Union.

Although there was a difference between the U.S. and the EC on sanctions, Sakurauchi indicated understanding for the guiding role being played by the U.S., but added it was most important to deal with the matter with the West in complete unity. The foreign minister said it is important for Japan to prevent direct intervention in Poland by the Soviet Union and stressed the need for the West to take measures to avoid such a situation.

Sakurauchi told reporters after the Cabinet meeting he planned to make a detailed study of the communique and results of the meeting scheduled on Tuesday between U.S. President Ronald Reagan and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song sent New Year's cards to them.

KIM IL-SONG GREETS CHONGNYON LEADER IN NEW YEAR

SK021051 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 0100 GMT 1 Jan 82

[New Year's message from Kim Il-song to Han Tok-su, chairman of Central Standing Committee of Chongnyon]

[Text] To Comrade Han Tok-su, chairman of the Standing Central Committee of Chongnyon: Greeting 1982, which will shine with victories and glory, I extend warm greetings to all

Chongnyon functionaries, including comrade chairman and the 700,000 compatriots in Japan. The year 1981 was a triumphant one in which great successes were gained on the road of the first historic march to implement the decisions of the Sixth KWP Congress.

Last year our people made great progress in the work of imbuing society with the chuche idea by energetically carrying out the three revolutions -- ideological, technical and cultural -- with profound trust in the party and the government and great pride in the bright future of the revolutionary cause of chuche. In the course of the proud struggle to implement the decisions of the sixth party congress, our revolutionary ranks have been further consolidated into an invincible entity; thoroughgoing preparations have been made to successfully fulfill the goals of the 10-point prospective plan for socialist economic construction and the country's economic might has further increased.

In difficult circumstances in which the military fascists had unprecedentedly intensified their brutal tyranny, the South Korean people courageously waged their just, patriotic struggle to oppose fascist rule and achieve their democratic rights and the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification.

Thanks to the correct foreign policy of our party and the government of the republic, with independence, friendship and peace as their basic idea, and to their energetic external activities, the foreign relations of our country have been further widened and international solidarity with our revolution has been further strengthened.

Keeping pace with the magnificent, all-out advance movement to implement the decisions of the Sixth KWP Congress, Chongnyon and compatriots in Japan made great progress last year in their patriotic movement. By initiating a 300-day patriotic innovation movement and by energetically calling on all its functionaries and compatriots to join in this loyal, patriotic movement, last year Chongnyon further consolidated its ranks organizationally and ideologically and comprehensively developed the movement of Koreans in Japan on a new, higher level.

Through the struggle to implement the party's policy of imbuing Chongnyon with the chuche idea, the ideological system of chuche has been thoroughly established within its organizations at all levels and its functionaries and compatriots have more solidly armed themselves with the chuche idea of our party. Today, all Chongnyon functionaries are filled with firm faith in the victory of the chuche revolutionary cause; and all Chongnyon organizations have been consolidated into loyal, patriotic ranks to reliably and continuously carry out the movement of Koreans in Japan.

With the successful implementation of the mass line of our party in Chongynon work, the compatriots' patriotic zeal and creativity greatly increased and an increased number of compatriots have united around the KWP and the government of the republic.

Last year, Chongnyon's national education work was conducted more briskly and lively, and great progress was made in the work of defending the democratic rights of the compatriots.

Holding aloft the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] advanced by our party, Chongnyon actively supported and encouraged the South Korean people's just, patriotic struggle to achieve democracy and the fatherland's reunification and strengthened its solidarity with the world's progressive people as well as with the Japanese people, thus greatly contributing to isolating the nation-splitting forces at home and abroad and to implementing our party's line for the great national united front.

Compatriots in Japan are rejoiced over and encouraged by the successes gained by Chongnyon last year. Satisfied with these successes, I extend warm thanks to all Chongnyon functionaries and compatriots in Japan for showing endless loyalty to our party and the government of the republic.

The future of our revolution is promising and the spirit of the people in the fatherland is very high. Chongnyon functionaries and compatriots in Japan should glorify 1982 as the most glorious year in the history of the movement of Koreans in Japan by energetically, ambitiously, hopefully waging a patriotic movement in the new year.

Holding aloft the banner of the chuche idea, Chongnyon should more firmly establish the chuche ideological system -- our party's sole ideological system -- within its organizations at all levels and should vigorously carry out all its activities in accordance with the requirements of the chuche idea. Chongnyon should more firmly consolidate its organizations at all levels and develop all its functionaries and compatriots into chuche-type revolutionaries and ardent patriots who are loyal to the party and the revolution generation after generation.

By more correctly conducting indoctrination on the chuche idea and on socialist patriotism among Chongnyon functionaries and among compatriots, Chongnyon should help them have a correct chuche-oriented revolutionary view and invariably and resolutely struggle for the socialist fatherland and for the victory of the chuche revolutionary cause. In particular, by strengthening indoctrination work for the youths to meet the new situation in which a shift in generations has taken place among compatriots, it should firmly prepare these youths as the reliable successors to the movement of Koreans in Japan.

To firmly establish a system for our party's revolutionary work method and popular work style, Chongnyon should deeply mingle with the broad strata of compatriots to actively defend their democratic rights and interests. By indoctrinating all compatriots, it should vigorously struggle to rally them around their fatherland.

The fatherland's reunification is the most urgent task assigned our people. Chongnyon should more vigorously wage a patriotic struggle this year to found the DCRK by thwarting the nation-splittists' maneuvers to fabricate two Koreas. Chongnyon should firmly unite compatriots of all walks of life in Japan around the great national united front and under the banner of national reunification irrespective of differences in ideologies, systems, party affiliation and political views; vigorously support the South Korean people's struggle against fascism and for democratization; and further strengthen its international solidarity with the world's people as well as with the Japanese people.

Believing that Chongnyon will successfully accomplish the glorious patriotic task assigned it in the new year, I wish Chongnyon cadre members, including comrade chairman, good health and all compatriots in Japan happiness.

[Signed] Kim Il-song, president of the DPRK; Pyongyang, 1 January 1982

RPR CENTRAL COMMITTEE GREETS KIM IL-SONG

SK010330 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 31 Dec 81

[New Year's message from RPR Central Committee to Kim Il-song]

[Text] To the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the sun of the people and a revolutionary genius: A worthwhile year of struggle has just passed under the resplendent ray of a chuche sun, and 1982 -- a hopeful new year -- has brilliantly dawned. At this moment of seeing the old year out and the hopeful new year in on the underground battlegrounds the South, the hearts of our passionate party members and patriotic people of all walks of life throb with endless respect and admiration and burning loyalty to the respected and beloved leader. Their passionate feelings, fused into one, are endlessly working toward Pyongyang where the benevolent leader stays.

Greeting the significant new year and conveying unanimous, unswerving loyalty to Comrade Kim Il-song, the symbol of freedom and liberation and the great sun of the people, who has illustrated the future path of democracy and reunification with the ray of immortal chuche idea and led the revolutionaries and people of all walks of life in the South who trust and follow the fatherly leader only, the Central Committee of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification [RPR] respectfully extends greetings to him, wishing him a long life.

At this moment when we greet the new year overflowing with a fighting spirit even in a forest of bayonets and encircled by reactionaries, we recall the past year of a sacred nation-saving struggle which was waged under the banner of ever-victorious and invincible Kimilsongism with endless pride to become the vanguard of chuche. The fascist tyranny of anticommunism reached its zenith last year. Our party, however, held high the great banner of Kimilsongism without knowing the slightest wavering or frustration. Together with people of all walks of life, it resolutely made a breakthrough in the grim struggle to achieve democracy, independence and reunification.

Through grim, protracted bloody struggles, RPR members were fostered and hardened; many new, young chuche-type fighters were trained; and the RPR ranks were strengthened. Last year the ideological aim of the student movement and the organization of the labor movement steadily advanced, the movement to oppose fascism and achieve democratization was carried out in close cooperation with the worker-peasant movement and the struggle of people of all walks of life developed into a sacred anti-U.S., nation-saving struggle. The anti-U.S. sentiment, which began to come to the surface in the wake of the Kwangju incident, finally erupted in the form of vigorous cries demanding the withdrawal of the Yankees. This was the manifestation of resolute hatred of the U.S. imperialists -- the ringleader of fascism and division -- and a historic fate which the American aggressors, who had long brought immeasurable misfortunes and sufferings to our people, had to meet.

The remarkable development of the situation in the South, which made the White House shudder and the Blue House grow terror-stricken, eloquently proved the justness of the chuche theory that the aggressors can never live peacefully while occupying and dominating other countries and that the more wicked the oppressors become the more organized and powerful the struggle of the people will become in opposing them.

Because revolutionaries and the people in the South struggled under the glorious and brilliant ray of the great Kimilsongism, they made great progress last year in their struggle to oppose imperialism and fascism and to save the country and achieve reunification.

The immortal chuche idea of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song spread last year when the treacherous clique's anticommunist frenzy was rampant, helping the oppressed people realize deep in their hearts that they were pioneers of their destiny and profoundly understand the truth of their struggle. This idea vigorously spread as a guidance banner encouraging the broad strata of the masses to wage a sacred struggle to achieve freedom and liberation.

In particular, the policy for the fatherland's reunification -- a plan for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo -- delineated by the great leader was a torch in a sacred nation-saving struggle helping an increasing number of classes and circles in the South hopefully rise in struggle, visualizing a reunified fatherland in which the leader is held in high esteem.

That the great leader, the sun of the people, has endlessly glorified the northern half of the fatherland as a paradise of people's welfare on earth and as a utopia of mankind by wisely ruling the country in a chuche-type manner, constitutes a prime source of endlessly encouraging revolutionaries and people of all walks of life in the South who have struggled to build a new society and establish a new system.

By performing unprecedented miracles and creating a whirlwind of upsurge in the northern half of the fatherland -- an invincible stronghold of the chuche revolution and a beacon of hope for the South Korean people -- the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, a revolutionary genius, attained immortal achievements last year on the road of magnificent advance toward imbuing society with the chuche idea.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the master of the art of guidance, developed the glorious KWP into an invincible vanguard party which led the revolution and construction with energy and passion and more firmly consolidated the ranks of its nucleus -- the ranks of successors -- which will complete the chuche cause. The Seventh Congress of the League of Socialist Working Youth of Korea and the Sixth Congress of the General Federation of Trade Unions of Korea, which were magnificently held in a festive mood in our era, represented the pride of chuche Korea, demonstrating the advance movement of millions of youth vanguards of Kimilsongism to steadily maintain the lifeline of the chuche cause, guided by the great leader and the glorious KWP and of the great nucleus force of workers.

Thanks to the skilled and tested leadership of the great leader and the glorious KWP, the northern half of the fatherland has built high, lasting monumental objects under the banner of the three revolutions and brilliantly decorated the first year of an all-out advance movement to implement the 10-point prospective plan for socialist economic construction amid an unprecedented production upsurge.

In accord with the magnificent program for the remodelling of nature unfolded by the great leader, the North Korean brethren have resolutely struggled to create the speed of tideland reclamation and construction of the Nampo lockgate and Taechon powerstation, thus astonishing the world and changing well-off chuche Korea into a paradise on earth which is more affluent and prosperous.

By brightly illuminating the future path of the era of independence, the great leader, the sun of chuche, has accelerated development of the Nonaligned Movement and the progress of the world revolution, thus adding a brilliant chuche chapter to the history of the struggle to liberate mankind. Last year, when the chuche sun shed a brilliant ray, seminars on the chuche idea were widely held in various places and countries in the world, including Dacca in Bangladesh, and new chuche study groups were formed in succession. As a result, Kimilsongism took root and attained rich results.

As revealed at the Pyongyang international symposium on increasing food and agricultural production, which was held under the deep care and warm consideration of the great leader and which gained many successes, the newly emerging nations were linked as one and united under the banner of anti-imperialism and independence. They vigorously waged a struggle for building a new society and for establishing a new international economic order, smashing the high-handed tyranny and despotism of the imperialist ruling forces.

Because of the absolute international authority and noble virtue of the respected and beloved leader -- sun of all men -- the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo put forth by the leader was strongly supported and welcomed by the myriads of mankind last year.

The waves of world-wide solidarity movements supporting our country's reunification have formed a rushing torrent, while the U.S. imperialists and their stooges, who have run wild in the two-Koreas plot maneuverings, have again been dealt a severe blow, thereby having more deeply fallen into the abyss of isolation internally and externally.

In reality, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the genius of revolution and construction who is leading the chuche revolution to the ever-victorious path, while holding himself responsible for the destinies of the nation and the times. He is the sun saving the world and people, who endlessly inspires the desire for a real life and the struggle of the nation and mankind and guides them to a brighter future.

We, who live and struggle looking up to the great leader as the sun of the nation and lodestar of freedom and liberation, are renewing our burning determination to successfully hasten the reunification and revolution, while keeping deep in our minds the great boundless honor of being warriors of Kimilsongism this year, too.

The year 1982 is the most meaningful and historic one marking the 70th birthday of the great leader, who our nation and the world's progressive people have warmly received and held in high esteem for the first time in history.

Because we have held the great leader in high esteem, the path to national revival has been pioneered, and we are able to enjoy today's glory. Thus, we keenly feel that the path of looking up to and following the leader for all ages guarantees the fatherland's reunification and the happiness of the generations to come. We hereby firmly pledge that we will carry out the revolution to the end as loyal subjects of chuche who will not falter under any adverse circumstances.

In this connection, we pledge with loyalty that we will adorn this meaningful year with new successes to be achieved in the sacred national salvation war against the United States and against fascism.

The realities of the South covered with bayonets, where fascist terrorism is rampant, are still horrible; and the future path of struggle and revolution is rigorous, rough and difficult. However, at this hour, when the rays of chuche sun brilliantly shine, the vanguard warriors of reunification and revolution and the revolutionaries throughout the country are burning with the indomitable fighting spirit. The workers, peasants, youths and students, intellectuals and religious men who aspire to democracy and reunification are overwhelmed with the conviction of certain victory.

Our party and people of all walks of life, who struggle under the chuche banner, will surely advance the glorious day when they hold the respected and beloved leader in high esteem on the unified land.

The fatherly leader's good health is an earnest desire of people in the South. The RPR Central Committee respectfully wishes long life to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song -- the lodestar of the fatherland's reunification, genius of the revolution and sun of all men -- for the victory of reunification and revolution and final consummation of the chuche cause, and for the eternal happiness of the nation and eternal prosperity of the chuche era, reflecting the unanimous desire of our revolutionaries and people of all walks of life.

[Signed] RPR Central Committee; January, 1982, Seoul

RPR CENTRAL COMMITTEE GREETS KIM CHONG-IL

SK031236 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 1 Jan 82

[New Year's Message from RPR Central Committee to wise leader Comrade Kim Chong-il]

[Text] To the wise leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, the great lodestar of the nation: Courageously advancing along the single road to implement the revolutionary cause of reunification under the banner of the great Kimilsongism, we greet the first morning of 1982, the new year which will be more brilliant with victory and glory.

At this time of ending a year of rewarding struggle and the dawning of the first morning of the hopeful new year, the revolutionaries and patriotic masses in the South warmly wish a long life to the dear comrade leader, the only successor to the great leader. We are full of deep emotion.

On this significant new year, the Central Committee of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification extends the greatest honor and warmest New Year's greetings, reflecting the unanimous desire of politicians, revolutionaries and patriotic people from all walks of life in the South, to the wise leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, who illuminates the road of revolution and reunification with invincible Kimilsongism, who records invincible courage and faith to us and who is the supreme (?model) of the believers of Kimilsongism and the brilliant sun of communism.

In retrospect, the year 1981 was filled with a series of turbulent events in our country and the world as well. It was a glorious one brilliantly embroidered with new immortal exploits and achievements registered in the proud chronicle of succeeding and consummating, generation after generation, the revolutionary cause of chuche which was pioneered in the Paektu forests.

Last year, a march for modelling the whole society on Kimilsongism was waged like a gust of wind. Its every proud and sacred footstep had been brilliantly engraved with the tested guidance of Comrade Kim Chong-il -- the brilliant sun of communism who is a paragon of loyalty -- as well as with the experienced leadership of the great leader, the sun of chuche.

The sagacious comrade leader has led the van in these times and in the revolution, while having been charged with the sacred mission of brilliantly consummating the fatherly great leader's revolutionary cause. Last year, too, he more firmly consolidated the northern part of the fatherland as the (?birth place) of chuche revolution and as the invincible fortress of socialism. Thus, he highly accomplished monumental exploits which will be immortal in the revolutionary history.

The dear comrade leader -- the guiding star of chuche -- has further consolidated and developed the KWP, created by the great leader, as the eternal party of Kimilsongism which will overcome any hardship or ordeal and lead the chuche revolution to final victory. He has extraordinarily accelerated the cause of modeling the whole society on Kimilsongism.

The sagacious comrade leader, who embodies the ideology and leadership of the great leader with loyalty, has further consolidated the political and ideological unity of the entire party and whole society under the banner of Kimilsongism. He has more firmly consolidated the ranks of successors to the chuche revolution and the main force for modeling the whole society on the chuche idea.

The Seventh Congress of the League of the Socialist Working Youth of Korea and the Sixth Congress of the General Federation of Trade Unions of Korea, both of which were grandly held with the fatherly leader in attendance, were strongly seething with the firm conviction and sheer loyalty of consummating the cause of Kimilsongism to the end under the guiding star of chuche. The congresses have caused a great stir of admiration unheard of in the century. This is one more distinguished service that only the dear comrade leader -- the only successor to the leader -- could achieve.

Last year, the outstanding comrade leader -- genius of creation and construction -- had successfully guided the grand socialist construction battle for implementing the decisions of the Sixth KWP Congress, thus more fully embodying the far-sighted plan of the respected and beloved leader in the fatherland.

Because the dear comrade leader -- paragon of loyalty -- is most brilliantly realizing the respected and beloved leader's lofty intention, the northern part of the fatherland achieved again last year the greatest miracle and upsurge in world economic history, thereby grandly having erected long-range monumental creations and widely demonstrating the might of chuche socialist power.

The brothers in the North have overcome abnormal weather conditions under the sacred rays of the sagacious comrade leader, thereby waving the flag of victory and demonstrating the boundless vitality of the chuche farming method on the piles of harvested grain. They are displaying the spirit of heroic Korea by implementing the four-point nature-remaking projects.

They achieved a brilliant success in the first year battle for attaining the 10 major prospective targets put forth by the great leader and highly displayed the prestige of chuche Korea to the world. This is a precious result of the talented guidance of the dear comrade leader, who has led the party and the people in the van of the new solemn march of adding the speed battle to Chollima so that ideology, technology and culture can be remodelled to accord with the requirements of chuche and so production, study and life can be conducted in line with the anti-Japanese guerrillas.

The sagacious comrade leader -- the great Kimilsongist -- has accelerated the victory of Kimilsongism through wisdom and extraordinary leadership, thus glorifying the chuche era.

Last year the activities of the chuche idea believers to study, master and propagate the chuche idea were extensively staged in all parts of the world, including Dacca, Bangladesh, and Georgetown, Guyana. The Nonaligned Movement was strengthened and developed under the banner of anti-imperialism and independence. This indicates that the world is moving in line with the will of the great leader and the sagacious comrade leader and that Kimilsongism is ever-victorious on earth.

The sagacious comrade leader has brilliantly enacted the cause of human liberation with the rays of great Kimilsongism. Because of this, electric waves carrying the warm gratitude and enthusiastic greetings wishing a long life to the sagacious comrade leader are coming to Pyongyang. The hymn of infinite reverence and loyalty from the world people who are looking up to the sun of chuche and the guidance star of chuche is resounding on earth and in the sky.

The great leader and the dear comrade leader are winning absolute dignity and prestige abroad and are enjoying respect and reverence from the progressive people of the world. Last year voices supporting the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and condemning splittists reverberated throughout the five continents of the world.

Indeed, because of the sagacious comrade leader, who has cherished the brilliant rays of the sun of chuche and the rays of loyalty of the respected mother Kim Chong-suk, the brilliance of today and a promising future of the chuche fatherland are evident, and the infinite prosperity of the era of Kimilsongism and the bright future of mankind have been guaranteed.

Last year, establishing our view of the world and our view of life under the rays of the sun of chuche and the guidance star of chuche, we vigorously staged a sacred struggle for democracy and reunification, following the banner of Kimilsongism lifted up by the dear comrade leader.

Cherishing deep in their hearts the truth that only struggle can win democracy and civil rights and achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland, revolutionaries and patriotic people of all walks of life in the South repeatedly lifted up the flames of antifascist resistance for democracy and staged a stern struggle against the U.S. imperialist aggressors' occupation and domination of this land and their two-Koreas plot.

The antifascist movement for democracy was staged in connection with the labor movement. This movement was developed into a sacred anti-U.S. resistance for national salvation. This was an advance resulting from the strategic and tactical policies of Kimilsongism for the revolution and reunification.

In particular, the number of believers and supporters of the chuche idea sharply increased amid the flames of sacred patriotic struggle, and many young revolutionary fighters of chuche were trained and fostered. Thus, the ranks of revolution and reunification were strengthened both qualitatively and quantitatively. This eloquently proves that Kimilsongism, heeding the principle of the chuche idea, is bearing abundant fruit even in the South, the bastion of anticommunism and fascism.

Therefore, the names of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who created the immortal chuche idea, and the sagacious leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, who is standing at the head of the chuche revolution and is shedding light on us with the rays of guidance of Kimilsongism, have become a symbol for freedom and liberation and a banner of victory and glory among revolutionaries and patriotic people in the South. The great Kimilsongism has become the only rudder for the revolution and reunification. It is an ever-victorious and invincible banner.

Indeed, because of the dear comrade leader, who has upheld and followed the lofty will of the fatherly leader, and because of the great Kimilsongism, which is illuminating the road of reunification and revolution, all party members and patriotic people of all walks of life can possess the source of infinite strength and be able to victoriously stage the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle for national salvation.

We, who have vigorously struggled under the ever-victorious and invincible banner of Kimilsongism, are resolved to continue the indomitable struggle for the victory of the revolution for reunification. The nation and the progressive people will greet, in the near future, the 70th anniversary of the birth of the great leader and the 39th anniversary of the birth of the dear comrade leader as a most significant political festival. Greeting the year of glory in which unprecedentedly happy events fall, we hereby pledge not only to prepare ourselves to become the loyal followers of Kimilsongism who uphold and follow generation after generation the sun of chuche and the guidance star of chuche but also to concentrate our energy on imbuing the party and the ranks of revolution with Kimilsongism.

We will also make a new turning point for the victory of the struggle for the revolution and reunification in the South by lifting up the strong flames of struggle to smash the brutal fascist dictatorship, to win democracy and civil rights, to smash the obstacles of division, to found the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo, to drive out the Yankee aggressors and to achieve national sovereignty.

The U.S. imperialists and their stooges are desperately trying to smash the anti-U.S. and antifascist resistance for national salvation by our party and people of all walks of life in the South. However, we, together with all people, will expedite the victory of the revolution for reunification.

The peace and good health of the dear comrade leader is the infinite joy and happiness of the nation and the mankind. It is also a firm guarantee for the final victory of the fatherland's reunification and the cause of Kimilsongism. Cherishing the unanimous aspirations of the party members and patriotic people of all walks of life, the Central Committee of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification respectfully wishes the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, the only successor to the great leader and the brilliant sun of communism, a long life and good health for the victory of the revolution for reunification, for the completion of the chuche cause and for the infinite prosperity of the era of Kim Il-song and Kim Chong-il.

NODONG SINMUN VIEWS CABINET CHANGES IN SOUTH

[NODONG SINMUN 6 January commentary: "What Does the Puppets' Cabinet Shakeup Mean?"]

[Text] A Cabinet reshuffle was carried out on 4 January in South Korea. At the Cabinet reshuffle drama directed by traitor Chon Tu-hwan, the puppet prime minister and vice prime minister were replaced. Some puppet economic ministers and the puppet minister of the unification board were also replaced. Along with the Cabinet reshuffle, the puppet presidential secretary general and puppet ambassador to the United Nations were replaced.

As foreign news media say, the Chon Tu-hwan clique's Cabinet reshuffle is a product of worsening political and economic crises in South Korea. It is nothing but a drama to reorganize the fascist ruling system with more vicious servants. This is fully revealed in that the new puppet prime minister, vice prime minister and ministers are without exception those who took the lead in seeking repression of the people, plundering, nation-selling and division and those who have close ties with Chon Tu-hwan, the head of the military fascists.

It is well-known that the Chon Tu-hwan clique, since its usurpation of power with guns and swords under the support of the U.S. imperialists, has continued to strangle democracy, relentlessly kill people, purge political dissidents on the pretext of political reform and block their activities. On the pretext of social purification and reducing the size of organizations, it also has continued to expel countless politicians and government employees who displeased the clique from their posts and has given those posts to its faithful servants.

The Cabinet shakeup is a continuation of the schemes to reorganize the political system with even more vicious servants. This reveals that the purge which began in the lower echelons of the puppet regime has now reached the upper echelon.

Foreign news agencies say that the Chon Tu-hwan clique's Cabinet shakeup is aimed at soothing the South Korean people and business circles and reviving the depressed economy. The objectives of the puppets Cabinet shakeup were fully disclosed by the Chon Tu-hwan clique's gibberish in announcing the reshuffle. Saying that the reshuffle had to do with the economic ministries, it clamored that it hoped to seek the so-called economic-social development plan with the new economic team, overcome economic difficulties and galvanize the economy.

Because of the Chon Tu-hwan clique's nation-selling treacherous crimes, only depression, disorder, bankruptcy and downfall reign in South Korea. Thus, the South Korean economy is falling into irreversible bankruptcy in the industrial, agricultural, commercial, foreign trade and other sectors.

As was noted by a report of the Development Research Institute of South Korea, in 1982, bankruptcy and turmoil in South Korea will worsen. As a result, the trade deficit will far exceed the $5.5 billion figure of last year. Foreign loans will also increase by $3.7 to $4.5 billion when compared to foreign loans of $30.2 billion last year.

The economic bankruptcy of South Korea cannot be overcome by replacing people or using gibberish. As long as South Korea remains as the colony of the U.S. imperialists, the economy remains a victim of the intrusion of foreign monopolists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique continues to seek a nation-selling and treacherous economic policy. The South Korean economy cannot escape submission and abnormality or extricate itself from bankruptcy. Nor can it relieve the South Korean people suffering the miserable living standard.

By replacing the puppet presidential secretary general, the minister of the Unification Board and the ambassador to the United Nations, the Chon Tu-hwan clique showed that the drama of the Cabinet shakeup is also aimed at approaching nonaligned nations through intensification of divisive and nation-selling diplomacy toward those nations.

In trying to extricate himself from international isolation, traitor Chon Tu-hwan visited Southeast Asian nations and sent his stooges to Europe and Africa. However, everywhere they received cold treatment. They gained only recognition of the poor situation of the lonely puppets.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique's Cabinet shakeup -- the replacement of fascist leaders -- is the outcome of the clique's worsening international isolation and another political trick to extricate itself from isolation and to perpetuate a policy of confrontation with us by the reinforcement of the diplomatic team with more vicious servants and the continuation of divisive and nation-selling diplomacy.

With such deceptive tricks as the Cabinet reshuffle, the Chon Tu-hwan clique cannot quench the people's fighting spirit against fascism and escape growing denunciation and rejection by people at home and abroad. Nor can it save the bankrupt South Korean economy.

What is demanded by the South Korean people, youth and students is not the replacement of several figures but liquidation of the Chon Tu-hwan military dictatorship and complete social and political reform. Their demand cannot be satisfied without elimination of the Chon Tu-hwan murderous group — the most atrocious executioner of the colonial fascist rule and the murderer of the nation. As long as traitor Chon Tu-hwan remains in power and continues to seek fascist despotism and a nation-selling policy, the just struggle of the people will continue and they will certainly achieve their goals.

NODONG SINMUN EDITORIAL VIEWS CRISIS IN POLAND

SK052234 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2208 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 6 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN, January 6 prints an editorial article titled "Concerning the Situation in Poland." The article reads in full:

Now the situation in Poland is still drawing the attention of the world. In connection with the social disturbance that has continued already for one year and several months, the Polish authorities proclaimed a martial law throughout the country some time ago and the country is under the control of the Martial Council of National Redemption.

The world public expresses different views on this and many people wonder the occurrence of such situation in a socialist country.

The proclamation of a martial law and the military control in Poland are an abnormal thing hardly conceivable in a socialist country. In the socialist country the people are the masters of the country and society and a democratic government is carried into effect for the people. Hence, under socialism the state gives play to the conscious enthusiasm and creative ingenuity of the popular masses, who uphold the state policy of their own accord. The proclamation of a martial law and the enforcement of a military power in socialist Poland are contrary to the usual practice of the socialist government.

It is regrettable for us that things have come to such a pass in fraternal Poland. According to reports, after the proclamation of a martial law the situation is gradually changing for the better and stability is being restored in Poland. As a matter of fact, the creation of a crisis and the proclamation of a martial law in Poland are a product of the former revisionist policy.

For the working class party to discharge its historic mission there are problems of principle which should be consistently adhered to in the whole period of socialist and communist construction. The most important thing here is to firmly ensure the leadership of the working class party, the general staff and guiding force of the revolution and the organizer and inspirer of all victories. To this end, the party should be firmly build up organisationally and ideologically and the party's leadership system be established in all state and social realms. The party should strike its roots deep among the popular masses and closely rally them around itself. Only then is it possible to strengthen the militancy and leadership of the party and organize and mobilize the popular masses to successfully carry out the revolution and construction.

But the situation in Poland in the past period showed that this fundamental problem was not correctly solved. As a result of the weakening of the party's leadership role, its leadership system was not established over the state and society. The party was isolated from the masses, the party's prestige and militancy were weakened and the party lost the trust and confidence of the popular masses.

Under such situation it is inevitable to suffer pains and undergo twists and turns in the political and social life and in the revolution and construction as a whole. Under the socialist system the people's government is a powerful weapon for carrying out the cause of the working masses and a faithful servant of the people. If the people's government is to discharge its mission satisfactorily, it should not only resolutely defend the socialist system which ensures freedom and happiness to the working masses but also smash the manoeuvres of the enemy who harbours enmity against this system and opposes it, and carry out economic policy which accords with the socialist principles and carry on the revolution and construction in reliance upon the political enthusiasm and creative ingenuity of the popular masses. When the people's government fails to do so, it cannot consolidate and develop the socialist system nor can it successfully accomplish the cause of socialism.

In Poland the counter-revolutionary elements of "KSS [Social Self-Defense Committee] KOR [Workers Defense Committee], "Confederation of Independent Poland" and "Solidarity" free trade union openly opposed socialism, raising their heads and strutting around, and various circles held strikes and demonstrations, discontented with the government's policy. It cannot but be considered that this is a result of the weakening of the function and role of the people's government.

Socialism and communism can be successfully built only by a high degree of conscious enthusiasm of the popular masses. In order to give play to their conscious enthusiasm, it is imperative to constantly conduct ideological education and to strengthen it still further as the revolution and construction advance. If this is weakened, the corrosion of the old ideas grows strong, people are easy to be contaminated by the bourgeois reactionary ideas from outside and this will do a big harm to the revolution and construction.

In Poland ideological education including education in socialist patriotism, has been neglected so far and the door opened to the ideological and cultural infiltration of imperialism. If the masses are left defenceless in ideology, class consciousness and pride in socialism are paralysed, individual selfishness and the Western way of life prevail among the people and, in the end, they cannot distinguish which is socialistic and which is anti-socialistic and are cajoled by the counter-revolutionary elements.

Under socialism there is only one democracy, a democracy for the popular masses, that is, socialist democracy. Socialist democracy alone is a genuine democracy which allroundly and practically ensures genuine freedom and rights to the popular masses who are the masters of the state and society.

But there is only "democracy" for a minority, a bourgeois democracy in capitalist society where the minority dominate the majority. "Democracy" on the lips of the imperialists is a sham democracy and "liberty" advocated by them is that for the exploiter class, a minority, not for the working people.

Socialist democracy and bourgeois democracy are incompatible. To introduce bourgeois democracy into the socialist system is like fixing the tail of a horse to a cow. This mixed democracy only revives bourgeois democracy.

In Poland socialist democracy has not been fostered to suit the intrinsic demand of the socialist system and reactionary bourgeois democracy has been allowed to infiltrate, so that dissoluteness and social disorder have been created and even the foundation of the state policy of the working class has been shaken. The serious problem caused in Poland by weakening the leading role of the party and the functions of the people's power, neglecting the ideological education of the people and allowing the reactionary bourgeois democracy, in the long run, damaged the gains of socialism.

To take the road of socialism today is the common purpose of the people struggling to achieve independence and an irresistible trend of the times. The countries which embarked upon the road of socialism before others with the victory of revolution should contribute to the acceleration of this trend by their practical examples in the revolution and construction. To this end, a working class party should maintain the revolutionary principle and build socialism better and faster. Only then can it enhance the prestige and attraction of socialism.

The commotion unbecoming to the socialist system and the proclamation of the martial law in Poland are surely a shameful thing which has smeared the image of socialism. Truth to tell, this is a disgrace to socialism.

It is, of course, an unhappy thing to proclaim a martial law in a socialist country.

But how could the Polish authorities sit calmly when the reactionaries attempted to overthrow the people's power and obliterate the gains of socialism in Poland?

We consider that the proclamation of the martial law in Poland was an inevitable step and a justifiable act which were taken to suppress the reactionaries by revolutionary means and safeguard the power of the working people at a critical moment when socialist Poland was standing at the crossroads of survival and fall in face of the counter-revolutionary action.

The reactionaries open challenge to the socialist system in Poland was part of the subversive activities of the Central Intelligence Agency of the United States behind the scene to overthrow the socialist power. The U.S. imperialists have been the heinous enemy of socialism down through history.

Today the U.S. imperialists pursue a strategy of destroying the socialist countries one by one by subversive activities and sabotages and have chosen Poland as a major target of this strategy.

The U.S. imperialists, who had exhausted every means from long ago to detach Poland from the road of socialism, rendered support, material, financial and political, to the Polish counter-revolutionaries and perpetrated ideological and mental subversive acts through mass media, instigating them to a coup d'etat.

When the Polish authorities proclaimed the martial law and began to bring the situation under control, the U.S. imperialists, with malice, openly threatened and blackmailed the Polish Government and people and shamelessly interfered in her internal affairs.

This stripped bare the invariable aggressive nature and insatiable aggressive desire of the U.S. imperialists as the chieftain of world reaction and international gendarme. It is none other than the U.S. CIA which is to blame for the disturbance in Poland.

It is only too clear that the counter-revolutionaries could not strut about so arrogantly in Poland without the instigation and support of the U.S. imperialists.

The Polish question is an internal affair which the Polish people themselves must solve. The United States authorities must not continue to instigate the anti-socialist elements of Poland but take hands off her.

The Polish situation demands the peoples of the socialist countries, nonaligned countries and the Third World countries and other peace-loving people of the world to heighten vigilance against the U.S. imperialists' moves, clearly conscious of the plot of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency against Poland.

The people's power and socialist system of Poland are the revolutionary gains of her working class and people. For them, a large number of revolutionaries and patriotic people of the country shed blood in a sacred fight against aggressors and reactionaries. To this power and this system the Polish working class and working people owe their happy life after the resurrection of Poland. A prosperous future of Poland is promised only on the road of socialism. There is no other way. It is natural that the Polish working class and people of various strata are actively responding to the efforts bent by the Polish United Workers Party and government to defend the people's power and socialist system. We hope that the Polish problem will be smoothly solved by her own efforts.

CHON CALLS STABILITY KEY TO ECONOMY, SECURITY

["Text" of South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan's 1982 New Year's message]

[Text] My fellow countrymen everywhere: Today we greet the dawning of the Year of the Dog; a year in which the goals of the Fifth Republic must be advanced even more vigorously. At the beginning of this year of new hope, I pray for happiness and good luck for all fellow citizens who are devoting themselves to the stability and progress of the country. I also ardently wish that the new year will bring blessings to overseas Koreans, especially construction workers and trade representatives who are demonstrating our proud national spirit on the world scene.

At the same time, I am moved by profound sympathy for the compatriots in the communist-controlled North. It is my sincere hope that in the new year, we will progress in our efforts to achieve peaceful unification.

The year 1981 was a very difficult year the world over. Although there was no great war or economic catastrophe, there were mounting uncertainties and instabilities that shook the international political and economic orders no less severely than would a major war or economic calamity.

The past year was characterized by such events as the alarming state of affairs in Poland, the precariousness of the Middle East as symbolized by the Iraqi-Iranian war and the assassination of President as-Sadat of Egypt, sharp clashes between the left and the right in Latin America, unprecedented economic stagnation gripping industrial nations and rising trade friction.

Inspite of such harsh circumstances, the Republic of Korea succeeded, through the concerted efforts of everyone, to turn 1981 into a historically momentous new beginning. With the goal of establishing a democracy ensuring social justice and economic well-being, we were able to overcome the political and social chaos that had persisted since the latter half of 1979 and establish a solid foundation for the Fifth Republic.

The new start did not simply involve political reform alone, but was a response to the historical necessity to cast away, once and for all, the backward patterns of thought and behavior that had long pervaded all walks of life. Thus 1981 was a year of change and progress, a year of renewal in attitude and outlook.

Faced with an international economic recession and necessary but difficult shifts in domestic economic policies, the nation responded with steadfast inner strength to bring the economy gradually out of the overheated condition of the recent past and bring inflation under increased control.

In international relations also, 1981 was a very significant year. Through vigorous diplomatic endeavors, including official visits to the United States of America and the five members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, we were able to reaffirm our self-image as a newly industrializing nation on the eve of a great Pacific era. This was a great impetus to our efforts to open the doors of the nation to all countries and achieve greater internationalization.

Korea's energetic advance onto the world stage was illustrated by the awarding to Seoul of the Olympics -- the greatest festival of mankind -- and the Asian games -- a peaceful encounter of two billion Asians. Rather than exulting over these successes, we should treasure the confidence that the world placed in our national stability, capabilities and maturity.

Looking back on the achievements of the past year, I feel that they are the crowning glory of the united and dedicated efforts of all Koreans. Thanks to the unflinching national resolve to seek stability, the united determination to launch the new republic and the devoted efforts of individual citizens to faithfully discharge their duties, we now joyfully greet 1982 -- a year brimming with hope.

Fellow countrymen, although the achievements of last year were great, we must remember that we still have a long way to go. The goal of a democracy assuring social justice and economic well-being is not easily attained in one or two years, especially, while at the same time reinforcing the safety and peace of the country. Our desired goals will become tangible realities only when we exert sustained efforts without becoming conceited at recent accomplishments nor frustrated by current ordeals. Accordingly, 1982, the second year of the Fifth Republic, should be the year in which our goals are reaffirmed and our efforts redoubled.

If 1981 was a year to get started, 1982 ought to be a year to pick up steam. If the past year was a year of pledges, the new year ought to be a year to translate them into action. Our creative initiative should focus on shoring up the sectors of society which are lagging behind and further stimulating those that are already advancing ahead. In such a way, 1982 will go down in history as a year of glorious achievement and advancement.

As you all know, 1982 is the first year of the Fifth Five-Year Economic and Social Development Plan designed to generate great momentum for a second economic take-off. This plan reflects the desire shared by all to strengthen all aspects of the national economy and to improve the quality of life. In other words, our aim is not only to achieve material affluence but the balanced development of different regions and social strata and the flowering of culture and the arts. We are thus committed to seeking greater qualitative improvements in both material things and in our spiritual life.

Upon launching the new five-year plan, I call on all citizens to keep in mind a clear vision of all our goals including those in the political, economic, social and cultural fields, and to move vigorously and systematically ahead. The world economic prospects for this year do not look especially bright. Fortunately, however, there are emerging signs that world trade will grow, owing in part to stabler oil and raw material prices. Accordingly, with a little more self-confidence, perseverence and self-restraint, I am convinced that within this year, Korea will be able to achieve sustained growth leading to a second takeoff.

Fellow citizens, stability is of utmost importance to growth and progress for, just as it is difficult to build in an earthquake zone, so it is impossible to achieve economic development without stability. We paid a high price for that lesson just a short time ago.

If stability is to be achieved we must all think of ourselves as being on a ship. Should we quarrel among ourselves, each fighting to navigate toward a different destination, we should merely pitch and drift. All Koreans are bound by a community of destiny, sharing together all the difficulties and benefits of living in this land. With a sense of this common destiny, we must resolve to work in concert to diminish the bad and increase the good; thereby making 1982 a happier year. May the hopeful, bright light of the new year bless all fellow citizens throughout the land.

CHON ORDERS LIFTING OF CURFEW ON 5 JAN

SK010946 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0900 GMT 1 Jan 82

[Excerpt] The midnight to 0400 curfew will be lifted throughout the country except for certain areas as of midnight on 5 January. Through the senior presidential secretaries concerned, President Chon Tu-hwan today ordered the government ministries concerned to discuss lifting the curfew at the next Cabinet session to be held on 5 January, and to make all preparations so that the curfew can be lifted as of midnight of 5 January.

President Chon said that the issue of lifting the curfew was unanimously proposed by the National Assembly and that the government has so far continuously examined the proposal. He continued to note that because all areas had remained calm especially during this past Christmas, New Year's Eve and New Year's Day, it would have been desirable to lift the curfew beginning 3 January, when suspension of the curfew for the New Year holiday period ends. However, he ordered that the Cabinet session to be convened 5 January handle this matter because there are necessary requirements that must be met and administrative procedures implemented.

Revealing President Chon's orders, Chongwadae spokesman Yi Ung-hui said the nighttime curfew will be lifted throughout the country except for some vulnerable locations such as the areas adjacent to enemy territory and along the coastlines.

TONG-A-ILBO Report

[Text] Effective the night of 5 January (0000 of 6 January), the 37-year-old night time curfew will be lifted in all areas of the nation except frontline areas adjacent to enemy territory and some vulnerable areas along the coastline. This measure will be taken in accordance with an order by President Chon Tu-hwan. On 1 January he ordered the government ministries concerned to discuss lifting the curfew at the next Cabinet session to be held 5 January and to make all preparations so that the curfew can be lifted effective that night.

However, considering the special circumstances from the viewpoint of security and public order, the curfew will remain in effect in 292 up [township] and myon [town] in the nation's 52 counties -- the frontline areas adjacent to enemy territory and vulnerable areas along the coastline. The areas where the curfew will remain in effect comprise 71 up and myon in 10 counties in Kyonggi and Kangwon Provinces, which are adjacent to enemy territory along the frontline, and 221 up and myon in 42 counties along the coastline in rear areas. CHON ADDRESSES CABINET ON OLYMPICS, ECONOMY 5 JAN

[Text] Seoul, Jan 6 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan Tuesday instructed the Cabinet to launch thorough preparations for the 1986 Asian games and 1988 Summer Olympics, both events to be staged in the South Korean capital, this year, and said that this year should see the stabilization of the Korean economy.

Addressing a Chongwadae (South Korea's presidential mansion) Cabinet meeting, the chief executive told the Cabinet to make a special effort to improve the nations living standards without alienating any sectors in the process. It was the first Cabinet meeting since Sunday's major Cabinet reshuffle, involving mainly economic portfolios. Chon stressed that the new Cabinet should redouble its efforts to establish a clean and responsible government, that is trusted by the people it serves.

REPORT SAYS TRADE DEFICIT HIGHEST SINCE 1979

[Text] Seoul, Jan 6 (YONHAP) -- Korea's trade deficits last year totaled 5,317 million U.S. dollars, the highest since 1979, when such deficits amounted to 5,283 million dollars, according to the Korean Traders Association (KTA) Wednesday.

The KTA said that the country's exports totaled 20.982 billion dollars in 1981, while imports reached 26.299 billion dollars on a cost, insurance and freight basis, thus resulting in trade deficits of 5,317 million dollars. The increased trade deficits last year were partly attributed to the excessive importation of crude oil and grains, which the drastic decline in the importation of materials for facilities investment could not offset.

THAI POLICY, TERRITORIAL PROVOCATIONS ASSAILED

[Unattributed commentary: "Thailand Must Stop Its Hostilities Against the Kampuchean People"]

[Text] Phnom Penh, 5 Jan (SPK) -- Thailand has just perpetrated a new piratical act against the PRK: On 28 December 1981 three vessels of the Thai Navy opened fire on a Kampuchean patrol boat and sank it. Five members of the Kampuchean crew were taken prisoner. This act occurred 15 km inside PRK territorial waters off Koh Kong Province.

However, to conceal their crimes, the Bangkok authorities are staging the comedy of a thief crying stop thief by presenting another version according to which the Thai vessels came to the aid of a Thai fishing boat chased by a Kampuchean boat. This version also says that the Kampuchean boat opened fire first.

This is a gross story which further reveals the Bangkok authorities' hostility to Kampuchea since its liberation from the clutches of Chinese expansionism and its lackeys -- the criminal Pol Pot clique. One recalls that since the fall of the genocidal Pol Pot regime, the lackeys of expansionism have enjoyed the aid and assistance of the Bangkok authorities. It is in Thailand that the assassins of the Kampuchean people have been given refuge and supplies. It is Thai territory that has been transformed into a sanctuary for such traitors and assassins as Pol Pot, Sihanouk and Son Sann, who have used it as a meeting place with the blessing of Beijing, Washington and other international reactionaries to form a so-called coalition government.

Bangkok's support of the reactionaries and assassins -- Pol Pot, Sihanouk, Son Sann and company -- is not limited to the political domain. It allows for the transfer of Chinese and U.S. arms to these traitors and covers up their infiltrations into Kampuchean territory. It is reflected in the almost daily bombardments of Kampuchean border positions by artillery of all calibers and in the violation of the PRK's territorial integrity by aircraft and vessels. During the week ending 24 December alone, Thai aircraft overflew Kampuchean territory 5 times, Thai artillery bombarded Kampuchean positions 93 times and armed Thai boats and vessels intruded into Kampuchean territorial waters 347 times.

The 28 December attack on the Kampuchean boat by the Thai vessels was, therefore, not an isolated case, nor was it, with greater reason, an incident, either. The Bangkok authorities must understand that they are playing a dangerous game for the benefit of the Beijing expansionists. A growing hostility to the Kampuchean people does not benefit the Thai people, nor is it in the interest of peace and stability in the region.

Bangkok must put an end to this anti-Kampuchean policy. It must immediately release the five crewmen of the Kampuchean boat attacked on 28 December. It must also put an end to the daily provocations at the Kampuchean border. It must stop interfering in Kampuchea's internal affairs.

THAI DECEMBER TERRITORIAL VIOLATIONS REPORTED

BK060646 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0420 GMT 6 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 6 Jan (SPK) -- In December 1981, Thai planes overflew Kampuchean airspace 40 times. On 16 December alone, 11 overflights of Thai L-19's over Preah Vihear temple were reported. Kampuchean territory was fired on with 105 mm-cannons, 120-mm and 82-mm mortars, recoilless cannons and H-12 rockets 388 times, and additional artillery fire supported infiltrations of Pol Pot troops.

Koh Kong-Pursat: Thai planes overflew the region 13 times, in particular, Smat Deng and Hills 322, 336 and 199. The region was under Thai artillery fire of various calibers 152 times and Smat Deng alone suffered from 64 bombardements. On 4, 8 and 24 December Pol Pot troops infiltrated between 8 and 15 km west, southwest and northwest of Smat Deng.

Kampuchean combatants killed 54 of them and seized 16 weapons. On 2, 28 and 29 December hundreds of 120-mm mortal shells and H-12 rockets fell in the vicinity of Hill 322. On 20 December Thai border guards fired on Hil 329 at the border of Koh Kong Province.

Battambang: Seventeen Thai airplanes penetrated 3 to 5 km into Kampuchean airspace over Poipet, Pailin, Kamrieng and Ta Sanh. On 28 December the region suffered from 125 bombardments of 105-mm cannons from Thai territory, many of which were directed against the area west of Pailin.

Siem Reap-Preah Vihear: Ten overflights by Thai planes were observed, particularly over Preah Vihear temple. Various calibers of Thai artillery bombarded the region from Thailand 111 times with observation aid from Thai reconnaissance planes.

On 21 December Kampuchean border guards put out of action 33 Pol Pot soldiers who had penetrated 14 km north of Bak Anlung, and 17 guns were seized. On 5, 9 and 24 December many Pol Pot troops were killed west of Preah Vihear temple, north of Choam Khsan and north of Trapeang Kol. Faced with a counterattack by Kampuchean combatants, the survivors fled to Thailand.

During December, Thai ships and armed vessels entered Kampuchean territorial waters 1,253 times in the vicinity of Koh Tang and Koh Kong. A particularly serious fact: On 28 December three Thai Navy ships entered Kampuchean territorial waters and sank a Kampuchean boat on patrol, killing eight crewmen and capturing five others.

PAPER HAILS RESULTS OF VIENTIANE CONFERENCE

[Text] Phnom Penh, 2 Jan (SPK) -- The first meeting of the deputy foreign ministers of the socialist countries, held in Vientiane on 18 and 19 December, ended its work in an atmosphere of mutual understanding and the participants reached unanimity on all issues raised for the purpose of consolidating peace and stability in Asia and the world, the paper KAMPUCHEA said in its latest issue. KAMPUCHEA stressed: The Vientiane conference reflected the foreign policy of peace pursued by the Indochinese countries, the USSR, other socialist countries and the peace-, independence-, democracy- and progress-loving forces who are struggling against the belligerent forces.

Concerning the Kampuchean problem, the conference stressed that it can only be resolved by the Kampuchean people and their government, which is their sole authentic and legal representative. The paper continued: The resolution of the international conference on Kampuchea and the other resolutions adopted by the United Nations without the participation of a representative from the PRK government run counter to the will and interests of the Kampuchean people and constitute gross interference in their internal affairs. Such acts are aimed at reimposing the genocidal Pol Pot regime. These decisions are illegal, immoral and invalid.

The proposals made by the LPDR at the 36th UN General Assembly advocating the development of relations based on peaceful coexistence between ASEAN and Indochina were supported by the Vientiane conference of deputy foreign ministers, which considered them to be conducive to the consolidation of peace and stability in this region and the rest of the world. The Vientiane conference stressed that the only way to guarantee peace and stability in this region is for imperialism and the other reactionaries to immediately stop interfering and causing instability and tension in the region and for the countries in the region to settle their problems on the basis of equality and mutual respect, without external interference. The participants pledged to concentrate all their efforts on contributing to the consolidation of the independence and sovereignty of the three Indochinese countries. They expressed unreserved support for the relations of solidarity and cooperation among the SRV, the LPDR and the PRK.

The success of the Vientiane conference of the deputy foreign ministers of the socialist countries constituted a hard blow to U.S. imperialism, Chinese expansionism and international reaction and showed that the socialist countries always stand for a peaceful settlement of problems, for proposals that are constructive and imbued with good will and for the interest of peace, independence and social progress.

PAST ACHIEVEMENTS, FUTURE TASKS OUTLINED

BK060444 Phonom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1100 GMT 31 Dec 81

[Unattributed commentary: "The Kampuchean Revolution Is Advancing Steadily"]

[Text] In 1981 various historic events took place in our country. The revolution in our country has advanced steadily. Our people have scored great victories in all fields:

1. The Fourth KPRP Congress held in May 1981 concluded with success. This is a historic event of the revolution in our country. Correctly implementing Marxism-Leninism in conjunction with the concrete situation in Kampuchea, the congress set forth the tasks and the progressive role of the revolution in our country in the current phase. The success of the congress clearly reflects the unanimity [words indistinct] and spirit of the entire party and all the people, and marks the progress of the party. The entire party and all the people are confident in and joyfully following the correct line of the party. They are determined to successfully fulfill the glorious tasks: To defend national independence and to build the fatherland so that it will progress step by step through the period of transition to socialism.

2. The people and cadres throughout the country, as masters of the country, actively took part in drafting the Constitution of the PRK. The elections of ward and commune people's committees were held successfully in all provinces and municipalities. Thus the local institutions of the people's power have been strengthened to an extent. The general elections to elect the National Assembly members — in which 97 percent of the people took part with great joy and sense of responsibility — proceeded successfully. At its first session, the First National Assembly adopted the Constitution of the PRK, set directives and tasks for the next few years and established various leading institutions of the state.

All these above-mentioned events are of great political significance both inside and outside the country. For the first time in the history of our country our people have taken part in making the fundamental laws of the country and enjoyed the rights of selecting and electing candidates that they trust to represent them in managing the national affairs. All of these events attest to the stability of our country, the genuine democratic status of the new regime and the people's confidence in the revolution.

3. Recently, another significant political event took place. It was the Third Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] Congress, held in December 1981 with excellent success. The success of the congress highly enhances the union of all the people in order to increase the people's strength for the successful implementation of all revolutionary tasks.

4. All the political achievements have greatly encouraged the people throughout the country to emulate each other in order to create feats in all aspects of national contruction and defense. The movement of launching production means patriotism has been greatly stimulated, particularly in the agricultural field. After 2 years of construction and development, the various production solidarity groups have been further strengthened. In 1980 the rainy-season rice production was successful; our people's life was gradually stabilized; and the peasants sold 15,000 tons of rice to the state. This year many regions were threatened by drought or floods. But, thanks to the production solidarity groups, our human forces are capable of overcoming natural disasters. Almost 1.3 million hectares of rice were planted in the country as a whole. This amount is almost the same as that planted in 1980, when there were favorable natural conditions.

Various major industrial crops have been gradually restored, such as 5,000 hectares of rubber and 3,700 hectares of tobacco. We have over 1 million head of oxen and buffalo, which provide draft power, and over 100,000 [as heard] pigs and chickens. The climate is favorable for this year's fishing season.

Up to now, hundreds of industrial bases and handicraft sites have been restored and a certain amount of commodities and farm tools have been produced. The production of necessary goods, such as farm tools, household utensils and so forth, in 1981 was greater than in 1980. During the 1981-82 scholastic year there are 1.5 million students and pupils throughout the country. That is 200,000 more than in the previous school year. There are 420,000 people attending the literacy and refresher courses. Last scholastic year there were 200,818 people recognized as being freed from illiteracy. Health networks have been expanded continuously. An insignificant number of cholera cases were reported during the past year. The people's health has improved. The diseases that used to plague the country during the Pol Pot era have been reduced noticeably.

Supported by the fraternal VPA, our armed forces and people have strongly defended the borders of our fatherland and frustrated all the subversive plans of the enemy during both the dry and rainy seasons. While carrying out combat and construction tasks, our armed forces -- regular, regional and militia forces -- have grown up to a greater extent. Political security and social order have been firmly maintained. Our armed forces and people discovered and crushed a number of traitorous organizations and defeated their provocative maneuvers. More misled elements have fled from the enemy ranks and returned to the people.

5. The spirit of international solidarity and the alliance of the three fraternal Indochinese countries have been enhanced in all aspects. By holding aloft the banner of truth against the common enemy -- the Beijing expansionists, who colluded with the U.S. imperialists and the other reactionary forces in the ruling circles of the ASEAN countries in an attempt to oppose and undermine the three Indochinese countres -- the third session of the meeting of foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries in Ho Chi Minh City and the fourth session of the the Indochinese foreign ministers meeting in Phnom Penh clearly displayed our will to contribute to building peace, stability, friendship and cooperation among the Southeast Asian countries. The relations between our country and the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries have been strengthened and expanded. The Soviet Union and the other fraternal countries have assisted our people wholeheartedly. The conferences for solidarity with the Kampuchean people of the Asian-African People's Solidarity Organizations and the Asian-African and Latin American peoples have clearly displayed the support of progressive mankind for the just struggle of our people.

All of these above-mentioned victories have brought great joy to our people. Our friends are very happy. Our revolutionary forces have become stronger and the prestige and international role of our country have soared. We have created favorable conditions in order to seize more victories and successfully carry out the main tasks in 1982 by heightening vigilance, fighting vigorously and preparing combat readiness to crush all the subversive maneuvers and activities of the enemy, defend our country and maintain political security and social order, vigorously stimulating production, particularly agricultural production; striving hard to realize greater achievements in all fields than in 1980; closely uniting all the people; building and strengthening the revolutionary forces; consolidating and heightening international solidarity, particularly with friendly Vietnam, the Soviet Union, Laos and other fraternal socialist countries; and ceaselessly strengthening the alliance of the three Indochinese countries.

Although we still face many difficulties in this immediate period, the situation in Kampuchea is absolutely irreversible. Regardless of how many hundreds of schemes and plans the Beijing Chinese, in collusion with the Americans and the reactionary forces in the ruling circles of the ASEAN countries, resort to in order to oppose and undermine our Kampuchean revolution, in the end they will certainly suffer shameful defeats.

COUNCIL OF STATE ANNOUNCES NATIONAL DAY HOLIDAY

BK060244 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 2300 GMT 5 Jan 82

["Announcement of the KPRP Central Committee and the Council of State of the PRK" -- date not given]

[Text] According to the Constitution of the PRK, Chapter IX, Article 89, the date 7 January has been established as the National Day and the day to enhance the significance of the date 7 January 1979, when the Kampuchean people throughout the country, uniting closely as one man and enjoying the glorious international solidarity, permanently toppled the genocidal regime, liberated the country and people and seized the right to be the real masters of their own destinies in order to rebuild our beloved Kampuchea in accordance with the motto of independence, peace, freedom and happiness -- which are the sacred aspirations of our people.

The victory on 7 January 1979 had repulsed the activities to provoke a war of aggression by the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists, who attempted to use the Kampuchean territory as a springboard for the launching of attacks, aggression and expansion against the Indochinese and Southeast Asian countries. Moreover, the victory on 7 January was the outcome of our people's protracted struggle, full of lofty heroism and numerous difficulties, to seize independence, freedom and peace for our beloved fatherland. This victory has also actively contributed to strengthening international peace, consolidated the revolutionary alliance of the three Indochinese countries and bitterly defeated the enemy's psychological warfare schemes, which have distorted the realities in the PRK.

By virtue of the Constitution and the above-mentioned considerations, on the solemn occasion of the third founding anniversary of the PRK on 7 January 1982 the KPRP Central Committee and the PRK Council of State decided to allow cadres, personnel, workers and people throughout the country to take a 2-day holiday on 6 and 7 January 1982 to celebrate the 7 January National Independence Day.

On this solemn occasion, cadres, personnel, workers, the armed forces and the security forces, as well as our people throughout the country, should continually heighten revolutionary vigilance in order to thoroughly maintain security.

On the occasion, the KPRP Central Committee and the PRK Council of State wish all the cadres, personnel, workers, the armed forces, security forces and the people throughout the country happiness, prosperity and successes in all revolutionary tasks.

[Text] On 14 December Comrade Preap Pichey, secretary of the Kompong Cham Provincial Party Committee and chairman of the provincial people's revolutionary committee, sent a message of congratulations to Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the PRK Council of State, on his nomination as KPRP Central Committee general secretary. The message read:

Upon learning that you had been appointed by the KPRP Central Committee to the post of general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee, on behalf of the party committee, people's revolutionary committee, cadres, party members, combatants, employees, workers and people throughout Kompong Cham Province, I would like to convey to you our elation and profound revolutionary optimism. We appreciate the fact that your appointment to this high position constitutes an immense, historic, brilliant and glorious victory for our Kampuchean people and revolution.

The Kampuchean revolution is certainly advancing. The Kampuchean people will unfailingly strengthen their unity under the victorious banner of the KPRP. We wish you the best of health and more and greater successes in fulfilling your noble mission.

Representatives' Greetings

[Text] Recently representatives of various provinces of the People's Republic of Kampuchea sent messages to greet Comrade Heng Samrin, who was elected as general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee. There were messages from representatives of Pusat, Battambang, Mondolkiri, Kratie and Stung Treng Provinces. These messages read, notably:

On behalf of the provincial party committee, cadres, employees, workers, male and female combatants and the entire people in the province, we are very elated to wish you well on the occasion of your election as general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee in order to lead the Kampuchean revolution to more, new and great victories in fulfilling the duties of building and defending the fatherland. We are determined to use all our physical, moral and intellectual forces to implement all duties entrusted by the party Central Committee and the people, particularly to strengthen national and international solidarity and be ready to smash all maneuvers of the enemies in order to build and defend the revolutionary gains in the advance to genuine social development.

May the comrade general secretary permanently enjoy the best of health.

AGRICULTURE MINISTRY MEETING REVIEWS CULTIVATION

BK050750 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0405 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 5 Jan (SPK) — As of mid-December, peasants throughout the country had planted nearly 50,000 hectares of dry-season rice, or one-third of the planned norm, said a report presented at a meeting held in Phnom Penh from 28 to 30 December by the Ministry of Agriculture under the chairmanship of its minister, Kong Samol, to review past cultivation activities. Prey Veng Province has cultivated 20,450 hectares; Takeo Province, 11,300 hectares; and Kandal Province, 7,300 hectares of rice.

The people's power has supplied the people with 3,600 tons of rice seed, more than 23,000 tons of chemical fertilizer, 70,000 liters of insecticide, 100 tons of rat poison and a great quantity of farm implements.

According to the report, throughout the country, rains and drought have ravaged 14 percent of the cultivated principle rice crop area. Peasants have planted 141,000 hectares of subsidiary crops and 11,200 hectares of industrial crops.

The meeting participants highly praised the peasants' efforts and cited some exemplary localities that overfulfilled planned norms. They are Battambang, Pursat and Svay Rieng Provinces and Kompong Som city. The meeting adopted measures aimed at boosting agricultural production and increasing the output.

VODK REPORTS RESPONSES ON COALITION PROPOSAL

Chamka Leu Letter

BK030442 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2310 GMT 1 Jan 81

[23 December letter on the loose coalition government proposal from 56 former Khmer soldiers, militiamen and employees who were forcibly drafted into service by the Vietnamese aggressors and who have joined the anti-Vietnamese resistance in Chamka Leu District, Kompong Cham Province, sent to Democratic Kampuchean leaders]

[Text] To Mr Nuon Chea, chairman of the Kampuchean People's Representative Assembly Standing Committee; to Mr Khieu Samphan, chairman of the State Presidium and prime minister of the Government of Democratic Kampuchea; through the good office of the PDFGNUK Committee of Chamka Leu District, Kompong Cham Province:

We the undersigned, 56 former Khmer soldiers, militiamen and employees forcibly drafted into service by the Vietnamese enemy aggressors, would like to extend our salutations to you and inform you about our opinion regarding the communique and circular on the loose government. We hold that it is imperative not to form a loose coalition government, for such a government cannot fight and defeat the Vietnamese. With such a government, the Vietnamese would certainly swallow and massacre our nation. We have come to this opinion because we do not like the Vietnamese. We hate them beyond any words, for we know them very well and we cannot forget all the stories told us by our elders. When we were with the Vietnamese, we thought that we would work for our living and would be allowed to live an ordinary life in peace. However, we could not live in peace, as the Vietnamese forcibly drafted us into their service as soldiers, militiamen and employees in the villages and communes. Even when we accepted the humiliation of serving them as soldiers, militiamen and employees, we could not live in peace. They not only massacre, destroy and plunder those who refuse to serve them, but also our relatives and children.

We painstakingly served them, leaving our wives and daughters behind at home. The Vietnamese raped our wives and daughters as they liked. They forced us to rob and kill our kith and kin in the villages and communes. How could we kill our own Khmer compatriots and our kith, kin and neighbors who, since childhood, have been good to us and never had any ill will toward us? When we refused to comply with their orders, the Vietnamese accused us and arrested us on charges of disobeying them, opposing them and refusing to carry out their arrest and conscription laws.

Since 1979, the Vietnamese have launched four to five purges against village, commune and district soldiers, militiamen and employees in various areas of our central region by arresting, suppressing, imprisoning and transferring them to other places. For this reason, we defected to the side of Democratic Kampuchea and joined in the struggle against the Vietnamese. The suffering of our nation and all of us is immeasurable. However, the thing which has constantly maintained our hope is that the army and guerrillas of Democratic Kampuchea are attacking the Vietnamese in a consistent and increasingly violent manner, causing the Vietnamese to live in a state of permanent fear. At present, only the army and guerrillas of the Democratic Kampuchean forces are resolutely sharing life and death with the nation and with us. Without the army, guerrillas and government of Democratic Kampuchea, who else will we and our nation be able to depend on?

With this reasoning, we would like to express our opinion that if there is a rallying of forces, these efforts should be made in such a manner as to not impair and harm the forces of the Democratic Kampuchean Army, guerrillas and Government.

We wish to see a union made possible so as to increase forces resisting the Vietnamese. However, it is not right to cause the existing forces to become loose, slack and dispersed.

In conclusion, we would like to pledge that we will resolutely follow the Government of Democratic Kampuchea and unite with the Democratic Kampuchean Army and guerrillas and all compatriots throughout the country so as to pool our forces to attack the Vietnamese aggressors, defend the nation and liberate the country forever.

[Signed] Former Khmer soldiers, militiamen and employees; Chamka Leu District, 23 December 1981

'Unassociated' Group Response

BK060930 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 4 Jan 82

[30 December letter on the loose coalition government proposal from a former "unassociated" group of 142 persons which has joined the anti-Vietnamese resistance on the Thmar Puok-northern Sisophon battlefield, sent to Democratic Kampuchean leaders]

[Text] To Mr Nuon Chea, chairman of the Kampuchean People's Representative Assembly Standing Committee; to Mr Khieu Samphan, chairman of the State Presidium and prime minister of the Government of Democratic Kampuchea; through the good office of the PDPGNUK Committee of the Thmar Puok-northern Sisophon sector:

We the undersigned, 142 members of a former unassociated group who are now joining hands with the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas in the resistance against the Vietnamese enemy on the Thmar Puok-northern Siephon battlefield, have listened to the broadcast by Radio Democratic Kampuchea on the communique and circular informing and requesting opinions from the entire Kampuchean nation and people on the national union and the question of a loose coalition government. Here is our opinion concerning this question:

Previously, because of our misunderstanding, we joined one of the unassociated groups which maligned Democratic Kampuchea and boasted that they were the ones who were fighting against the Vietnamese. Month in and month out and year in and year out, however, we did not see them fight the Vietnamese. All they did was feast, womanise, brawl and rob the people. Moreover, they kept slandering Democratic Kampuchea and stealthily stabbing it in the back. These actions eventually became too much for some people to accept. It reached the point where they occasionally remarked: If you do not fight the Vietnamese enemy, just keep quiet. Do not disturb those who are really fighting the Vietnamese.

As for all of us, we are greatly indignant at the Vietnamese enemy, who has killed and is killing our people and nation. For this reason, we decided to flee from this unassociated group to join the Democratic Kampuchean side in order to fointly fight the Vietnamese enemy in accordance with the appeal of the Democratic Kampuchean Government. We have seen wtih our own eyes that Democratic Kampuchea has implemented the policy of genuinely rallying the great national union without discrimination. It has tried to rally national forces and concentrated on fighting the Vietnamese enemy. We have no illusion whatsoever about this: Without Democratic Kampuchea fighting the Vietnamese enemy, Kampuchea would have been swallowed up by the Vietnamese by now; all of us would have lost our country; there would be no Kampuchean question to be discussed by the world; and, though it might not have become another Kampuchea Krom, our country would have faced the same fate as Laos.

Having realized all this, we are of the opinion that we will be happy with and support any genuine coalition. We propose, however, that nothing should be done to impair the National Army, guerrillas and the Government of Democratic Kampuchea, which are resisting the Vietnamese enemy. If they want to join, they should pitch in their forces with the present resistance forces in order to increase the fighting strength against the Vietnamese enemy. If they do not want to join for whatever reasons, each group should fight the Vietnamese enemy separately.

The people, nation and history will certainly see and feel grateful to anyone who fights against the Vietnamese enemy. It would be ideal if they would come to fight the Vietnamese enemy directly in the country. If they cannot come to fight the Vietnamese in our country, they can also help fight the Vietnamese enemy outside the country. Our only request is that all sides avoid attacking each other, slandering fellow Khmers and seeking to split the anti-Vietnamese forces.

[Signed] A former unassociated group that is joining with the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas in the resistance against the Vietnamese enemy on the Thmar Puok-northern Sisophon battlefield; 30 December 1981

CANADIAN PROFESSOR PAYS VISIT TO DK AREAS

[Text] On 22 December 1981 Professor (A. Joseph Liof), deputy director of the Research Center for East Asian Affairs, McGill University, Montreal, Canada; and Mrs (Anne Liof) visited Democratic Kampuchean-controlled areas.

They were warmly welcomed by cadres of the Foreign Ministry. They met cordially with leaders of the Democratic Kampuchean Government on 23 December. During their stay, the friendly guests visited a number of villages, such as Phum Thmei, Phum Boeng Trakuon, Phum Chamka Chek, Phum Sangke and Phum Chamka Trap, and attended an artistic show at Phum Thmei. They were warmly welcomed by the people and cadres of the PDFGNUK in every village. They were guided to visit various settlements and plantations, and view carpentry and blacksmith activities. The friendly guests noted the spirit of endeavor of the people to increase production, the preservation of national tradition and their spirit of solidarity and struggle.

On 24 December 1981 the friendly guests left Democratic Kampuchea, with the impression that Democratic Kampuchea is a concrete force that has struggled for national liberation and the Kampuchean race. It is also a force that obstructs the dangers of Vietnamese and Soviet expansionists in Southeast Asia and the world.

AFP: SIHANOUK DEPARTS FRANCE FOR BEIJING VISIT

NC011548 Paris AFP in English 1457 GMT 1 Jan 82

[Text] Mougins, southern France, 1 Jan (AFP) — Former Cambodian ruler Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who left here today on the first leg of a trip that will take him to Beijing, said he hoped to meet Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan in February. The prince left his home-in-exile in this town near the Riviera and headed by car for the Swiss border. He was to reach Geneva by Sunday and then take a Swissair jet to the Chinese capital, where he planned to stay two months.

Prince Sihanouk, heading one of the three main resistance forces opposed to the current Vietnamese-backed regime in Phnom Penh, said he will meet with Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping and other Chinese leaders. He added, "I also hope that I will be able to meet in February with Khieu Samphan," president and prime minister of the ousted Khmer Rouge regime, which now calls itself Democratic Kampuchea. The prince had mentioned the possibility of such a meeting in a letter he sent last month to Khieu Samphan, whose group is part of the tri-partite coalition being envisaged to fight the Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia.

FOREIGN MINISTRY SCORES U.S. USE OF THAI AIRBASE

[Text] Today, 5 January, our Foreign Ministry spokesman issued a statement on the renewed use of Utapao airbase by the United States. The statement says:

According to the Thai paper the NATION REVIEW on 26 December 1981, U.S. and Thai officials — including the Utapao airbase commander -- publicly admitted that since November 1981 aircraft from the U.S. 7th Fleet have been authorized to use Utapao Airbase on a renewed basis under the so-called pretext of refueling and conducting joint U.S.-Thai training.

At a time when the U.S. imperialists are colluding with the Chinese expansionists to intensify their intervention in Kampuchea and oppose the three Indochinese countries, this action has further strained tension in this region.

Everyone still remembers that during its former war of aggression against the three Indochinese countries, the United States used Thailand as a base for its aircraft and warships, including B-52 aircraft, to carry out bombing and destructive shelling, perpetrating many crimes against the three peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea.

Following its defeat in Indochina and faced with the violent protest of the American and Thai peoples, the United States had to dismantle these bases. Now, refusing to learn a lesson from its defeat, the United States again plots to return militarily to Southeast Asia and once again has linked Thailand to its war machinery.

This is a very dangerous plot seriously threatening the peace and security of the three peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea and other peoples in Southeast Asia. All U.S. efforts to reverse the direction of history, however, will not be spared strong condemnation by peace-loving and progressive peoples in Southeast Asia and the world, including the American and Thai peoples. These efforts will certainly end in shameful defeat.

The Thai authorities, by lending a hand to the United States, are running counter to the national interests of the Thai people and to the aspirations for peace and stability of the Southeast Asian peoples. They must be held responsible for their misdeeds. The Vietnamese people cannot help but keep a watchful eye on this dangerous deed by the U.S. authorities and demand that the Reagan administration immediately put an end to all its plots of military adventures.

WAR CRIMES COMMISSION DENOUNCES PRC ACTIONS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 7 [as received] — The Vietnam Commission for Investigation of Chinese Expansionists' and Hegemonists' War Crimes against Vietnam today issued a communique denouncing the war crimes committed by Chinese troops against Vietnam in the last three months of 1981. The communique reads: The reactionaries in the Chinese leadership backed and abetted by the U.S. imperialists have been conducting a perfidious war of destruction against the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. The following are Chinese war crimes against Vietnam in the last three months of 1981:

1 — Chinese reactionary troops continued illegally occupying Height 400 in Cao Loc District, Lang Son Province, and Heights 1800S and 1800B in Vi Xuyen District, Ha Tuyen Province, made 48 shellings and 66 intrusions into Muong Khuong and Bat Sat areas (Hoang Lien Son Province, Hoang Su Phi area Ha Tuyen Province), Quang Hoa, Ha Quang and Bao Lac areas (Cao Bang Province).

They carried out attacks and ambushes in other areas in Hoang Lien Son, Cao Bang and Lang Son Provinces, killing or wounding many civilians and domestic animals taking away a number of other people, destroyed many houses, warehouses, hospitals and schools, and burned hundreds of hectares of wood land in the districts of Van Lang, Cao Loc, Loc Ninh, An Ninh Lap in Lang Son Province.

Chinese troops increased their forces along the border with Vietnam, exerting military pressure and making war threats. They moved the 5th Armycorps to the border areas opposite Ha Tuyen and Cao Bang Provinces, brought 24 additional 105mm-cannon to the area of Marker-Post 17 opposite Muong Khong District in Hoang Lien Son Province, added another company and battalion to the border close to Phong Tho District in Lai Chau Province, organized military exercises, built military roads, consolidated trenches and battle-grounds along the border opposite Van Lang District in Lang Son Province, Tra Linh District in Cao Bang Province, Meo Vac and Vi Xuyen Districts in Ha Tuyen Province, and Muong Khong District in Hoang Lien Son Province. This was an utterly truculent move of the Chinese reactionaries to "push war to the Vietnamese border", create a border status quo state, and legalize the illegal annexation of a part of the Vietnamese territory.

Most recently they rejected with arrogance Vietnam's goodwill as shown in a note on December 28, 1981, by the Foreign Ministry of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam proposing that China "stop all hostile armed actions and cease fire along the Sino-Vietnamese border" on the occasion of the Lunar New Year.

In the sea Chinese armed motor boats made more than 1,700 intrusions into Vietnamese territorial waters in Bach Long Vi Island (Hai Phong) and Tran and Thanh Lam Islands (Quang Ninh). Most serious was that over 100 Chinese motor boats escorted by warships on November 21-22 intruded into the sea areas of Thanh Hoa and Nghe Tinh Provinces. The Chinese reactionaries also conducted exercises for the Nanhai fleet in the areas of Hainan and the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

In the air Chinese aircraft made more than 1,300 sorties close to the Vietnamese border. More serious still, many flights of Chinese jet planes on October 27 and November 28 intruded deep into Phong Tho and Xin Ho Districts (Lai Chau) and Muong Khuong District (Hoang Lien Son).

2 -- These Chinese armed provocations and nibbling activities were made to facilitate the smuggling of scouts, commandos and spies into Vietnam to set up bases for counter-revolutionary subversion and, if possible, for large-scale aggression.

In the three months the Chinese reactionaries smuggled hundreds of scouts, spies and commandos into Vietnam, in Phong Tho (Lai Chau) Lao Cai Muong Khuong (Hoang Lien Son), Meo Vac and Hoang Xu Phi (Ha Tuyen), Ha Quang, Trung Khanh and Quang Hoa (Cao Bang), Cao Loc and Van Lang (Lang Son), Binh Lieu and Mong Cai (Quang Ninh), to gather intelligence, kidnap personnel, conduct sabotage, instigate young people, and make contacts with local reactionaries.

The Chinese reactionaries also forced a number of Vietnamese born Chinese who had moved to China to return to Vietnam to cause trouble in border areas. Through the public address system along the border they tried to distort the line and policies of the Vietnamese party and government, discredit Vietnamese leaders, spread customary lies to confuse people, and upset political, economic and social activities, thereby to pave the way for rebellion and subversion.

The Chinese reactionaries circulated leaflets and pychological warfare and set up frontier markers as a means to get intelligence and contact their agents.

3 -- In the diplomacy, the Chinese reactionaries, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, continued to smear campaign against Vietnam with a view to isolating it in the international arena.

They charged Vietnam with invading Kampuchea and attacking Thailand so as to deprive it of international aid. They also accused Vietnam of using toxic chemicals in Laos and Kampuchea and invented the story that Vietnam and the Soviet Union were threatening the Southeast Asian nations. The aim was to cause hostility between the ASEAN countries and Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries and compel ASEAN to form an "alliance" against Vietnam and to give military aid to the Khmer Rouge and other lackeys.

These crimes laid bare to public opinion at home and abroad the sinister designs of the reactionaries in the Beijing leadership, who, in collusion with the U.S. warmongers, are scheming to weaken Vietnam and preparing for annexation of this country through a large-scale war of aggression.

These criminal acts not only threatened Vietnam's independence, sovereignty and security, but also exacerbated tension in Indochina and Southeast Asia and undermined world peace.

The Vietnam Commission for Investigation of Chinese Expansionists' and Hegemonists' War Crimes denounces to public opinion at home and abroad these crimes of the Chinese authorities and demands that they cease all hostile actions against the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

SERIES ON SOVEREIGNTY OVER SPRATLYS, PARACELS

Second Article

OW050941 Hanoi VNA in English 0706 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 5 -- The following is the second in a series of articles published by the Hanoi monthly VIETNAM COURIER on the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes:

The Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes Are Vietnamese Territory

The Hoang Sa and Truong Sa (Paracels and Spratlys) have always been part of the Vietnamese territory; numerous juridical and historical documents have irrefutably demonstrated that:

-- Before Vietnam took possession of these archipelagoes they did not fall under the sovereignty of any other state in the world.

-- Ever since, Vietnam has uninterruptedly exercised its sovereignty over these islands.

A Longstanding Vietnamese Occupation

The Beijing authorities have gone all out to demonstrate, citing numerous ancient texts -- 17 in all -- that Chinese travellers on the Bien Dong had landed on the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, which they named respectively Xisha and Nansha. This is lost labour because such facts have no juridical value. The essential thing is to prove in an irrefutable manner that China has effectively occupied these archipelagoes before they belonged to any other state and that since then it has exercised, without discontinuity, its sovereignty over these islands. This is something Beijing still has to do.

The Chinese were not the only navigators to sail on this sea in the remote past. There were also Vietnamese, Arabs, Persians, Indians, Portuguese, Spaniards, Dutch and French. Chen Lun, a Chinese author at the time of the Qing, wrote in his travel book, entitled "Things Seen and Heard on the Lands in the Sea": "The junks of the barbarians (as the Chinese then called inhabitants of other countries going to Indonesia, Luzon, Wengai, Sulu ... all pass by the gate of Changsha." This means that inhabitants of many other countries and not China alone, travelled on the Bien Dong Sea.

Referring to the Hoang Sa area, Le Qui Don, a Vietnamese encyclopedist in the 15th century, noted in his Phu Bien Tap Luc (Miscellaneous Records on the Government of the Frontiers): "Inhabitants of our country who went there sometimes met with men from the north (Chinese -- ed)."

All the Chinese feudal dynasties who invaded or occupied Vietnam sought to destroy books and other cultural works they found in the country. The greatest infamy was committed by Zhang Fu. This general of the Ming (15th century) ordered books burnt and stelae demolished. Thus, all the ancient texts which might have given us information about Truong Sa and Hoang Sa have either been destroyed or taken to China. One of the rare works written before the later Le Dynasty in Vietnam and preserved until today is the An Nam Chi Luoc (Summarized Monograph of An Nam) by Le Tac. However, the first chapter, entitled Geographical Data, has been lost. Moreover, none of the reference books cited by the author in his preface, such as "Giao Chi Do King" ("Capital of Giao Chi") or "Phuong Kim Hoi Nhat Dien Do" escaped the destructive fury of the Ming general or the many big fires that devastated Hanoi during the civil wars. So, we are left with practically no geographical or historical sources to throw light on the Vietnam of that time and the activities of the Vietnamese on the archipelagoes which undoubtedly had become for them a much frequented site by then.

However, Vietnamese writings which appeared after the later Le period (from the 15th century) and certain texts by foreign authors largely suffice to testify in favour of Vietnamese sovereignty.

Let us cite first of all the Toan Tap Thien Nam Tu Chi Lo Do Thu (Complete Atlas of the Southern Country) by Do Ba, alias Cong Dao. It contains maps of Vietnam in the 15th century, covering the entire territory from north to south as well as the Eastern Sea. The Hoang Sa Archipelago was referred to in the book as Bai Cat Vang (which means the same as Hoang Sa). It goes without saying that this atlas, like all the other documents we are referring to, is authentic. They are still kept at the Hanoi Social Sciences Library (formerly the library of the French Far Eastern School) and at the Toye Bunke Library in Tokyo. Another source of reference is to be found in a work of great scientific value by H. Dumoutier published in the "Bulletin de Geographie Historique et Descriptive" (1896) and many relevant books.

Beijing contends that this atlas has no value since it contains the following sentence, cited in the white book published in October 1979 by the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry: "To go there it took one day and a half starting from Dai Chiem and half a day starting from the Sa Ky Estuary," which was impossible with the means of navigation at the time. But this is not the question. Errors are common in ancient texts, be they original form without the least modification. We wish only to point out that the 15th century maps of Vietnam which were redrawn in the 17th century already mentioned the Hoang Sa Archipelago (known as Bai Cat Vang) as belonging to the Vietnamese province of Quang Ngai. What is more, in the same book, two pages after the above-mentioned passage, another quotation was made from the Phu Bien Tap Luc: "...farther off (i.e. beyond Re Island -- ed) there are also the Dai Truong Sa Islands harbouring many sea products...the Hoang Sa workgang has been formed with the mission of going to collect them. To go there, one must sail for three days and three nights" (underlined by the author). Other ancient books of Vietnam, not yet quoted by our Foreign Ministry, also affirm that it took about three days and three nights to go from Re Island to the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

The members of the Hoang Sa workgang each received six months supplies. They boarded five junks and had to row for three days and three nights to reach the island (Hoang Sa) (Phu Bien Tap Luc). They (Hoang Sa workgang) boarded five junks stocked with six months' supplies and put to sea. They had to sail for three days and three nights to reach the island (Hoang Sa) (Lich Trieu Hien Chuong Loai Chi, chronicle of dynasties by Phan Buy Chu, early 19th century. Each year, in the 3rd month they (the Hoang Sa workgang) would go to the island (Hoang Sa -- ed) on board junks. They would arrive three days and three nights (Dai Nam Thuc Luc Tien Bien -- Truthful Accounts About Dai Nam, 1848).

"The island (Hoang Sa) lies to the east of Ly Island (also called E — ed) in the district of the Binh Son. From this coastal area of Sa Ky one can go there in favourable weather, in three of four days" (Dai Nam Nhat Thong Chi — monograph of Unified Dai Nam).

According to H. Dumoutier, Do Ba drew up these maps basing himself on the data he had gathered while accompanying King Le Thanh Tong, in his expedition against the Champa in 1470. Thus, as early as the 15th century, Vietnamese had already landed on Hoang Sa. It is known that the feudal state of Vietnam was founded long before that date, following Ngo Quyen's victory over the Chinese invaders on the Bach Dang River in 939. Therefore, the centralised organisation and management of the country's affairs was nothing new. In particular, in the field of maritime navigation and external trade, Vietnamese junks already sailed in the Eastern Sea to reach Luzon, Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand.... Also by then Van Don in the Tonkin Gulf was widely known to the world. Other ports were also accessible to vessels of big tonnage.

The Nguyen lords, administrators of the southern half of Vietnam south of the Gianh River (later called Cochinchina), had since the 16th century attached great importance to the protection and exploitation of maritime resources. All the Portuguese, Spanish, Dutch French, Chinese, Japanese, Indonesian, and Filipino boats docking at Dai Chiem, Hoi An (Faifo), Da Nang (Tourane) or Re Island were subject to control and had to pay customs duties. Tariffs were mentioned in the Phu Bien Tap Luc of Le Quy Don.

They organised the Thanh Chau workgang, whose task was to gather Salangane nests on the islands off Qui Nhon, and the Hai Mon Gang which operated in the Phu Qui Archipelago. The farther islands such as Hoang Sa, Truong Sa and Phu Quoc were accorded still greater attention. The Hoang Sa workgang was created to exploit the resources on the archipelago of the same name. So was the Bac Hai workgang belonging to the Hoang Sa gang, whose task was to defend and exploit the islands further to the south including the Truong Sa Archipelago, Con Lon (Poulo Condor) Island and Vietnamese islands in the Gulf of Siam. Here are some extracts from ancient books:

"Each year, in the last month of winter, the Nguyen lords sent there (to Hoang Sa — ed) 18 junks in order to bring back merchandise, gold and silver as well as arms (Tom Tap Thien Nam Tu Chi Lo Do Thu). In the past, the Nguyen formed the Hoang Sa workgang composed of 70 members, all natives of An Vinh commune, who served on a rotating basis. In the first month of the year they went to receive their orders from the higher authorities, then put to sea. Each member of the workgang received six months' supplies. They boarded five small junks and sailed for three days and nights on end to reach the island (Hoang Sa — ed). There they fished and caught birds to enrich their meals. They also collected arms, silver wares, coins, porcelain, turtle shells, sea cucumbers, and shells in great quantities. Returning to the mainland in the 8th month by the Cua Eo Estuary they reported to Phu Xuan [Hue, capital of the Nguyen Dynasty — ed) to hand over to the Nguyen lord all that they had gathered. After taking the inventory, they sold for their own account such things as shells, turtles and sea cucumbers. After each receiving a diploma they were allowed to return to their homes. The value of their collection varied, and sometimes they came home empty-handed" (Phu Bien Tap Luc).

The Lich Trieu Hien Chuong Loai Chi by Phan Huy Chu and the Hoang Viet Dia Du Chi (Geography of the Viet Kingdom) compiled in 1833 referred to this workgang of Hoang Sa almost in the same terms.

From 1802 onward, the first kings of the Nguyen attached greater attention to national construction. The Hoang Sa and Bac Hai gangs were maintained and their activities extended. They were spoken of in detail in different historical works such as Dai Nam Thuc Luc Tien Bien (Truthful Accounts About the Dai Nam), Viet Su Cuong Giam Khao Luoc (Glimpse of the History of the Viet) by Nguyen Thong (1876) or again in the Dai Nam Nhat Thong Chi (1910).

From these testimonies we may come to the following conclusions:

— For more than three centuries from the Nguyen lords to the Nguyen kings, Vietnam uninterruptedly exploited the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, islands in the south like Con Lon (Poulo Condor) and some others in the Gulf of Siam.

— This exploitation, like the levying of taxes and sea patrols, was organized and led by the state.

The workgangs exploited these islands for five to six months each year without any other country's opposition. How could that be done if Hoang Sa and Truong Sa had not been recognized as Vietnamese territory? With regard to China, the following official letter from the Chinese mandarin head of the district of Wenchang, Qiongzhou (Hainan Island), addressed to the authorities of Thuan Hoa (Vietnam) constitutes a significant testimony:

"In the 18th year of the Qianlong reign (1753) ten soldiers native of An Binh commune taking part in a seafood collecting team of Chuong Nghia District, Province of Quang Ngai, Vietnam, arrived one day in the 7th month at Wanlichangsha to gather sea products. Eight of them landed and the two others stood guard on the junk. A gust of wind having broken the rope, the two were carried by the current as far as Qiaglan Port (China). The local authorities, after checking on the facts, had the two men taken back to their homeland. The Vietnamese Lord Nguyen Phuc Chu ordered the earl of Thuc Luong, mandarin head of Thuan Hoa Province, to send a message of thanks to the mandarin head of district of Wenchang". (after Le Quy Don in Phu Bien Tap Luc)

This anecdote clearly shows that the Chinese authorities in Hainan were not opposed in any way to the exploitation by the Hoang Sa workgang of the Nguyen lords on the Hoang Sa Archipelago, which they called Wanlichangsha. Thus, before the Vietnamese state established its authority on the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, these islands had not come under the sovereignty of any other country. Subsequently, this Vietnamese sovereignty was exercised through the organization and exploitation of those archipelagoes without opposition from any other country.

Uninterrupted Sovereignty

After his accession to the throne, Emperor Gia Long decided to build Vietnam into a powerful country. He gave special attention to agriculture, strengthened the dykes, carried out reforms in the fiscal system, in the literacy contests to choose mandarins, in the judiciary field, and built ramparts and citadels.

Meanwhile, during the first three decades of the 19th century the capitalist countries -- Great Britain, France, Holland, the United States — vied with one another to subjugate Asian countries from India, Indonesia, Malaysia to the countries in eastern Asia and Oceania. Therefore, Gia Long had to increase sea patrols and seek every possible means to strengthen Vietnam's sovereignty over the islands which already belonged to it.

In his "Memoirs of Cochinchina", which were published in the French BULLETIN DES AMIS VIEUX HUE (1923, Vol 2, p. 257), Jean Baptiste Chaigneau wrote: "Cochinchina, of which the sovereign has now assumed the title of emperor, comprises Cochinchina proper, Tonkin, some inhabited islands not far from the coast and the Paracel Archipelago composed of islands, reefs and uninhabited rocks. Not until 1816 did the emperor take possession of this archipelago."

Again in 1937 Jean Louis Taberd, apostolic vicar of Cochinchina, wrote:

"Although this kind of archipelago presents nothing but rocks and great depths which promises more inconveniences than advantages, the King Gia Long thought he had increased his dominions by this sorry addition. In 1816 he went with solemnity to plant his flag and take formal possession of these rocks, which it is not likely anybody will dispute with him" (note on the geography of Cochinchina by the Right Rev Jean Louis, bishop of Isauropholis, vic, apost [as received] of Cochinchina).

In his book "The Universe, the History and Description of All the Peoples, Their Religious, Habits and Customs" published in 1850, Dubois de Jancigny noted that during the last 34 years the Paracel Archipelago called by the Annamites "Cat Vang" or Hoang Sa "Yellow Sand," a real labyrinth of small islets, rocks and sand banks rightly dreaded by navigators, has been under Cochinchinese occupation.

"It is not known whether they have founded there an administration but Emperor Gia Long made it a point to add this laurel to his crown because he actually went there to personally take it into possession, and in 1816 he personally planted the Cochinchinese flag there."

While the Hoang Sa and Bac Hai workgangs continued their work the Nguyen kings took a series of measures to demonstrate and exercise Vietnamese sovereignty on the archipelagoes. In the 14th year of the Minh Mang reign (1833) a royal order to the Ministry of Public works said: "Seen from a distance, the Hoang Sa Archipelago, which lies in the waters of Quang Ngai, seems to be lost between sky and sea. Nobody knows how deep the water there is. Of late commercial junks sailing in the neighbourhood have been frequently attacked. So, prepare boats. Next year you will send your men there to build a temple and erect a stele and plant trees" (Dai Nam Thuc Luc Chinh Bien -- Truthful Accounts About Dai Nam -- Vol 2).

Other works such as Kham Dinh Dai Nam Hoi Dien Su Le (Codes and Rules of Dai Nam), and the Dai Nam Nhat Thong Chi (monograph of Unified Dai Nam) or the Quoc Trieu Chinh Bien Toat Yeu (Summary of the Annals of the Nguyen Dynasty) also report that the Nguyen kings had a stele set up their to symbolize Vietnamese sovereignty. Others give the following details on the temple and the stele:

"...In the 16th year of the Minh Mang reign (1835) a request was addressed to the king for the building, on the southwestern part of Bach Sa Island, of the Hoang Sa temple (made of stone according to a rule in force). A stone stele was erected on the left to the temple (1 thuoc 5 tac tall, 1 thuoc 2 tac wide). In front of the temple a stone wall was erected, and on either side and behind the temple trees of different kinds were planted."

Besides, the Nguyen kings ordered the drawing up of maps, surveys of the topography of these places and measurement of the different routes leading there.

"In the first month of the year at Hoa (1815) the king ordered Pham Quang Anh of the Hoang Sa workgang to study and measure the sea routes to the island" (Dai Nam Thuc Luc Chinh Bein, Vol 1).

In 1836 King Minh Mang gave still more detailed orders on this question in reply to the following request of the ministry of public works: "The Hoang Sa Archipelago, which lies in our territorial waters, is very rugged. The previous dynasties have ordered a map of it to be drawn up but due to its wide area and its remoteness, the work has been only partially completed. What is more, we did not know how to tackle it. Each year men were sent there to survey the place and measure the routes of navigation. From this year onward, toward the end of the first month, we shall send sailors chosen from among the Bien Binh and Giam Thanh who will sail to Quang Ngai and arrive there early in the second months on board a junk. There they will ask the authorities of the Quang Ngai and Binh Dinh Provinces to hire four junks from the local population who will guide them to the Hoang Sa.

On the island or beach where they land, they will have to measure the length, width, height, area perimeter and sound the surrounding sea to find out its depth, mark the sand banks, the reefs, the submarine topography and record all of them on the map. Besides, they will have to record the date and port of departure, the direction taken, the itinerary and evaluate the distance. They will also have to locate the place of disembarkation in relation to the coast, and determine by eye in what province and district it is situated and at how many nautical miles from the coast. All that must be reported in detail to the court.

"The king agreed and ordered Pham Huu Nhat to lead a naval unit with the mission of carrying ten wooden panels to be planted as landmarks, each panel is 5 thuoc long, 0.5 thuoc large and 0.1 thuoc thick and carries this inscription: in the year 17 of the Minh Mang reign, i.e, the year Binh Than (1836), by the king's order, Pham Huu Nhat, officer commanding a naval unit, came to inspect the Hoang Sa Arhipelago and planted this landmark as a testimony." (Dai Nam Thuc Luc Chinh Bien, Vol 2)

The above event is also recorded in the Quoc Trieu Chinh Bien Toat Yeu (Summary of the Annals of the Nguyen Dynasty) compiled by the National History Institute.

The nguyen kings also instituted taxes to be levied on foreign ships. In a study on Vietnam under the nguyen kings when referring to Hoang Sa, Gutzlaff wrote: "The Annam government, perceiving the advantages which it might derive if a toll were raised, keeps revenue cutters and a small garrison on the spot to collect the duty on all visitors and to ensure protection to its own fishermen." (Geography of the Cochinchinese Empire in Journal of the Georgraphical Society of London, 1849, Vol 19, p.93)

While exercising Vietnamese sovereignty on these archipelagoes, the nguyen kings, however, did not overlook certain obligations in the framework of international law at the time. The Hoang Sa and Truong Sa, owing to their geographic position, their formation and topography, constitute a danger for the ships sailing nearby which risk running aground or being wrecked against some coral reef. Therefore, in 1833 after instructing the Ministry of Public Works to erect a temple and a stele there, King Minh Mang insisted that "it is necessary to plant trees there which when fully grown would constitute points of reference for the navigators and help them to avoid the risk of running aground." (Dai Nam Thuc Luc Chinh Bien, Vol 2).

Is this not proof of the sense of responsibility of a state conscious of its obligations toward vessels sailing in its territorial waters?

Since then all Vietnamese soldiers going to these archipelagoes would take along in their travelling bags seeds which they would sow around the temple in hopes that they would grow into trees that would constitute markers easily recognizable by navigators. (Viet Su Cuong Giam Khao Luoc — Glimpse of the History of the Viet Country by Nguyen Thong) It is worth remembering that the Hoang Sa Islands, which are formed from sun-baked and wind-swept coral reefs and subject to rain storms for many months of the year, are not a hospitable land for the growth of trees.

In a review on the Hoang Sa Archipelago published in 1974, Son Hong Duc, professor of geography at Saigon University, noted that on some islands (Huu Nhat or Robert Island) in the archipelago one can still find large rotten stumps of trees. As for the trees that are still growing there, they belong to the same families as those on the Vietnamese littoral. Many islands are covered with a lush vegetation well deserving the names given them by the navigators Phu Lam (Woody Island), Dao Cay (Tree Island). Some of these trees were certainly planted by men, others came from seeds carried there by the currents or birds.

Among the documents produced by the Chinese Foreign Ministry, apart from some maps drawn up under the Qing (which it only mentioned but did not produce) there are only semi-official texts and a few regional monographs. On the contrary, Vietnam produced official documents written by state organs or by their order.

— Dai Nam Thuc Luc Tien Bien and Dai Thuc Luc Chinh Bien, which are annals of the Nguyen Dynasty compiled by the National History Institute from the 2nd year of the reign of Minh Mang (1821).

— Dai Nam Nhat Thong Chi, a geography of Vietnam compiled from 1865 to 1882 by order of King Tu Duc but not published. It was corrected under the reign of Thanh Thai by the National History Institute. By 1910 only the first part dealing with the 17 central provinces had been completed.

— Quoc Trieu Chinh Bien Toat Yeu, a summary of the annals of the Nguyen Dynasty compiled by the National History Institute from 1909.

— Kham Dinh Dai Nam Hoi Dien Su Le, (codes and rules of Dai Nam) written by order of the king in 1843 (under the reign of Thieu Tri) and in 1851 (under the reign of Tuc Duc) recording all the works accomplished by the six ministries. It was followed by a second volume, entitled Kham Dinh Dai Nam Hoi Dien Su Le Tuc Bien.

Some other works were written by high dignitaries of the court, such as Phu Bien Tap Luc by Le Qui Don, Lich Trieu Hien Chuong Loai Chi (of which one volume, Du Dia Chi, is devoted to geography) by Phan Huy Chu, Viet Su Cuong Giam Khao Luco by Nguyen Thong, etc.

All those documents, spanning over more than a century, prove that prior to French colonialisation, Vietnam was already the first state to discover and occupy the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes and had exercised its sovereignty for more than three centuries without interruption on behalf of Vietnam.

Toward the middle of the 19th century (1868-1884) the history of Vietnam reached a turning point as a result of the domination by French [word indistinct] under two slightly different forms: colonisation of the Nam Ky (Cochinchina) and protectorate of the Trung Ky (Annam) and the Bac Ky (Tonkin). From then, France did, to all intents and purposes, represent Vietnam in international relations to defend Vietnamese archipelagoes as well as the whole of the territory of the country.

Once installed in Vietnam, France could not but take into account the traditional relations between this country and its neighbours, Laos and Cambodia, and the fact that they formed, together with Vietnam, the same entity: French Indochina. Up till then the Nguyen kings had always maintained good relations with the Qing while zealously defending the national independence according to the flexible strategy which consisted in continuing to recognize China's nominal suzerainty. France signed with the Qing a series of conventions, some concerning Sino-French relations, others concerning questions relating to China and Vietnam. It is worth mentioning the convention of 1884, which put an end to the so-called suzerainty of China over Vietnam and the conventions of 1887 and 1895 on the delimitation of the Sino-Vietnamese frontier.

In the first days of their rule, while patriotic movements against the invaders broke out from north to south, in which even some Nguyen kings took part (such as Ham Nghi, Thanh Thai and Duy Tan), the French sought, first of all, to quickly stabilize the situation, consolidate their administration and appease the population as a prerequisite for their economic exploitation of the country. At that time, Vietnam's neighbors were themselves subject to imperialist invasions. China, in particular, where the Qing court was rotten to the core, became the target of Japanese and Western ambitions. The Sino-British accords (Nanking -- 1842); Sino-American (Wanxia -- 1844); Sino-French (Huangpu -- 1844); Sino-British (Yantai -- 1876): and Sino-Japanese (Shimonoseki -- 1895) opened wide the door of China to foreign penetration.

In the meantime, from inside China was shaken by widespread mass uprisings in Yunnan and in the north-west.... Under such circumstances, the colonial authorities in Indochina did not see the need to take urgent measures concerning the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes. All that they did was to send gunboats to patrol the area. In 1899, the governor general of Indochina, Paul Doumer, proposed setting up a lighthouse on the Hoang Sa Island (Pattle Island) to stress Vietnamese sovereignty on the archipelago and also to help navigation in its neighbourhood. However, this project was not realised until 1938.

After World War I (1914-1918), France increased its investments in Indochina considerably, first of all in Vietnam, in order both to exploit raw materials and turn it into an outlet for the goods of the metropolis. In the framework of this policy, greater attention was accorded to the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes in view of their riches and strategic position.

From 1920, boats of the Indochinese customs office increased their patrols in the area of Hoang Sa to intercept contraband ships, the Chinese authorities in Guandong Province having revealed their dark intentions toward the archipelago. Than Trong Hue, the then war minister of the Hue court, published the declaration of March 3, 1925 affirming the unquestionable sovereignty of Vietnam over this archipelago.

At about the same time, a French delegation led by A. Krempf sailed on board the De Lanessan to Hoang Sa to inquire into the situation. In 1927, the same team went to the Truong Sa.

In the early 30's, in the face of the Chinese covetous designs on the immense guano reserves of the Hoang Sa Archipelago, there erupted within the colonial authorities in Indochina heated debates on how to defend Vietnamese sovereignty over this archipelago. Some, including the governor general, Pierre Rasquier, argued that conditions had not been ripe for a direct discussion over the matter with the Chinese. Numerous reasons were given, but the most important one which has never been explicitly acknowledged is that the political situation in Indochina had in fact reached an important turning point with the birth of the Indochinese Communist Party and the outbreak of the "Nghe Tinh Soviet uprising."

Most of the French in Indochina did not approve of this reticence and openly made their point of view known. These included, among others, the MMP.s. De Monzie and Bergeon, the engineer Paul Maurice Clerget, the industrialist Lapicque, the army commander Sauvarie-Jourdan, the journalists Gustave Sale, Alexis Elie Lacombe, Olivier A. Saix, and especially Henri Cucherousset, editor-in-chief of the EVEIL ECONOMIQUE DE L'INDOCHINE. The second tendency eventually got the upper hand, as shown by the intensified activity of the colonial authorities in these archipelagoes.

On the Hoang Sa:

— In 1928 the Tonkin new society of phosphates began to exploit guano there;

— In 1937 Guatmier, a civil engineer, went in person to the archipelago to find a convenient place for the construction of a lighthouse on the island and another one on the sea to facilitate the coming and going of hydroplanes. He also studied conditions for an eventual population of the archipelago;

— In 1938 the colonial authorities erected a stele to formalize Vietnamese sovereignty over the archipelago and set up a lighthouse, a meteorological station bearing the international index 48860 and a radio station;

— On March 30, 1938 the Vietnamese King Bao Dai signed the Ordinance No 10 placing the archipelago under the jurisdiction of the provincial authorities of Thua Thien (central Vietnam);

— June 15, 1938 the governor general of Indochina signed Decree No 156/SC making the Hoang Sa Archipelago an administrative unit belonging to Thua Thien Province; — On May 5, 1939 the governor general of Indochina signed decree No 3283 modifying that of June 15, 1938 and dividing the archipelago into two administrative units: the crescent delegation and the amphitrite delegation and dependencies, whose administrative seats were respectively Hoang Sa Island (Pattle) and the Woody Island (Phu Lam).

On the Turong Sa:

— On December 22, 1929 the governor general of Indochina instructed the governor of Cochinchina by telegram to send the French Navy ship La Malicieuse to Truong Sa to occupy this archipelago. In 1933 other ships — Alerte, Astrolable, De Lanessan — went there one after another to plant the French flag on other islands of Truong Sa. A communique published in the official journal of the French Republic dated July 26, 1933 said that the occupation of the islands in the archipelago had taken place in the following order: the island of Truong Sa (Spratly) on April 13, 1930; An Bang (Amboyna Cay) on April 7, 1933; Ba Binh (Itu Aba) on April 11, 1933; and Thi Tu Island on April 12, 1933. Not only the big islands, but also all the small surrounding islands, were occupied.

On December 21, 1933, the governor of Cochinchina, J. Krautheimer, signed a decree integrating the aformentioned islands of Truong Sa (Spratly) An Bang (Amboyna Cay) Ba Binh (Itu Aba), Song Tu, Loaita, Thi Tu and the small surrounding islands into the province of Ba Ria.

After launching the Pacific war, Japan, ignoring the Frerch authorities' protest, seized Hoang Sa Islands in 1938 beginning with Phu Lam (Woody Island), the occupied Truong Sa in 1939. Following its defeat before the allies, Japan committed itself at the San Francisco Conference in 1951 to "renounce all its rights, titles and claims on the Spratly Lands and the Paracels Islands" (Articles 2 of the San Francisco accords). It was at this conference that the prime minister of the Dao Dai government, Tran Van Huu, made a declaration affirming Vietnam's sovereignty on these archipelagoes without any country present raising any protest whatsoever.

In the meantime, in May 1916, the French had sent the cruiser Savorgnan de Brazza to re-occupy the Hoang Sa Archipelago. On January 13, 1947 they sent a note of protest to the Jiang Jieshi (Chiang Kai-shek) government, which had illegally occupied many islands in the archipelago. This note reaffirmed once again Vietnamese sovereignty over the whole of the archipelago. At the same time, the French sent to Hoang Sa (Pattle) Island the cruiser Le Tonkinois, which landed a platoon to be stationed there. Immediately afterward, the French began the reconstruction of the meteorological station on the island. In 1950 Jiang Jeishi troops withdrew from the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Islands. The French returned the Hoang Sa to the Bao Dai government represented by the governor of Trung Phan (Central Vietnam).

The fifties were marked by two series of important events:

— The occupation by Beijing troops of the Phu Lam (Woody Island), then other islands of the eastern group of Hoang Sa Archipelago, the occupation by Taiwanese troops of Ba Binh Island (Itu Aba) in the Truong Sa Archipelago. These were blatant acts of aggression because Chinese troops — whether from Beijing or Taiwan — attacked a sovereign territory.

— In 1956, as France moved out of Indochina, its troops left Hoang Sa. The Saigon government immediately replaced the French and planted landmarks on the islands of Triong Sa (Spratly), Thi Lu, Loaita, An Bang (Amboyna Cay) and the Song Tu group of island.

In 1956 the Saigon administration integrated the Truong Sa Archipelago into the province of Phuoc Tuy and established on the Hoang Sa Archipelago the Dinh Hai commune belonging to the distric of Hoa Vang Quang Nam Province. Between 1950 and 1975, the Saigon administration and the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam many times protested against the infringement on the Vietnamese sovereignty over these two archipelagoes by other countries.

-- In protest against the Philippines, which claimed ownership of several islands on the Truong Sa Archipelago, and against Malaysia, which claimed that the islands and the sand banks on the Truong Sa Archipelago belonged to them, the Saigon administration many times proclaimed Vietnam's sovereignty over this archipelago.

-- At the Caracas conference on the sea the Saigon administration proclaimed Vietnam's sovereignty on the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes.

-- In February 1959, the Saigon administration arrested a group of fishermen of the People's Republic of China who had intruded into the islands of Huu Nhat (Robert), Duy Mong (Drumond) and Quang Hoa (Duncan) in the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

-- On January 20, 1974, when Chinese troops invaded the Hoang Sa Archipalago, the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam made public its views on the issue.

-- On January 20, 1974, a message of the Foreign Ministry of the Saigon government to the president of the U.S. Security Council urged that a meeting be convened urgently to discuss the acts of aggression of the People's Republic of China against the Hoang Sa Archipalago.

-- On May 6, 1975, a communique of the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam announced that the liberation armed forces of South Vietnam had liberated six islands on the Truong Sa Archipelago (others were liberated later).

-- On September 18, 1975, a meteorological team of the Republic of South Vietnam published a statement asking the world meteorological organisaion to continue recognizing the meteorogical station No 48860 of Vietnam. The statement also reaffirmed Vietnam's sovereignty over the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

-- On June 5, 1976 the spokesman of the Foreign Ministry of the Republic of South Vietnam affirmed Vietnam's sovereignty over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes.

Since 1976, through diplomatic notes and declarations, as well as during the bilateral talks and international conferences, Vietnam has unceasingly protested against the continued occupation of the Hoang Sa Archipelago by Chinese troops and affirmed its sovereignty over this archipelago, as well as the Truong Sa Archipelago.

The Only Valid Conclusion

On the question of the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, many other historical documents may be adduced and other juridical aspects of the problem may be examined. However, a scrutiny of the documents and facts produced so far by the Vietnamese and Chinese sides already allow us to arrive at a conclusion. Two essential factors are to be taken into account: the real occupation and effective exercise of sovereignty on the territory under dispute.

In internatonal law, the occupation of a territory is valid only when this territory has not yet been under the sovereignty of another country and when the occupying state has been exercising its sovereignty on this territory effectively and uninterruptedly.

In its white book published on January 30, 1980 the Chinese Foreign Ministry produced a number of proofs intending to demonstrate that the Chinese people have long "discovered" the Xisha and Nansha Archipelagoes. Whatever amount of truth there may be in these affirmations, this "discovery" will not give the Chinese authorities any priority over other peoples who themselves had discovered the said archipelagoes a long time ago. With regard to the exploitation of these archipelagoes, the Chinese side used rather vague terms such as "exploit" and "look after productive activities." Then, after claiming that China has found there many objects in ceramics, porcelain, knives, iron pots and other household utensils, they concluded: "Chinese began to settle on and conduct productive [as received] such as fishing, on the Xisha and Nansha Archiplelagoes in the epoch of the Tang or Song at the latest." Even if all that was true, these could be seen only as private undertakings. And if all these productive activities consisted only of fishing, this has nothing special, because fishermen of different nationalities had long operated in this particularly abundant zone. On the contrary, the Chinese white book could not produce any answer, however elusive, to the question as to whether or not the Chinese state generally occupied — and since when — the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes and whether it has ever exercised in an effective and uninterrupted way its sovereignty there. What is more, nowhere has it affirmed that China has actually appropriated these islands. As for the facts happening after the Qing period (from the 18th century) invoked to demonstrate that China has "administered" these archipelagoes, they dated back to the time when these archipelagoes had already become a sovereign territory because they already belonged to Vietnam. The least that can be said of these acts is that they were illegal because they infringed upon the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Vietnam.

Meanwhile, things are very clear from the Vietnamese side:

-- The Vietnamese people have long since discovered the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, which have become a traditional sector of activity for Vietnamese fishermen. These archipelagoes are nearer to Vietnam than to China and, moreover, linked to our country by long-standing historic ties.

-- From the times of the Nguyen lords (18th century) at the latest, the Vietnamese state already began occupying these islands when they had not previously belonged to any other country and exploiting them without interruption, founding Hoang Sa and Bac Hai workgangs, which stayed there from five to six months a year to carry out fishing, recuperate things jetisoned by shipwrecks, and collect taxes, customs duties and undertake patrols organised by the state.

-- Since Gia Long, the Nguyen kings have taken measures to strengthen the sovereignty of the Vietnamese state such as erecting steles symbolizing Vietnam's sovereignty, and temples, digging wells on Hoang Sa Island (Pattle), sending naval units to draw up maps, measuring the sea routes, collecting taxes from foreign ships, planting trees to make the islands a point of reference for navigators, etc.

-- During the colonial period, France exercised its sovereignty over Hoang Sa and Truong Sa in the name of Vietnam, sending administrative teams there, building a lighthouse, a meteorological station, and exploiting local resources, especially guano.

-- After recovering independence, the Vietnamese Government have, when necessary, proclaimed their sovereignty over the archiplelagoes, strongly protested against all infringements on the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Vietnam, organised these two archipelagoes in the administrative, economic and military fields.

After studying all the arguments produced by the concerned parties, Professor Charles Rousseau, a well-known specialist in international law, has concluded: "In fact, the long historic ties and the geographic nearness have been the two major claims that Vietnam may invoke, which it did. The argument based on contiguity to the mainland is all powerful here. It is true that it might also be used by China at least with regard to the Paracels, but such a claim is valid only on condition that it is supported by a material effectiveness which Vietnam alone is capable of exercising or is better disposed than others to exercise".

Therefore, the only conclusion conforming to history and meeting the criteria of international law is the following:

The Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes belong to Vietnam and come under Vietnamese sovereignty. They constitute an integral part of the Vietnamese territory.

Though they claimed that "we will never seize any land belonging to another country", governments in Beijing have in fact invaded Hoang Sa Archipelago, which they continue to occupy. At the same time, Taipei invaded and occupied Ba Binh Island (Itu Aba) in the Truong Sa Archipelago. These are acts of aggression against the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Vietnam.

The Vietnamese people's struggle against the occupation of the Hoang Sa Archipelago by the reactionaries within the Beijing authorities, who also claim ownership of the Truong Sa Archipelago, is part of the struggle against the latter's expansionism and hegemonism. By seeking to control and if possible to occupy the Bien Dong Sea and Southeast Asia, they have revealed their expan-trying [as received] now to realize by every possible means these dreams long nurtured by the ancient Chinese emperors. The sending of 600,000-men invasion army equipped with considerable means of war against Vietnam, the installation of a so-called "Democratic Kampuchea" of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary clique, the unilateral delimitation of four danger zones on the approaches to Hoang Sa and Hainan in violation of international law concerning air traffic, the building of Hoang Sa into a military base in the Eastern Sea, the multiple acts of interference in the internal affairs of the countries in the area -- are not all these acts tangible proofs of their expansionist policy?

The struggle of the Vietnamese people may be long and arduous but will certainly be victorious because it is a just struggle supported by all the fraternal and friendly countries throughout the world at a time that the three revolutionary currents of our era are rising ever higher to attack the last refuges of imperialism.

Some may think that the struggle to recover and defend the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes is the affair of the Vietnamese alone. In fact, this struggle has a much wider implication. A look at the map suffices. What would become of the face of Southeast Asia if the Beijing expansionists succeed in seizing all these archipelagoes and controlling the Bien Dong Sea? Then how can it be said that this question concerns the Vietnamese alone and they alone have to bear the consequences?

May this denunciation of the acts of aggression and the ambitions of Beijing serve as an alarm signal for all the peoples in Southeast Asia. Doubtless, there are many areas where disagreement still remains among the latter. However, faced with the danger posed by Beijing expansionism, there is no other option but to unite to resist and to preserve their independence, freedom, peace, stability and prosperity. The days when imperialism and colonialism could dictate their will to the peoples in the region are long gone. Whatever its schemes -- armed aggression, economic, political and diplomatic manoeuvres, sabotage by Maoist groups -- Beijing cannot achieve its sinister ambition.

Third Article

OW060813 Hanoi VNA in English 0709 GMT 6 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 6 -- The following is the third article in a series of six concerning the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes published by the Hanoi monthly VIETNAM COURIER:

From Map War to Hot War

Early 1974 two years had passed since the signing by Zhou Enlai and Richard Nixon of the notorious Shanghai communique. One year later, Saigon was liberated. Under the terms of the 1973 Paris agreement then in force, Washington was committed to withdrawing its troops from Indochina. The resistance war waged since 1960 by the Vietnamese people against American aggression was entering its final phase. It had been a long and difficult revolutionary war, to which the Beijing authorities had pledged their full support in a spirit of proletarian internationalism. Indeed, had they not declared that they were Vietnam's staunchest rear base?

Yet Beijing chose this precise moment to attack the Hoang Sa Archipelago, a cluster of Vietnamese islands some 170 nautical miles from the port of Danang, and at that time garrisoned by the Saigon army. To begin with, the Chinese Navy sent a number of ships camouflaged as fishing boats into Hoang Sa waters, escorting a number of landing craft. At the same time several Chinese warships were deployed in the vicinity of the archipelago. The offensive was launched on January 19, and fighting raged the whole of the following day, with strong air support. The Saigonese defenders called for help, but in vain: A unit of the Seventh Fleet operating in the area ostensibly moved away. The attackers made 48 prisoners, including an American adviser, Gerald Kosch, who was treated with great courtesy and was soon handed over to the American authorities.

Following the liberation of Saigon, a highly significant document concerning the role of the United States in this affair was discovered in the archives of the Saigon Foreign Ministry. This was the telegram sent from Washington by Ambassador Tran Kim Phuong to Foreign Minister Vuong Van Bac on February 2, 1974, exactly two weeks after the event. In particular it stated that "Secretary of State Henry Kissinger looks upon the conflict on the subject of the Hoang Sa (Paracels) Islands as a marginal problem, even an inconvenience, within the framework of the joint efforts with Communist China to contain North Vietnam. (...) a spirit of compromise with Communist China prevails at present in both assemblies. They are ready to give us military assistance against North Vietnam but not Communist China".

Evidently, China had conquered a bridgehead into Vietnam with Washington's blessing. Both superpowers were determined to cement their new alliance at the expense of their respective allies. With ten years' hindsight, it can be said that the United States, before being forced out of that part of the world, covertly passed its powers as international gendarme to its potential successor, Beijing hegemonism.

Lying in Wait: The Underside of an Expansionist Strategy

The highly strategic position of the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes is due to the fact that they command not only the access routes to Vietnam but also all the major sea and air routes across the Bien Dong (Eastern Sea). The discovery of off-shore oilfields and large underwater mineral deposits off the coast of Vietnam has further underlined their importance.

Early in the 20th century, imperial China, then a semi-colony of the Western powers, had already laid claim to these islands. Twenty-five years after the signing with France of the Tianqin (Tien Tsin) Treaty in 1884, under which China renounced its nominal suzerain rights over Vietnam, the Qing court nevertheless mounted a lightning expedition upon Hoang Sa. This expedition was praised in the following terms by Shi Dizu in an article printed by GUANGMING RIBAO on November 24th, 1975, and on the following day by the PEOPLE'S DAILY.

"In April 1909 Admiral Li Zhun, assisted by Vice-Admirals Wu Jingyong and Liu Yike, led 170 men on gunboats Fubo and Chenhang in an expedition to Xisha (Hoang Sa), he landed on 15 islands, gave the archipelago the name of Loshi, planted the (Chinese)flag on Yongxing Island and fired a cannon salute, proclaiming to all both within and without the country that the islands of the Southern Sea are a part of China's sacred territory".

In this article, entitled "From Antiquity the Islands of the Southern Sea Have Been Part and Parcel of the Territory of Our Country", Shi Dizu claims nevertheless that China has exercised its sovereignty over Hoang Sa at least since the times of the Tang and the Song, over ten centuries ago. This would mean that Li Zhun's assertion of Chinese rights over the archipelago was superfluous. But it is not our wish to disentangle the contradictions, the unsupported affirmations, and the tendentious conclusions which abound in the typically Maoist works of Beijing's propagandists. Rather, let us try to find out how the contemporary press covered the incident.

Firstly, not one but two incursions were mentioned in its columns, both conducted by the Imperial Chinese Navy into Hoang Sa waters in April and June 1909. Shi Dizu no doubt refers to the June rather than the April expedition. According to the GUANGZHOU KOUO CHE PAO of June 20, 1909, later quoted by the French JOURNAL EXTREME-ASIE (Number 38, August 1929), two small gunboats under the command of Li Zhun had left this town for Yulin, a port in the south of Hainan, with two agents from a German firm on board and 10 Chinese crewmen. [as received] The expedition had to put in for two weeks at Yulin to wait for suitable weather before finally reaching Hoang Sa on June 6. After stopping off on a few islands, the Chinese flag was flown on one of them saluted by 21 salvoes. The expedition left on the following day, June 7. The Chinese side did not follow this up by any military or political action.

The event, far from taking on the grandiose and solemn proportions attributed to it by the GUANGMING RIBAO and the PEOPLE'S DAILY, was nonetheless a blatant violation of the territorial integrity of Vietnam, then administered as a French protectorate. The French colonial administration later explained its non-reaction to this provocation as being most opportune at the time, the treaty of Beijing of 1898 having kept to the status quo concerning the islands in the South China Sea.

Without going into the controversy which followed in the Indochinese press, let us simply note the aggressive policy of expansion followed by the Qing court right up to its demise in 1911, a policy later Chinese governments were to perpetuate. Under the Kuomingtang, China, then also in bondage, dismembered and humiliated, did not for all that shed its territorial claims over Vietnam. In December 1946, taking advantage of the fighting between Vietnam and France, Chinese troops partially occupied Hoang Sa and Truong Sa, neither side being in a position to intervene, but it was under Mao Zedong that China revealed its most cynical hand in playing for its expansionist aims.

Maoist China, much more powerful and cunning then earlier regimes, at first tried a double game. This was to create for itself, through excessive declarations and spectacular gestures, and ultrarevolutionary aura, as an intransigent anti-imperialist and defender of world peace, while developing its strength and lying in wait for the most favorable moment to act. 'Lying in wait' (changou maifu in Chinese) was always one of the Maoists' main strategies of subversion and aggression, along with their equally typical opportunism and hypocrisy in standing on "the mountain watching the tigers fight" (zo shan guan hu dou), both were used against Vietnam.

In 1954 Beijing published, as an annex to its "Historical Sketch of Contemporary China", a map of China including territories "annexed by the imperialists": Vietnam, Laos, Kampuchea, Thailand, Burma, Malaysia, Nepal, Sikkim, Bhutan, parts of India, the People's Republic of Mongolia, Korea, Japan's Ryukyu Archipelago, parts of Oriental Siberia and of the Soviet Republics of Kazakhstan, and Tadzhikistan and the Kirghiz Soviet Republic . At the time nobody imagined this was the beginning of a "map war" later to be used to justify territorial claims.

It did strike some as being rather strange, but rather than seeing it as a conscious move by the Chinese authorities, it was explained away in terms of the Chinese habit of overstatement, and even justified as a stand against the imperialists. Who indeed would have suspected the world's second socialist power of expansionist ambitions, initiator, together with India, of the five principles of peaceful coexistence, and one of the leading delegations to the Bandung Conference? But the world soon realized the duplicity of Maoist China when, claiming unilaterally declared sovereignty rights, it launched its troops against Burma in 1955, India in 1962 and the U.S.S.R. in 1969, before attempting to "teach Vietnam a lesson" ten years later in 1979.

The annexation of the Hoang Sa Archipelago was also preceded by a map war. The maritime borders drawn on the maps of the 1973 atlas of the People's Republic of China extend in Southeast Asia as far as the Malacca Straits and North Kalimantan. This was predictable given the 1958 declaration made public in Beijing on September 4 of that year which established the territorial waters of China as extending 12 nautical miles off-shore. In particular it was stated that "this stipulation applies to all territories of the People's Republic of China, including... the Dongsha". The insincerity of the Chinese position is now apparent in the international vagueness of this statement.

At that time, Washington had just scuppered the 1945 Geneva agreements which contained provisions for general elections to be held throughout Vietnam in 1956 with a view to reunifying the country. And the infamous dictator Ngo Dinh Diem, while conducting a one-sided war of repression against the southern population, was preparing to march on the North. Beijing could not have found a better occasion; after having forcibly occupied the eastern group of the Hoang Sa Islands in 1955, it now began to put pressure on the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, only just recovered from the anti-French resistance, and which had at all costs to avoid making enemies on several fronts. This explains the terse note sent on September 14, 1958, by Prime Minister Pham Van Dong to his counterpart Zhou Enlai, in which he confirmed that Vietnam respected China's territorial waters, without, however, making the slightest allusion to the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes and intentionally ignoring the Chinese names of Xisha and Nansha used in China's declaration.

But in 1959 Beijing pushed matters further, organising a landing on Hoang Sa, on the islands of the crescent group, by 82 Chinese fishermen, all of whom were captured by the Saigon troops stationed there. The Chinese response was to issue strongly-worded warnings to the Saigon administration, "puppets of the American paper tiger", but not making any further moves. The Saigon puppet regime had been consolidated, and China could no longer expect easy victories in conquering new territories as it had done in 1956.

The beast had to lie in wait for another fifteen years before springing on its prey, sure this time of American complicity. Saigon, in effect, had its hands tied. The Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam and the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, for their part, had to swallow the bitter pill: The final stage of the anti-American struggle was approaching, and the liberation of southern Vietnam had to take precedence over all other considerations.

Noisy, But Hardly Convincing

A boa, after swallowing its prey, hides away to digest it. Maoist China is not like a boa: After having grabbed the Hoang Sa Archipelago and haunted by its conscience, the Chinese leadership launched a noisy propaganda campaign claiming that the islands had always belonged to China. They harshly stated that over a thousand years ago, they had been populated by Chinese, apparently not aware of the fact that these islands are coral reefs and thus grow at a given rate, in given conditions. A thousand years ago the greater part of these islands were submerged reefs, only the largest of them standing out of the water. It is indeed plausible that the area could have been visited by Chinese fishermen as early as the Tang period, or by ancient explorers in the period of the Three Kingdoms, but to claim that they established themselves there is patently ridiculous: The only life these reefs could have supported was marine fauna.

Let us review this campaign which the Chinese mass media have waged since 1974 in an attempt to justify the annexation.

Immediately after the official announcement of the attack on Hoang Sa in the PEOPLE'S DAILY on January 20, 1974, the entire Chinese press took up the issue. The event was described as a "counterattack of a defensive character", the expression used five years later to explain the aggression against Vietnam along the entire length of its northern border. The PEOPLE'S DAILY of July 29, 1977, actually went so far as to list the attack on Hoang Sa as one of the most glorious feats of the Chinese People's Army, along with the intervention in Tibet, the Chinese volunteers part in the Korean War, the shelling of Quemoy Island in the Taiwan Straits, the counterattacks of a "defensive character" on the Sino-Indian and Sino-Soviet borders.

Chinese propaganda, while not ignoring the Truong Sa (Nansha) Islands, has been particularly active on "Xisha". The handing over to the International Red Cross of the "Saigonese aggressors" (?troops) there, the production activities of "their inhabitants", the setting up of various building sites there, the patrols of the navy and people's militia in the area: all these are occasions for avalanches of stories, photographs, articles and declarations to appear in the Chinese press. Some inhabitant of Xisha or some soldier stationed there, pours out his feelings of ecstasy about his home islands, deeply moved by the great solicitude of President Mao, then President Hua, and Vice-Presidents Ye and Deng, declaring his determination to defend to his death every inch of the sacred territory of his homeland. "I love Xisha, the corner of our homeland": "I love Xisha more than I love my house", "Xisha will remain forever part of Tiananmen": "President Mao's children in Xisha etc..."Such were the titles of articles in the Chinese press. They even managed to link the campaign for Chinese sovereignty over their islands to that criticising Lin Biao and Confucious, then Deng Xiaoping and the rightist deviationists, then Jiang Qing and the Gang of Four:

The Chinese propaganda machine has brought its entire panoply into action; not simply the press, but also the cinema, television, exhibitions, historical (?facts) and even pseudo-archaeological excavations. Several volumes of illustrated tales about Xisha have been published, in millions of copies, by the Beijing and Guandong people's publishing houses, including for instance, "Never Shall We Yield an Inch of our Land". Several films about the islands have been shown in the capital and the provinces: "Wind and Cloud Over the Southern Sea", "The Islands of the Southern Sea", "Exploring Xisha", ect. Not to mention "The Young Woman of Xisha" never finished because the initiative to make it was said to have come from the "Gang of Four". Contributing to the "People's Movement", the soldiers of the People's Liberation Army composed countless poems and songs about Xisha, some of which were recorded after being performed during art festival.

SUZUKI, SOVIET AMBASSADOR DISCUSS POLISH ISSUE

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 6 (KYODO) -- Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Wednesday joined Washington and Bonn in charging Soviet involvement in the Polish crisis and called for Russian restraint in dealing with the situation.

But Suzuki immediately met a rebuff from Soviet Ambassador to Tokyo Dmitriy Polyanskiy. "Those countries alleging Soviet responsibility (for the Polish situation) are in fact interfering in the internal affairs of Poland," Japanese officials quoted the Soviet envoy as saying.

Suzuki met the outgoing ambassador for about 50 minutes, during which the two exchanged views on the Polish situation and relations between Japan and the Soviet Union.

Suzuki, referring to the joint U.S.-West Germany joint comminique on Poland, said Japan shares the same view of the Polish situation as these two Western nations. The communique, issued Tuesday at the end of summit talks between President Ronald Reagan and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, mentioned "serious pressure" by the Soviet Union for a crackdown on the Polish independent labor union Solidarity.

Suzuki said: "The Polish people should be left alone -- without external interference, influence or pressure -- to resolve the trouble peacefully through mutual discussion." More countries of the world now believe, he went on to say, that the Soviet Union is responsible for the deteriorating situation in Poland, the Japanese officials said. "I hope the Soviet Union will deal with (the Polish crisis) with discretion and restraint," Suzuki added.

Polyanskiy said the current situation in Poland is a product of interference by the United States and its allies. He added: "The Soviet Union is convinced that Poland can settle the situation by itself."

SAKURAUCHI, USSR ENVOY ON POLAND, BILATERAL TIES

[Text] Tokyo, 7 Jan (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi reiterated to Soviet Ambassador Dmitriy Polyanskiy Thursday that Japan shares the American and Western European view that the Soviet Union is responsible for the present situation in Poland. He told the ambassador that Japan hoped the Soviet Union would exercise prudence and restraint in dealing with the Polish problem. Similar views were expressed by Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Wednesday when he met with Polyanskiy, who is leaving his post in Tokyo shortly.

Polyanskiy explained that both the Soviet Union and Poland made many sacrifices during World War II. He said his country could not remain unconcerned over the situation in Poland, but added the Polish people should settle the problems themselves. The ambassador claimed that the U.S. and many of its allies were intervening in the internal affairs of Poland.

On bilateral problems, Sakurauchi repeated Japan's stand that a peace treaty should be concluded after first settling the territorial problem. Polyanskiy, however, reiterated the Soviet stand that the territorial problem already has been solved and there was no room for a restudy of the matter. He added he did not believe this will become an obstacle to Japan-Soviet relations.

DECISION ON COOPERATION WITH POLAND 'RESERVED'

OW070604 Tokyo KYODO in English 0543 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, 7 Jan (KYODO) -- Japan told Poland Thursday that it will reserve decision on its future economic cooperation with Poland, pending developments in that country.

Inviting Stanislaw Skowron, Polish charge d'affaires in Tokyo, to the Foreign Ministry, Yoshiya Kato, head of the ministry's European and Oceanic Affairs Bureau, said, however, that Japan is prepared to extend economic assistance already committed to Poland.

Sources at the ministry said that the government has decided to make the notification to Poland in view of the fact that the United States and its European allies have "come close to a common understanding" on the developments in Poland.

The Kato-Skowron meeting followed Wednesday's talks between Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and Soviet Ambassador to Japan Dmitriy Polyanskiy, during which Suzuki said he was convinced of indirect Soviet involvement in the Polish affair. Kato also told Skowron that Japan hoped the Polish authorities would seek an early solution of the problem through talks with the church, the independent labor union Solidarity, and other groups and avoid intervention by an external force. Japan also hopes that the current restrictions on the movement of Japanese diplomats and other Japanese residents in Poland would be lifted as quickly as possible.

The ministry sources said that the Polish charge d'affaires promised that the Japanese wishes would be relayed to his government. Skowron was further quoted as saying that his country hopes to maintain cooperative relations with all countries and that it needs continued support from Japan.

PRECONDITIONS FOR SUZUKI U.S. VISIT CITED

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 3 (KYODO) -- The Foreign Ministry hopes that Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki will make an official visit to the United States early this year, possibly in May, to help calm the Americans' persistent criticism of Japan's defense efforts and trade friction between the two countries.

Despite Suzuki's recent statement that he has no intention at present to make a U.S. visit, Foreign Ministry leaders think it inevitable that the prime minister will visit Washington again for talks with President Ronald Reagan and other U.S. leaders to adjust Japan-U.S. relations.

The ministry will soon sound out the prime minister about a U.S. visit, observers said. The ministry also considers that Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi should visit Washington in March to pave the way for Suzuki's U.S. visit. Foreign Ministry officials, however, think that Japan must show a more positive posture for improving the Japan-U.S. relations before realizing the prime minister's visit to Washington.

Particularly cited by the ministry as preconditions for Suzuki's visit are the solution of three ticklish problems -- Japan-U.S. cooperation for exchange of military technologies, especially Japan's offer of sophisticated military technology to the U.S. Armed Forces; the lift of Japanese nontariff trade barriers; and how Japan will respond to South Korea's request for $6 billion in economic assistance from Japan for Seoul's 1982-1986 economic plan. The Foreign Ministry hopes these pending issues will be settled within March at the latest.

As for defense efforts, the government decided last week to increase defense spending by 7.75 percent for next fiscal 1982, beginning in April, despite almost zero-growth in other budget categories. U.S. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger highly rated the Japanese defense efforts in the budgetary task. Still, the Americans' pressure on Japan for more defense efforts will increase further, Foreign Ministry sources believe. Several legislation bills have been introduced in the U.S. Congress, calling for greater Japanese defense efforts. U.S. Congressional public hearings are expected to be held in February and March for discussions on Japan, the sources added.

The U.S. complaints about bilateral trade are mounting, with the Americans claiming that the U.S. trade deficit with Japan would amount to a new high of $18 billion in calendar 1981, the sources said. The government plans to work out a guideline within January for reducing nontariff barriers.

Regarding the South Korean aid request, the government is expected to take practical actions this month in a positive response to the Seoul government.

CONSENSUS ON TECHNOLOGY TO U.S. BEING PREPARED

OW020925 Tokyo KYODO in English 0821 GMT 2 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 2 (KYODO) -- Japan will "do its best" in providing its military technology to the United States as a special case from its policy banning the export of weapons, according to a government consensus being prepared by ministries. The preparation is being made by the Foreign Ministry, the Defense Agency and the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) following a request from the United States last summer for Japanese defense technology.

The bureaucratic preparatory work was called for before the government's final decision on the request in view of Japan's three-point policy of banning the export of weapons practically to all countries. The government is expected to make its final decision toward the middle of this month.

Through talks so far conducted by ranking officials of the three government offices, informed sources said the Foreign Ministry and the Defense Agency maintained that Japan should fully meet the U.S. request as an exceptional case to the policy. The MITI, because of its own trade policy and domestic measures, however, took a cautious stance about exporting Japan's military technology to the United States, the sources said. Though the MITI strongly objects to the Foreign Ministry's proposal to consider the technological cooperation with the United States for military purposes as a "case outside the policy" banning the export of weapons, it sees the need of "some special measures," the sources said. The sharply divided opinions so far expressed by the government offices will thus eventually be coordinated, the sources said.

According to the sources, the three government offices have so have arrived at a common understanding that:

-- Japan will do its best to promote the cooperation with the United States as long as such cooperation does not run counter to Japan's national interest.

-- Such cooperation will be dealt with as a special case of the three-point policy banning weapons exports.

The sources said the three offices have also agreed that the proposed cooperation will not be extended "mutual cooperation" as provided for under the Japan-U.S. security treaty. A reason for this agreement, the sources explained, is that Japan should consider it obligatory under the treaty to extend the technological cooperation for military purposes. Such interpretation of the treaty would cause unnecessary repecussions among the Japanese public, they said.

The three ministries and agency will discuss the U.S. request for another week before turning the matter to the Cabinet, the sources said.

NODONG SINMUN SCORES CURFEW LIFTING IN SOUTH

[NODONG SINMUN 7 January commentary: "Is It Curfew Lifting or Consolidation of Suppressive Measures?"]

[Text] According to reports, the curfew was lifted on 5 January in certain parts of South Korea. In a noisy propaganda campaign in which government-patronized mass media are being mobilized, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is babbling about the lifting of curfew as if it were a goodwill gesture. The clique's babbling reminds us that an empty cart makes more noise.

Due to the curfew lifting, an action taken under the pretext that it would alleviate inconveniences for the people, the situation in South Korea has deteriorated, not improved. Touting security measures needed to ensure public order in connection with the curfew lifting, the Chon Tu-hwan clique has reinforced its repressive personnel, including 16,000 puppet policemen, set up 300 night guardposts to augment existing ones, increased supplies of repressive equipment, including police cars, and placed the police on alert. The clique has also intensified security measures for puppet organizations and started a 24-hour patrol in residential areas. Since the curfew was lifted, puppet policemen have taken to the streets, lined up at 300-meter intervals, and harassed pedestrians by checking their identification cards.

Though billed as a lifting of curfew, the repressive dragnet that used to be drawn during the night has been bolstered. In addition, newly-reinforced repressive forces are deployed to harass the people. Accordingly, the people are more shackled with the lifting of the curfew. Lifting the curfew was merely a tool to strengthen the repressive dragnet. Moreover, the curfew lifting was not put into effect throughout South Korea. According to reports, 283-ups [townships] and -myons, [towns] including those on 58 islands, in 51 counties were excluded from the curfew lifting on the grounds that they are either vulnerable areas or frontline or coastal areas. That many areas along the military demarcation line and the coasts were excluded from the curfew lifting is a measure to incite hostility and confrontation.

The lifting of curfew is a tactic to win the favor of the people and a political fraud to justify police reinforcement and incite North-South confrontation. With the fraudulent curfew lifting, the fascist military clique -- which is in a crisis, isolated from and rejected by people at home and abroad -- is misleading public opinion to find a solution by bolstering the fascist puppet rule.

The South Korean people will not be deceived by the fraudulent curfew lifting. So long as the fascist military rule continues in South Korea it will make no difference whether the curfew is lifted or not. The South Korean people's democratic rights and freedoms, including the freedom of movement, can be achieved only when the fascist Chon Tu-hwan military dictatorship is eliminated and a democratic regime representing the will of the people is established and social and political life is democraticized. The South Korean people are fighting for this purpose.

NODONG SINMUN HITS CHON'S VISIT TO FRONT

SK050442 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0359 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 5 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today comments on the ill-boding fact that Chon Tu-hwan the puppet, inspecting the position construction in the western sector of the front on January 3, cried for stepping up war preparations to deal a "blow" at someone and, earlier, the puppet minister of defence visited a marine unit in Paengnyong Island and croaked about crushing the "enemy at the initial stage of a war to win victory," whipping up a war fever from the outset of the new year.

The author of the commentary notes that the war agitation of the traitors at puppet army units is a prelude telling that they will go farther along the road of adventure against the northern half of the DPRK and intensify military provocations. The commentary says:

This is proved further by the fact that the puppets decided to stage large-scale military rehearsal "Team Spirit-82" and naval exercise "Rimpac-82" together with the U.S. imperialist aggression forces from February.

The traitors' war preparations are a crime going against the desire of the nation for peaceful reunification.

By stepping up war preparations against fellow countrymen, the traitors try to incite confrontation, coil up tension, throw a wet blanket over the rising movement for national reunification and threaten the South Korean people, who have risen up in the struggle against fascism and for democracy. What is this if not a treacherous act aimed to find a way out in the permanent division of the country and in a new military gamble? Their so called "argument for reunification in the 2000's" means that they have no intention to reunify the country but will start a new military adventure against our republic in league with the U.S. imperialists.

Intolerable are the machinations of the Chon Tu-hwan clique to heighten tension and keep following the road of war adventure from the outset of the year at a time when tension should be relaxed for the country's peace and peaceful reunification.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique must not go against the rising tide of the nation toward reunification but step down from "power" without delay.

INTERNATIONAL SUPPORT FOR REUNIFICATION NOTED

SK010457 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1505 GMT 31 Dec 81

[Text] Pyongyang, December 31 (KCNA) -- Meetings of solidarity supporting Korea's reunification have been brisk on a world-wide scale this year.

Broad segments of people throughout the world took various measures, holding meetings, demonstrations, signature campaigns and issuing talks and statements in support of the new proposal for the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Korea advanced by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, stressing that it is a most reasonable and fair reunification proposal.

From the outset of this year, the international solidarity movement supporting the reunification of Korea has been waged vigorously in various forms and ways in all parts of the world.

Meetings and seminars supporting our people's cause of national reunification and inaugural meetings of committees for supporting Korea's reunification were held in all regions and many countries of the world and at international organisations, political parties and public organisations, solidarity statements of political and public figures and men of the press issued and numerous resolutions, congratulatory messages and letters adopted.

A large number of newspapers, news agencies and radios and other mass media of the world devoted much space and programmes to supporting the reunification of Korea. On the occasion of the Month of Anti-U.S. Joint Struggle (June 25-July 27) this year, solidarity functions were organised and a great number of messages and letters of greetings and solidarity came to our country from various countries of the world. The head of state of Mali and other delegates of over 60 countries made speeches in support of the reunification of Korea at the 36th Session of the U.N. General Assembly. In this way the solidarity movement supporting our people's cause of national reunification has been expanded as never before.

The voices supporting the new proposal for national reunification of our people have been lifted up this year, resulting in an international signature campaign. As of the end of November, more than 1,100 million people of various strata in over 100 countries and many international organisations participated in the international signature campaign supporting the proposal for establishing the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and the ten-point policy of the unified state which started in mid-March.

This year the movement of solidarity with our people's cause of national reunification has developed in depth into a more organized one on a world-wide scale. The world conference for the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea was held on a grand scale in the capital of Algeria in March. And solidarity meetings, gatherings and on-street propaganda supporting our people's cause of national reunification were held and committees for supporting Korea's reunification formed in different regions and countries of the world.

Hundreds of these committees have been strengthened to be powerful political organisations with well-formed affiliated organisations and are active in support of our people's cause of national reunification. Broad sections of the world people and world public, as part of the solidarity movement supporting our people's cause of national reunification, lifted up their voices demanding an early end to the U.S. imperialist's occupation of South Korea and the fascist dictatorship of the Chon Tu-hwan clique and actively supporting the struggle of the South Korean people to realise the democratization of South Korean society and the reunification of the country.

All this shows that the struggle of our people for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country, a just struggle reflecting the demand of the times, enjoys the unqualified support of the world people, whereas the domestic and foreign splittists persisting in the "two Koreas" plot are hit hard by and isolated further from the people.

The solidarity movement supporting the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea will develop on a wider scale and the just cause of our people is sure to be realized.

NODONG SINMUN ON 1982 ECONOMIC, POLITICAL TASKS

SK042350 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2240 GMT 3 Jan 82

[NODONG SINMUN 4 January editorial: "Let Us Vigorously Push Ahead With the Initial Battles of the New Year in All Sectors and Units"]

[Text] The country is seething with endless delight and revolutionary passion at the New Year's address of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The New Year's address by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a militant program to achieve a new upsurge in the all-out march to implement the decisions of the Sixth KWP Congress. One of the important problems in achieving this rewarding program is that all party members and workers should advance the initial battles of the new year with an energetic fighting spirit.

If we want to achieve success in anything, we should make a good start. Only when we make a good start and achieve many successes can we be convinced of accomplishing any assigned tasks and be overwhelmed with more ambition and passion in carrying out the work. Although we face an unprecedentedly vast political task this year, we can achieve success if we prepare for the initial battles of the new year from the start and aggressively push ahead with them.

This year is truly meaningful, marking the 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The history of the revolutionary activities of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a glorious and brilliant one in which he has led the van, breaking through the severe storms of revolution, and devoted himself to the fatherland and the people throughout his life.

Because the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taken the lead, our people can display pride in being august masters of today's powerful and dignified socialist sovereign state. Without the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, we could not imagine any of the honor and happiness of our people.

As far as our people are concerned, there is no work more rewarding than glorifying with proud victories this meaningful year marking the 70th birthday of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The loyalty of our party members and workers should be exhibited to the fullest extent, correctly carrying out this year's initial battles. Only when one brilliantly accomplishes the assigned tasks, beginning with the initial battles of new year, with lofty loyalty and revolutionary passion, can he achieve brilliant successes and greet this happy event in an honorable way.

We are faced with vast tasks which require that the party and the people vigorously launch into them in a revolutionary fashion and wage dynamic battles. We should vehemently wage the struggle for accomplishing the Second 7-Year Plan ahead of schedule, while vigorously pushing ahead with the grand remaking of nature projects.

Truly vast are the tasks in all sectors of the people's economy, including the chemical and metal industries, light industry and agriculture. The more vast the assigned tasks are, as are those this year, the more effectively we should wage the battles from the start, opening a path to victory. In this way, we can win a brilliant victory in this year's battles.

At present we are provided with everything we need to vigorously move ahead with the initial battles of new year with a firm resolve and fighting spirit.

By waging a vigorous struggle with deep understanding of the significance of the first battle staged at the beginning of the new year, all party organizations, guidance functionaries and the party members and workers should hail this significant year as the most glorious year in our history.

Most important in the vigorous waging to the new year's first struggle is to display the spirit of absoluteness and unconditionality in implementing the tasks set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his New Year's address.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: With loyalty and burning revolutionary enthusiasm for the party and the revolution, all party members and working people, by making a great upsurge in socialist construction through a continuous advance, should paint this significant year with proud victories.

Successes in all works depend on the attitudes and stand of those involved in the works. Those with firm determination will always display enthusiasm and creative positiveness. Such people will always find the expertise and means to overcome trials in implementing tasks -- no matter how difficult and complicated -- fulfill them without the slightest deviation by performing in a bold and daring way.

How vitally all the units stage the new year's first struggle depends on the ideological determination of all the guidance functionaries, party members and working people. The militant tasks facing us are honorable and responsible works aimed at realizing our party's plans. It is the most noble duty for our party members and working people to defend our party's authority and carry out unconditionally this year's militant tasks to the end to heighten the honor of chuche Korea.

Firmly preserving the spirit of absoluteness and unconditionality for the party policy in carrying out this year's tasks, all the party members and working people should wage a vigorous struggle while remaining alert from the beginning of the first struggle. It is a most important condition for waging the year's first struggle to set up a clear goal, adopt a correct means to wage the struggle and plan and organize the work. Only when we plan the project correctly and set a clear goal and find the best way to implement them can we begin to achieve brilliant successes.

The guidance functionaries in all units and sectors should devise correct and detailed plans on the basis of the New Year's address of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and let the working people correctly understand them, thus letting all the party members and working people conduct daily activities based on these plans. All sectors and units should set goals to greet the greatest national event this year as a great political festival and enact them.

To wage the new year's first struggle, it is mandatory to link the organizational work and commanding work closer to the infrastructure. Only when the guidance functionaries conduct organizational and political work among the infrastructure, can they deal with the ceaselessly changing situation on the basis of a correct understanding of the reality, invoke the masses' enthusiasm and achieve endless upsurges in production by resolving pending matters.

One of the important purposes of linking the organizational and commanding works to the infrastructure is to substantially help those in the infrastructure. Meeting the demand of the new industrial guidance system, all guidance functionaries should work with the masses by mixing with the people in the infrastructure, substantially plan and coordinate the organizational works and perform their duty with a sense of responsibility.

As the new year's first struggle has just begun, all sectors and units of the national economy face problems which should be resolved in a timely manner. Thus, guidance functionaries should not only work with those at lower units and make concrete plans but also devise and coordinate plans to solve problems in the lower units and energetically lead the people at the lower units by serving as examples.

Tackling the political work is a key which enables the nation to advance and all the workers to create miracles from the new year's first struggle with the spirit of battle and ambition.

The key to the miracles and renovations is in displaying revolutionary enthusiasm and the creativity of the masses by giving priority to political work. By energetically staging political work among party members and working people, the party organizations of all strata should inculcate the importance of the militant tasks set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his New Year's address and show them how to implement them. In particular, it is important to make them understand the party's intention to make this year the brightest year in the history of our people's revolutionary struggle and let all the party members and working people voluntarily join this year's struggle. By so doing, let all the battle sites, such as the battle site for nature remodeling, daily create miracles and renovations.

The source of the incomparable devotion of the masses and ideological and spiritual source of heroism displayed in the revolution and construction come from burning loyalty to the party and the leader. Party organizations of all strata, emphasizing loyalty to the party and leader in the struggle to concretely and practically stage vigorous technological renovations, normalize production and implement plans without the slightest deviation, should actively engage in political work among party members and working people. By so doing, party organizations of all strata should let party members and working people energetically advance with the revolutionary spirit of the speed battle joined to the Chollima from the first struggle of the new year, under the uplifted banner of the three revolutions.

Energetic waging of the first struggle of the new year is an important and responsible task to successfully implement the militant tasks assigned us. All the functionaries and working people, by staging the new year's first struggle, should carry out the New Year's address of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

EDITORIAL STRESSES REVOLUTIONARY INDOCTRINATION

[NODONG SINMUN 3 January special article [nonsol]: "Indoctrinating Workers in a Revolutionary Manner Is a Factor Firmly Guaranteeing the Victory of the Revolutionary Cause"]

[Text] The question of indoctrinating the people is a basic one related to the future of the revolution. Success in teaching people how to struggle to win victory in the revolutionary cause with a lofty revolutionary spirit and a high fighting spirit depends on how the work of indoctrinating them in a revolutionary manner is carried out. Because of this, the party of the working class should concentrate its major efforts on revolutionary indoctrination of the people and strengthen ideological indoctrination work.

Based on his profound insight into the new requirements for the construction of our party and the development of the revolution, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song early on delineated the party's policy for ideological work for opposing toadyism, thoroughly establishing a chuche system, effectively establishing the party's sole ideological system and strengthening indoctrination in socialist patriotism. This policy, which was assigned to the party's ideological work sector, is a programmatic guideline which we should correctly follow to thoroughly develop all party members and workers into true chuche-type communist revolutionaries by indoctrinating them in a revolutionary manner and to vigorously advance the construction of socialism and communism. To accelerate the historic cause of imbuing society with the chuche idea, we should continuously and thoroughly implement this policy of ideological work.

To accelerate the construction of socialism and communism, we should correctly carry out the work of indoctrinating people in a revolutionary manner. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Without indoctrinating and remodeling the working people in a revolutionary manner, we cannot successfully carry out the revolution and construction and realize a communist society.

The masses of the people are masters of society, and the revolution and construction are carried out by them. When people do not possess a lofty revolutionary awareness of being masters, they cannot perform any task in the construction of socialism and communism. Without motivation, workers do not have the firm revolutionary resolve to devote everything to the struggle for the fatherland, the people and the victory of the cause of socialism and communism. Through steady ideological indoctrination, we can help them develop this resolve.

By the revolutionary indoctrination of workers we mean to revolutionize them and turn them into communized men. In other words, we mean that, by this, we can develop them into true communists who resolutely struggle for the party, the leader and the interests of their group and society with a chuche-type revolutionary outlook which does not waver in any situation.

Indoctrinating men in a revolutionary manner is an essential requirement for completing the cause of socialism and communism through continuing the revolution. The cause of socialism and communism is completed through a protracted class struggle and through the struggle for economic construction. Accordingly, to complete the cause of socialism and communism, we should continue the revolution. To continue the revolution until we achieve the final victory of the revolutionary cause of the working class, we should help people to tenaciously struggle in all circumstances without the slightest wavering or stagnation.

Whether we indoctrinate people in a revolutionary manner is related to the question of whether we carry out the revolution to the end. This is the precious truth of the experience of the communist movement, over many years.

The revolutionary road is not smooth. On this road we will face the imperialist reactionary forces' desperate resistance. We must wage the difficult struggle for economic construction. No matter how difficult the revolution may be, people need not fear if they have a lofty revolutionary fighting spirit. They can steadily forge ahead with the revolution and construction, resolutely overcoming all trials.

Revolutionary ideological indoctrination helps people to develop their revolutionary class awareness and to resolutely defend the revolutionary gains they have attained with sweat and blood. Revolutionary indoctrination of the people becomes more important with the development of socialist construction. Advance in socialist construction is accompanied by wide and profound remodeling of all sectors of social life, including the political, economic and cultural sectors. Accordingly, success in the struggle to achieve this advance depends on how successfully we enhance the role of the working people -- who are the basis of remodeling and developing society.

People's ideological awareness plays a governing role in their activities. Through ideological activities, we can basically enhance the role of the people. The people's ideological awareness plays a matchlessly great role in socialist society. With progress in socialist construction, this ideological awareness plays an even greater role. Therefore, to accelerate the construction of socialism and communism, we should actively forge ahead with the work of remodeling people's thinking in a revolutionary manner.

As a matter of fact, with the establishment of a socialist system, the economic foundation -- a product of the timeworn ideology -- is eliminated, and social and material conditions are created for arming the people with the communist revolutionary idea. However, the legacy of the timeworn ideology remains in the minds of people, and the ideological and cultural toxin of capitalism infiltrates into their minds from the outside. If in these circumstances, we neglect the revolutionary ideological indoctrination of workers, they cannot clearly understand the true superiority of the socialist system and firmly defend the victorious revolution. In particular, indoctrinating the new generation under the socialist system to prevent its being affected by timeworn ideas and to help it always live and work with a resolute revolutionary spirit poses a very serious question which is related to the future destiny of the revolution.

Just as the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught, those who have been brought up in a socialist society do not automatically, without being motivated, have revolutionary ideas. By the same token, the sons and daughters of revolutionaries do not automatically, without motivation, become revolutionaries. By hardening youths through a challenging, practical struggle in a revolutionary manner and by thoroughly indoctrinating them to help them possess lofty revolutionary class awareness and fighting spirit, we can correctly develop them into reliable successors to the revolution.

If we do not correctly take measures for the indoctrination of the new generation, it will harbor illusions about the imperialists' double-faced tricks and about the superficially splendid appearance of capitalism. Satisfied with the happiness they enjoy today under the socialist system, they will hate to carry out the revolution. Accordingly, indoctrinating the new generation, which has not been exploited and oppressed and which has not experienced revolutionary trials, to help keep it from forgetting its revolutionary duty, is important in firmly maintaining the lineage of the revolution and defending the dignity of socialism.

Indoctrinating party members and workers in a revolutionary manner is an urgent requirement for carrying out our revolutionary cause to the end, based on the successes we have already attained. The Korean revolution has long pioneered a victorious road in the acute struggle against the strong imperialist enemy. However, our revolutionary cause has not been completed. We must travel a more distant and grim road. Today, the revolutionary situation is very complicated. The war provocations and subversive maneuvers of the imperialists and the class enemy have become more brazen with each passing day.

In circumstances under which the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique — their stooge — are seeking opportunities to extend their tentacles of aggression against us, all the people should possess a resolute revolutionary spirit to expedite the fatherland's reunification and to carry out the revolution to the end.

The revolutionary spirit is the ideological force enabling us to stage an uncompromising struggle against enemies. When all people are armed with such a fighting spirit, they can smash any schemes of the enemies and victoriously accomplish difficult tasks.

Discerning the importance of revolutionary indoctrination work in the accomplishment of the revolutionary cause of the working class, our party has aggressively waged the ideological work in line with the demands of the prevailing situation and revolutionary duties. Strengthening chuche-idea indoctrination, party policy indoctrination, indoctrination on the revolutionary tradition, indoctrination on the revolution and indoctrination on communism is a most correct ideological indoctrination policy of our party. Owing to the active ideological indoctrination work, great progress has been made in the work to establish the party's unitary ideological system in the party and society. Cherishing loyalty to the party and the leader as their revolutionary faith and revolutionary duty, our party members and working people are seething with a burning zeal to safeguard the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party center politically and ideologically and to share their destinies with the party.

Firmly believing that the road pointed out by our party's revolutionary idea — the chuche idea — is the road of victory and glory, all of the party members and working people think and act in accordance with the demands of the chuche idea and are displaying their revolutionary spirit of absolutely accepting the party's line, policies, decisions and instructions and of thoroughly and unconditionally implementing them without the slightest faltering.

As a result, the party and society have been firmly deepened and consolidated as an invincible revolutionary rank which moves in accordance with the party's idea and will. With the vigorous acceleration of the ideological indoctrination work, the revolutionary spirit and combat capability of our party members and working people have been enhanced. Working and leading a life in a revolutionary manner is an important trait which those people who enact the revolution should cherish. Only when the people evince such a spirit can they carry out difficult tasks arising in the revolution.

Today all working people in our country work in a revolutionary manner and lead a life with an attitude worthy of the people of a country carrying out the revolution and living in the era of struggle. They are diligently working on behalf of the revolution, society and people, not for individual honors or rewards. This is the trait of our working people.

All of our working people are displaying their revolutinary zeal, while always maintaining a strained and mobilized posture without the slightest indolence. As a result, high speed is being created, and remarkable successes are being attained on all fronts of socialist construction. Today we are faced with the honorable task to brilliantly achieve the militant program on modeling society on the chuche idea advanced by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the historic sixth party congress. We should make this significant year a brilliant year in the history of our people's revolutionary struggle by implementing the respected and beloved leader's New Year's address. Such a reality urgently demands that the work of indoctrinating the party members and working people in a revolutionary manner be strengthened more firmly than ever.

The party is a political organ. The ideological indoctrination work is a basic duty of the party. Success in the indoctrination of the people in a revolutionary manner rests with the role of the party organizations. Establishment of the party's unitary ideological system among the party members and working people, their revolutionization and working classization and the encouragement of masses' revolutionary zeal and class awareness are an important task that our party organizations should grasp in their ideological indoctrination work.

To strengthen the revolutionary indoctrination of the people, ideological work should be transferred to the party committees. The organization and conduct of the ideological work in the party committees is a policy our party has consistently pursued. This is also a basic guarantee for ensuring the success of the ideological work.

Party organizations should strengthen ideological indoctrination work by ensuring the party committees collectively discuss problems arising in ideological work, establish correct measures for these problems and routinely grasp and sum up the measures. In particular, it is important that responsible functionaries of the party committees directly guide the overall ideological work and set an example for others in the ideological work.

Another important problem arising in the conduct of the revolutionary indoctrination for the masses is to conduct the ideological indoctrination work in a substantial manner. Ideological indoctrination work is a difficult and complicated task to motivate and inspire the people. Therefore, formalism should be absolutely eliminated in ideological indoctrination work. In the conduct of the indoctrination work, the contents, form and methods of the ideological indoctrination work should be that they arouse the sympathy of the masses. This serves to make the people become communist revolutionary fighters.

The party organizations and functionaries should conduct indoctrination work in a substantial manner in conformity with the demands of the characteristics of the targets receiving indoctrination, their specific reality and their assigned revolutionary duties. Today our people's revolutionary determination and spirit are very high. It is the character of our people to be fond of carrying out the revolution and of struggling and to vigorously advance to a new victory. All party members and working people should be armed with the revolutionary idea of our party, the chuche idea, and display their lofty revolutionary spirit so they can more firmly prepare themselves as communist revolutionary fighters of chuche type and expedite the country's reunification and the victory of the chuche cause in our generation.

ROK-JAPAN ECONOMIC TALKS TO BEGIN 14 JAN

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 7 (YONHAP) -- In an attempt to seek an early solution to South Korea's standing request for six billion U.S. dollars in Japanese Government loans, officials of Japan and South Korea will start three-day talks in Seoul Jan. 14 to prepare for a bilateral foreign ministers' meeting, the Foreign Ministry announced Thursday.

The announcement, simultaneously made by the Japanese Foreign Ministry in Tokyo, said that Kiuchi Akidane, director-general for Asian affairs of the Japanese Foreign Ministry, will head a three-member Japanese delegation to the talks, while the Korean side will be led by Choe Tong-chin, director-general for Asian affairs of the Foreign Ministry.

During next week's meeting, the officials of the two governments will present their positions on the Seoul-requested loans, and discuss ways of resolving the issue, together with the timing and the possible agenda of the foreign ministers' meeting.

Korean officials predict that the foreign ministers' meeting is likely to take place in early March, in view of the schedules of the two governments, and said that no substantive negotiations are expected to be made during next week's preparatory talks.

Relations between the Asian neighbors have been strained by the inability of the two governments to seek a mutually satisfactory solution to South Korea's request for Japanese Government loans totaling six billion dollars, a request which was first made during Korean Foreign Minister No Sin-yong's meeting with his Japanese counterpart Sunao Sonoda in Tokyo last August.

DEFECTION OF NORTH KOREAN RESIDENT ANNOUNCED

SK071017 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0900 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] The Defense Ministry announced this afternoon that at 0930 this morning a North Korean resident defected to a South Korean army post 15 kms northeast of Cholwon, Kangwon Province.

Pak Chong-sik, spokesman at the Defense Ministry said: Kim Yong-chun, 28, who lived in the Ontan workers district in (?Onsong) County, North Hamgyong Province, has defected to the ROK. Mr Kim, who has longed for a free Korea, said he defected to South Korea through the DMZ, taking advantage of extremely poor visibility caused by heavy snow and slackened vigilance by the North Korean guards.

Kim Yong-chun, a mechanic at a chemical plant in Undok County, North Hamgyong Province, gave his reason for defection by saying that he has been suffering from suppressive tyranny by the closed Kim Il-song hereditary system, severe social discrimination against nonparty members and poverty caused by the economic bankruptcy.

Mr Kim, in particular, has reportedly tired of the miserable situation of North Korean society in which, espousing the slogan "Let's present Kim Il-song with a reunified communist fatherland on his 70th birthday," the North Korean authorities have frantically rallied all residents into preparing for war.

Mr Kim had 17 articles in his possession, including an overcoat for cold weather, a Kim Il-song badge, 52 won in North Korean currency, a notice of military relocation and so on.

CHON PAYS VISIT TO MILITARY UNIT AT FRONT

SK040038 Seoul YONHAP in English 0035 GMT 4 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan 4 (YONHAP) -- South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan Sunday visited a military unit on the western front where military fortifications and barricades are under construction. Chon was briefed by the commander on the present condition of the construction work and encouraged the soldiers on the scene.

Chon urged that each and every military outpost should give priority to striking power to enable it to deal a fatal blow to the enemy in case of invasion.

CHON NAMES PRESIDENTIAL SECRETARIAT APPOINTEES

SK070303 Seoul YONHAP in English 0259 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 7 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan Thursday named Kim Tae-ho, assistant home affairs minister for provincial administrative affairs, as his second senior secretary for political affairs, and Son Chae-suk, dean of Social Sciences College of Seoul National University as his senior secretary for educational and cultural affairs.

The two appointments mark the end of personnel changes in the Presidential Secretariat, it was learned.

Son replaced Yi Sang-chu, who became president of Kangwon National University late last year. Yi's resignation was accepted Thursday.

New Second Senior Presidential Secretary for Political Affairs Kim Tae-ho, 47, was born in Ulchu, South Kyongnam Province and graduated from the Law College of the Seoul National University. He worked at the former Central Intelligence Agency between 1961-68 and was appointed as mayor of Inchon in 1978.

Son, 51, was born in Pohang, North Kyongsang Province and majored in political science at Seoul National University. He took advanced studies in political science at Harvard and obtained a doctorate in political science from Seoul National University in 1976. President of the International Society of Political Science, he served as a member of the Korean-Japanese Cooperation Council in 1974.

ACTING PRIME MINISTER URGES NATIONAL CONSENSUS

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 4 (YONHAP) -- Korea's new acting Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun Sunday evening called for a national consensus to realize a second economic take-off for the country.

In a press conference held shortly after his appointment as new acting prime minister, Yu said that he would strive to narrow the gap in the views regarding the Korean economy between the government and private enterprises.

"The government's public relations will be invigorated to let the people get a better picture of the national economy, and this will be very conducive for the creation of a climate in which the people can place their full confidence in the government," Yu told reporters.

Yu, who will serve as acting prime minister until the National Assembly approves his appointment in a special session expected late this month, proposed to give stabilization the highest priority. "Since the ultimate goal of an economy is development, however, I will show much concern about economic growth, too," Yu said.

Noting that there would be no basic problems in relations with the United States and Japan, Yu said that although the two friendly nations, with their far-reaching views of the general situation of the world, will understand Korea's stand well and spare no area of cooperation with Korea. [as received]

On economic cooperation between Korea and Japan, Yu said that because Japan has experienced how miserable a war is through World War II, he is convinced that it will respond sympathetically to the proposed loan request of Korea, which is aimed at preventing war.

In a separate press conference in the same evening, new Deputy Premier and Economic Planning Minister Kim Chun-song said that the year 1982 is a year during which "We should do away with inflation for good" and that he would give priority to holding commodity price hikes down to 10 percent this year, which is on the international level."

He said that he would take no specific pump-priming measures, because economic recovery is expected to manifest itself in an expanded domestic demand at the end of the first quarter of this year. "Even if the need arises to take such measures, they will not be direct ones, but indirect ones such as stimulating investments," the new top economic policymaker said.

He would pursue a tight money policy continuously by holding the increase in the total money supply to around 20 percent this year, he told reporters.

Meanwhile, Na Ung-pae, who was appointed as new finance minister in a large Cabinet shake-up announced Sunday evening, voiced his confidence in the Korean economy's ample potential for further development, and said that the government and private enterprises should combine efforts to realize a second economic leap, based upon the stabilization achieved by former Prime Minister Nam Tok-u and Economic Planning Minister Sin Pyong-hyon.

KOREA HERALD PREDICTS MORE INTERPARTY DIALOGUE

[By Yi Chong-ku]

[Text] A remarkable animation is expected in the politics of this new year. The National Assembly plans to sit more often, and major political parties intend to launch brisker "dialogue politics," seeking steady reforms in various walks of life. The assembly is likely to hold the first session of the year late this month, one or two months earlier than in the past. It is also considering meeting whenever a need arises.

As major political parties believe interparty talks in the past year have helped promote amicability between rival camps and revitalize politics, they are supposed to commit themselves to further developing dialogue politics.

Major political parties are the majority Democratic Justice Party (DJP), the first minority Democratic Korea Party (DKP) and the second minority Korea National Party (KNP).

The leaders of the three major political parties are believed to huddle often to work out negotiated settlements of major issues.

DJP Chairman Yi Chae-hyong predicts there will be more chances this year than last year for representatives of major political parties to put their heads together. Political parties, Yi observes, should lend themselves to narrowing the differences in their views on crucial issues through talks and debates.

DKP President Yu Chi-song says it is desirable for political leaders to meet often and help resolve major issues.

Noting dialogue politics will help expell extreme bipartisan confrontation and the all-or-nothing way of political thinking, Yu says animated interparty talks will serve to enhance the assembly prestige.

KNP President Kim Chong-chol says, leaders of major political parties should meet frequently for "a substantive discussion on major issues." Active dialogue among political parties is essential to creating a new political climate, and the majority party ought to heed the opinions of the minority to help promote dialogue politics, Kim claims.

In a related development, senior officers of political parties are expected to get together often to talk about interparty cooperation, assembly operation, policy formulation and other things. In the meantime, no conspicuous change is likely in the order among political parties.

As major political parties celebrate the first anniversary of their creation this month, they may attempt to change their lineups, but on a minor scale. It is unlikely that the DJP will reshuffle its present hierarchy radically this year. The DJP, however, may undergo a change in which staunch reformists will be brought to the forefront.

At the time of its foundation last January, the DJP tapped talents from various segments of life to show it was a grassroots party. As the DJP assesses it, [it] has laid a foundation for its popular support, and it is presumed to bring steadfast reforms into the political limelight. Furthermore, the majority party is determined to lead the government in the formulation and execution of major policy programs.

The DJP hopes to see to it that at least several of its senior members will be scouted in the future Cabinet shakeup. The majority party thinks the presence of DJP members in a reshuffled Cabinet may serve to ensure that its reform will be materialized more efficiently.

As well evidenced in the recent selection of Yi Son-ki as secretary-general of the party president, the DJP will aspire to strengthen cooperation with the government. Yi served as administrative coordinator at the Prime Minister's Office before assuming the new post. Moreover, many senior government officials are likely to be affiliated with the DJP, clearing the way for closer cooperation between the government and the DJP.

There is little possibility that a major force capable of challenging the leadership of President Yu may be formed within the first minority DKP this year. The second minority KNP is also unlikely to experience a potential factional infighting strong enough to endanger the presidency of Kim Chong-chol.

This does not mean, of course, that there are no variables in the political milieu. Some of the political outcasts may be allowed to resume their political activities, and minorities DKP and KNP may attempt to mount stepped-up struggles against the rival DJP to head off criticism by dissidents that parliamentary politics is sluggish.

NEW POLICE APPOINTMENTS ANNOUNCED 5 JAN

SK050828 Seoul YONHAP in English 0735 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan 5 (YONHAP) -- The government Tuesday appointed Yi Hae-ku, a department chief of the National Police Headquarters (NPH), as director of Seoul metropolitan police, replacing Pak Chai-sik, who is to retire from active service, following Monday's appointment of An Ung-mo as NPH director, it was announced.

In a police shake-up affecting nine senior superintendent generals, Maritime Police Chief Yi Chong-pom was named director of Pusan metropolitan police. Superintendent Generals Yu Tae-hyong, director of Kangwon Province police, and Song Tong-sop, chief of South Cholla Province police, were both promoted to the posts of department chiefs in the NPH.

HOR NAM HONG 6 JAN PRESS CONFERENCE REPORTED

BK061447 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 6 Jan 82

[Text] At 1410 on 6 January Comrade Hor Nam Hong, vice minister of foreign affairs of the PRK, held a press conference at the Vat Phnum Hotel dealing with the development of the Kampuchean revolution during the past 3 years and another Thai violation of PRK territory on 28 December 1981. Attending were local journalists, Vietnamese and Soviet television cameramen, television cameramen of [words indistinct], Japan's NDN and NBK [as received] television crew, Australia's television cameramen and VNA, TASS and AFP correspondents. Representatives of embassies of friendly countries in Phnom Penh also attended the conference. Comrade Hor Nam Hong said:

[Begin recording] On 7 January 1979 we liberated a country that was completely devastated in all sectors and where millions of its people were massacred, including almost all of its intellectual and technical population; a country which experienced famine for years; a country without towns, hospitals, schools, markets or currency; a country completely sealed off from the outside world. There is no need for me to talk about the crimes of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary regime, for all of you are well aware of them. I only mentioned them in the context of our celebration of the anniversary of Liberation Day.

Up to now -- up to 6 January 1982 -- what have you seen in Kampuchea? I leave it to you to visualize the realities in Kampuchea as you can see for yourselves. Let me recall that despite the fact that there are still many difficulties ahead and the fact that the living standards of our people cannot be compared with those of advanced countries in Europe, at present -- 3 years after liberation -- our people's living conditions have greatly improved and stabilized. More than 1 million students are going to school. We have educational institutions ranging from kindergartens to higher education institutions. There are hospitals virtually everywhere, from urban to rural areas. Health facilities can be seen everywhere in the rural areas. The people have enough food to eat. Most importantly, our people are happy with their lives, which are improving daily. This is a fundamental and most important victory that we, our Kampuchean people, under the KPRP leadership, have achieved in the past 3 years. It is a situation that saw us starting from scratch in all fields.

Regarding security, we have been able to fully ensure security for our people everywhere in the country despite the considerable assistance given by the Chinese expansionists, U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces to the remnants of the genocidal Pol Pot gang and other reactionary groups. Despite the collusion of the Thai authorities, who have authorized the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary gang and other reactionary Khmer forces to use Thai territory as sanctuaries, we have been fully able to ensure security in Kampuchea.

Not only have the Thais colluded with and allowed the genocidal gang and other reactionary Khmer groups to use Thai territory, but they have also protected them. They have violated Kampuchean territory in order to protect these genocidal and reactionary forces. In 1981 the Thai Air Force violated Kampuchean airspace 445 times; Thai ground forces violated Kampuchean territory and fired artillery barrages into Kampuchea 6,307 times; and the Thai Navy intruded into Kampuchean territorial waters 1,367 times, including the recent incident in Koh Kong Province about which the Foreign Ministry spokesman issued a statement on 2 January. Regarding this incident, let me make the following clarification: The incident occurred when a Thai Navy boat violated Kampuchean territorial waters and fired at a Kampuchean patrol boat inside Kampuchean territory of Koh Kong Province, 15 km from the demarcation line, and not 7 km from Ko Kut of Thai waters, as the Thai military authorities have claimed. The Thai vessel sank our boat and killed five of our combatants. They took seven others as prisoners to Thailand. Two of them died en route and five were taken to the Thai mainland. When they reached the mainland, our five combatants protested vehemently against the Thai military authorities. They asked: Why did you capture us inside Kampuchean territorial waters? We have not violated Thai territory. The Thais translated this protest, however, with a lie about the incident. We will publish the complete facts regarding this lie of the Thai naval authorities.

We would like to stress that the greatest successes achieved by our Kampuchean people during the past year are in the political and military fields. These victories show the consolidation and development of the revolutionary power. The establishment of the state institutions also took place in 1981 with the democratic elections of ward and commune powers, when the people elected their representatives. Last May our people held general elections to elect the National Assembly, which in turn appointed a Council of State and a Council of Ministers. The Fourth KPRP Congress held in 1981 also prescribed the political and economic line for the country. This is an important success of our people.

In the security field, despite outside assistance and maneuvers and activities by the Chinese expansionists, U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces, the genocidal Pol Pot gang and other reactionary Khmer forces could not realize their aim of destabilizing Kampuchea. If you have read the Thai newspaper NATION REVIEW of 3 January you will see how seriously the Pol Pot remnants suffered in December. We hope that 1982 will be an opportunity for us to crush the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary remnants and other reactionary forces even more seriously, without allowing them any chance to stick up their heads again.

In the economic field, we hope that farm production and the expansion of the national economy will make greater strides.

As for the PRK's foreign policy, we will remain loyal to the policy of peace, nonalignment, friendship and cooperation with all countries regardless of their social or political regimes, particularly with neighboring countries in Southeast Asia. We sincerely wish to establish good relations of peace, cooperation and stability in Southeast Asia. We wish to contribute to the transformation of Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, stability and cooperation. We will not allow any country, however, to commit aggression against or change the situation in Kampuchea. [end recording]

Afterward, the comrade vice minister gave detailed answers to the questions raised by several foreign correspondents, such as the question of the Australian television correspondent dealing with the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea. In response to this question, the vice minister said:

[Begin recording] We have already discussed this many times. The presence of Vietnamese troops was requested by the Kampuchean people to help them topple the genocidal regime and prevent it from returning to power and killing them again. The presence of Vietnamese troops is not intended to threaten any country. On this question, I still remember well that the Vietnamese Government has made many statements and proposals to countries in Southeast Asia.

Concerning Kampuchea, to show our good will for peace, we have proposed that when the Thai authorities stop supporting and assisting the Pol Pot remnants and other reactionary forces, the Vietnamese troops will immediately make a partial withdrawal from Kampuchea. On the other hand, the question of the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea is based on the treaty of friendship and cooperation between our two countries and is a matter relating to the sovereignty of the two countries. When there are no more threats from the Beijing ruling circles, our two governments will [words indistinct]. If you read the statements of the Indochinese foreign ministers conferences in Ho Chi Minh City and Phnom Penh in January and June 1981 respectively, you will clearly see our good will. We do not have any intention of threatening or staging aggression against any other country. We want peace and time to rebuild our country. We merely request that all countries put an end to interference in the internal affairs of Kampuchea. [end recording] This press conference at 1500 in a joyous atmosphere of mutual understanding.

KAMPUCHEA EDITORIAL HAILS 1981 ACHIEVEMENTS

[KAMPUCHEA editorial: "Our Brilliant Victories" -- date not given]

[Text] In 1981 the heroic Kampuchean people ended the third year of their victorious revolutionary advance full of great revolutionary achievements in all fields -- the pride of friends on five continents as well as all progressive and peace- and justice-loving mankind in the world. If the Kampuchean revolution realized great military and economic victories and achievements in 1979 and 1980, in 1981 our people have inscribed in the pages of their national history a long list of important national political events and successive new victories.

The year 1979 marked the definitive overturn of the infamous regime, the total liberation of the people and country from the genocidal danger of the traitorous Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique — the subservient lackeys of the Beijing hegemonist-expansionist gang — and the crushing of the last dens of the remnants, dispersing them in all directions and depriving them of all possibilities of resisting us. Our people as a whole are elated at the brilliant victories of our revolution in the military field.

In 1980 our people, as the masters of the country, made courageous efforts to overcome difficulties in stabilizing their life, improving the outlook of their new society and persistently striving to restore and rebuild every sector by vigorously struggling in the production movement in all fields, particularly by vigorously accelerating the agricultural production drive. We can note with satisfaction that this is the initial success of our efforts to rehabilitate our national economic sector.

In 1981, along with the efforts to strengthen and develop the revolutionary forces and the revolutionary gains in the military, economic, cultural, social and diplomatic fields, the most remarkable and pride-inspiring victory of our party and people is our immense victory in the political field. At the end of March 1981, the elections of ward and commune committees — the institutions of the local people's power — were held with a great success throughout the country. The general elections to elect the National Assembly members on 1 May 1981 — in which 97.83 percent of the people took part — proceeded safely and successfully. They were described by dozens of foreign delegates attending the international conference on solidarity with the Kampuchean people as having been held in a completely free and democratic manner.

From 26 to 29 May 1981 the fourth party congress took place in an atmosphere of general enthusiasm and, in a solemn and victorious spirit, openly declared the action of the party which was named the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party, elected the party leading organ and issued a resolution — the glowing aspiration of the collective — to be determined as a compass in the correct implementation of the party's pure political line aimed at serving the cause of the revolution and the people. The draft Constitution, submitted to the people for discussion, study and improvement at the beginning of March, was adopted by the First National Assembly Session as the supreme law of the PRK. Leading organs of the National Assembly such as the Council of State and the Council of Ministers were nominated.

The third congress of the front, which has just concluded with success in an atmosphere of broad fraternity and solidarity, gave the front a new name — the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense — and adopted a new statement, new statutes and a new resolution that prescribed a 10-point program of action clearly showing that the work of the front has been expanded with the aim of mobilizing the forces of great union of all of the people and accelerating the successful implementation of the historic mission for the nation and fatherland.

In 1981 our people joyously celebrated international children's day, the traditional New Year, international labor day, the nationwide school reopening day, the human rights day and so on. We observed with joy and emotion the anniversary of the historic 7 January victory, the founding anniversary of the KPRAF and the founding anniversary of the front. We heartily celebrated the anniversary of the Great October Socialist Revolution, the National Day of the Vietnamese people, the National Day of the Lao people, the founding anniversary of the fraternal heroic VPA and the national days of friendly socialist countries. At the same time, provinces throughout the country as well as ministries and departments attached to the central organization and mass organizations held their respective semiannual and annual meetings to review achievements and note the progressive development of each sector.

These constitute historic events of profound political significance irrefutably showing that all the social structures have been restored and all the party, state and front institutions have been fully organized. They reflect the monumental successes of our people who, as a single body, have massively participated in the revolutionary movement and enthusiastically contributed to the defense and construction of a beautiful regime of their choice.

All the brilliant revolutionary gains achieved by our people in 1981 are indisputably the successes of a pure, correct and clear-sighted line of our party, successes made possible by the rock-like union of our people and their patriotism, by international solidarity and by the devoted assistance of socialist countries -- particularly Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union and other progressive countries in the world. The revolutionary gains of our people are being consolidated with every passing day; the confidence of the people in the new regime is growing; and the prestige of the PRK is soaring high in the international arena.

Foreign visitors who observed our country's state of ruin following the liberation and the rebirth of the Kampuchean fatherland at present have expressed their admiration at the fruitful efforts of our people, their elation at the unexpected changes in Kampuchea and their high appreciation of the ceaseless progress and development of the PRK.

Only the enemies of independence, democracy, freedom and social progress of nations have shamelessly closed their eyes and refused to recognize the realities in Kampuchea. Pushed by their greed and ambition, the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and international reactionaries, including a number of ruling circles of ASEAN countries, wantonly oppose the realities in Kampuchea by resorting to all types of perfidious maneuvers in an attempt to block the advance of our revolution.

The Kampuchean people are well aware of the bitterness experienced by those who have lost their countries and who are under the iron yoke of domination by the colonialists and neocolonialists. We remember well the hell-like life created by the regime of genocide and slavery. The excellent experience of our history has even more clearly revealed to us the beauty and glory of our PRK. The sense of mastery is being expanded daily. All of us are increasing our spirit of revolutionary vigilance and developing our sense of mastery to fulfill the duty of citizens with a high sense of awakening and responsibility. We are mobilizing our forces for combat and are constantly improving our combat readiness, resolutely determined to fight in defense of our revolutionary gains and our national independence and to realize new achievements for the nation and fatherland.

The appeal of the National Assembly and the resolutions of the fourth party congress and third front congress constitute the compass which leads the Kampuchean people, fortified by their sense of internationalist solidarity and the Kampuchea-Vietnam strategic alliance -- which are determining factors -- toward achieving more and greater victories. Riding the crest of the victories that have already been achieved, we enter 1982 with pride, confidence and determination to fight and to win. This constitutes our great source of energy, enabling us to advance toward seizing increasingly more brilliant victories in defending and building the nation and for an independent, peaceful, free and happy PRK.

NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONAL WORK MEETING CONCLUDES

[Text] On 28 December the second national meeting on organizational work and the political course for cadres on the resolutions of the Fourth KPRP Congress was closed at the KPRP Central Committee's Political School under the chairmanship of Comrade Say Phuthang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Central Organization Commission.

Also present in the Presidium on that occasion were Comrade Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] and chairman of the Central Propaganda and Education Commission; Comrade Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs; Comrade Lim Nai, KPRP Central Committee chef de cabinet and secretary of the Phnom Penh Municipal Party Affairs Control Committee; Comrade Chey Saphon, member of the KPRP Central Committee and vice chairman of the Central Organization Commission. Many comrade ministers, vice ministers, cadres and chiefs of various central departments and offices of the capital and provinces and trainees also attended this session.

On this occasion, Comrade Say Phuthang reviewed and highly praised the achievements of this political course for our cadres, which was held in order to implement and quickly fulfill the resolutions of the fourth party congress. The comrade clearly pointed to the great necessity for this national meeting on organizational work in order to review the past implementation of the resolutions of the fourth party congress and apply the experience gained in the future for the construction and defense of our splendid Angkor territory.

At the end, the comrade talked about the essential tasks to be successfully and effectively implemented in conformity with the five goals raised by the meeting and the resolutions of the party Central Committee. At the same time, he called on the people to raise the banner of patriotism and strengthen the spirit of proletarian internationalism and militant solidarity to guarantee the successful fulfillment of our long-standing duties and directives in order to build the Marxist-Leninist party.

CHEA SIM, YIT KIM SENG ADDRESS HEALTH CONFERENCE

[Text] At 1400 on 27 December a ceremony was held at the Public Health Ministry to close the third national health conference, which took place from 24 to 27 December to sum up and review achievements in the health service in 1981 and set goals for 1982. Attending were, among others, Comrade Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, chairman of the National Assembly and chairman of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] National Council; Comrade Yit Kim Seng, minister of public health; and vice ministers, doctors and cadres of the Health Ministry and other departments and services. Also present were several delegates representing the central, provincial and municipal health services. Also noted was the presence of Comrade Nguyen Tang Am, vice minister of public health of the SRV, and representatives of international humanitarian organizations.

After Comrade Nut Savoeun, vice minister of public health, read a speech summing up the outcome and content of the conference, Comrade Chea Sim took the floor to congratulate the conference participants and to express high appreciation of the rapid and ceaseless development of the public health sector, fully meeting the target set by the party and coping with the demands of the Kampuchean people. He urged the cadres, employees and workers of the Public Health Ministry to steadfastly preserve their sense of patriotism, love for the people and determination to wholeheartedly serve the people. He further urged them to raise the emulative spirit in study; practice thrift; draw new experience; pursue additional research in traditional medicine; and strengthen, expand and resolutely preserve internal unity and national and international solidarity -- particularly with fraternal Vietnam and Laos and friendly socialist countries -- to foil all the psychological maneuvers of the enemies, who are attempting to sabotage our revolution by all means.

In conclusion, Comrade Yit Kim Seng represented the third national health conference in solemnly pledging to spare no efforts in building the public health sector and ensuring good health for the people to welcome the resolutions of the Fourth KPRP Congress.

CHEA SIM MEETS WITH GDR AMBASSADOR ROLF DACH

BK030325 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1438 GMT 30 Dec 81

[Text] Phnom Penh, 30 Dec (SPK) -- Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the National Assembly, received in audience GDR Ambassador Rolf Dach in Phnom Penh on Tuesday, 29 December.

Chea Sim informed Rolf Dach of the success of the Third Congress of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense. He stressed the strengthening of the relations of friendship, solidarity and cooperation in all domains between Kampuchea and the GDR, especially between the Kampuchean National Assembly and the GDR People's Chamber. Chairman Chea Sim expressed his profound gratitude to the GDR party, government and people for their aid to and material and moral support for the Kampuchean people after the overthrow of the genocidal Pol Pot regime. For his part, Rolf Dach hailed the success of the third congress of the front, which ended its work recently.

PARTY DELEGATION VISITS KOH KONG PROVINCE

[Text] Phnom Penh, 6 Jan (SPK) -- A KPRP delegation led by member of the KPRP Central Committee and director of the Central Committee's offices, [as received] recently paid a visit to combatants in the coastal province of Koh Kong. The delegation consisted of Vice Minister of National Defense Soy Keo and Vice Chairman of the Central Organization Commission Chey Saphon.

The delegation also visited Vietnamese combatants stationed in the province and the population of the provincial capital. On this occasion, Lim Nai urged the strengthening of national and international solidarity and the solidarity between the Kampuchean and Vietnamese combatants in defense of the fatherland and for the restoration of the economy.

Last year Koh Kong planted 8,000 hectares of rice. The province has 25 schools attended by more than 6,000 students, 7 kindergarten classes and 30 medical-health stations.

SPK at 1429 GMT on 31 December noted that the district planted 250 hectares of dry-season rice this year. At 0353 GMT on 30 December SPK reported that Kirivong District has planted 560 hectares of dry-season rice and 655 hectares of subsidiary crops.

Kompong Cham: Phnom Penh radio reported at 1100 GMT on 1 January that more than 2,000 hectares of rice has been harvested and 350 hectares of dry-season rice transplanted in Stoeng Trang District. SPK reported at 0402 GMT on 2 January that Srei Santhor District has planted 1,370 hectares of dry-season rice. Plans calls for 1,730 hectares of rice and 5,830 hectares of subsidiary crops to be planted. During the rainy season the district planted 7,580 hectares of rice. At 0426 GMT on 28 December SPK reported that in Chamka Leu 2,000 hectares of rice has been harvested. In the rainy season the peasants grew 6,000 hectares of rice and 1,000 hectares of subsidiary crops. They also raised 15,170 oxen.

Kompong Chhnang: Phnom Penh radio reported at 0400 GMT on 1 January that by the end of the year the province had harvested 9,500 hectares of early rice, 7,000 hectares of ordinary rice and 2,300 hectares of late rice. Nearly 700 hectares of dry-season rice has been planted, and there are many thousand hectares of subsidiary crops. Peasants have also raised 38,000 oxen and 13,600 buffalo.

Prey Veng: According to Phnom Penh radio at 0400 GMT on 1 January, 404 hectares of rice-fields in Prey Veng were sprayed with insecticide.

Kompong Thom: According to Phnom Penh radio at 1230 GMT on 3 December, the fishery production plan for the province in the coming year calls for a catch of more than 2,000 tons.

Kandal: SPK reported at 1424 GMT on 3 January that Ponhea Loe District has planted 240 hectares of dry-season rice, against the plan of 4,000 hectares, and 170 hectares of subsidiary crops, against the plan of 1,500 hectares. In the rainy season the district planted 2,950 hectares of rice -- 80 percent of the plan -- and almost 1,000 hectares of subsidiary crops.

Koh Kong: SPK reported at 1426 GMT on 2 January that production solidarity teams in Kompong Som District have harvested 6,130 hectares of rice. In the rainy season they grew 10,640 hectares of rice and hundreds of hectares of subsidiary crops.

Siem Reap: In an interview with SPK broadcast at 1439 GMT on 29 December, an official of the national front said that the province has harvested 139,926 hectares of rice, and 3,490 hectares of subsidiary crops are growing. In the past year 7,485 tons of fish were caught.

VODK NOTES SUCCESSFUL ATTACKS ON SRV RAILROADS

Northern Battlefield

BK220325 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 18 Dec 81

[Text] Last November our comrades in arms on the Choam Khsan-Preah Vihear-Oddar Meanchey battlefield killed 67 Vietnamese enemy aggressors and wounded 66 others for a total of 133 casualties. They destroyed a B-41, 2 B-40's, 2 M-79's, 10 AK's, 3 AR-15's, 4 barracks and 2 bridges totaling 17 meters in length, and cut 9 sections of track for a total of 1 km. Our comrades in arms seized a quantity of ammunition and materiel. Concerning the production of primitive weapons, they made and planted 630,000 new spikes, dug 250 new punji pitfalls and set up 200 new automatic bows.

Long live our valiant army, guerrillas and people on the Choam Khsan-Preah Vihear-Oddar Meanchey battlefield!

BANGKOK NATION: MILITARY LEADERS JOIN SON SANN

BK270727 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 27 Dec 81 p 2

[By Jacques Bekaert]

[Text] Gen Sak Sutsakhan, once the youngest defence minister under Prince Norodom Sihanouk in the reigns of the Khmer Republic, visited the various camps of Son Sann's Khmer People's National Liberation Front on the Thai-Kampuchean border several weeks ago. The gesture was described as "significant" by some informed observers.

Gen Sak may well be back in action with the KPNLF soon, although the question of how to divide up the authority between him and Gen Den Del, the current KPNLF's military commander, has yet to be worked out. The power-sharing question will have to be thrashed out between Sak and Den Del. But informed Western diplomatic sources told the NATION that the two men appeared to have got along well -- so far, anyhow.

Gen Sak was sent abroad after serving as defence minister under Prince Sihanouk. He returned to Phnom Penh only a few weeks before the collapse of the Lon Nol government in April, 1975. During the two weeks between Lon Nol's departure into exile and the Khmer Rouge's takeover of Phnom Penh, Gen Sak was a member of the three-man commission running the country.

Gen Sak is not the only high-ranking officer with combat experience to have joined the KPNLF recently. Informed sources said that Gen Thach Reng, former commander of the Special Forces before 1975, who has until now been living in California, is also expected to arrive at the KPNLF's border camps in the near future to discuss his role in enhancing the combat planning and operations against the Vietnamese and Heng Samrin forces now occupying Kampuchea.

The sources said that serious discussions have taken place in the past two years among KPNLF leaders, both on the border as well as in Paris, on the strategies and tactics for the nationalist movement. Some leaders, including Gen Den Del, are by tradition more inclined towards building up a conventional army.

On the other hand, another KPNLF group, led by Prum Vith, operating in the south of Kampuchea, has shown itself to be one of the most effective guerrilla units of the nationalist movement harassing the Vietnamese and Heng Samrin troops. Prum Vith, a professional combat-tested soldier, began his resistance activities as far back as 1976, when he fought against the Khmer Rouge regime. He was one of the five guerrilla leaders to join Son Sann and Den Del to form the core of what was to become the KPNLF in early 1979. "He is doing pretty well for the time being," a well-informed source said.

Diplomatic sources admitted that it remains difficult to estimate the real military strength of the KPNLF at the moment. Figures vary from a guerrilla army from 5,000 to 15,000.

Sonn Sann is now on a tour of North America and Europe in search of support. In Washington, he was told that he should not expect arms deliveries from the United States. It is also clear that no Western European country would take the risk of openly supporting the KPNLF's military efforts. The same could most certainly be said of the ASEAN countries. The business of supplying arms is a dangerous and delicate one. Although not officially discussed during the recent foreign ministers meeting in Phatthaya, it was agreed that ASEAN as a group would not provide military aid to anyone involved in the Kampuchean conflict. There have been contradictory statements from Kuala Lumpur, Singapore, and Indonesia.

So far, most of the KPNLF's weapons are of Chinese origins, especially machineguns and the grenade launchers. Rifles are usually American-made M-16's. Some of the light weapons have been purchased with money raised by KPNLF's friends abroad.

The KPNLF military school in Ban Sangae is considered of rather good quality. There is no doubt that the popular potentials of the nationalists are growing, if only slightly. And even if no one is going to openly provide KPNLF (and maybe the pro-Sihanoukist Moulinaka) with more than rice and medicine, it would not be a complete surprise if, in the near future, nationalist groups find themselves with more and better weapons. From where? Son Sann is not telling.

TASKS IN MILITARY FIELD FOR 1982 OUTLINED

[Unattributed article: "Let Us Score Fine Achievements in Carrying Out the 1982 Military Tasks As Outlined by the Party and the LPLA Supreme Command"]

[Text] Dear listeners, beloved comrades and friends: With a view to safeguarding the fruits of the revolution and the historical tasks of our party in the new period, and to assist in guiding our country toward socialism and communism — which is the ultimate goal of the revolution in our country — the 1982 military tasks clearly indicate that our entire party, army and people must increase their sense of responsibility with regard to consolidating and building the regional forces and militia-guerrilla forces by paying attention to increasing their numbers and improving their quality. Therefore, in response to the call to safeguard and build the country into a socialist state, it is necessary that we pay special attention to this problem. This is because the regional forces and militia-guerrilla forces are the primary forces of the people's war and the most vital and effective forces in coordinating with the regular forces and the people of all nationalities throughout the country to defend the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of our country.

Thus, it can be said that the military tasks regarding the regional and militia-guerrilla forces are of great strategic significance. The more rigorous and extensive our efforts to expand and fulfill the tasks concerning the regional and militia-guerrilla forces, the better we can guarantee the defense and security of our country. This is because these tasks represent the primary factor in safeguarding, building and developing our country into a stronger and more secure state so that it can rapidly advance toward socialism and communism.

In consolidating and building the regional and militia-guerrilla forces, we must simultaneously pay attention to the two elements of quantity and quality. In terms of the quantitative aspect, we must increase the number of these forces from 3 to 7 or 8 percent. The number of self-defense forces in offices, organizations and factories must be increased by 2 to 3 percent. In terms of the qualitative aspect, we must pay attention to regularly refreshing their political and ideological awareness and cultural and military knowledge as well as knowledge of other specialized subjects in order to raise their combat capabilities and quality.

We must pay special attention to the following aspect, the one thing which is the most vital and decisive factor in these tasks — to train more commanding cadres for the ranks of the militia-guerrilla forces and self-defense forces at the canton level and try to consolidate and turn them into the mainstay of the revolution. We must also closely implement the policy toward militia-guerrilla forces by gradually organizing them into basic units, platoons and companies so they will become more fully capable of engaging in combat duties to wipe out enemy forces in all circumstances.

The stepping up of the tasks regarding the regional and militia-guerrilla forces is not only an attempt to increase their strength so that they will become more effective in safeguarding the lives and property of the people and maintaining peace in the country, but is a means of achieving close coordination with the work to build the regular forces and the national defense structure among our masses.

It is more important now than ever before that we build and strengthen our regional and militia-guerrilla forces so that they can safeguard the country and the fruits of the revolution more effectively, smash all schemes and sinister acts of the enemy and resolutely safeguard the people's administration, thus allowing it to administer state affairs brilliantly and fulfill its tasks gloriously.

Khamtai Siphandon Greeting

BK221001 Vientiane KPL in English 0905 GMT 22 Dec 81

[Text] Vientiane, 22 Dec (KPL) -- General Khamtai Siphandon, minister of national defence, on December 22 sent a greetings message to General Van Tien Dung, minister of national defence of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam. The message writes:

On the occasion of the 37th anniversary of the Vietnamese People's Army, on behalf of the Lao People's Liberation Army and in my own name, I would like to convey my warmest salutations and wishes to you, and through you, to the fraternal Vietnamese army.

During the past 37 years, under the leadership of the Communist Party of Vietnam, the genuine Marxist-Leninist party, and by implementing the instruction of the great President Ho Chi Minh, in improving the spirit of proletarian internationalism, the Vietnamese army and people had scored splendid achievements in defeating colonialism and neocolonialism, liberating the nation, and defeating the aggressive war of the Beijing hegemonists and expansionists, thus contributing to the defence of peace in Indochina, Southeast Asia and in the world. It has fulfilled its international duties vis-a-vis Laos and Kampuchea. The record of victories of the faternal Vietnamese army sets a good example for our army and people, continues the message. The LPLA has high regards for the Vietnamese army and people, who stand side by side with Laos in the national liberation and defence as well as in our socialist construction.

The message goes on to express gratitude to the Vietnamese party, government, army and people for their all-round cooperation and assistance to our Lao army and people, and wishes the Vietnamese People's Army new and more victories in its tasks to safeguard and construct the socialist Vietnam country. The message further wishes that the friendship solidarity and special relations between Laos and Vietnam be further enhanced.

BK291008 Vientiane KPL in English 0913 GMT 29 Dec 81

[Text] Vientiane, 29 Dec (KPL) -- Phoumi Vongvichit, Political Bureau member of the party CC, vice premier and minister of education, sports and religious affairs, recently received in Vientiane a delegation of the Propaganda and Training Board of the Communist Party of Vietnam CC, headed by Nguyen Vinh, member of the party CC and director of the high-level ideological school of socialist Vietnam.

This meeting was conducted in an atmosphere of cordiality and understanding.

[Hanoi VNA in English at 2534 GMT on 28 December, in a report on this meeting, adds: The Lao leader hailed the successful visit of the delegation and the cooperation between the propaganda and education commissions of the two parties planned for the coming period. He said that cooperation in ideological work between Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea would make a very important contribution to the struggle against the common enemy and for socialist construction and national defence in each country.]

Apart from paying a courtesy visit to Phoumi Vongvichit, Nguyen Vinh also conferred with his Lao counterpart, Chanmi Douangboutdi. Both sides exchanged lessons on ideological work and their close cooperation in this field. It was also agreed that further all-round cooperation between the two propaganda and training boards are needed. Issues on world and domestic situations were also discussed.

A memorandum on cooperation in propaganda and training work between Laos and Vietnam was signed in Vientiane by Chanmi Douangboutdi and Nguyen Vinh.

Nguyen Vinh led his delegation to pay an official visit to Laos from December 21 to 28, in response to the invitation of the Propaganda and Training Board of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party CC. The Vietnamese delegates also visited various historical sites in Vientiane and Wat Phou of southern Champassak Province. The said Vietnamese delegation left Vientiane on December 28.

NATION: U.S. PLANES USING UTAPHAO BASE

BK280345 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 27 Dec 81 pp 1, 2

[Text] American Navy P-3 Orions, part of the U.S. 7th Fleet's patrol aircraft, have been using Utaphao Base in Rayong for refueling purposes since November, Thai and American official spokesmen said yesterday.

Commander of the Utaphao Base Vice Adm Prasoet Thaenkhani said that the U.S. aircraft have also been used in joint U.S.-Thai military exercise programmes. The joint military exercise which began in November would continue with the participation of the P-3 Orions, according to the base commander.

The U.S. aircraft have been used to airdrop sea mines which would be cleared by Thai naval officials during the military drills, Vice Adm Prasoet said. He added that both the aircraft and sea mines were necessary in the joint exercises, as the Thai had no such weapons.

The U.S. spokesman said the U.S. P-3 Orions had earlier used Don Muang Air Force Base for the refueling purposes. "But Don Muang might have become too congested recently. That's why we turned to Utaphao, with Thai permission, because of the conveniences of the site," the American official said. He added: "But it must be made clear that we are not talking about an American base in Thailand or anything like that. And every flight must be cleared with Thai authorities concerned."

Utaphao, once the home of the U.S. B-52 bombers during the Vietnam war, was handed back to the Royal Thai Navy after the American military withdrawal in 1975. The P-3 Orions have been making flights between the U.S. Clark Base in the Philippines and Utaphao. Thai sources said that two such landings were permitted at Don Muang last month, with two aircraft on each occasion, before the U.S. P-3 Orions began using Utaphao this month. For the last 2 weeks of this month, 24 flights of P-3 Orions will make refueling landings at Utaphao on Dec 18, 19, 21, 22, 28 and 29.

AFP: SITTHI TO VISIT BURMA BEGINNING 14 JAN

BK061417 Hong Kong AFP in English 1402 GMT 6 Dec 81

[Text] Bangkok, 6 Jan (AFP) -- Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila will pay a 3-day official visit to Burma starting next Thursday [14 January], aimed at promoting closer bilateral cooperation, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said here today. Accompanying him will be Foreign Ministry Under Secretary Kasem S. Kasemi, his secretary and two other ministry officials, the spokesman said. There were no further details on Air Chief Marshal Sitthi's forthcoming visit.

TALKS TO BE HELD WITH BURMA ON IMMIGRATION

BK261054 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 25 Dec 81

[Text] It has been revealed by a high-ranking official that senior Thai and Burmese officials will hold talks soon to thrash out the problem of the illegal flow of Burmese into Thailand along their common border.

A Thai military official in charge of the Thai-Burmese border problem had said Thailand would propose the repatriation of Burmese who illegally crossed the border into Thai soil by directly handing them over to the Burmese Government. In the past, Burmese who crossed the borderline into Thailand would be immediately sent back from the same spot, and many of them re-entered into Thai territory. He said many Burmese were arrested by Thai authorities several times for repeatedly entering into Thailand without legal permission.

He believed the solution to be discussed between Thai and Burmese authorities would reduce the number of illegal Burmese along the border. He said the Burmese Government earlier told the Thai ambassador in Rangoon that it would be willing to discuss with Thai officials to find a solution to the problem. The date of Thai-Burmese discussion has yet to be fixed.

The Thai military official in charge of the Thai-Burmese border problem, who is currently a personal secretary of Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon, said the Thai Government was planning to impose stricter control on every Burmese who seeks political asylum in Thailand by requiring them to give their background and addresses to the Thai authorities and inform the authorities every time they want to move from one place to another. This is aimed at creating better understanding between the two countries. During the past year, Thai authorities along the border had prevented 1,769 Burmese from crossing the border into Thailand, according to the report of the Supreme Command, which added that 1,594 Burmese were taken legal actions [as heard] for illegally entering into Thailand, while 2,707 others were sent back to their homeland shortly after their arrival in Thailand.

MORE CHARGES FILED AGAINST COMMUNIST OFFICIAL

BK29[illegible]0 Bangkok POST in English 29 Dec 81 p 5

[Text] Alleged communist leader Damri Ruangsutham has had two more charges brought against him by the Special Branch police, bringing the total he now faces to eight, his lawyer said yesterday. Damri, who is accused of being a Politburo member of the Communist Party of Thailand, had been detained at Bang Khen police private school on six charges of communist activities, internal rebellion, endangering national security, carrying a pistol without a licence, resisting arrest and attempting to kill government officials. Last week, the Special Branch police brought against him the two further charges of using a fake identity card and falsification of his identity, said Mr Thongbai Thongpao, the civil rights advocate who is representing him.

Mr Damri, Mr Thongbai said, has asked the police to give him some English-language books to read while he is in detention, and has sought medical treatment for lung and heart ailments and failing eyesight.

Mr Thongbai, who saw him in his cell at Bang Khen, said Mr Damri told him that the Communist Party had planned for some time to hold its fourth congress, and would probably do so soon. Mr Damri did not know whether Mr Charoen Wangam, the CPT's secretary-general, had died in a Beijing hospital in late October. If he had, it should have been announced over the CPT-controlled Voice of Thailand, he said.

Troops of the Fourth Army Region captured Mr Damri in April while he was leaving a jungle base in Surat Thani. He claimed then that he had come out to seek peace talks with the authorities, but the offer was turned down. The authorities later asserted that Damri was not authorised to make the offer. He used that as an excuse to avoid charges when arrested, according to the police.

POST REPORTS ON GUERRILLA ACTIVITY IN YALA TOWN

[By NATION Southern Desk]

[Text] Than To, Yala -- Until early this year, this border town was only a small sub-district of no significance. It had only 9,000 people and 70 percent of the population were Muslims. But like most of its neighbouring towns, Than To has been a sensitive area where Muslim guerrillas are active. And this is a major reason why Than To had its status upgraded to that of a district.

Than To is now one of the four districts of Muslim-dominated Yala, which are infested by terrorists. The others are Rahman, Bannang Satar and Muang Districts. "With Than To now as a district, its authorities can exercise their power without much restriction in tackling problems that take place," said its district chief, Sawin Wutthiphum.

Than To also has its share of problem with the guerrillas of the Communist Party of Malaya (CPM) who normally operate among the border between Yala and Malaysia. The Muslim terrorists are more influential in areas. Government intelligence reports put the number of the Muslim terrorists operating in Yala at around 500. The terrorists, however, operate under the umbrellas of different factions. Among them are the notorious Barisan Ribarasion Nasional (BRN), which has reportedly adopted a socialist ideology.

The Than To district seat is about 60 km from Yala, and it was on this road that a band of Muslim terrorists held up a bus and massacred 14 people -- all of them Thai Buddhists -- but spared the lives of all the Muslim passengers. The brutal killings were still vivid in the memories of people who witnessed or heard of them. "I normally travel by motorcycle whenever I go," said Prasut Benchaloetyanon, chief of the district education office. "Because it is much safer. We can stop and turn back when we sense something wrong."

"We never know when it will be our turn. We can't trust any checkpoints even if they are set up by government authorities," he added. Prasut said he himself tried to avoid going through any checkpoints whenever he can. He said the massacre happened because the driver of the bus mistook the checkpoint set up by Muslim terrorists as that of government authorities.

In Than To and Bannang Satar Districts alone there are over 10,000 rai of rubber plantations which are completely under the influence of Muslim terrorists. Their owners dare not tap rubber because they had refused to pay "protection fees" to the terrorists. It is understood here that refusal to pay protection fees to the terrorists is tantamount to challenging them. And everybody knows too well what will happen to those who antagonize the terrorists.

"There is one particular plantation covering 5,000 rai, and it has been forsaken for 5 years," said the officer. He recalled that its owner ignored a demand for a 200,000-baht protection fee. It was not long before "he learnt his lesson."

"One of his workers stepped on a booby trap one morning and lost his legs. The house was set on fire. And from then on nobody dared enter the plantation," he said. He said the terrorists often visited shops in the town in person to deliver letters demanding protection fees. And most of their victims are Thai Buddhists.

All of the bus operators also have to pay protection fees; otherwise, they would be harassed. "And if you notice, all the bus drivers are Muslims because none of the Buddhists wants to risk his life," he said.

An assistant district chief said a new development which was of serious concern was taking place here. "Many of the Thai Buddhists have begun moving out to other safer places," he said. He said they had found their life in constant dangers because of the harassments from the terrorists. "We try our best to stop them and encourage them not to give in. But frankly speaking, if I were one of them I would do the same," he said.

Than To has only three tambons and 17 villages, and the local government authorities here have found it imperative that they win the Muslim community to their side. The district chief said the Muslim terrorists were able to have high mobility because of support they got from the Muslim community. "But if we can win the Muslim community to our side we will definitely be able to neutralize the insurgents' move," he said. According to intelligence reports, Than To is one of the targets of infiltration of the Muslim terrorists. The reports said that there was a tendency for the terrorists to resort to acts of sabotage in the district and to create conflicts between the Buddhist and Muslim communities here.

REPORTS ON U.S. ARMAMENTS TO THAILAND CITED

BK061259 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 6 Jan 82

[Text] A spokesman for the Thai Army command said that in the coming days the Thai Army will receive many new kinds of weapons from the United States such as antiaircraft artillery, recoilless guns and land-to-air missiles. In the past 3 years the total amount of U.S. weapons supplied to Thailand has increased four times. The United States has set up a special airlift to transport weapons to the Thai Army.

Japanese newspapers said: The United States is more interested in Thailand than other ASEAN countries. It hopes that with Bangkok's assistance the United States will easily draw other ASEAN countries into its military plan. By supplying more weapons to the ASEAN countries, the United States aims to maintain a hotbed of tension in this region.

LEADERS MARK ANNIVERSARY OF SRV-INDIA TIES

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 6 — President Truong Chinh and Premier Pham Van Dong have sent their warmest greetings to Indian state leaders on the 10th anniversary of the promotion of Vietnamese-Indian diplomatic relations to ambassadorial level tomorrow. Writing to President N. Sanjiva Reddy, the Vietnamese president says:

"Stemming from a time-honored friendship and bound by the common objectives of the struggle for national independence, peace and social progress, the multiform cooperation between our two countries have taken new and extremely fine steps, especially in the last ten years. I would like to take this opportunity to express our sincere gratitude to the government and people of India for their warm feelings and strong support for our just cause of building and defending the country. May the Indian people record still greater success in building a prosperous and happy country. May the friendship and close cooperation between our two countries further strengthen and develop in the interests of our two peoples and for peace and progress in Asia and the world".

Premier Pham Van Dong says in his message to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi:

"I am happy to note that the friendly relations between our two countries so painstakingly built up by the late Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and President Ho Chi Minh on a firm foundation for many next generations have increasingly born fruits. These relations have stemmed from our solidarity and mutual support in the struggle for independence and freedom, from our cooperation in national construction, and the coordination of our external activities, in the interests of our two peoples and for peace in Asia and the world.

"Over the past ten years our friendship and multiform cooperation have taken new fine steps. Our mutual trust and understanding have further cemented the solidarity and friendship between our two nations. I wish to take this opportunity to express our sincere gratitude to Your Excellency, the government and people of India for your warm feelings and strong support for our just cause of building and defending our country. I am firmly convinced that the friendly relations and multiform cooperation between our two countries will be unceasingly strengthened and developed in the interests of our two peoples and for peace and stability in this region and the world as a whole. May the fraternal Indian people, under your leadership, score still greater success in building a prosperous and happy country".

Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has also sent a message of greetings to his Indian counterpart, P.V. Narasimha Rao.

[Excerpts from the VFF Presidium and Secretariat report on the VFF tasks in 1982 made at the 4 January session of the VFF Central Committee conference]

[Text] For a long period in the past our people have had to carry out two strategic tasks simultaneously: successfully building socialism and always standing combat ready to firmly defend our socialist fatherland, resolved to frustrate all aggressive plots and actions of Chinese hegemonist expansionism and international reactionary forces, thus contributing to the revolutionary cause of the peoples of the world.

The year 1982 holds a position of special political importance in our people's political and social life. This is a year when all our people must struggle powerfully and relentlessly to fulfill the extremely great and urgent economic and social tasks in order to partially stabilize and improve their livelihood and ensure a more vigorous development in the remaining years of the 1981-85 5-year plan.

The impending Fifth VCP National Congress will define the guidelines and tasks of the country in the first stage of the transition toward socialism and in the 1981-85 5-year plan. Following the party congress, we propose to hold a VFF national congress to review the front's activities during the past 5 years, incorporate the VCP congress resolutions into the front's activities during the next 5 years and elect a new VFF Central Committee in accordance with the stipulations of the VFF statutes.

At its recent second session, the Seventh National Assembly reviewed the implementation of the 1981 State Plan and determined the tasks of the 1982 State Plan. Our conference enthusiastically supports the 1982 State Plan recently adopted by the National Assembly. We are resolved to strengthen all activities and mobilize the forces of all compatriots throughout the country to successfully implement this plan in order to achieve still greater gains.

Based on all our people's and armed forces' current strategic tasks and aimed at implementing the objectives of the 1982 State Plan, the activities of the various VFF echelons must concentrate on further strengthening our people's unity and cohesion along the course mapped out by the Fifth VCP congress, on motivating the various strata of the people to develop their patriotism, revolutionary ardor and spirit of socialist collective mastery and on pushing ahead all national construction and defense emulation movements, thus ensuring a powerful development in the national economy. The following are our practical tasks:

1. To widely propagandize, disseminate and explain the resolutions of the Fifth VCP Congress to all strata of the people so as to enable the latter to thoroughly understand them.

The various front echelons and member organizations should give special importance to political and ideological tasks and, through explanations, make all strata of the people grasp these resolutions and the central and regional levels' tasks in the 1982 State Plan, making every group and every person clearly see the situation and their concrete tasks, distinctly recognize the immediate and long-term advantages and difficulties, uphold their responsibility and obligation in their work and national construction and defense and steadfastly strive to overcome all difficulties and trials.

We must join the state sectors and bodies in successfully implementing the policies of national unity and religious unity as well as other policies. We must smash all the enemy's divisive plots and firmly ensure the solidarity of all the people. We must motivate the Vietnamese residents living abroad to strengthen their solidarity, develop their patriotism, turn toward their fatherland and make a positive contribution to national construction and defense.

2. To develop the people's right of collective mastery and motivate and push forward the movement of carrying out revolutionary actions to successfully fulfill the 1982 State Plan and firmly defend the fatherland's security.

A. In the movement of promoting productive labor, to motivate the people to endeavor to produce grain, foodstuffs and consumer and export goods and at the same time practice strict conservation in consumption and production, considering conservation in all fields as an important policy. To push ahead the movements of building water conservancy projects and producing manure and to motivate the people in overpopulated areas to go and build new economic zones. To motivate people to adopt stationary farming and sedentary living habits in moutain provinces. To step up the movement of tree planting and afforestation and oppose the burning and destruction of forests.

We must further bolster the role of the various front echelons and organizations in teaching and motivating the masses to respond to the policy of stepping up socialist transformation in the southern provinces and perfecting socialist production relations in the northern provinces. We must uphold the spirit of self-reliance and actively participate in improving economic management, distribution and circulation.

B. In the movement of building up all-people's national defense and safeguarding political security, to teach and motivate youths to strictly observe the military service law, to develop the tradition of army-people unity and promote good relations between the armed forces and security forces and the people and to motivate the people to participate in being solicitous of the material and spiritual life of the troops, first of all those in the border areas and on offshore islands.

To teach the people to ceaselessly uphold vigilance, oppose the enemy's psychological and espionage war, fight the enemy's economic sabotage and push forward the movement of all the people defending national security and social order and security. To effectively help the administration and the security forces discover, track down and suppress the counterrevolutionary remnants and Chinese spies and commandos. To hold aloft the spirit of combat readiness among the people and armed forces. To resolutely and properly rebuff the Chinese expansionists' acts of encroachment and armed provocation.

To whip up a mass movement to participate in successfully implementing the armed forces rear area policy. To care for the families of wounded soliders and fallen combatants and for fallen combatants children, to help those troops' families that are short in manpower and to join forces with the administration in satisfactorily carrying out the policy toward demilitarized soldiers who have returned to the regions.

To pay attention to consolidating solidarity among the compatriots of various ethnic nationalities as well as army-people solidarity, particularly in the northern border provinces and the Central Highlands. To oppose all the Chinese reactionaries' and U.S. imperialists' divisive and sabotage plots. To uphold the notion that the entire country must contribute to building and defending the fatherland's border areas.

3. To launch a mass movement of participating in building and consolidating the people's administration and strengthening the socialist legal system. To continue to disseminate among the people the contents of the new Constitution and new laws, to stress to them the need of seriously implementing the Constitution and the state laws and to organize them to discuss and make suggestions concerning draft laws.

To strengthen and improve cooperation between front committees and organizations, on the one hand, and state agencies, on the other, in developing the people's right of collective mastery and enhancing the socialist legal system. To study and work out, along with the responsible agencies, regulations on the actual scope, authority and tasks of the front and the various organizations in checking on the activities of state agencies and in combating negative phenomena and violations of policies, the law and the people's right of collective mastery.

In the regions, along with the responsible agencies, to continue to sum up the experiences of the front and the various organizations in their participation in the elections to the National Assembly and people's councils at various levels. To promote measures aimed at furthering the close relations between National Assembly and People's Council deputies and the electors.

To make suggestions to various responsible sectors and agencies to rapidly and appropriately resolve people's complaints and denunciations with a view to strictly implementing the state's regulations on handling such complaints and denunciations. To regularly organize democratic activities and contacts between front committees and organizations, on the one hand, and the various strata of the people, circles, nationals and religions, on the other, with a view to helping the people raise their understanding of party policies and state laws and of the right of collective mastery and to collecting the people's ideas and aspirations and conveying them to the various party committee echelons and the administration.

4. To push forward the movement of building a new lifestyle and new-culture families. To further strengthen and improve the activities of the front and the various organizations in this regard. The regions, especially those at the grassroots level, should hold meetings to initially sum up activities and reports and sum up experiences with a view to making the masses see the progress and shortcomings in implementing the four objectives of the movement and subsequently develop the good points and criticize and overcome the weaknesses and negative and backward manifestations.

To develop past results and experiences. To guide and motivate the people in working out and implementing agreements on the new lifestyle and on new procedures in weddings and funerals. To motivate the people to actively participate in the movement of building new-culture families and new-type people, paying attention to the care and education of children.

To continue to push forward the movement among the people of fighting the old society's vices, the vestiges of reactionary and decadent culture and the poisonous effects of neo-colonialist culture and of building the socialist cultural revolution. To continue to step up the family planning movement, striving to further reduce the rate of population growth.

5. To strengthen the international relations of friendship and cooperation between our people and the world's peoples. To inform and educate our people on the implementation of the foreign policy of our party and state. To increase our country's all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries.

To intensify the special relationships between our country and fraternal Laos and Kampuchea. To oppose Chinese expansionism and U.S. imperialism. To make worthy contributions to the common struggle of the peoples of the world to safeguard peace. To support other nations' struggle for national independence, democracy and social progress. To make our people of all strata aware that close solidarity and comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union constitute a foremost and important guarantee for the steady advance of socialist revolution and the protection of our people's national independence and that close solidarity among the fraternal peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea is a matter that concerns their survival, a solid guarantee for the independence and the successful building of socialism of each country and an important factor for peace and stability in Southeast Asia. To coordinate with the state's activities in its foreign relations. To continue denouncing before world public opinion the crimes committed by the Chinese expansionists, who, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries, are waging a multifaceted war of sabotage against the revolutions of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea, causing contradictions between the ASEAN and Indochinese countries and creating a strained situation in Southeast Asia.

6. To consolidate the front's organizations and improve its working methods. To continue consolidating and expanding these organizations. To improve and strengthen the working relations between front committees and the various organizations, on the one hand, and state agencies, on the other. To advance in building a system of close and continuous cooperation between the front and state agencies in motivating the people to implement the revolutionary tasks in the various branches and localities. To organize study toward thoroughly understanding the functions and tasks of all front echelons and to work out specific plans for their implementation in each echelon. To strengthen the front's organizations at the district, grassroots, village and ward levels. To speed up the organization of front congresses in areas where there are officially still no front committees. To expand the movement of building and multiplying model progressive front organizations at the grassroots level. To study and gain experience in adopting suitable ways of gathering the masses in each populated area. To intensify the training and improvement of cadres in charge of front tasks and to work out plans for organizing retired cadres to work actively within the front at all levels, especially at the grassroots level.

We are stepping into 1982 facing very great tasks and numerous great difficulties. The struggle between the two roads and between our people and the enemies inside our country as well as throughout the world will go on in a fierce and complex manner. But we rejoice at the fact that the forthcoming Fifth VCP Congress will set forth the guidelines suited to our country's actual conditions and will show us the way to overcome difficulties and advance gradually and steadily.

At the forthcoming VFF Congress, we will seek to thoroughly understand the leading party's line and policies in all our activities. With the common efforts of our front at all levels and of all political parties and mass and other organizations, we are convinced that our VFF will satisfactorily play its role as a solid pillar of the state and will make worthy contributions to our people's revolutionary undertaking in the coming years.

VO CHI CONG ADDRESSES CONTRACTUAL WORK MEETING

OW041417 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 3 Jan 82

[Excerpts] The Council of Ministers recently held a meeting on contractual work at state-owned stations, plantations, corporations, enterprises and farms in the agricultural, forestry, fishery, water conservancy and rubber sectors. Comrade Vo Chi Cong, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, presided over the meeting.

Opening the meeting, the comrade Council of Ministers vice chairman highlighted the aims of this meeting as follows:

[Begin recording] At the beginning of this year, along with guidance in expanding product contracts with the laborers in agricultural cooperatives in production groups, the Council of Ministers decided to expand the forms of contract wages and bonuses in state-owned production and business units. The fact that the system of product contracts in agricultural cooperatives and production groups -- which enjoyed close guidance from the central to the regional levels -- was carried out broadly and uniformly and was turned into an enthusiastic and vigorous mass movement, constituted an important factor assuring the complete success of agricultural production in 1981. Repeated preliminary summaries and thorough recapitulation of contractual work in agricultural cooperatives and production groups have been carried out.

However, the adoption of contracts and various forms of bonuses in state-owned agricultural, forestry, fishery and maritime product production units was still uneven, restricted and awkward, despite the fact that this was satisfactorily carried out in many installations. This work has not been turned into a movement as in the case of product contracts in cooperatives and production groups. For this reason, the Council of Ministers has convened this meeting with a view to achieving the following requirements:

1. To make a preliminary review of what has been done so that the central and regional state-owned installations in the agricultural, forestry, maritime product, water conservancy and rubber sectors may learn from one another's experiences.

2. To push the payment of wages forward, based on contracts and products and the adoption of various forms of bonuses in state-owned production and business units, turning this into a vigorous and broad movement that will bring about high economic efficiency.

3. To initially solve problems relating to management through preliminary reviews of contractual work, with a view to stabilizing and developing production in state-owned production and business units.

4. To create a powerful development by launching fruitful business enterprise which will include audits and to launch an enthusiastic production emulation drive in state-owned installations; to successfully fulfill the resolution of the 11th Central Committee Plenum on the 1982 Economic and Social Plan; to register achievements starting with the first days of January, to greet the fifth party congress and to implement its resolutions. [end recording]

After hearing reports on preliminary results obtained by each sector, the meeting heard a number of typical reports by the aforementioned sectors concretely outlining contractual work adopted by their respective units and assessing the results, existing problems and future prospects for development.

These reports affirm that recently the product contract movement in the state-owned production installations carried out in various and creative forms has created a new development in the cadres' and workers' productive labor movement through an increase of labor productivity, a more rational use of the material and technical base, exploitation of our potential and the initial application of the practice of economically efficient work in large-scale socialist production.

The reports also analyze in depth the causes and factors that led to satisfactory and unsatisfactory aspects of the movement and at the same time suggest ideas to help the product contract movement continue to develop powerfully in the future.

After adopting the system of product contracts in state-owned production units of the agricultural, forestry, fishery, water conservancy and rubber sectors in accordance with the 16-CP, 25-CP and 26-CP resolutions, it is observed that the product contract movement in these production units has generally achieved very encouraging results recently, despite the fact that this movement has not become as widespread and enthusiastic as that carried out by agricultural production cooperatives -- only some 50 percent of state-owned units have so far adopted contractual work -- and despite the fact that this movement has not been uniformly carried out in all sectors, being more vigorous in the agricultural and maritime product sectors and more widespread in state-owned installations belonging to ministries as compared to those of the regions and so forth.

Comrade Vo Chi Cong, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, assessed the results of the movement as follows in his recapitulation of the meeting:

[Begin recording] With regard to the results of contractual work achieved by the various sectors, we see that, first, production has developed. Output value has increased greatly in some areas and negligibly in other areas. In general, however, the increase has been about 30 percent. In some areas, the increase was 50 percent. In other areas, the increase was even twofold or threefold.

Second, labor productivity has increased. In its recapitulation of results obtained by areas that have adopted contractual work, the Ministry of Agriculture reported that the agriculture sector increased its productivity by 30 percent and that, in the forestry sector, many state forests increased their labor productivity twofold in some areas and by two and one-half times in some other areas. In general, labor productivity has increased in all sectors.

Third, production costs have decreased. Production and raw materials have been used rationally, economically and effectively. With regard to profits and losses, all the units where good contractual work was carried out have moved from losses to profits. In areas where contractual work has not yet been satisfactorily carried out, the losses have gradually decreased.

Fourth, the three interests were realized. According to preliminary results released by the Ministry of Agriculture the state's interests were increased an average of 30 percent. The enterprises' interests were increased, and the interests of the cadres and workers in the agricultural sector increased by some 60 percent.

Finally, the socialist relations of production were consolidated and strengthened. Most clearly, the means of production and the state's enterprises' property was safeguarded and strengthened. The various systems and discipline in all respects were strictly observed. Socialist labor was strengthened. The workers, encouraged and becoming aware, have begun to exercise their right of collective mastery in their enterprises. [end recording]

REVIEW OF DECEMBER ISSUE OF TAP CHI CONG SAN

BK290341 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1800 GMT 27 Dec 81

[Summary] "The December 1981 issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN has been published with an editorial entitled 'The Important Tasks of the People's Armed Forces in the New Period.'" The editorial points out: At present, the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionaries are actually carrying out a very insidious and comprehensive sabotage strategy against our country in all the political, military, economic, cultural, social and diplomatic fields in an attempt to destabilize and weaken us, to foment rebellions, to launch a war of aggression against our country when an opportunity presents itself, and eventually to annex Vietnam together with Laos and Kampuchea.

"The world situation is also very tense due to the military buildup and active preparations for a new world war with nuclear arms by U.S.-led imperialism.

"In view of this situation, we have to fulfill two very weighty strategic tasks: To step up the building of socialism and always maintain the highest combat readiness simultaneously so as to defend the fatherland firmly under any circumstances and, at the same time, to contribute actively to the struggle to preserve peace throughout the world.

"As the principal instrument in the direct struggle against wars of aggression and as the pillar of the all-people national defense system, our armed forces must naturally stand on the first line of the national defense front. Our armed forces must firmly defend the state of proletarian dictatorship and the working people's socialist collective mastery, protect political security and public order and safety and safeguard the cause of socialist revolution and the building of socialism of our people.

"Together with the entire people, our armed forces must frustrate the Chinese reactionaries' insidious and comprehensive sabotage strategy against our country. Our armed forces must always stand shoulder to shoulder with the fraternal Lao and Kampuchean peoples and armed forces to defend firmly the monumental revolutionary achievements which the three Indochinese countries have recorded and safeguard steadily their present great revolutionary cause, namely, to consolidate national independence and advance to socialism, thereby directly contributing to developing a strong strategic position and increasingly powerful forces for the countries on the Indochinese Peninsula.

"In addition to the most important task of standing ready to fight in the defense of the fatherland, in the new period our armed forces also have the tasks of engaging in productive labor, building the economy in appropriate ways, and joining the entire people in stepping up socialist transformation and building socialism.

"In economic building, our armed forces must first of all join efforts with various economic sectors and localities throughout the country in stepping up agricultural, forestry, fishery and industrial production, and contribute to promoting the development of the energy, mining and capital construction sectors in support of agriculture, forestry, industry and communications and transportation. At the same time, they must contribute to shaping new economic zones and population centers in important regions; satisfactorily carry out air transportation; make full use of the capacity equipment, work forces and discards of national defense factories and enterprises to produce more consumer and export goods; satisfactorily discharge international duty and implement international cooperation.

"Of all the economic-building tasks suitable for the conditions of the armed forces, the task of contributing to stepping up the production of grain and food consumer goods is the most significant.

"The editorial then points out: To fulfill these tasks, the armed forces should make every effort to build themselves in all respects so as to create the greatest possible aggregate strength in new circumstances and conditions. Our armed forces must constantly improve their organizational structure and achieve a coherence and balance between the demands of their tasks and the necessary number of troops, between the main and local forces, between the mobile and on-the-spot forces, and between the standing and reserve forces. They must correctly settle the relationship between the quantity and quality of troops and implement the military obligation system.

"Our cadres and combatants must make strenuous efforts in studying and training and incessantly raise their cultural and scientific and technical standards as well as their fighting ability so as to master ever more skillfully, handle ever more expertly and maintain in a truly satisfactory manner the modern equipment and make the most of the effectiveness of all the weapons in thier possession.

"They must fully understand the party's military line in the period of national construction and national defense and make the most active contribution to studying and resolving new problems concerning the military science and art of national defense against the new enemy in the new conditions."

Next is an article by Tran Quoc Hoan, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau, entitled "Strengthen Mass Agitation Work in the New Stage." After pointing out the role of mass agitation work in the conditions of the party holding power, the article expounds the aims of mass agitation in the new stage. The article says: "Mass agitation work in the new stage must be closely combined with production and life, and with the practice of socialist construction and national defense. Mass agitation work must be aimed at enhancing the masses' sense of and capacity for mastery. It must simultaneously ensure the masses' interests and motivate the masses to zealously fulfill the labor and national defense obligations. It must enhance the masses' activity and creativity in developing production and increasing labor productivity as well as in their participation in economic and social management, thereby creating a vigorous and broad revolutionary movement to achieve the common objective: all for the socialist fatherland and the people's happiness."

Also featured in this issue of the journal is an article by Nguyen Thanh Le entitled "Some Problems Concerning the National Liberation Movement." The article points out: "In the present situation, at a time when the reactionary forces among the Chinese ruling circles are cooperating with the United States and colluding with all imperialist and reactionary forces in the world against the world revolution, if the newly liberated countries want to safeguard their national independence and achieve national sovereignty in the economic field, they must combine the struggle against imperialism with the struggle against Chinese expansionism and hegemonism."

Next comes an article by Tran Van Phac entitled "On the Major Campaign To Develop the Fine Character and Increase the Fighting Strength of the People's Armed Forces." The article says: "Over the past 3 years, this campaign has been widely conducted among the entire party, people and armed forces and has achieved fine results. Today, in view of the new situation in the country, the armed forces must assume very big and weighty tasks. The key and decisive factor is that the armed forces must have high quality and great fighting strength. This is both an immediate and basic long-term demand of the armed forces-building task. At present, the armed forces must firmly grasp their central political tasks, namely, incessantly improve the overall quality of troops; build the material and technical bases of national defense; and, at the same time, satisfactorily fulfill economy building and international duties.

"To ensure the fulfillment of these weighty tasks, in 1981 and 1982 the campaign must meet the following demands:

"1. Strong will, high sense of responsibility, strict discipline and fine unity.
"2. Raise the sense of and capacity for mastery of weapons, vehicles, machines, supplies, fuel and all other material and technical bases.
"3. Raise the level of and capacity for leadership, organization, command and management, and build strong basic units.
"4. Satisfactorily achieve army-people unity and international solidarity.
"5. Satisfactorily organize the material, spiritual and cultural life of troops."

In an article entitled "Why Do a Number of Peasants in the Nam Bo Rural Area Still Remain Landless?" the journal asks: "Why is it that 5 years after the promulgation of the land ownership adjustment policy in the southern countryside to ensure that land is distributed to peasants having no or insufficient land, a number of them still remain landless or do not have enough cultivable land and, therefore, have to work as hired hands and are subject to exploitation?

The article points out: "In most of the cases, peasants have no or insufficient land because of the fact that some localities have failed to scrupulously implement the policy of taking away the portion of land devoted to exploitative purposes of those people who have more land than needed and distributing it to them; or because a number of state organs, cadres, workers and civil servants or local cadres illegally appropriate land confiscated and expropriated from or donated by other exploiting elements for personal production purposes instead of allocating it to those peasants having insufficient or no land.

"Therefore, all local leadership organs must resolutely and urgently continue to adjust land ownership, do away with illegal appropriation of land, and distribute and land to those peasants having insufficient or no land. This must be done in conjunction with motivating peasants to participate in the movement to build collective production organizations so as to help one another overcome difficulties and step up production."

Next comes an article entitled "Vinh Lac District Gradually Builds Its Agroindustrial Economic Structure" by (Hoang Ham), secretary of the Vinh Lac District Party Committee. "The article introduces Vinh Lac's efforts to advance to creating an agroindustrial economic structure in the district."

The journal also carries an article entitled "Some Reflections on the Realities in Trieu Hai" by (Le Van Hoan), secretary of the Trieu Hai District party committee. The article "raises with the competent organs and sectors concerned the problem of studying a rational decentralization aimed at creating proper conditions for Trieu Hai District's satisfactory exploitation of its potential in terms of labor, land, forests, sea areas and other existing material bases and to reorganize production effectively."

Featured next is an article written for the journal by Mongolian deputy Foreign Minister Dambadzar entitled "The MPR's Foreign Policy and the Problem of Consolidating Peace in Southeast Asia." The article "shows that the foreign policy of the Mongolian party and state is aimed at creating favorable international conditions for consolidating national independence, enriching the Mongolian people's achievements and successfully building socialism in Mongolia while contributing to consolidating the strength of the world socialist system."

ANIMAL DEATHS CITED IN AGRICULTURE REVIEW

BK221404 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 22 Dec 81

[Review of agricultural activities over the past 10 days]

[Summary] "By mid-December, the northern provinces and cities had sown rice seedlings on more than 80,000 hectares. The area of rice seedlings already sown is large enough to plant rice on 80 percent of the area slated for this winter-spring crop season." In recent days, due to cold weather, rice seedlings have developed slowly and a large portion of these rice seedlings has been affected by insects and blight. Along with sowing rice seedlings, the northern provinces and cities have plowed more than 600,000 hectares of rice fields, an increase of some 5,000 hectares over the same period last year.

"In recent days, also due to cold weather, the cultivation of the winter-spring rice has slowed down. To date, this rice has been planted on only a little more than 5,000 hectares in Ha Tuyen, Cao Bang, Bac Thai, Hoang Lien Son, Ha Bac, Thanh Hoa and Binh Tri Thien Provinces and Haiphong City."

To date, the northern provinces and cities have prepared as many as 4 million tons of fertilizer for use during the winter-spring crop season. These provinces and cities, however, have been able to secure only 6,000 hectares of duckweeds, a shortfall of more than 10,000 hectares compared with the same period last year.

"The southern provinces and cities have so far completed soil preparation on 300,000 hectares and planted winter-spring rice on nearly 200,000 hectares. The cultivation of this rice in these provinces and cities, however, is still slow compared to last year.

"Along with planting the winter-spring rice, the southern provinces and cities have harvested more than 300,000 hectares of 10th-month rice, some 20 percent of the cultivated area." These provinces and cities are now mobilizing manpower to harvest this rice on the remaining area.

"To date, winter-spring subsidiary and industrial crops have been planted on more than 300,000 hectares throughout the country. This figure, however, shows a decrease of more than 50,000 hectares compared to the same period last year."

After finishing the cultivation of the winter crops, the northern provinces and cities immediately switched to planting spring vegetables and subsidiary crops. "Over the past 20 days, these provinces and cities have planted spring vegetables and subsidiary crops on another 20,000 hectares, with sweet potatoes accounting for the largest part."

Meanwhile, the southern provinces and cities are accelerating the cultivation of the spring subsidiary crops. "Over the past 10 days, these provinces and cities have planted another 20,000 hectares of spring subsidiary and industrial crops."

One problem in animal husbandry which we should pay attention to is the present outbreak of epidemics among domestic animals, particularly hogs. "According to the reports received from Bac Thai, Ha Bac, Ha Son Binh, Ha Hung, and the provinces of the former Zone 4, as many as 30,000 hogs have been killed by epidemics, mostly cholera, since 1 October. Despite prompt action by all affected localities, these epidemics are still spreading."

According to the General Hydrometeorological Department, the temperature during the next 10 days will be warmer than the previous 10 days. It is necessary for the northern provinces to take advantage of the sunny and warm days to accelerate soil preparation and the cultivation of subsidiary and industrial crops, while caring for winter-spring rice seedlings against insects and blight and stamping out all pockets of epizootic diseases harmful to domestic animals and fowl. Meanwhile, the southern provinces should concentrate on quickly harvesting the 10th-month rice and accelerating the cultivation of winter-spring rice and subsidiary crops.

INTERIOR MINISTRY COMMUNIQUE ON FIRECRACKER BAN

OW051427 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 4 Jan 82

[Text] A recently announced communique of the Ministry of Interior says: Every year on the occasion of the Lunar New Year festival, there are instances of setting off firecrackers, of throwing burning firecrackers at public entertainment places and at places with many passers-by and instances of shooting firearms in place of setting off firecrackers during the Lunar New Year festival, especially during the moment of transition from the old to the new year. All these acts adversely affect public security and order, even cause fires and people's deaths and injuries, thus preventing people from setting their minds at east while celebrating the Lunar New Year festival. In order to ensure public security and order and the people's peace and joy while welcoming the new spring, the Ministry of Interior issues the following communique:

1. It is strictly forbidden to set off firecrackers at public places and places with many passers-by, to throw burning firecrackers at passers-by and into houses and means of transportation, or from high places.

2. It is strictly forbidden to shoot firearms in place of setting off firecrackers during the first days of the Lunar New Year, especially during the moment of transition from the old to the new year.

3. It is strictly forbidden to illegally make firecrackers with any kind of explosive and gunpowder or by any other means. It is strictly forbidden to produce big firecrackers that make a loud explosion that may result in casualties. No one can manufacture firecrackers and utilise firecracker powder without previous registration. The installations authorized to make firecrackers must correctly observe the relevant state regulations.

4. Violators of any of the above regulations will be handled according to state laws in force.

5. All citizens must correctly observe the above regulations. Anyone who prevents in time or detects and reports to the nearest authoritative government agency or public security service any violations of the above regulations will be commended and awarded.

6. People's committees at all levels, mass organizations, armed force units, government agencies, enterprises, worksites, state farms, state forests, hospitals and schools must widely disseminate this communique and must educate cadres, combatants, workers, civil servants, youths, teenagers, students and people to scrupulously observe the above regulations. All families must educate and strictly control their children so as to prevent violations of any of the above regulations.

7. People's Public Security Forces and the People's Army must closely coordinate their activities, conduct patrols and checks, and apply strict measures to prevent violations and must correctly handle violations of the above regulations so as to properly maintain public security and enable the people to joyfully celebrate the Lunar New Year festival in peace.

DIRECTIVE ON PARTY ORGANIZATION CONGRESSES

[Text] The VCP Secretariat has issued a directive on the requirements and procedures for holding party organization congresses at all levels and appointing delegates to attend the Fifth VCP Congress.

The directive says: The forthcoming national VCP congress will concentrate the intellect of the entire party and all people on further concretizing the party's line on the socialist revolution. It will develop strengths and positive factors and establish guidelines and measures for overcoming difficulties and correcting the shortcomings that will arise during the 1981-1985 5-year plan and in subsequent years. It is an important event for the socialist revolutionary cause, which is to defend the socialist fatherland firmly and continue to fulfill our international obligations.

The congresses of party organizations at all levels are aimed at making elaborate preparations for the Fifth VCP Congress and organizing the implementation of the resolutions of the national congress.

The objectives of these party organizations' congresses are as follows:

— To enhance the sense of responsibility of all party members and delegates; strengthen democracy by providing them an opportunity to discuss in detail the various problems raised by the VCP Central Committee and party members; and make a positive contribution to solving the problems shared by the party and each individual party organization.

— To promote a better understanding of the party's line and policy through the study and discussion of central government documents related to the realities of each locality and unit. In this context, party committees are to prepare draft proposals for presentation at the party organization congresses.

— To appoint appropriate and qualified delegates to party organization congresses and the national VCP congress in order to improve the quality of party committees as stipulated in the requirements set forth by the VCP Central Committee.

— To contribute to achieving firm unanimity at the national VCP congress; strengthen solidarity among all party members and in each individual party organization; and create favorable conditions for the triumphant implementation of the resolutions of the national congress.

— To ensure that all national VCP congress resolutions are profoundly understood; conduct criticism and self-criticism scrupulously on the weak and strong points of party organizations and committees; perfect draft proposals to be presented at the VCP congress; and ensure that the various decisions taken by party organization congresses are positive, realistic and firm.

The party organization congresses will be organized in two phases. The first phase will discuss reports on situations and tasks concerning the amendment of party regulations and appoint delegates to attend party organization congresses and the national VCP congress. The second phase will be held after the national VCP congress to review the implementation of previous resolutions, study and discuss the implementation of the Fifth National VCP Congress resolutions, define new tasks for party organizations during the 5-year 1981-85 plan (especially new terms for party committees), and appoint new executive bodies for party committees that have completed their tenure of office. In some places, supplementary appointments or changes in the membership of party committees can be conducted if the party organization congresses deem it proper.

The appointment of delegates to attend party organization congresses and the national VCP congress must be carried out carefully and effectively to ensure that both are attended by well-qualified delegates.

BUILDING OF RESERVE FORCES FOR DEFENSE URGED

BK311512 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 14 Dec 81 p 3

[Article by Quang Si: "Build Reserve Forces in National Defense War"]

[Text] The task of building reserve forces holds a very important position in the preparation for mobilization in case of war. In modern wars with new developments in weaponry and technical and military equipment, the building of reserve forces becomes a question of strategic importance and interest to nearly all countries which want to closely combine the economy with national defense in order to prepare the country for war. V.I. Lenin said: "In war victories belong to those who possess numerous reserve forces or larger forces and to those who stay close to and deep among the masses."

The building of reserve forces holds an important significance not only for national defense but also for the economy. It contributes to creating a balance between the economy and national defense. In building the reserve forces, if we can ensure that we have numerous, good quality, adequately trained, tightly organized and highly combat ready forces with an appropriate structure encompassing all the armed services and branches and all the specialized, professional and technical sectors, we will create a firm basis on which to promptly mobilize and develop forces in case of war. In modern wars the system for preparing and replacing the standby mobilized forces is an important factor which determines the level of war preparedness of the armed forces. The task of deploying and mobilizing reserve forces is part and parcel of the development of armed forces.

In our country, our forefathers used to pay much attention to building reserve forces, even during the period from the Ly (1075-1077) to the Tran and Le dynasties and so forth. They all implemented the policy of "turning stationed troops into farmers," which meant to keep troops in agricultural production jobs. Thanks to this policy, our forefathers could defeat all aggressors coming from the north, although our country was small and did not have many people then. Now, under the party leadership, the people's warfare has reached a new peak and is being improved through our preparations for a national defense war. Through a few decades of war, our country has had a large force of officers, non-commissioned officers and combatants who are well forged and tempered in combat. After fulfilling their active service, they are discharged and shifted to various sectors to form a powerful reserve force of high quality if they are organized, registered, administered and the trained adequately. These are the fundamental advantages and guarantees for our country to build a qualitatively and quantitatively good reserve force quickly to meet the requirements of mobilization in time of war.

In order to build a good reserve force, a matter of primary concern is to vigorously change the thinking of all party members, people and troops, making them well aware of the great importance of the task of building reserve forces for national construction and defense. On this basis we will make our best effort to build within the shortest period of time a good quality reserve force tightly organized into perfect units and corps ready to be mobilized in time of war. We must emphasize the task of national defense education to ensure that all of the people and the troops thoroughly understand the revolutionary situation and tasks, their military duty and the party's strategic resolution in the new revolutionary stage, and to enhance their sense of national defense, vigilance and determination to fight. The educational task must be closely combined with such other activities as propaganda and motivation and with various organizational and policy-making measures. It must be conducted from the central level to the provincial, city and grass-roots levels, and among the various party committee echelons, party members and people. The leading role of local party organizations is an important factor to ensure success in building reserve forces. The centralized, unified, comprehensive and direct leadership of local party organizations is the main strength that can attract all the people to participate in building reserve units. By adequately calculating the political, economic and military conditions of provinces and cities, and the general requirements of the entire country, we will determine our tasks and guidelines for developing the armed forces in provinces and cities. On the one hand, we can ensure permanent combat readiness for the regional armed forces in time of peace while on the other, we can build reserve units for mobilization in time of war. This will enable us to mobilize the greatest potentials of localities and the whole country to defeat the aggressors.

In organizing the force, we must clearly and continuously determine the tasks and guidelines for building reserve units as bases on which to perform other jobs. Based on the general plans of localities, we should outline plans and various steps to be performed in order to secure coordination among sectors and echelons. This will enable us to avoid perfunctoriness and wastage and to build strong reserve units with combat tactics of regular army units involving various armed services and branches and being able to fight on all types of terrain. These units must be organized and administered closely so that upon receiving a mobilization order they can be quickly assembled to engage in combat. Mobilized reserve units must be organized perfectly into detachments to include both officers and enlisted men of the infantry and other armed services. They must be linked closely with various production organizations and be placed under the direct leadership of the local party committee echelons. This is a measure to link the economy closely with national defense and to ensure that all reserve units can be built, administered, trained, improved and consolidated well in time of peace.

ASEAN ENVOYS TO URGE FRANCE TO SUSPEND SRV AID

BK071515 Hong Kong AFP in English 0842 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Bangkok, 7 Jan (AFP) -- Ambassadors of the five members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) will meet French External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson in Paris on Friday to seek suspension of French aid to Vietnam, it was learned here today. Thai and foreign diplomatic sources said the ASEAN ambassadors would express their concern to Mr Cheysson regarding the French aid in light of Vietnam's military presence in Cambodia.

At the end of last month, the Indonesian ambassador in Paris met French Foreign Ministry officials to seek, on behalf of ASEAN, "clarifications and express concern" over a 200 million-franc ($40 million) Franco-Vietnamese financial protocol, diplomatic sources here said. "We oppose the French decision to provide aid to Vietnam," a Thai Foreign Ministry source said today.

The non-communist ASEAN five -- Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand -- have pressed for a halt to all aid to Vietnam until Hanoi pulls its 200,000 troops out of Cambodia to make way for free elections.

OANA PRESIDENT MARKS LAUNCHING OF NEWS NETWORK

BK310949 Hong Kong AFP in English 0907 GMT 31 Dec 81

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, 31 Dec (AFP) -- The ASIA-PACIFIC NEWS NETWORK (ANN) launched by the ORGANIZATION OF ASIA-PACIFIC NEWS AGENCIES (OANA) last November goes into operation tomorrow.

In a message marking the occasion, OANA President Ahmad Mustapha Hassan urged member agencies to keep in mind ANN's two major objectives to ensure that the network succeeded in bringing the peoples of the Asia-Pacific region closer together. One such aim is to redress the current imbalance in news flow. The other is to promote good will, harmony, understanding and cooperation among the peoples in the Asia-Pacific region. ANN was launched at the Fifth General Assembly of OANA in Kuala Lumpur last November, when OANA also expanded its membership from 14 to 23.

Ahmad Mustapha, the general manager of the Malaysian news agency BERNAMA, said he was proud that OANA was able to help fulfill the aspirations of the people. "We have been very positive in our approach and very professional in our decisions, and this means that we are very responsible in our role to fulfill our task of giving meaning to the political independence that we have secured," he said. To know and then to understand one another had been the basis of the formation of OANA, and ANN will enhance the information and the knowledge that the peoples had about this area, he added.

"Without understanding, there can never be peace, and without peace there can never be development," he noted.

Mr Ahmad Mustapha expressed OANA's gratitude to UNESCO, the International Telecommunications Union, governments and governmental agencies and other organisations and individuals for helping OANA overcome hurdles in establishing ANN. He said OANA hoped to continue its close association with these organisations, not only as far as ensuring that ANN remained viable, but also in other matters of mutual concern and benefit.

MINISTERIAL MEETING TO DISCUSS POLAND, ROK AID

OW071229 Tokyo KYODO in English 1216 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 7 (KYODO) -- The Japanese Government will convene a meeting of Cabinet ministers concerned with general security affairs in mid-January to study developments in Poland and the related global situation and discuss what steps Japan should take in response, government sources said Thursday.

The government has already decided on a basic position of acting in close concert with the European Community (EC) on the Polish issue. But, since the situation in the East European country is very fluid and poses a major threat to world peace, the Cabinet ministers will discuss what actual measures Japan should take to cope with developments there, the sources said.

Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki is putting particular stress on unified actions by the Western camp on the Polish issue. The ministers thus will probably decide on closer contacts with the United States and the EC group on the matter and confirm the Japanese position of urging Soviet self-restraint, observers predicted.

In a Wednesday meeting with Soviet Ambassador Dmitriy Polyanskiy, Prime Minister Suzuki said that Japan shares the view held by the United States that Moscow is responsible for the current Polish crisis. Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi repeated the Japanese position in a meeting with the Soviet ambassador Thursday.

Taking part in the upcoming Cabinet meeting will be Prime Minister Suzuki, Foreign Minister Sakurauchi, Defense Agency chief Soichiro Ito, Minister of International Trade and Industry Shintaro Abe and other ministers concerned with overall security affairs. The meeting will be also joined by Secretary General Susumu Nikaido and other top-ranking officers of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party. This will be the first meeting of its kind since Premier Suzuki reshuffled his Cabinet and party leaders on November 30.

At the ministerial meeting, Foreign Minister Sakurauchi will first brief his colleagues about the latest developments in Poland, U.S. economic sanctions against the Soviet Union and views among the EC member nations. Free discussions will follow, the government sources said. Discussion will likely center on the outcome of the Washington meeting between U.S. President Ronald Reagan and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt on Tuesday. The government is not likely to immediately follow the U.S. with sanctions against the Soviet Union, but will confirm the basic policy of actions in concert with the EC nations, the observers said.

The ministerial discussions will also touch on Japan's economic assistance to South Korea, a matter on which the two countries will hold high-ranking official consultations in Seoul January 14-16.

ENVOY TO EC BRIEFS SUZUKI ON POLAND, TRADE

OW071309 Tokyo KYODO in English 1158 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 7 (KYODO) -- Japan's ambassador to the European Community (EC), Takaaki Kagawa, Thursday recommended that Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki implement measures against the martial law regime in Poland at least as strong as those taken by West European nations. He made the recommendation after noting that EC nations would naturally differ with the U.S. in responding to developments in Poland because their historical and geographical backgrounds are not identical with those of the U.S., informed sources said.

The ambassador, now back in Tokyo, said in that context that he sees no need for Japan to join Washington in imposing strong positive sanctions against the military government of Poland.

Kagawa expressed his views on the Polish situation during a call at the prime minister's official residence to brief Suzuki on the EC's stance toward developments in Poland, the economic situation in the Common Market and trade relations between the EC and Japan.

Referring to complaints in the Common Market over massive trade deficits with Japan, the ambassador emphasized that Japan should strive to boost imports from EC nations as much as possible by allowing their products far greater access to the Japanese market. This is all the more necessary because of the serious economic difficulties in the EC countries, he said. To those EC nations afflicted with growing unemployment and quickening inflation, Japan's ever-swelling trade surplus is the subject of envy, he said.

The ambassador warned that if Tokyo should do nothing to rectify the trade imbalance with the Common Market, the EC nations might even try to make a scapegoat of this country. It would not be at all easy for the EC economies to attain even the generally-predicted low growth pace of 2 to 3 percent this year, Ambassador Kagawa reported.

Prime Minister Suzuki told the diplomat that Tokyo is now preparing appropriate measures to improve Japan's trade relations with the Common Market. He is fully aware of the EC's economic plight, he said.

ADMIRAL LONG HOLDS TALKS WITH SAKURAUCHI, ITO

OW071235 Tokyo KYODO in English 1157 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 7 (KYODO) — Adm Robert Long, commander in chief of U.S. forces in the Pacific, told Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Thursday that the United States expects Japan to continue strengthening its defense power.

Adm Long, presently visiting Japan to attend a meeting of the Japan-U.S. Security Consultative Committee in Tokyo, expressed his gratitude for efforts made by Foreign Minister Sakurauchi in increasing Japan's new defense budget, during his conference with the foreign minister at the Foreign Ministry. Long went on to say that Japan should continue similar efforts in future.

Foreign Minister Sakurauchi replied that Japan wants to continue the steady efforts it has been making to increase its defense capacity.

Prior to his conference with the foreign minister, Adm Long paid a courtesy call on Defense Agency Director General Soichiro Ito at the agency. Adm Long told the director general that he appreciates the efforts made by the Japanese Government to increase the 1982 defense budget by 7.754 percent over the 1981 fiscal year level. He also said that Japan-U.S. defense cooperation has special importance for the security of the free nations. His statement was interpreted to mean that the United States places great expectations on Japan-U.S. cooperation in such fields as military technology.

Ito expressed his understanding for the U.S. admiral's opinion, and promised to push defense cooperation.

U.S. SENATORS DISCUSS TRADE WITH SAKURAUCHI

OW080650 Tokyo KYODO in English 0637 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 8 (KYODO) — Contending that U.S. products are not being accorded fair treatment in the Japanese market, two U.S. senators urged Japan Friday to redouble efforts to give them better access to the market.

In a meeting with Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, Senators John C. Danforth, Republican-Missouri, and John H. Chafee, Republican-Rhose Island, said the swelling U.S. trade deficit with Japan is indeed a big problem.

But the more important problem is that there is a strong belief in the United States that Japan does not accord fair treatment to U.S. products in its market when there should be a spirit of reciprocity, Danforth said. Danforth, chairman of the Senate Trade Subcommittee, said it is important for the two nations to build up fairer relations.

Danforth, known here as a hardliner on Japan-U.S. trade, introduced last year legislation for curbing Japanese car imports to the United States.

Chafee said American commodities should be given fairer opportunities in the Japanese market so as to appease mounting protectionist sentiment in U.S. Congress.

In reply, Foreign Minister Sakurauchi said he fully understands the U.S. position. He said he would try to promote imports from the United States. In this connection, he explained in detail the Japanese policy on removal of nontariff barriers and tariff reductions.

The U.S. senators arrived there Thursday at the invitation of the Federation of Economic Organizations (Keidanren). While in Japan until January 15, they will confer with government and business leaders.

ECONOMIC TALKS TO BE HELD WITH ROK 14 JAN

OW071219 Tokyo KYODO in English 1132 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Jan 7 (KYODO) — Japan and South Korea have agreed to hold talks between their foreign ministers as soon as possible to settle the problem of a South Korean request for $6 billion in loans from this country, Japan's Foreign Ministry said Thursday.

To prepare for the ministerial meeting, high-ranking officials of the two countries will meet in Seoul January 14-16 the ministry said. Japan will be represented at the preparatory meeting by Akitane Kiuchi, director of the Foreign Ministry's Asian Affairs Bureau, Ministry officials said.

If the prelininary talks go smoothly, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi will visit South Korea around March to pave the way for a final agreement between Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan around May, the officials said.

At the upcoming preparatory talks, Japan hopes to learn details of the economic projects for which South Korea is seeking the Japanese loans, according to the officials.

The Foreign Ministry hopes to hold further rounds of working-level talks with South Korea before reaching broad agreement at the meeting of foreign ministers, they said.

SAUDI OIL MINISTER YAMANI PAYS VISIT 3 JAN

Meeting With Sakurauchi

OW040921 Tokyo KYODO in English 0837 GMT 4 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 4 (KYODO) -- Visiting Saudi Arabian Minister of Petroleum and Mineral Affairs Shaykh Ahmad Zaki Yamani formally told Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Monday that the visit of Saudi Arabian Crown Prince Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz Al Sa'ud to Japan, scheduled to begin next Monday, would be postponed due to the current Middle-Eastern situation, the ministry said. Yamani made the remark in the afternoon here during talks with Sakurauchi, it said.

Meeting With Suzuki

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 5 (KYODO) -- Crown Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia has postponed his scheduled visit to Japan next week because of the tense Mideast situation, Saudi Minister of Petroleum and Mineral Affairs Zaki Yamani officially told Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Tuesday. Yamani paid a courtesy call on Suzuki and delivered the crown prince's message, in which he regretted having to put off the visit. He had been scheduled to arrive here next Monday.

Explaining the short notice, Yamani told Suzuki the crown prince wanted to come to Japan as scheduled even after he postponed his visit to the United States. Israel's annexation of the Golan Heights and other current developments in the Middle East finally forced Fahd to put off his Tokyo visit, according to Yamani. He also conveyed to Suzuki the crown prince's wishes that Japan will contribute to Mideast peace through the United Nations.

Suzuki told Yamani he expected Crown Prince Fahd to visit Japan in the near future.

Yamani, who arrived here Sunday, left for home early in the afternoon.

SUZUKI NOT TO VISIT MIDDLE EAST IN 1982

OW050621 Tokyo KYODO in English 0616 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 5 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Tuesday said he will not visit the Middle East this year. Suzuki made this remark in reply to a reporter's question Tuesday.

For a time last year, there was talk of the prime minister visiting the region early in 1982. But the idea was shelved due to the volatile situation in the Middle East. Officials had said then that the prime minister's busy schedule would allow a visit only during the opening weeks of the year.

LDP LEADERS SEE USSR RELATIONS AS TOP PRIORITY

[Excerpts] Tokyo Jan 4 KYODO -- Ruling Liberal-Democratic Party leaders said Monday that they will concentrate their "parliamentary diplomacy" this year on the improvement of Japan's relations with the Soviet Union. The leaders said that preparations are already being made to send LDP members of the Japan-Soviet Parliamentarian Friendship League toMoscow as part of the new effort. The league members, to be dispatched to the Soviet Union possibly this spring, will include Dietmen Fumio Abe and Eiji Nonaka, they said.

Japan-Soviet relations, strained as a result of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in 1979, are on the verge of further deterioration because of the outbreak of the Poland crisis late last year. Besides the unfavorable international developments, the LDP leaders pointed out Japan and the Soviet Union are faced by such other serious matters in their bilateral relations as the northern territorial problem and economic cooperation. "It is because of these conditions," they said, "that we feel we must do everything possible as members of the Diet (parliament) to better our relations with the Soviet Union."

On the governmental level, the two countries are expected to resume their regular working-level consultation later this month, following the suspension caused by the strained bilateral relations. The Foreign Ministry, however, has so far been reluctant to approve of the efforts made by the LDP members on the "private level" to improve the Japan-Soviet relations. Ministry officials say that it would be rather difficult [to] cordinate the private-level efforts with the government's official policy.

VRPR CITES WORLD DENUNCIATION OF U.S. POLICY

SK070015 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Article from feature program "Trend of the World"]

[Text] In this hour, we will review how Reagan's policy of aggression and war has evoked strong opposition and protest from the international community.

Today's edition of the Tokyo SHIMBUN carries an article contributed by a critic of U.S. diplomacy under the headline "Correctly View the Situation — Reagan's Diplomacy," strongly denouncing Reagan's foreign policy, which has placed priority on the military sector. The article contends that Reagan's foreign and domestic policies have strangled the United States. It adds that Reagan's methods are very dangerous and might lead the world to disaster, quoting Reagan's remarks on limited nuclear war. The article says Reagan is anxious to see the Stars and Stripes hoisted everywhere in the world.

If Reagan does not review his policies, the United States will eventually be isolated or destroyed, the article warns. The isolation of the United States is due to the global anti-war sentiment -- a reaction to Reagan's policy of aggression.

As is known, after gaining power at the behest of U.S. monopoly capitalists, the Reagan administration, in trying to extricate itself from a crisis by pursuing a policy of aggression and war, is rapidly building up its military capabilities. Since its inauguration, the Reagan administration has worked to increase military expenditures and to develop nuclear weapons. In addition, it has frequently staged major military exercises throughout the world. It has put pressure on Japan and West European countries to join the campaign to implement a policy of aggression and war. However, Reagan's policy of war to hoist the Stars and Stripes, now stained with aggression and plunder, is the product of an anachronistic illusion. We live in an era of independence, no one wants to be subject to another's domination. The world's people desire peace, not war.

Accordingly, Reagan's illusion about the hoisting of the Stars and Stripes and world conquest, opposed throughout the world, has experienced failure and frustration. Instead of being raised, the Stars and Stripes have been burned and defiled. U.S. military interference in El Salvador, stepped up with the inauguration of Reagan last January, has fanned an anti-U.S. sentiment in Latin America and the world. To maintain a fascist dictatorial system in El Salvador and thwart the struggle for democratization spreading in Latin America, the United States has brazenly interfered in that country by giving economic and military aid to the reactionary militarists and by sending airborne troops to them.

Voices have been raised in various countries all over the world, including Latin America and Europe, to denounce these acts by Reagan and aggressive U.S. maneuvers, demanding that the United States take its hands off El Salvador and saying that the United States is waging an undeclared war in the Caribbean on the pretext of the crisis in El Salvador. Last March, thousands of people staged an anti-U.S. demonstration in Mexico to protest U.S. interference in El Salvador. Scathingly defining Reagan's maneuvers as an outrageous violation of the sovereignty of El Salvador, they burned the Stars and Stripes.

Many persons in such countries as Grenada, Nicaragua, Denmark, Norway, West Germany, Belgium and Austria have strongly denounced Reagan's schemes for intervention in the internal affairs of El Salvador by staging demonstrations in front of the U.S. Embassies in their countries. The U.S. nuclear war policy faces strong opposition even in Western Europe. Antinuclear meetings and demonstrations continue to be staged in these countries by those opposed to the U.S. military buildup and the deployment of new nuclear weapons in their countries. The Stars and Stripes were burned.

In September, when U.S. Secretary of State Haig was visiting West Germany, some 50,000 anti-American demonstrators in Bonn tore and burned the U.S. flag, shouting that the United States was trying to turn Euorpe and West Germany into a shooting gallery for the superpowers. In October 1981, 150,000 demonstrators in Spain burned the U.S. flag while shouting anti-American slogans.

Such an anti-American trend in Europe began to rise immediately after Reagan hinted in October 1981 at the possibility of limited nuclear war in Europe. Ever since, mass rallies and demonstrations denouncing Reagan's nuclear war policy have continued in the United Kingdom, West Germany, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, the Netherlands and Finland. Those participating at such anti-American rallies and demonstrations shredded U.S. flags, demanding withdrawal from NATO and opposing deployment of nuclear weapons in Europe. The U.S. flag is also being burned in other anti-American demonstrations staged by those protesting the words and deeds of U.S. administration's envoys. In October 1981, when former U.S. Secretary of State Kissinger visited Peru, tens of thousands of citizens there, protesting his visit, burned the Stars and Stripes in his presence and hurled eggs at him. The U.S. special envoy to the Middle East, Philip Habib, also faced strong protest in Arab countries such as Syria. Strong anti-American demonstrations to condemn the deeds of foreign officials were staged in Mexico, Brazil, Greece and West Germany. The outraged demonstrators burned Reagan in effigy and tore up the U.S. flag. Seeing such a phenomenon, on 26 December 1981 former U.S. Presidential Adviser Brzezenski warned that Reagan's policy will be dragged into a crisis by next spring.

Even though Reagan is running wild to realize his dream of dominating the world, he faces only protests and denunciation throughout the world.

VRFR CALLS KIM CHONG-IL 'BENEVOLENT FATHER'

SK071253 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 7 Jan 81

["Ray of Guidance" program: "Great Aide"]

[Text] Voices lauding the dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il as the great leader [wiôaehan yongdoja] assisting the respected and beloved leader's revolutionary cause are daily growing louder. Some time ago, a British journalist wrote that the dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il, as the powerful aide to the great leader, is another sun [tto hanbunui taeyang] not seen before in human history. A personage from Latin America wrote in a newspaper that the future of mankind is bright because the dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il, as aide to the respected and beloved leader, adds lustre to his cause.

Since the dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il made an awe-inspiring and outstanding appearance on the honorable (?platform) of the Sixth KWP Congress in October 1980, a roar of cheers extolling him has been ringing loud in every country in the world.

Needless to say, when there is a great man who has won a shining achievement in history and for mankind, public interest is supposed to be focused on one who assists him. However, the world interest directed to the dear comrade leader is unprecedented in the history of mankind. The dear comrade leader has received the spotlight of the era that no great man has ever received in history, and was chosen as the sole successor to the respected and beloved leader in the midst of great interest and expectations by the world's people.

It is true that world interest and expectation directed to the successor assisting the leader are decided according to the prestige and the revolutionary cause of the leader who will be succeeded by the successor. The great interest focused on the dear comrade leader is attributable to the prestige the respected and beloved leader enjoys among world people for his immortal revolutionary achievements, and to the fact that the inheritance and development of the great leader have become matters of world concern.

The world interest and expectation directed to the dear comrade leader finally turned into stormy acclamations when people saw the great leadership talent possessed by the dear comrade leader.

In actuality, the heavy duty of assisting the leader and of inheriting his cause is not one that can be accomplished by anyone. Only one who possesses the talent of leadership which corresponds to the duty can undertake the heavy task of the times. Moreover, for the great leader, needless to say, only an outstanding person who possesses perfect talent can assist him and inherit his cause.

The great talent of leadership possessed by the dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il was fully displayed through his assistance for the respected and beloved leader and during the course of his handling of party, government, economic, military, cultural and other state affairs.

The dear comrade leader is a model of the Kimilsongists who has fully inherited the great idea, outstanding leadership and noble virture of the respected and beloved leader and is loyally carrying on the revolutionary cause of the leader.

The first qualification required for the successor to assist the leader and inherit and complete his revolutionary cause is loyalty to the leader. Without loyalty to the leader, it is impossible to be loyal to the revolutionary cause.

The dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il, assisting the great leader who pioneered and carried out the chuche cause, is, above all, a model of loyalty to the respected and beloved leader. Holding the fatherly leader in high esteem, he is devoting himself to implementing the far-reaching plan of the leader.

The thought and activities of the dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il stem from and end up in ardent loyalty to the respected and beloved leader. This is shown by the fact that the dear comrade leader has formulated the respected and beloved leader's revolutionary idea as Kimilsongism. The formulation of the leader's idea is not something that can be done by anyone. The job can be done only by the successor who is endlessly loyal to the leader and fully espouses his ideas.

It was in the fall of 1971 when the dear comrade leader was resting awhile in (Mupo), a fishing spot at the foot of Mt. Paektu. With the line dropped in the water, he was in deep meditation, not realizing he had hooked a fish. To a man accompanying him he said: Sitting here with my line cast in the water, I find the thoughts that had been held up in my mind coming forth. And he emotionally talked about the greatness of the respected and beloved leader's revolutionary ideology.

After repeated meditation and research, the dear comrade leader formalized the great leader's ideology as Kimilsongism and promulgated it to the world. On this basis, he further deepened and developed the theory of the Kimilsongism on revolution and construction.

An illustration of the dear comrade leader's loyalty to the great leader can also be found in his assistance to the wise leadership of the great leader, assistance which accelerates the revolution and construction. Loyalty to the leader should be expressed not in words but in deeds and in practice. Without correctly grasping the intentions and plans of the leader and without waging the struggle to put these into practice, loyalty to the leader is inconceivable. Correctly grasping the intentions and plans of the great leader, the dear comrade leader regards it as the most rewarding thing to lighten the burdens of the respected and beloved leader by brilliantly embodying them.

This incident took place on a spring day a few years ago. The dear comrade leadur, who was conducting on-the-spot guidance at a construction site in North Pyongan Province, received a telephone call from abroad from the respected and beloved leader, who, though visiting foreign countries, expressed concern about farming back home. By that night he was in Kangwon Province. Visiting a small farm there, he counted the number of corn stalks planted per pyong, and only when he was briefed by the cadres on the status of farming at that farm did the dear comrade leader feel relieved, believing that the leaders should no longer worry about farming problems.

Determined to unburden the great leader, who was worried about agriculture problems at home even during his visit to foreign countries, the dear comrade leader spent the night on the wind blown paddies of the farm. At the same time, in order to check on the progress of construction projects which the fatherly leader was concerned about, the dear comrade leader, wearing fatigues and work shoes, dropped in on construction sites. He sincerely assisted the great leader by visiting construction sites of houses for the people, which had been begun out of the great leader's consideration for the people.

Day and night, the dear comrade leader devoted himself to relieving the burden of the respected and beloved leader in revolutionary work. It was none but the dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il who ignited the flames of automation by spending days and nights in mining villages after realizing that the leader was intent on relieving the workers from arduous labor.

The dear comrade leader, who faithfully holds in high esteem the respected and beloved leader's intentions and plans, is deftly leading the complicated work of socialist construction by displaying extraordinary revolutionary command abilities and dexterous organizational skills. Thus, wherever he lays his hands, edifices spring up, even in the wilderness, and wherever he directs his gaze, highways are built, even on steep mountains. Such is the legend which always accompanies him. He truly is a genius of creation and construction.

The days he has spent in leading the revolution and construction by carrying out policies with burning loyalty to the respected and beloved leader have been days of love spent trying to see to it that the great leader's consideration and benevolent love for the people reaches everybody.

Always unassuming and humble, the dear comrade leader mixes with the masses and always takes care of every aspect of the public life. This is why the people unanimously call him dear comrade leader and our benevolent father [uriui chaaeroun oboi]. Embodied in this respectful name are the masses' endless admiration and respect and also their boundless intimacy with him.

Indeed, dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il, who is endlessly loyal to the respected and beloved leader and who has embodied in his person the ideology, leadership and the noble virtues of the great leader, is a great aide who leads every aspect of state affairs, including party, state, military, economic and cultural affairs, in line with the intent and hopes of the great leader.

NODONG SINMUN EDITORIAL URGES ECONOMIC PROGRESS

SK081037 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1017 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 8 (KCNA) — NODONG SINMUN in an editorial January 8 calls upon the working people to launch a vigorous drive for carrying out the Second Seven-Year Plan ahead of schedule.

It says: The Second Seven-Year Plan is a grand fighting programme for lifting our national economy to a new, higher peak to suit the level of the nation's economic development which has reached a lofty stage and the lawful demand of socialist and communist construction. When it is fulfilled, our country will turn into a more developed powerful socialist industrial state and a land of happier life for the people and the political and economic potential of the republic will grow beyond comparison.

The fulfilment of this long-range plan will bring about a signal turn in accelerating the complete victory of socialism and providing our people with a more independent and creative living conditions by laying solid material and technical foundations of socialism and raising the material and cultural living standards of the people to a high stage.

The editorial goes on: There remain only three years to go in the Second Seven-Year Plan. We should completely attain the long-range objectives of the vast Second Seven-Year Plan in a far shorter period than these remaining years. To this end, it is important to wage this year's battle successfully in all domains of the national economy. Only when we organize this year's battle successfully can we open up a definite prospect for carrying out the Second Seven-Year Plan ahead of the set time and attain faster the new ten long-range objectives, the higher goals advanced by the sixth congress of the party.

The editorial stresses: When we open up a definite prospect for fulfilling the Second Seven-year Plan ahead of schedule this year through an energetic drive, we can make this significant year in which falls the 70th birthday of the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song a most jubilant year in the history of the revolutionary struggle of our people, just as the party plans. Only then can we further increase the potential of our independent economy which is developing constantly at a high rate and once again powerfully demonstrate the might of unity and cohesion of our party and people.

It is our party's unshakable decision and will to make a decisive progress in the fulfilment of the Second Seven-Year Plan by waging this year's battle well as the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song wishes.

All the functionaries and working people should once again powerfully demonstrate the heroic spirit of our people led by the glorious Workers Party of Korea with an invincible might by performing shining feats in the significant battle this year with intense loyalty to the party and the leader, stresses the editorial.

KOREA TIMES ADVOCATES 'SUMMIT DIPLOMACY'

SK070553 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 7 Jan 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Vitality in Diplomacy"]

[Text] Opening the nation's diplomacy this year will be working-level negotiations between Korea and Japan due to take place in Seoul next week on bilateral economic cooperation, a crucial issue carried over from last year. If things go well as now cautiously hoped with the recent introduction of fresh settings both in Seoul and Tokyo, the two nations are expected to have a meeting of their foreign ministers in March and a summit talk, possibly in May. A breakthrough in the intricate Korea-Japan relations will indeed pave the way not only for a sizable expansion in cooperation between the neighboring countries, which are already interwoven in many fields, but also for promoting regional security.

If the settlement of pending problems with Japan is an imminent task of grave importance, the nation is faced with a host of other diplomatic issues and challenges.

First of all, there is the ever-present imperative of promoting the republic's relations with both friendly and "cool" nations, while fending off or countering persistent North Korean diplomatic maneuvers, for the sake of maintaining peace and stability on the Korean Peninsula and creating a realistic basis for the ultimate territorial unification. This includes painstaking efforts to upgrade existing ties and to cultivate new venues with nations in the formidable nonaligned block, which will hold a summit conference of their own this September in Baghdad and, hopefully, with some of communist states.

Equally important is a pragmatic approach to increase economic cooperation with as many countries as possible and partake in creating international economic conditions conducive to a "second takeoff" in the nation's socioeconomic development. Easier said than done, this also requires shrewd all-round efforts -- probably more than ever -- as world nations, big and small, are inclined to growing nationalism, albeit of different sorts, presenting an ironic side effect of the international trend for interdependence.

For all the challenges and hardship lying ahead, the republic is situated in relatively favorable circumstances, as compared with recent years, in waging more active and vigorous diplomacy.

Along with notable progress in political development and social stability involving the inauguration of the Fifth Republic, the nation last year witnessed corresponding improvement in its external relations.

Highlighting the external outreach were President Chon Tu-hwan's two overseas trips -- first to the United States, the republic's chief ally, followed by a swing through the five member states of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations. Then there were international decisions awarding Seoul the right to host the 1988 world Olympic games and the 1986 Asian games as well.

Continuity is essential in diplomacy and in this sense the developments of last year make up a precious asset. Yet what is also needed are new initiatives -- both to broaden the diplomatic horizon and to meet fresh challenges.

Falling in this category are stepped-up endeavors to materialize more wide-ranging "summit diplomacy" which, featuring exchanges of visits by chief executives with foreign countries for substantive talks, has become popular in the international community. Reports have it that about ten heads of foreign governments in Africa and Southeast Asia may visit Korea this year. Astute efforts are in order to realize their visits, but then why not other foreign leaders? In this connection, we wish to renew our earlier suggestion that due arrangements be expedited for a return visit to Korea by U.S. President Ronald Reagan sometime this year, the centennial of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries.

EDITORIAL SEES HOPE FOR ECONOMY WITH NEW CABINET

SK080157 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 8 Jan 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Hope for Economy"]

[Text] With the emergence of new economic administrators led by acting Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun in the latest Cabinet reshuffle, it is true that industrialists as well as the people as a whole seem to entertain new hope of getting over the economic hardships facing the nation these days.

In view of the adverse economic conditions at home and in the international community at present, we can hardly expect to find any breakthrough immediately, despite the replacement of economic ministers under the present national economic conditions. However, since the newly appointed economic ministers including acting Premier Yu are understood to be seasoned economists, particularly familiar with practical business economy, our industrialists appear to be more hopeful than before for an early recovery from the currently inactive economic activities.

As a result, economic activities have become dull, along with a marked decrease in employment opportunities, while the economic growth pace has been sluggish and domestic demand excessively discouraged.

Even though the nation was able to attain its annual export goal of more than $20 billion last year, the increased imports to a corresponding degree resulted in a trade deficit. Consequently, the national economy has to suffer a worsening international payments situation, most regrettably, exposing a gloomy aspect of the economic situation at home. Even though the commodity prices are said to be rather stable, this is not immediately attributed to effective economic measures but greatly to the stable prices of oil and raw materials in the international markets.

Probably so as to cope with economic reality at this juncture, the new economic ministers are understood to be seeking the wisdom of boldly alleviating the existing restrictive measures detrimental to business and industrial activities. This has been reportedly suggested by acting Premier Yu while meeting with the heads of major economic organizations.

The economic planners are also expected to adopt a policy of having national economic activities steered by the private sector's initiative from now on.

What the majority of people are eager to see is an invigorated economic trend in which they can earn substantial incomes through economic growth to be regained in the days ahead. It is needless to say that employment chances should be widened with domestic demand increasing due to revitalized economic activities in the near future.

We have no reason to oppose the increased volume of exports at a rapid pace. Yet merchandise whose added value is high should be sold more in the foreign markets, thus bringing about profits in substantial amounts from international transactions.

In the sphere of imports, it is most understandable that restrictive measures should be imposed on anything considered not immediately necessary for the national economy. In this way alone can the nation expect to see any favorable turn in the international balance of payments situation before long.

Major stress should be placed on encouraging industrialists to invest, as a means of successfully transcending the presently inactive economic situation.

At the same time, it should be remembered that the industrial structure led by private concerns based on free competitive principles is immediately conducive to strengthening international competitive power.

GOVERNMENT URGED TO EXPAND TRADE WITH ASEAN

SK080105 Seoul YONHAP in English 0040 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan 8 (YONHAP) -- South Korea will have to diversify its exports to the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) countries if it wants to sustain an increase in its trade with the five nations, an official survey said Friday.

According to a survey by the state-run Korea Trade Promotion Corporation (Kotra), South Korea's major export items to the ASEAN countries have been iron and steel, textiles, electronic goods, fertilizer and cement, most of which are now facing increasing import restrictions by the five Southeast Asian countries for the protection of their domestic industries.

On the other hand, these countries are now seeking to expand inter-ASEAN trade with preferential tariffs for the member nations of the regional organization.

The survey called on Korean industry to make increased investment in the ASEAN countries, whose gross national product (GNP) growth rate next year is projected at 8.2 percent.

As a measure to encourage and support such investment, the survey urged the conclusion of bilateral agreements on the prevention of double taxation and investment guarantee between South Korea and the five nations, as agreed on during President Chon Tu-hwan's tour of the ASEAN countries last year.

KTA REPORTS FOREIGN DEBT UP SHARPLY IN 1981

SK080930 Seoul YONHAP in English 0740 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan 8 (YONHAP) -- Korea's outstanding external debts at the end of last year totaled 33 billion U.S. dollars, a level representing 54 percent of the country's gross national product, according to the Korean Traders Association (KTA) Friday.

In a recommendation to the government, the KTA said top priority should be given to the defense of the nation's balance of international payment position through the strengthening of competitive edge, expansion of domestic savings, and other measures.

It noted that Korea's trade deficit in 1980 amounted to 5.5 billion dollars, up 1.260 million dollars from the previous year's.

7 JANUARY INDEPENDENCE ANNIVERSARY MARKED

Soy Keo Remarks at Meeting

BK030737 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 2 Jan 82

[Text] In order to celebrate the third anniversary of the great victory of 7 January, the General Staff and the National Defense Ministry held a meeting to review work in 1981 and set plans for 1982 to be implemented by all departments attached to the General Staff. Attending the meeting were Comrade Soy Keo, member of the party Central Committee, vice minister of national defense and chief of the General Staff; Comrade Tea Banh, deputy chief of the General Staff; Comrade (Son Thay), deputy chief of General Staff in charge of the Combat Commission; and several cadres representing units attached to the General Staff.

Opening the meeting, Comrade (Phan Salin), chef de cabinet of the General Staff, summed up work in 1981 by stressing the growth of the KPRAF both in size and quality and the success it realized in implementing all tasks prescribed by the party. He appreciated the fact that the victories won were attributable to the fact that cadres and combatants of all offices attached to the General Staff struggled persistently to perform their duty in service of the revolution and people and to rid themselves completely of all phenomena that did not serve the revolution, turning this effort into a vigorous emulation campaign for outstanding achievements.

Afterward, the meeting listened to speeches by representatives of outstanding units and individuals reporting on good experiences gained in the successful implementation of tasks by each unit and individual. Every representative pledged to build individuals and units further in all fields, particularly to maintain militant solidarity with the combatants of Vietnam and Laos in the common struggle against the common enemies — U.S. imperialism, the Chinese expansionists and the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique.

On behalf of the National Defense Ministry, Comrade Soy Keo praised the enthusiasm displayed by all cadres and combatants in carrying out the tasks for the party and people. He commended them by emphasizing: [begin recording] On behalf of the National Defense Ministry and the General Staff as a whole, I am deligted to extend best wishes to all comrades on the occasion of this new year. All of us must endeavor to build the army in accordance with our 5-year plan, ensuring that our army becomes bigger, stronger and more courageous in all fields, departments and sectors, such as the radio communications, engineering, artillery, navy and air force, making them firmer in defense and more powerful than ever with each passing day. [applause] [end recording]

At the end of the meeting, Comrade Soy Keo presented outstanding units with flags of honor and 98 brilliant cadres and combatants with certificates and letters of citation. The meeting ended in a joyous atmosphere full of pride to fulfill the 1982 tasks.

Leaders at Musical Show

[Text] At 1430 on 1 January the Central Committee of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association and the Ministry of Information, Press and Culture organized a musical show at the Bassac River Front Theater Hall to celebrate the 7 January National Day and the 37th founding day of the fraternal heroic VPA. Attending as guests of honor were Comrade Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Central Propaganda and Education Commission; Comrade Chan Ven, secretary general of the Council of State and chairman of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Fiendship Association; Superior Bonze Tep Vong, vice chairman of the National Assembly and of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] National Council; and ministers, vice ministers, cadres, employees and workers from various offices and ministries under the central organization. Comrade Ngo Dien and Comrade Khamphan Vilachit, respectively ambassadors extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the SRV and the LPDR to Kampuchea, also attended this grand occasion.

Comrade Chan Ven took the floor to warmly hail and greet the third anniversary of the 7 January National Independence Day and the 37th founding anniversary of the fraternal VPA.

Cabinet Meeting

BK060800 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Text] At 1400 GMT on 4 January the cabinet of the Council of Ministers held a grand meeting at the former royal palace to mark the third anniversary of the 7 January National Independence Day. On this occasion, Comrade Matah Loah, assistant to the minister attached to the cabinet of the Council of Ministers, exposed the crimes committed by the traitorous genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang against our Kampuchean nation and people. He also talked about the all-round progress made since liberation, thanks to the correct and wise leadership of the KPRP using Marxism-Leninism as the compass. He urged all cadres and employees present to strengthen their sense of patriotism and international solidarity, particularly solidarity with Vietnam, Laos and other socialist countries, in order to build a new Kampuchea and achieve more successes on the road of authentic revolutionary socialism.

Afterward, Comrade Ung Phan, minister director of the cabinet of the Council of Ministers, expounded on the significance of the 7 January victory, which eliminated the danger of genocide and liberated Kampuchean and its people from destruction and misery, making it possible for the Kampuchean people to be reborn and to defend, build and stabilize the nation and develop in all fields. He highly appreciated the courageous struggle of the heroic Kampuchean people and army, who have confidence in the party leadership and who closely cooperated with the heroic People's Armies of Vietnam and Laos in freeing Kampuchea from the yoke of the traitorous genocidal gang until the historic victory achieved on 7 January 1979. He talked about the tasks of cadres and employees and stressed that Kampuchea's victory was attributable to the pure sense of patriotism and a broad sense of proletarian internationalist solidarity, particularly solidarity with fraternal Vietnam.

Heng Samrin Meeting Address

BK080420 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0456 GMT 7 JAN 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 7 Jan (SPK) — A solemn meeting was held in Phnom Penh this morning on the occasion of the third anniversary of the liberation of the country (7 January).

The meeting Presidium included among others, Heng Samrin, KPRP Central Committee general secretary and chairman of the Council of State; Chea Sim, member of the Political Bureau, chairman of the National Assembly and chairman of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD]; Chan Si, member of the Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of defense; Hun Sen, member of the Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs; many ministers and vice ministers; and representatives of mass organizations. Members of the diplomatic corps in Phnom Penh were also present.

Beginning the ceremony, Chea Sim stressed in his speech the significance of the 7 January 1979 National Liberation Day, which he said is a glorious and unforgettable historic event for all the Kampuchean people.

In his address, President Heng Samrin noted: Three years ago, thanks to the unconditional aid of the fraternal Vietnamese People's Army, the Kampuchean people rose up and overthrew the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary clique, totally liberating our beloved territory. We have annihilated the cruel and barbarous genocidal regime, a work and harmful legacy of Maoism and the most savage work in the history of mankind. This great victory day of the Kampuchean people can be considered the day of resurrection for our entire people. We escaped death and have returned in peace to our native villages.

From the regime of threats and tyranny by executioners, under whom we were treated as beasts, with our life in their hands, we have pulled ourselves up again energetically and are now in a firm position to master our own and our nation's destiny. Out of the abyss of darkness, we are now advancing toward the shining light of socialism -- the best regime in the world. On 7 January 1979 a new and glorious era was opened and recorded in the golden book of our national history.

The past 3 years have proved to very short when compared to the history of national construction by the fraternal peoples in the world. Nevertheless, in a country completely upset from top to bottom, the Kampuchean people have given rebirth in all domains to great works which previously seemed to be unrealizable.

In 1979 we scored resounding victories in the military field. We annihilated the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khiem Samphan regime -- unwavering lackeys of Beijing -- and frustrated all of their attempts to return to tyrannize and massacre us again. They fled and have sought refuge in Thailand. This genocidal regime is utterly insane, barbarous and savage, and is unprecedented in human history. It sacrificed the Kampuchean people's flesh and blood to experiment with the Maoist doctrine. If it was not for the 7 January 1979 victory and Vietnam's assistance, our nation would be wiped out of the great human society. The abolition of the genocidal regime has partly suppressed the base of the Chinese big-nation expansionism and hegemony in Southeast Asia. It handed the Beijing clique a strategic setback and contributed to defending peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Spurred on by this momentous victory in the military field, we achieved other shining successes in the economic field in the following year of 1980. The danger of frightening famine bequeathed by the Pol Pot regime, which had threatened the Kampuchean people's life, was eliminated. Agricultural production has been restored. In 1980 our cultivated area was double that of 1979. Many factories, enterprises and handicrafts have resumed production to turn out a certain amount of staple goods for the people. Banknotes -- the riel -- were put in circulation throughout the country; the state trade was restored; and markets were reestablished. The people's life, though still difficult, has gradually stabilized, creating favorable conditions for the achievement of new victories in the third year of the PRK.

We have won victories in the military field in 1979; in the economic field in 1980; and in all domains in 1981, particularly in the political domain. The year of 1981 was also the year which reflected the dynamic force of our people, who master their own destiny. It was also the year in which the political and moral identity of our people of all social strata and ethnic groups has been asserted on our beloved territory.

The Fourth KPRP Congress was crowned with shining success. It has gathered keen views of the party and the people as a whole. It has determined the strategic objective and line for the Kampuchean revolution to advance step by step through the transition period to socialism.

He outlined various immediate and necessary tasks in the building and defense of the fatherland. Exercising their right of mastery, our people have participated with enthusiasm in the elections of local people's revolutionary committees and members of the National Assembly -- the supreme organ of our country. The National Assembly has adopted the most democratic and progressive Constitution in the nation's history. It has elected the Council of State and the Council of Ministers, which is the only authentic and legal representative of our people. At the end of this year [as received], the KUFNCD held its third congress, proving that our people as a whole are united more closely than ever. This constitutes one of the factors of the victory of our Kampuchean revolution.

In 1981, thanks to the leadership of the party and the Council of Ministers and to the tremendous efforts of all production solidarity groups and the people as a whole, we were able to recoup the damage caused by floods and the drought. The people's living conditions are being stabilized gradually. The health network is being expanded into remote areas; the people's health is improving progressively; and diseases have diminished gradually and visibly. About 1.5 million children are going to school during the 1981-82 school year. The anti-illiteracy campaign is now in full swing. More than 400,000 students are taking elementary and refresher courses. People's song and dance groups have been organized everywhere.

The chairman added: On this glorious day of 7 January we express our gratitude to the Communist Party, government, people and army of Vietnam for having saved us from the danger of genocide. They are currently deploying all their efforts — both physical and moral -- to help us in the defense and reconstruction of our country.

We salute and thank the Vietnamese experts who are contributing to the accomplishment of our tasks by closely cooperating with Kampuchean cadres in all fields of activity. Also on this occasion, we all send our most sincere greetings to the Vietnamese families, cadres, combatants and experts who are fulfilling their international obligation in Kampuchea. To them we express the profound gratitude of our people.

We express our gratitude to the brother Soviet Union, which is the protective bulwark of peace and revolutions in the world and which has given our people an immense amount of aid and devoted support. We express our friendly and warm sentiments to the party, government and people of the LPDR and to other brother socialist countries that have been deploying their efforts to give support and assistance to the Kampuchean people's revolutionary cause. We salute and thank the government and people of the Republic of India and all other nonaligned countries that have been actively supporting our people. We thank all international organizations that have been giving humanitarian aid to our people.

Dealing with enemy maneuvers, Chairman Heng Samrin said: Although Pol Pot and his cohorts were driven away from our territory, the Chinese expansionists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries, have not given up their sinister designs of destroying the Kampuchean revolution. They are trying to win back the Khmer Rouge and other Khmer reactionaries and to intensify provocative acts along the Thai-Kampuchean border. At the same time, they have organized the secret infiltration of their lackeys into our country to conduct acts of sabotage. They are now conducting the most venomous psychological warfare aiming at shaking our conscience and dividing and destroying our national unity and our solidarity with Vietnam and all socialist countries in the world.

Chairman Heng Samrin talked about the urgent tasks of the Kampuchean people, which were set forth by the Fourth KPRP Congress for the defense of the fatherland, and stressed: We are determined to defend and maintain order and the internal security of our country and to foil the enemy's psychological and espionage warfare. We must exert every effort to restore the national economy, particularly agriculture.

The state will plan to restore key industries and develop light industry and handicrafts to support agriculture and meet the people's demands. Trade, finance, telecommunications, transportation, education, public health and social culture must be developed and consolidated effectively.

Along with sweep operations against the enemies and the carrying out of production, we must strive to build real revolutionary forces, strengthen the state power from the central to basic levels and build all revolutionary mass organizations as a solid prop for the revolutionary mass movements.

Chairman Heng Samrin went on: The Kampuchean revolution is part and parcel of the Indochinese revolution and the world revolution. The resolution of the Fourth KPRP Congress says: The Kampuchean revolution must constantly hold high two banners -- the banner of national independence and the banner of international solidarity. The solidarity with Vietnam, which is indispensable for the Kampuchean revolution, constitutes its strategic line.

History has linked the Kampuchean and Vietnamese peoples, as well as the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao peoples, together in the struggle against the common enemies for the independence and freedom of each nation. Vietnam and Kampuchea have helped each other three times and have achieved successes. Noble internationalism and pure and loyal sentiments have been born from the flesh and blood of the two nations.

The Kampuchean people are resolved to defend these bonds of solidarity and friendship and cherish these bonds as the apple of their eye. As long as the sugar palm trees exist on Kampuchean territory and as long as the Mekong River continues to flow, the bonds of Kampuchean-Vietnamese friendship remain indestructible, like the brave and unalterable peak of Mount Oural. The Kampuchean people pay particular attention to developing the relations with the fraternal Lao people. Kampuchea and Laos are two brothers living side by side on good terms and sharing weal and woe. They have combined their efforts in the struggle against the common enemies and have won common victories. They are now united as a single body to advance toward socialism, and they always remain close to each other. The solid alliance of Kampuchean-Vietnamese-Lao solidarity is a fundamental factor that guarantees peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

We heartily welcome the results of the meeting of vice ministers of foreign affairs of the Indochinese countries and other socialist countries, and we heartily thank the representatives of the participating socialist countries for their support for the Kampuchean revolution.

We have the intention of establishing relations of friendship with Thailand and other countries in Southeast Asia. We intend to organize negotiations between the Indochinese countries and the ASEAN states to jointly resolve all the problems of the region without foreign interference. This is very important for the peace, stability and cooperation in Southeast Asia and for the development of each country in the region.

We welcome and support the very important policy of peace adopted by the 26th CPSU Congress, and the clear-sighted spirit of Comrade Leonid Brezhnev, who pointed out that policy in Bonn recently. We fully support the efforts made by the Soviet Union to abolish medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe and reduce the current tension in the world.

We fully support the important proposals of the Mongolian People's Republic on the conclusion of a convention on nonagrression and nonuse of force in the inter-state relations in Asia and the Pacific region.

We fully support the correct, opportune and effective measures the Polish People's Republic has taken to prevent the reactionaries from destroying the Polish people's revolutionary gains and leading them away from the socialist path.

We resolutely stand by the side of the heroic Cuban people in order to frustrate all maneuvers of interference and aggression by North American imperialism.

We categorically condemn the Israeli Knesset's decision to annex the Golan Heights from Syria. We are determined to always remain by the side of the Syrian people in their struggle to defend their independence, freedom and territorial integrity.

We are resolved to support the struggle of the Afro-Asian-Latin American peoples against imperialism, colonialism, neocolonialism, and racism for national independence, democracy and social progress.

Chairman Heng Samrin affirmed: Our Kampuchean revolution is advancing toward a bright future. The great exploits accomplished in all domains during the past 3 years constitute solid support for our people, who are surmounting all difficulties in order to achieve new successes. We have favorable fundamental conditions at our disposal. Our party is equipped with a just line. Our people possess ardent patriotic sentiments, nurture a profound hatred for the enemies and have faith in the revolution. We have the bonds of fervent militant solidarity with Vietnam and a strategic Kampuchean-Vietnamese-Lao alliance. We fully enjoy the effective assistance of the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries. We also enjoy the aid and support of the progressive peoples in the world. No difficulty and no venomous maneuver of the enemy can check our advance.

Wreath-Laying Ceremony

BK070853 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0431 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 7 Jan (SPK) — A delegation of leaders of the party, state, National Assembly and front led by Heng Samrin, KPRP Central Committee general secretary and chairman of the Council of State, today laid a wreath at the monument of the dead in Phnom Penh in honor of the third National Day (7 January).

The delegation included, among others, Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, chairman of the National Assembly and chairman of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD]; Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of defense, Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs; Chea Soth, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and minister of planning; Mat Ly, vice chairman of the National Assembly; Khang Sarin, minister of interior; Chen Ven, secretary general of the Council of State; and Heng Teav, member of the Council of State and vice chairman of the Federation of Trade Unions.

Inscribed on the banner across the wreath were the following words: In memory of the combatants and patriots fallen for the Kampuchean revolutionary cause.

Chan Si Greeting to Brigade

BK061355 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 6 Jan 82

[Greetings message of National Defense Minister Chan Si to cadres and combatants of the 3rd Brigade and all units of regular, regional and guerrilla forces throughout the country — dated 6 January; recorded]

[Text] On the occasion of the National Day of 7 January 1982, on behalf of the Ministry of National Defense, I wish all of you, cadres and male and female combatants, and your families the best of health and new successes in the cause of defending and building our beloved country.

Dear comrades and friends, in 1981 our Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Armed Forces improved both quantitatively and qualitatively. In fact, the 3rd Brigade [kangpol] achieved the most encouraging results, which all units throughout the country should learn from to emulate, as this unit set many good examples for everyone to study. In its spirit of combat against the enemy, the entire unit correctly implemented the orders of the National Defense Ministry. Regarding the Vietnamese units, it showed close solidarity and combat cooperation in fighting and smashing the enemy to score good successes.

From the company level upward, those in the unit were independent and self-determined in combat; in particular, they cooperated with each other in the unit and were in full control during the operations to surround, attack and defeat the enemy. Concerning combat tactics, they brought into full play their sense of creativity and sought by all tactics to crush the enemy timely.

Not only was it excellent in fighting against the enemy, but the entire unit has launched a mass agitation campaign to make the people understand the policy and line of the party and state and know who is the friend and who is the foe of the Kampuchean revolution. It has wiped out many enemy elements planted among the population and has persuaded many of them to surrender.

Though the entire unit encountered hardship and shortage in food and clothing, and clashed with the enemy virtually every day, those in the unit remained resolute to fight the enemy without complaining.

For these good feats, the Ministry of National Defense praises all cadres and male and female combatants of the 3rd Brigade and urges the entire unit to make great efforts to record new feats and victories in the new year so as to remain the model for other units to learn from and emulate.

[Signed] Chan Si, minister of national defense; Phnom Penh, 6 January 1982

Editorial on Achievements

[Station editorial: "Warmest Welcome to the Third Anniversary of the Glorious 7 January National Independence Day"]

[Text] Today our people throughout the country, both in the cities and in the outlying forested and mountainous countryside, are joyfully celebrating the third anniversary of the glorious 7 January National Independence Day.

This historic day has always been imprinted in the hearts of our people. It reflects the great power of the great union of our nation and people, who held aloft the banners of patriotism and international solidarity and advanced toward seizing brilliant victories in all stages of their struggle. The correct and wise leading line of the KPRP has enlightened our people in their noble tasks to defend and build their fatherland so that it will progress step by step through the transitional period to genuine socialism. The great revolutionary achievements scored during the past 3 years constitute a yardstick for measuring the outstanding feats of our heroic army and people, and clearly attest to the rebirth of our entire nation in its capability as the authentic master of the glorious Angkor land.

Within only a short period of time following the fall of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime -- the cheap lackey of the Beijing expansionists -- our people have displayed their brilliant feats in rebuilding our country, which was formerly full of debris left behind by the genocidal regime. With their traditions of patriotism, valiant struggle and perseverance, our people throughout the country united as one and closely cooperated with the fraternal VPA, rose up and struggled valiantly until they seized a most brilliant victory on 7 January 1979.

This great victory is of broad significance, since it liberated our people and saved them from the danger of genocide. The families that survived the massacre have returned to their hometowns and been reunited with their relatives and friends near or far. Culture, civilization and traditions -- the heart and soul of our nation, which were almost totally ruined -- have now been revived. In particular, the great victory of 7 January marked the permanent end of the ambition and the hegemonist-expansionist policy of the big-nation China, which attempted to use Kampuchea as a springboard for launching aggression, oppression and plunder against the Indochinese countries, and for creating tension in the Southeast Asian region. Moreover, this brilliant historic victory has brought about all kinds of favorable conditions for our people, who are the major factors enabling our country to be in line with the law of development in the new era, that is, independence and freedom, and to make significant contributions to strengthening and expanding peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world.

Under the correct and wise guidelines of the glorious KPRP and Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] -- coupled with the sincere support and assistance of Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, as well as various international organizations throughout the world -- our army and people have braved all difficulties in order to defend their revolutionary gains, and achieved brilliant feats in all fields. Our people throughout the country have set up production solidarity groups in all localities in order to mobilize forces for mutual assistance to restore economic establishments. The cultural, educational and health foundations have been and are being built to serve the people. Industrial production, handicrafts, communications and transport have been restored and put back into operation and are being expanded in order to meet the needs both inside and outside the country. The issuance of new riel banknotes is significantly beneficial to agricultural production, trade circulation and the stabilization of our people's living conditions. At the same time, our armed forces have been vigorously strengthened and developed qualitatively and quantitatively in all areas throughout the country for the maintenance of social order.

Aside from all these brilliant victories, in 1981 our Kampuchean people scored new victories of historic, political significance. After the general elections, the First National Assembly held its First Session in a solemn atmosphere. The National Assembly unanimously approved and ratified the Constitution -- which is democratic -- as the supreme law of the state, and promulgated it for official use. The convening of the Fourth KPRP Congress was a national event of historic, political significance. The congress set forth the general task of the entire party and all the people in the current phase, that is, to firmly defend national independence and to build the fatherland through a period of transition and in a gradual advance toward socialism. The third front congress which was recently held and which ended successfully set forth a 10-point program of action aimed at successfully fulfilling all the tasks to defend and build the socialist Kampuchean fatherland.

Because of all of these brilliant victories, the prestige of the PRK has become increasingly well-known, and soared higher in the international arena. These great revolutionary achievements in all fields scored by our people have become a sharp weapon that is crushing all the dark maneuvers of the Beijing expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and the other reactionaries who have attempted to destroy the happy life of our people.

All of these brilliant victories were possible because of the correct and wise leadership of the KPRP, which has advised our people and made them understand their role and tasks for the nation and fatherland. Moreover, these victories were made possible because of the great united strength of our people, who united as one and linked themselves closely with international solidarity -- primarily solidarity with the peoples in the three Indochinese countries and with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries.

Although it is true that the past victories scored by our Kampuchean revolution are immense, we must not become complacent. The road ahead that we must walk is long and full of complications and difficulties that require our Kampuchean revolution to fulfill even more tasks. All of us are well aware that in the face of progress of our revolution, our foes are constantly looking for ways to subvert and obstruct our advance. With the correct leading line of the party and the front and our good experiences gained during the past 3 years, however, we are confident that in 1982 and the years to come, we will certainly seize more achievements in the defense and construction of our Kampuchean fatherland, making it progress to glorious socialism.

PROGRESS SEEN IN ARUN PRC TALKS ON KAMPUCHEA

BK060738 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 6 Jan 82

[Text] Thailand has made progress toward the formation of an anti-Vietnamese coalition government in Kampuchea. The progress came about when Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua promised Thai Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong, during the latter's recent visit to Beijing, that China would persuade former Kampuchean leaders who consulted with him to realize the benefits of the proposal. Mr Hua said, however, that his country was not in the position to force the parties concerned to form the coalition.

Thailand is reportedly assigned by the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to take the lead in persuading China to advise the Khmer Rouge to join the formation. The formation, initiated by ASEAN, was endorsed by the grouping during the ASEAN foreign ministers meeting in Thailand on 10 December. It is aimed at ending Vietnam's occupation of Kampuchea.

Mr Hua also told the Thai deputy foreign minister during his visit that China believed the idea of forming a coalition would be ideal, but it was up to the Kampucheans themselves to decide.

BANGKOK ANNOUNCES SITTHI'S UPCOMING BURMA VISIT

BK080751 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila and his party will pay a 3-day visit to Burma from next Thursday [14 January], according to a Foreign Ministry announcement. The visit follows an invitation extended by Burmese Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing. The two foreign ministers will discuss and exchange views on matters of common interest with a view to broadening the scope and areas of the existing close cooperation between the two countries. Such cooperation will be a constructive contribution to peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Accompanying the foreign minister will be the under secretary of state for foreign affairs, the director general of the Political Department, the deputy director general of the Information Department and the secretary of the foreign minister.

COMMENTARY VOICES OPPOSITION TO AID FOR SRV

BK061317 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 6 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary: "Aid to Vietnam Opposed"]

[Text] Thailand and the other ASEAN countries have continuously opposed the giving of aid and assistance to Vietnam. The reason for this is simple: The international community must express its displeasure and opposition in very strong terms that it cannot condone the use of military force by one country to overthrow the government of another country, to set up a new regime in its place, and to continue to occupy that country with a large force of troops. This is exactly what Vietnam did to Kampuchea 3 years ago. On 25 December 1978 Vietnam launched a military offensive against Kampuchea, drove the Kampuchean Government out of Phnom Penh, established the Heng Samrin regime and continues to occupy many areas of Kampuchea with an army of more than 170,000 men.

In the past 3 years Vietnam has settled many Vietnamese in various parts of eastern Kampuchea, and with its advisers at all levels of government, is administering the country and trying to strengthen its hold there.

The Vietnamese military action against Kampuchea violates a cardinal principle of the UN Charter, of which Vietnam is a member country. Subparagraph 4 of Article 2 of the Charter says that all members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat of the use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state. Subparagraph 3 of the same article also says: All members shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security and justice are not endangered.

The government of Vietnam and its leaders have not abided by these important principles, without which the international community cannot exist in peace and harmony. All countries, be they large or small, must oppose the use of force by one country against another country and must make it known continuously to the country that uses force that such an action cannot be accepted and that it will be criticized and opposed.

Thailand and the other ASEAN countries, therefore, have opposed the giving of any aid of assistance to Vietnam. Vietnam's difficulties are not the result of natural calamities, but are consequences of Vietnam's decision to divert its resources for its continual military occupation of Kampuchea. For this reason, all countries, international organizations and charities should continue to cut off aid to Vietnam.

Vietnam's strategy has always been to use patience and the passage of time as an advantage to achieve its ends -- in this instance, to sit it out with its higher threshold of pain so that the world will accept its use of force in Kampuchea as irreversible and a fait accompli. The international community should, therefore, also be patient for the basic and important reason that Vietnam must be made to withdraw its troops from Kampuchea. The international community cannot use force to do this, for that, too, would be violating the cardinal principles on which it exists, but it can force Vietnam to seek political settlement in Kampuchea.

Do not worry that Vietnam will be bled white, as some have said, for Vietnamese leaders are too clever to let themselves be driven so far into a corner. When its international economic problems become really severe and when it truly finds itself becoming over-dependent on the Soviet Union, Vietnam will have to consider changing its position from going for maximum gains, for which it is still aiming, to a fallback position where it will have to begin to compromose. That time might now be rapidly approaching. The removal of Pen Sovan and his replacement by Heng Samrin -- really a second choice -- could be an indication.

ASEAN, as the most directly affected Free World states, cannot, therefore, acquiece to even small amounts of aid being given to Vietnam. The Free World must continue to be patient; otherwise, peace and stability in Southeast Asia cannot be reestablished.

OFFICIAL COMMENTS ON TIMING OF SIHANOUK VISIT

[Text] A Thai Foreign Ministry spokesman said yesterday that a visit by Prince Norodom Sihanouk to Thailand "at the moment" would not be as "timely" as when the Kampuchean coalition movement is agreed upon. "The timing at the moment may not be appropriate. But he will be more than welcome when the ripe time comes -- when he is president of the proposed coalition government of Kampuchea fighting against the Vietnamese invaders in his country..."

That's the reaction from the Thai Foreign Ministry's spokesman, Mr Chet Sucharitkun, when asked to comment yesterday on Prince Norodom Sihanouk's statement from Beijing on Monday that he plans to visit Thailand to establish an anti-Vietnamese base followed by a visit to Washington to seek arms. Sihanouk told REUTER in Beijing that he would spend two months in the Chinese capital before going back to Pyongyang for the 70th birthday anniversary of North Korean leader Kim Il-song. Sihanouk had flown into Beijing from France Monday night.

The Thai spokesman said that since the Kampuchean resistance coalition movement had yet to take firm shape, a visit by Sihanouk to Thailand would not be timely at the moment. Sihanouk said in his interview with REUTER that he was ready to cooperate with the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge in forming the anti-Vietnamese front and he expected soon to meet their leader, Khieu Samphan, in Beijing.

Informed sources said that Sihanouk had earlier been invited by the Asian Studies Institute, Chulalongkorn University, in his private capacity to speak here to Thai academicians. Sihanouk said then that he was not yet ready to accept the invitation.

"If and when the Kampuchean coalition movement is formed with Prince Sihanouk as the president, he is certainly welcome by us to visit Thailand or to transit through Thailand to his base in his homeland," the Thai spokesman said yesterday.

Meanwhile, an informed source said that Gen Dien Del, the commander of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), will leave Bangkok this week for England and France, where he is expected to meet Son Sann.

SUPREME COMMAND CLOSES 2 KHMER REFUGEE CAMPS

BK031024 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 3 Jan 82

[Text] Two of five Khmer refugee camps under the control of the Supreme Command headquarters have been closed since the end of last month. The two refugee camps are the Kap Choeng holding center in the northeastern province of Surin and the Ban Mai Rut holding center in the eastern province of Trat. About 7,500 Khmer refugees were moved from the two holding centers to the Khao I-Dang holding center in Prachin Buri Province and the Phanat Nikhom transit center in the eastern province of Chon Buri.

The Supreme Command headquarters closed the two refugee camps because a number of Khmer refugees have already been repatriated under the voluntary repatriation program. Others have gone to third countries for resettlement. At present, there are only three Kampuchean refugee camps under the control of the Supreme Command headquarters. They are the Khao I-Dang camp, the Sa Kaeo camp and the Phraya Kamphut camp in Prachin Buri Province.

ARRIVAL OF 120 VIETNAMESE REFUGEES REPORTED

BK301251 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 30 Dec 81

[Text] Almost 120 Vietnamese refugees have landed in the south since last Friday [25 December]. In two landings last Friday, 65 boat people arrived in Surat Thani Province and another 36 in Nakhon Si Thammarat, while a group of 15 landed in Narathiwat Province. The group of 65 landed on the small island of Koh Samui, where they will be allowed a temporary stay until their boat is repaired. The other group, which landed last Friday, came ashore near a small village in Nakhon Si Thammarat's Pak Phanang District.

SOVIET TRADE MISSION TO VISIT FROM 25 JAN

BK070448 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] A Soviet trade mission will visit Thailand from 25 January - 1 February to try to expand bilateral trade. The Soviet delegation will be headed by I. Grishin, deputy minister of foreign trade. The Commerce Ministry's spokesman said a trade agreement is expected to be signed in Bangkok during the 7-day visit. He added that the Soviets will also be speaking to the private sectors during their stay here so contracts with private Thai firms as well as government organizations might possibly be signed before the delegation returns to Moscow.

In 1980 Russia imported $165 million worth of goods from Thailand, mainly tapioca pellets, rice and maize, and exported $11 million worth of goods to Thailand. In the first 8 months of last year, Russia's imports of Thai goods increased to $263 million, and Thai imports of Russian goods were still at $10 million.

GEN PRAMOT ON WEAPONS PURCHASES, OTHER ISSUES

BK280500 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 28 Dec 81 p 5

["Excerpts" of "exclusive interview" with Thai Army Chief of Staff Gen Pramot Thawonchan by NATION REVIEW reporter Phiphat Loetkittisuk -- date not given]

[Text] Question: You once said that the army was looking for a country -- possibly in Europe -- to purchase a number of light tanks after the United States failed to fulfill an agreement to supply the army with 100 M-48 tanks. What countries are being considered, and which types of light tanks is the army interested in?

Answer: The army is now negotiating with the United States for additional tanks it needs. We now have in service a variety of tanks, including M-41, Scorpion and M-48 A-5. All of them could be used in Thailand, but the mission and the terrain where they would be used depend on their respective qualifications. We have not yet approached another country to seek the additional tanks.

Question: The army has a policy to purchase weapons mainly from the United States under the FMS agreement (foreign military sales). Doesn't this impede the development of the army on a self-reliance basis?

Answer: We get a better guarantee in purchasing U.S.-produced weapons under the FMS agreement. The United States is required to check the quality of the weapons sold to us to ensure that they are not substandard. Furthermore, we still don't have to be concerned over spare parts of the weapons we bought from the U.S., as there are plans to prevent shortage of spare parts in the future. The army purchases U.S.-produced weapons which are not made here or which it has no project to manufacture here. Thus, it does not hamper the development of the army on a self-reliance basis in any way.

Question: The army reportedly sent a delegation to Austria to check the quality of weapons produced in that country, but so far no decision has been made. Has the army refused an Austrian offer?

Answer: We have considered purchasing weapons from other countries than the United States -- though the United States is still our major source. We will purchase weapons manufactured in other countires if we deem it suitable. As far as I know, Austrian-produced weapons are now also under our consideration.

Question: How do you assess the combat capability of the Thai vis-a-vis that of the Vietnamese army?

Answer: We have consistently assessed the combat capability of the Vietnamese forces and have been doing everything to make ourselves prepared for a possible outbreak of war. We have plans to develop our army to be prepared for any aggression -- whether it comes about now or in the future.

Question: Do you think Vietnam really has intentions of invading Thailand? What are your arguments to back the opinion?

Answer: A large-scale invasion is unlikely in the near future. First, the Vietnamese have no definite reason to invade us and secondly, Vietnam is still plagued with domestic problems. It is also facing many difficulties in attempting to maintain its hold on Kampuchea.

Question: Some critics said that the military inevitably dictated politics, at least to some extent. What do you think about the statement?

Answer: I don't agree with that. Our country has the necessary democratic mechanism and there are no soldiers in active service in the present cabinet.

Question: Do you think our democracy will survive? Will you rule out the possibility of a military coup in the future?

Answer: In my opinion, everything is on the right path and there is no indication of a military coup.

Question: What about the unity of the army? How much influence do the so-called Young Turks who were dismissed from the army after the April 1-3 abortive coup, still have in the military establishment?

Answer: Since I took over as army chief-of-staff 3 months ago, I have observed total unity in the army. There are no problems which reflect a rift in the army. The Young Turk military officers have now nothing to do with the army. They are only civilians. Some of them are tending to their own businesses. However, they might still be respected by their former subordinates who remain in army service. But this is no strange thing.

Question: How about the prospect of the Young Turks' reinstatement in the military service?

Answer: I am not responsible for their request for a return to the army, so I am not in a position to reply your question.

Question: Don't you think that junior military officers are "resources" the army should not overlook? Why does it take so long to consider their request for reinstatement?

Answer: A reinstatement -- no matter in which government agency it is -- will certainly take a long time. First, the request has to be considered at many levels. Secondly, the establishment has to have vacancies for them and thirdly, it must have adequate budget for their salaries. Reinstating the military group which comprises up to 40 men to high-ranking posts could not be made within a few days. It also depends on the judgement of their superiors at various levels as well.

Question: How do you view the present political situation? Do you think the government is stable enough -- politically, economically and militarily -- to survive its term?

Answer: Politically speaking, I believe everything is proceeding in line with democratic rule. If every party concerned joins hand and takes into account the interest of the country, there should be no serious problem.

Question: Communist insurgents have stepped up their military operations, especially in the northeast and in the south. What is your comment to this?

Answer: The activities of communist guerrillas have increased in frequency possibly because they suffered political setbacks and lost support from the public to a considerable extent. They have done so to demoralize our officials and maintain the morale of their fellows and sympathizers. However, I believe that the increase in their military operations will backfire. They will lose public support further as a result of their own actions. For example, nobody will admire them for attacking the helicopter of the Agriculture Ministry which was transporting relief aid to the flood-stricken areas in the south. Communist insurgents also usually step up attack on government officials in the dry season, so their increased military operations are no strange things. But we have to be on alert.

Question: The Communist Party of Thailand (CPT) has inflicted considerable casualties on the army since its inception about 50 years ago. Do you think the government will be finally able to uproot the outlawed party by implementing the announcement No 66/23, which is the platform for fighting communist insurgents?

Answer: The announcement put our struggle with communist insurgents on the right track. Since we began to implement the policy stipulated in the announcement in mid-1980, CPT has suffered severe setbacks. The number of its sympathizers have diminished, its strongholds destroyed, and its armed forces weakened significantly. We can say that we have succeeded in stopping the growth of the party, which is now in the doldrums. Whether we could eradicate the party is up to many factors, including poverty of the people and cooperation from every party concerned.

Question: How about the conflicts within the party, and would they affect the strategy and the tactics of the party?

Answer: The conflicts within the outlawed party are mainly caused by:

A. The conflict within the international communist movement, especially between the Soviet Union and China.
B. The ideological independence of the pro-Chinese party and differences in the line of thinking among its operatives.
C. The government righteous policy announced in the order No 66/23 by the Prime Minister's Office in mid-1980 has put CPT in disarray.

Because of the above conflicts, the party has tried to adjust its strategy and tactics. It recently introduced the so-called "three strategic areas and two fronts." Under the new direction, the party places more stress on its operations in plains and urban areas to replace its former direction of placing top priority on the operations in the jungles. On the three strategic areas, the party also emphasized equal importance in its struggle on political and military fronts. Formerly, it placed top priority on its military struggle.

Question: Is it true that CPT's secretary general, Charoen Wanngam, alias Mit Samanant, died 2 years ago in China?

Answer: Communist defectors have told us that Charoen has been suffering from an eye disease, and consequently turned blind about a year ago. In fact, since 1979, Charoen has had no role in the party. Nobody has met him here in Thailand for 2 years already. It is possible that he is now dead. His wife is still working for CPT in the Chinese city of Kunming.

Question: Is it true that Charoen had conflicts with another member of the CPT Politburo, Wirat Angkhathawon, over the strategies and tactics in overthrowing the government?

Answer: I have learned that the two personalities have had some ideological conflicts, but their discord is not so serious as the rift between Wirat and other members of the Politburo. The conflicts between Charoen and Wirat, I believe, could be compromised.

Question: Wirat is believed to be a pro-Chinese element. What about other members of the Politburo, and are there any pro-Soviet elements in the Politburo?

Answer: Wirat is an ethnic Chinese. He speaks broken Thai and it is natural that he has tilted towards China. In fact, he has deeply adored the Chinese line. I believe his ideas might not be in line with those of other members in the Politburo.

Question: What is the policy of the army towards Damri Ruangsutham, a member of the Politburo who was earlier arrested and is now under custody? Will the army consider him a representative of CPT for a truce talk with the government? (Damri has claimed that he is representing CPT in carrying out truce talks with the government and was arrested during the mission.)

Answer: The army is a tool of the government. When the government announced its policy, the army had to abide by it and implement the policy. What we will do is based on facts and the judicial process. Damri is under arrest, so he must face legal actions.

Question: Another member in the Politburo, Thong Chaemsi, was reportedly broadening his power base to vie for the post of party secretary general with Wirat. Have you ever heard of this?

Answer: Thong is an ethnic Vietnamese. This inevitably impedes his attempts to boost his status in the party. But he has been trying to show that he is a Thai who loves the country. Nevertheless, it was reported in a magazine that Thong is a relative of a member on the Central Committee of the Vietnamese Communist Party. The report might have been rumoured by pro-Beijing elements in CPT.

Question: It was reported that communist insurgents in the northeast had changed their tactics by stepping up their urban operations. Have communist insurgents in other regions followed in their footstep?

Answer: This is only an adjustment. They have not changed their strategies. I believe that they stepped up their urban operations to put pressure on the government so that the government would decrease its anti-communist offensives against their jungle-based stronghold.

Question: What measures would the Internal Security Operations Command (ISOC) and the army employ to cope with the increased urban operations by communist elements? Do you agree that the government policy to welcome communist defectors from jungles would be exploited by CPT?

Answer: We will be able to effectively cope with urban communist operations by strictly implementing the government's policy, which enables us to drum up progressive and constructive ideas of the masses both in the rural and urban areas to develop the country.

Question: Did the setting up of the Bangkok peacekeeping force following the April 1-3 abortive coup have anything to do with the increased urban operations of CPT? What are the roles of the Bangkok peacekeeping force in handling urban operations?

Answer: The Bangkok peacekeeping force was set up to maintain peace generally. The means it will use to maintain security depends on the situation in each period.

Question: The CPT's constitution stipulates that the party will have to hold a party congress every 10 years. But so far the fourth congress has not taken place. Why do you think it has not been held, and what do you expect the results of the congress will be? Will the outcome of the congress to be attended by members of the Central Committee and representatives of CPT members nationwide affect the strategy of the party?

Answer: The CPT's constitution stipulates that a party congress be held every 5 years, and not 10 years, except when there is a necessity for an adjournment of the party congress. In fact, the constitution also says that the party Central Committee and the Politburo might hold another form of meeting instead of a party congress.

So far, CPT has held three party congress meetings. The first was organized in 1942 to form the party. The second was held in 1952 to name additional Thai members to the Central Committee and the third between 1961 and 1962 to approve armed struggle as a major means to seize power from the government. The congress also agreed to the proposal to set up the Liberation Army of Thailand.

The fact that the fourth party congress has not come about does not contradict the CPT's constitution. But whether CPT will hold the fourth congress or not depends on the readiness of the party to replace its leadership with a younger generation and to accept initiative taken by its front organizations.

GDR DEFENSE MINISTER PAYS FRIENDSHIP VISIT

Arrival of Delegation

OW071647 Hanoi VNA in English 1616 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan 7 -- A high-ranking military delegation of the German Democratic Republic led by General Heinz Hoffmann, Political Bureau member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany Central Committee and minister of national defence, arrived here today on an official friendship visit at the invitation of the Vietnamese Ministry of National Defense.

At 3 p.m. the motorcade carrying the guests from Hanoi's International Airport drove up at the Defense Ministry guest house where they were warmly welcomed by General Van Tien Dung, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and minister of national defence; General Chu Huy Man, Political Bureau member of the party Central Committee and head of the General Political Department; Colonel-General Le Trong Tan, chief of the General Staff of the Vietnam People's Army; Lt. Gen. Bui Phung and Lt. Gen. Tran Van Quang, vice ministers of national defence; Lt. Gen. Phung The Tai, deputy chief of the General Staff; Hoang Anh Tuan, deputy foreign minister; Tran Danh Tyen, deputy head of the Commission for External Relations of the party Central Committee; Dang Duc Loc, vice-chairman of the Hanoi People's Committee; and other Vietnamese senior officers and officials.

Also present on the occasion were G.D.R. Ambassador Klaus Zorn and many G.D.R. experts working in Hanoi. Vietnamese women soldiers presented General Hoffman and other distinguished guests with bouquets. After reviewing a guard of honour of the V.P.A., Gen Hoffmann and his party came up to the well-wishers, including senior officers and cadets representing different arms and services of the V.P.A. Shortly afterward, the G.D.R. military delegation had a cordial meeting with the Vietnamese military delgation led by Gen. Van Tien Dung.

Hanoi Reception

OW071719 Hanoi VNA in English 1621 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan 7 -- A grand reception was given here this evening by the Vietnamese National Defense Ministry to welcome General Heinz Hoffmann and the members of the G.D.R. military delegation now visiting Vietnam. The guests were cordially received by General Van Tien Dung and other high-ranking officers of the Vietnam People's Army and representatives of the Foreign Ministry, the External Relations Commission of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and the Hanoi People's Committee. G.D.R. Ambassador to Vietnam Klaus Zorn was present.

On behalf of the officers and men of the V.P.A., General Van Tien Dung warmly welcomed General Heinz Hoffmann and the members of the delegation, who, he said, have brought to the Vietnamese army and people the warm friendship and militant comradeship of brothers struggling in the same trench against imperialism and international reaction for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

Van Tien praised the brilliant achievements recorded by the people and army of the G.D.R., under the leadership of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, headed by esteemed Comrade Erich Honecker, in building the G.D.R. into a comprehensively developed socialist country, with a stable economy, a bright culture, and advanced science and technology, and enjoying ever high international prestige.

The People's National Army of the G.D.R. today has become a modern socialist armed force with a high political consciousness, a fighting strength to firmly defend the G.D.R. and to cooperate with the armies of other socialist countries to defend peace in Europe and elsewhere, General Van Tien Dung said.

He continued: "Under the leadership of the Communist Party of Vietnam, the Vietnamese people and their people's armed forces are building socialism while constantly raising their revolutionary vigilance, getting ready to smash all schemes and acts of aggression and sabotage of the Chinese expansionists, firmly defending Vietnam and successfully building socialism".

General Van Tien Dung expressed the gratitude of the Vietnamese army and people for the support and great, effective assistance, full of noble proletarian internationalism, of the SUPG and the GDR people and army.

In his reply, General Heinz Hoffmann conveyed to the Vietnamese people and army the profound sentiments of the SUPG Central Committee, of General-Secretary Erich Honecker, and of the GDR people and their national army. "Our delegaton's current visit to Vietnam will contribute to consolidating and further developing the time-honoured friendship between the peoples and armies of Vietnam and the GDR," he said.

He affirmed the full and resolute support of the GDR people and army to the Vietnamese people's socialist construction and defence.

General Van Tien Dung and General Heinz Hoffmann proposed toasts to new successes of the peoples and armies of Vietnam and the GDR in national construction and defence and to the further consolidation and fine development of the great friendship, militant solidarity and allround cooperation between the two countries.

Van Tien Dung Speech

OW080853 Hanoi VNA in English 0814 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 8 -- "With profound sentiments the Vietnamese people and their armed forces have constantly followed and rejoiced at the vigorous advance of the German Democratic Republic, a strong fortress of peace and socialism in central Europe", said Defence Minister Gen. Van Tien Dung at the reception last night in honour of the visiting G.D.R. military delegation.

Gen. Van Tien Dung continued: "Nowadays the G.D.R. is among the socialist countries steadily developed in all fields, having a strong economy, advanced culture, science and technology and enjoying an ever rising international prestige. The National People's Army of the G.D.R. has grown rapidly and is now a revolutionary modern army with high political consciousness and combat capacity".

On the situation in Vietnam, Gen. Van Tien Dung said: "Our people and their armed forces are fully conscious that each victory of the Vietnamese revolution is closely associated with the great and effective assistance of the Soviet Union, the G.D.R. and other socialist countries, and of the revolutionary movement throughout the world. "Following the great victory of their anti-U.S. patriotic struggle, our people have no greater desire than to live in independence, freedom and peace to heal the wounds of war and rebuild life. But the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists have betrayed our revolution and openly opposed socialist Vietnam.

"The Vietnamese people have once again had to fight against a new criminal war, this time launched by the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists. We have delivered due riposte to the aggressors and their henchmen, in defence of the integrity of the sacred border of the socialist homeland. We have helped the fraternal Kampuchean people to free themselves from the genocide of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary clique, and we continue our assistance to them in building a new life and safeguarding the gains of their revolution.

"We are working persistently for a peaceful and stable Southeast Asia", Van Tien Dung continued". "We have always shown our goodwill for normalization of the relations between the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the People's Republic of China on the basis of respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, and we have always put a high value on our friendship with the Chinese people.

"But the reactionary ruling circles in Beijing have not renounced their sinister schemes and hostile acts against Vietnam. In furtherance of their big-nation hegemonist and expansionist ambition, they have increased their collusion with the U.S. imperialists seeking every possible means to undermine, divide and weaken the three Indochinese countries for the purpose of annexation and paving the way for their expansionism to Southeast Asia and world hegemony. Collaborating with U.S. imperialism, Beijing hegemonism and expansionism has become the direct and dangerous enemy of the peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea.

"Therefore, the Vietnamese people and their armed forces, while concerning themselves primarily with building socialism, cannot for a single minute relax in their task of consolidating national defenceand standing ready to defend their homeland."

In conclusion, General Van Tien Dung expressed sincere gratitude to the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, the people and the armed forces of the G.D.R., for their timely and effective support and assistance and wished them further success in the building of developed socialism and in defence of the G.D.R., thus successfully implementing the resolution of the Tenth Congress of the S.E.D. party.

Hoffmann Speech

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 8 — "The party and state of the German Democratic Republic consider the official visit of the G.D.R. military delegation to Vietnam as another step in promoting the fraternal relations between the peoples, the parties and the armies of the two countries", said General Heinz Hoffmann, minister of national defence, at a reception given here last night in honour of his delegation.

He went on: "Under the leadership of the Communist Party of Vietnam and the Socialist Unity Party of Germany (S.E.D.), our two peoples have been struggling at the two frontposts of the socialist community against aggressive imperialism and counterrevolution for the establishment of a new world economic order and the defence of world peace. Under the leadership of our Marxist-Leninist parties, we have also consolidated the militant class solidarity of brothers fighting in the same trench with the great Soviet Union and the invincible Soviet Armed Forces and promoted our cooperation with the other socialist countries in the Council of Mutual Economic Assistance, thereby increasing the influence of the socialist forces and the world peace movement."

Heinz Hoffmann went on: "The working people and armed forces of the G.D.R. have long nurtured profound feelings of fraternal alliance and unshakeable solidarity with the Vietnamese people. This has been clearly demonstrated all along the past three decades."

The G.D.R. general went on: "Our hearts went to you, dear Vietnamese comrades, when you won victories in the hard struggles against French colonialism and U.S. imperialism, for independence and freedom. Our hearts also went to you when you stood firm under U.S. bombardments and liberated the south from the Saigon puppet regime. Indignation swept the G.D.R. when the Beijing authorities launched an aggressive attack against your northern borders."

"Now," Heinz Hoffmann said, "we have seen more clearly the importance of our solidarity with the Vietnamese people in helping them build socialism, a powerful industry, agriculture, national defence and communication and transport, and first of all to train skilled workers in all fields."

SERIES ON SOVEREIGNTY OVER SPRATLYS, PARACELS

Third Article

[For the first part of this article see the 6 January DAILY REPORT, page K 15]

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 7 — Here is XINHUA NEWS AGENCY's coverage on November 7, 1974, of one of the numerous exhibitions on Xisha organised throughout China:

"With the title 'Songs to the Beautiful Islands of Xisha, Images of Heroes and Heroines', a recent commentary of the PEOPLE'S DAILY has praised the photographic exhibition on the Xisha Islands, an archipelago in the southern sea, organised on the occasion of the National Day celebrations. The exhibition comprises a hundred colour photos: historical documents establishing China's sovereignty over the Xisha Islands since ancient times, views of the archipelago, and scenes from the fighting life of the soldiers and people who took part in the legitimate and deserved counter-attack, portraying our heroes and heroines in Xisha armed with Marxism-Leninism (sic!) and Mao Zedong Thought. This exhibition testifies to the unshakeable will of the indomitable Chinese people, who will not allow any foreign aggression against its territory. The exhibition also features photographs of archaeologists working alongside the defender and population of Xisha, as well as some of the historical vestiges they discovered in the course of their excavations: These remains constitute irrefutable proof that our ancestors have left their mark throughout the archipelago, and that the Xisha Islands, as well as Nansha, Dongsha and Zhongsha, have been an integral part of Chinese territory ever since antiquity. Several photographs dealing with the movement of criticism of Lin Biao and Confucious show that the young men and women of Xisha are participating in this movement with an enthusiasm as great as the bravery they displayed in the war against the aggressors."

The peremptory tone with which this passage expresses such laboured and inconsistent arguments allows one to venture a guess that its authors were somewhat lacking in conviction. Turning now to another commentary, about a book this time, published in the PEOPLE'S DAILY of August 24, 1974, and entitled "Why are our Country's Xisha Islands so Beautiful?", we read that the book concerned a novel by Hao Ran, called "Children of Xisha", is "lively and reflects reality" because its author claims that over five centuries ago, a large sea-going junk carried over 1,000 Chinese to Xisha; that one thousand years ago Chinese coins were introduced there from the Chinese continent; and that the present population of Xisha is Chinese. One may wonder, if this were all true, why a novelist was chosen rather than a historian?

In attempting to prove more than was provable, the Chinese propagandists enjoyed a field day in facile inventions. Yet truth needs neither verbiage nor verbal excesses to win through, and fabrications are all eventually exposed. Speaking of this vast deployment of efforts to legitimize the Chinese aggression against the Hoang Sa, a Vietnamese writer once remarked: "Territorial sovereignty cannot be produced like a film or a recording."

Towards a Chinese mare nostrum in Southeast Asia?

Given the geographical situation of their country, the Vietnamese call Bien Dong, or Eastern Sea, what the world maps refer to as the South China Sea. This popular name was officially adopted and registered with the World Meteorological Organization and various other relevant international organisations.

This sea, a relatively closed one, covers an area about 3,400,000 sq km, approximately the same as the Mediterranean and the Black Sea taken together. It washes the coasts of part of southern China, Taiwan, Vietnam, the Philippines, Malaysia, Indonesia, and connects with the Gulf of Thailand. With the Andaman Sea it forms a channel linking the Pacific Ocean to the Indian Ocean, and is crossed by numerous internationalmaritime routes which are essential for exchanges between the countries of Europe, Africa, the Middle East, southern Asia and Far Eastern countries. While Arab, Indian, Persian, Chinese, Malay, Indonesian and other navigators frequented it from early times, it was only after the 15th century that Westerners began to explore the area. First came the Portuguese, the Spanish, Dutch, English and French, then the Germans, and finally the Americans. In the Second World War, Japan's control of the Bien Dong created great difficulties for the allies. This supremacy was subsequently transferred to the United States, whose air force, based at Guam, Okinawa, Taiwan, the Philippines and Thailand, and whose Seventh Fleet cuased so much damage to the peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea during the second Indochina war.

With all its attention fixed on expanding its continental empire the Middle Kingdom only later became interested in maritime possessions. The war of conquest waged against Java in the 13th century by the Yuan court having been impaired by the latter's successive defeats in Vietnam, it was only two centuries later that China launched its first campaign of maritime expansion. From 1405 to 1433, Admiral Zheng He led seven expeditions to the western seas, mobilizing up to 30,000 men and hundreds of war junks. Chinese adventurers reached as far as Champa, Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, Sri Lanka, India, Persia, Arabia and East Africa, conducting a kind of armed trade, imposing their conditions, pillaging hostile regions and punishing those chiefs who refused to pay tribute to the celestial court. Zheng He meddled in the internal affairs of countless countries, going so far as deposing the king of Sri Lanka and capturing the king of Palembang. He was accompanied by scholars whose task it was to carefully record all things "seen and heard" for purposes one can imagine. Zheng He's first expedition coincided with the invasion of Vietnam by a powerful Chinese army which estabished a savage domination lasting twenty years. In 1427, Vietnamese insurrectional forces broke the Ming domination after defeating the enemy in battle. These military defeats combined with the innumerable difficulties then facing China compelled it to put a temporary end to its expansionist enterprise in the southern and western seas.

Five centuries later, Chinese leaders purporting to be communists, were to glorify Zheng He's expeditions, which had left such terrible memories in the minds of all the peoples of insular Asia. It thus came as no surprise to hear Mao Zedong himself openly declare, at a meeting in Wuhan in 1963 with a delegation from the Vietnam Workers' Party (now the Communist Party of Vietnam): "I shall preside over 500 million poor peasants' sending their troops into Southeast Asia." The annexation of a part of Burma in 1956 was the first stage in a carefully thought-out plan, inevitably leading to the occupation of islands in the Hoang Sa Archipelago in 1956 and again in 1974, and the aggression against Vietnam in 1979. Thus appears the ideological link between Mao Zedong and Zheng He, the 15th-century buccaneer, namely, Chinese hegemonism.

As soon as they secured the Hoang Sa Islands, the Chinese Government took a whole series of measures aiming to transform them into a base for further expansion in Southeast Asia. The archipelago first needed a population, indeed, one supposed to have inhabited it from time immemorial. An accelerated and naturally secret settlement programme was thus introduced, and so far the Chinese press has reported the activities of Chinese fishermen on Xisha, as well as farmers and workers. Besides has regularly operated since the end of 1978 between Hoang Sa and Qinglan, in the south of Hainan. [sentence as received] A major military base is being built there with a large garrison, and naval and air installations; indeed, the GUARDIAN revealed in March 1979 that the British Harrier jump jets which the Chinese army was thinking of buying could be used against Vietnam and to control the navigation routes between Tokyo and Singapore from the islands in the South China Sea.

Already the consequences of China's occupation of the Hoang Sa Island are being felt on the international scene. Acting unilaterally, and disregarding all juridical procedure, on July 23, 1979 the general board of the Chinese Civil Aviation Authority, in the name of the government, made public a communique establishing four so-called "danger zones" southeast of Hainan. Permission must now be obtained from Beijing for regular flights to traverse them. These four danger zones cover Hoang Sa, without the Chinese authorities openly mentioning the fact, and cut across a busy international route. The Chinese authorities thus aim to force acceptance of their sovereignty over a territory they are illegally occupying. And not only Vietnam is harmed in this instance, but also the entire international community, especially the Southeast Asian countries.

However, this is not the end of the matter. China is escalating its demands, its initial successes having whetted its appetite. Until Hoang Sa was occupied, China had only claimed it and Nansha, Dongsha and Zhongsha Archipelagoes. In 1977, after conducting oceanographical studies in the Hoang Sa area, they also claimed that the Scarborough Shoals -- which they call Huangyang -- were included in China's "sacred territory."

Advancing theories both simplistic and confused about the continental shelf and its territorial waters, China has finally come to extend its maritime borders to encompass the whole of the Bien Dong, including even those areas which it had recognised as international waters in its 1958 declaration. Naturally, it has never proclaimed this in an official statement, only implicitly via the map war, for instance, as shown by the map of China published in Beijing in January 1978.

One may wonder whether the Bien Dong is to become a Chinese mare nostrum, and Southeast Asia a part of China's "sacred territory." Naturally, not all dreams come true, especially as China ranks as a superpower mainly because of its huge population.

In his book "Chinese Techniques of Expansion" on the 1962 Chinese aggression against India, D.S. Gidwani, a writer from Bombay, refers to the technique of Wu-je, a locality claimed by Beijing as Chinese which, according to two diplomatic notes sent in mid-1954 by the Chinese Embassy to the Indian Government replied that none of its troops had crossed the border at the point mentioned.

1955 -- It was India which drew China's attention to the fact that Chinese soldiers, with five tents and twenty horses, were camping in Indian territory near Bara Hoti in the state of Uttar Pradesh. China denied this, claiming on the contrary that Indian troops had made incursions into Wu-je and were building fortification there. India replied: Our troops are at Bara Hoti. Yours are also at Bara Hoti, south of Tunjun La Pass. We don't know where Wu-je is. Your embassy official says it is 12 km north of Tunjun La.

The same year, India condemned Chinese incursion as far as Damzan, again in Uttar Pradesh. The same exchange of notes and mutual accusations continued until June 1956, when the Chinese Foreign Ministry laid down its cards and notified the Indian Government that Wu-je had always belonged to Tibet and that there was no historical document to prove that Tunjun La Pass was ever on the border between India and China.

For here was the rub: Wu-je was Bara Hoti, and Damzan as well. China had baptised these two Indian localities with a Chinese name, and sent its troops there, while accusing its neighbour of having violated its territory. Similar incidents began to occur with increasing frequency along India's Himalayan border, eventually forcing India to defend itself; thus provoked, it gave its aggressors the pretexts they sought. Eight years thus passed, from the time the first sparks were struck to full-scale conflagration.

Twelve years after invading the Indian Ladakh, Beijing launched its forces against the Hoang Sa Archipelago, which it insists on calling Xisha. Furthermore the Truong Sa Islands, rebaptised Nansha, are also claimed as Chinese, in what appears to be faithful replay of the Wu-je tactic, a particularly devious political and military trick, beginning with a map war and ultimately serving China's expansionist ambitions.

Fourth Article

OW080751 Hanoi VNA in English 0709 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi VNA January 8 -- Following is the fourth article in a series of six about the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes published recently by the Hanoi monthly VIETNAM COURIER: Argumentation or Sophistry?

Following several years of noisy and protracted propaganda in which all the media-press publications, radio, television, films, plays, etc., were mobilized to prove Chinese sovereignty over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, on 30 January 1980 the Chinese Foreign Ministry issued a document entitled "The Indisputable Sovereignty of China Over the Xisha and Nansha Islands."

Dubious Documents

The Chinese Foreign Ministry asserts that Chinese navigators sailed the Bien Dong (Eastern Sea) as early as the reign of Wudi of the Han Dynasty (2nd Century B.C.) and discovered the Xisha and Nansha Archipelagoes, which they successively named Jiurulezhou Shitang, Qianlishitang, Wanlushitang, Changsha, Qianlichangsha, Wanlichangsha, etc., then it gives a long list of references:

— Nanzhou Yiwu Zhi (Strange Things in Southern Lands) by Wan Zhen; and Funan Zhuan (Annals of Funan) by Kang Tai; both books written in the period of the Three Kingdoms (220-265 A.D.)

— Mongliang Lu (A Dreamer's Notes), written in the Song period

— Daoyi Zhilui (Glimpses of Barbarian Island Countries) written in the Yuan period

— Dong Xi Yang Kao (Studies on Eastern and Western Oceans) and Shunfeng Xiangsong (The Escort Sails Before the Wind), written in Ming times

— Zhinan Zhengfa (Navigation Guide) and Haiguo Wengian Lu (Things Seen and Heard About Countries Beyond the Seas), also in Ming times

— Genglu Bu (Records of Itineraries), logbooks kept by fishermen of various periods, etc.

Even if one admits the existence of the above books, one may ask, how can the Chinese side affirm that Jiurulezhou, Shitang, etc. are the archipelagoes it now calls Xisha and Nansha?

For J.V. Mills and J.J. Duyvendak, authors of Ma Huan Reexamined (1933), Shitang designates the Paracels Reefs, Wanshengshitang the Paracels Islands, and Shichengshitang the Macclesfield Bank (now called Zhongsha by China).

Groenveldt, the translator of the story of Shi Bi which recounts the voyage of 5,000 people led by Shi Bi, who started from Xuanshou in 1292 to sail to Giao Chi and Champa, holds that Qizhouyang designates the Paracel and Wanlishitang, the Macclesfield Bank. This opinion is shared by several other authors.

Even Chinese scholars disagree with the Chinese Foreign Ministry. For instance, in Liangzhong Haidao Zhengjing published by Zhonhua Shuju (Beijing) in 1961, there is this note: "Wanlishitang is very probably the southern part of the Xisha Archipelago; Wanlichangsha, its northern part", thus Wanlishitang designates neither Nansha (Truong Sa in Vietnamese), nor Zhongsha, but perhaps Xisha (Hoang Sa in Vietnamese).

The works quoted by Beijing may make up a long list but they have no scientific value. Most were written on the strength of information from foreign travellers. This is the case for Dong Xi Yang Kao by Zhang Ye. In an article published in GUANGMING RIBAO of 7 June 1966, a Chinese author, Zhou Jie, admitted that "Long before the Tang and Song periods, emigrants from our country had crossed these islands, which were also mentioned in noted by private individuals. For unknown reason the names given do not correspond with each other so that accurate interpretation is difficult". If this is the case for books written in Tank and Song times, what should be said about those which saw the light of day in the much remoter periods of the Han Dynasty and the Three Kingdoms? Such confusion proves that one cannot casually relate such and such territory to an ancient toponym.

Even supposing that the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes had been discovered by Chinese people, what would be the significance of such a fact? For some time, the theory of the right of discovery was upheld: It was enough to have seen a territory to be entitled to claim sovereignty over it.

Thus, Great Britain claimed North America simply because Cabot had sailed along its shores from the 38th to the 56th parallels. Later, it was realized that this was an insufficient criterion for claiming sovereignty. Whereupon the theory of fictive occupation was contrived: Discovery could be regarded as fictive occupation if it was accompanied by some concrete manifestation. For the Portuguese, such manifestation consisted in erecting a padral, a kind of obelisk bearing the Arms of Portugal. The Frenchman Cartier, for his part, would plant a big cross with the inscription: "Vive le Roi de France!" But again, this was later deemed insufficient and effective occupation, i.e., the exercise of state functions on the territory concerned, was called for.

The mere discovery by nationals of any country cannot justify a claim of sovereignty by that country over any territory. All the more so since in the cases under review, the Bien Dong (Eastern Sea) was sailed by navigators from many countries, the earliest in time being Arab traders. The presence of Portuguese, Dutch and French sailors was reported as early as the 15th century. Some authors hold that from the beginnings of the Christian era to the 12th century Arabs, Indians and Persians were the only people to ply this sea. Others have gone even further, maintaining that those navigators had a more thorough knowledge of China than the Chinese of those times.

The Chinese authorities also try to prove that Chinese nationals had exploited Xisha and Nansha since the remotest times. But the words they use are quite vague: "Already in the 2nd century B.C. in the reign of the Emperor Wudi of the Han Dynasty, Chinese navigators sailed in the South China Sea (...) [as received] Overcoming all kinds of difficulties, successive generations of Chinese developed the resources of those 2 archipelagoes by the sweat of their brows (...) At least as early as the days of the Tang and Song Dynasties, Chinese people had lived and practised fishing and other productive activities on the islands of Xisha and Nansha."

By means of photographs and films they try to suggest that those "productive activities" included crop planting and livestock breeding. But it is said in the document produced by the Chinese Foreign Ministry itself (note No 1).

"In the book Nanzhou Yiwu Zhi, Wan Zhen thus described sea navigation between the Malay Peninsula and the Chinese mainland in Han Times: "Sailing northeastward, one arrives at Daqiton, then crosses the Changhai Sea where the water is shallow and there are many magnetic rocks." Changhai is at present called South China Sea; the 'magnetic rocks' are the sandbanks and reefs of Xisha and Nansha, in those days still under the surface of the water. For his part, Kang Tai wrote in his Funan Zhuan: "In the Changhai Sea, there are coral islands with a flat bedrock on which corals grow."

Now, one may ask, how could submerged reefs and coral islands have sustained crops and livestock? One way, at the most, admit that Chinese fishermen came to those islands, just as fishermen from other countries did. But to assert that they "developed the resources of those islands" is groundless.

In support of its claim that China exercised effective jurisdiction over Xisha and Nansha, Beijing puts forward nine "facts" which in its eyes were most significant. Of these nine facts, seven relate to Xisha and only two to Nansha, evidence of the even flimsier base on which the Chinese claim of sovereignty over the later rest.

One of the two facts relating to Nansha is the protest lodged by the Qing court against the survey conducted by a German ship in the two archipelagoes. It must be pointed out right away that the German ship came only to Truong Sa, never to Hoang Sa. Then, one may rightly wonder why the Qing court had kept mum when a year before, in 1892, the ships Egeria and Penguin, probably belonging to the British American Navy, had come to Hoang Sa for exactly the same purpose.

The second fact presupposes that Xisha and Nansha then bore the names of Qianlichangsha and Wanlishtang, which is far from proven. Besides, even supposing that they were the same, this is by no means a valid juridical argument in support of Beijing's claim of sovereignty.

As for the seven facts relating to Hoang Sa, they either presuppose that these islands bore the names of Jiurulezhou or Qizhouyang, or involve some action taken by the local administration of Guangdong.

There can be no better manifestation of a state's sovereignty over a territory than the establishment of local administration. Yet the Chinese occupation of Hoang Sa in 1956 and 1974 was only the military occupation of a territory which had belonged to another state for many centuries, not a res nullius or res derelicta, and this can by no means confer territorial sovereignty. Indeed, before that occupation, China had never set up any administration on that archipelago. That the Chinese Admiral Li Zhun had taken his gunboats to some of its islands in 1909 was only an illegal act, a violation of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Vietnam.

In addition to those "facts," Beijing claims it possesses maps that support its pretensions; for instance, the Huang Qing Gezhi Sheng Fentu (Map of Provinces Directly Under the Imperial Authority of the Qing; 1755, reign of Qianlong); The Da Qing Wannian Yitong Dili Quantu (Map of the Eternally Unified Great Qing Empire; 1817, reign of Jiaqing). But so far those maps have not been produced. Is it because there has been no time to doctor them?

No Chinese right to those archipelagoes [as received] after producing what it claims to be evidence of Chinese sovereignty over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, the Chinese Foreign Ministry concludes:

"The many historical facts mentioned above fully prove that China was the first to discover, exploit, develop and administer the Xisha and Nansha Islands. For more than a thousand years, successive Chinese Governments have exercised jurisdiction over them."

On the subject of territorial sovereignty in international law, the time is gone when a pope, Alexander 6 Borgia, could have an imaginary line traced which crossed the Poles and a point 100 nautical miles west of the Cape Verde Islands and then decree that all lands found and to be found, discovered and to be discovered east of that line would go to Portugal and west of that line to Spain. The time is also past when in order to justify one's claim on some territory it is enough to invoke the theory of the right of discovery. No country can now assume priority over some territory on the pretext that one of its navigators has seen it through his spyglass. The theory of "fictive occupation" which replaced the theory of discovery has also been criticized and the right it engenders is regarded as only a conditional and temporary one. From the 19th century onward, the theory of "effective occupation" has asserted itself in international law. Even after the abrogation of the Berlin Act of 1855 by the Saint Germain convention of 10 September 1919, this theory has prevailed in international common law.

Occupation can only be exercised on unoccupied or abandoned territory. Wartime occupation or military occupation in peace time are totally different problems and never lead to the establishment of the occupying state's territorial sovereignty.

The evidence produced by Beijing and its interpretation of the socalled discovery by Chinese navigators of the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes can in no way establish Chinese territorial sovereignty on them.

Chinese activities on those islands, as described by Beijing, did not go beyond fishing and the gathering of marine products by individual fishermen, and did not include any initiative by the state, and yet, the occupation of territories without a lawful owner can only be initiated by a state. How could activities by Chinese fishermen -- who were, what's more, not the only ones to operate there -- give rise to any right for the Chinese state?

It must be noted that the Chinese side never alludes to any occupation of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa, and this is doubtless, not inadvertent. For a long time those archipelagoes have been under Vietnamese sovereignty; not only were they discovered by Vietnamese but the Vietnamese state has exploited and developed their resources and set up an administration, which is proof of uninterrupted Vietnamese presence and exercise of sovereignty. Hoang Sa and Truong Sa are part of Vietnamese territory, not res nullius or res derelicta. As it is not easy for Beijing to demonstrate that China had occupied them, another notion has been put forward which implies that there had been "occupation": It is claimed that Chinese Governments had exercised jurisdiction over those archipelagoes.

But then this question must be asked: How could China have exercised jurisdiction upon a territory over which it could not claim sovereignty? Li Zhun's landing on some of the Hoang Sa Islands in 1909, or even the total occupation by violence of that archipelago by the present Beijing Government, are illegal and constitute violation of Vietnam's sovereignty and territorial integrity. These actions cannot legitimize Chinese territorial pretentions.

The Chinese side claims that China had repeatedly struggled to defend its "sovereignty" on those archipelagoes, implying that it actually possessed that "sovereignty." The scanty arguments put forward in support of this claim fall under four categories:

1. It is claimed that some French officials declared in 1921 and that (?in) 1929 the Paracels (Xisha) must be considered Chinese. Such declarations related only to Hoang Sa. But how could any French officials, while continuing to hold that the Truong Sa Islands are Vietnamese, have considered the Hoang Sa Chinese?

In fact, by the Tianquin convention of May 18, 1884, China pledged to give up its nominal suzerainty over Vietnam -- whose territory included Hoang Sa and Truong Sa -- and to recognize and respect all accords signed between France and Vietnam. The Beijing treaty of 1898 stipulated that the status quo ante was to be maintained on islands in the South China Sea. Long before that, Vietnamese sovereignty had been exercised over Hoang Sa and Truong Sa. Declarations by French officials, whoever they were and whatever their number, could in no way alter formal agreements signed between the French Government and the Chinese Qing court.

Indeed, facts provide an answer to the question of whether or not France, which represented Vietnam in foreign affairs, was disposed to withdraw from Hoang Sa and Truong Sa in the 1920's. In 1925, the S/S de Lanessan was sent to Hoang Sa to conduct survey operations. The same ship sailed to Truong Sa in 1927 to do the same. In 1930, the S/S Malicieuse and several other ships were sailed to Hoang Sa. Before that, in 1925, Than Trong Hue, the war minister of the court of Hua, had declared that Hoang Sa had always been Vietnamese.

2. It is claimed that following Japan's surrender in 1945 the two archipelagoes "were again placed under the administration of the Chinese Government."

This deliberately vague assertion is a distortion of the truth: The men who then represented Jiang Jieshi (Chiang Kai-shek) in Vietnam were acting in the name of the allies, not in the name of China. Their mission was to disarm the Japanese troops, not to take in hand the administration of the country.

Besides, their sphere of activity stopped at the 16th parallel. Thus when Chiang Kai-shek troops landed on Ba Binh (Itu Aba) Island south of that parallel, they overstepped their mission and violated Vietnam's sovereignty and territorial integrity.

Nothing at all leads to the conclusion that Hoang Sa and Truong Sa "were again placed under the administration of the Chinese Government."

Not a single provision of the peace treaty signed in San Francisco on September 8, 1951 handed those islands over to China or any other country. Article 2 (F) of this treaty only stipulated that "Japan renounces all rights, titles and claims on the Spratley and Paracels Islands."

As a matter of course, those archipelagoes which had belonged to Vietnam before the Japanese occupation must by right come back to Vietnam.

3. The Chinese side invokes such unilateral actions by the Chinese authorities as the protests they lodged on some occasions or the Chinese names they have given to islands in Bien Dong (Eastern Sea). This argument is wide off the mark. China has absolutely no right or title to those archipelagoes which are Vietnamese territory.

As for the Chinese maps of Bien Dong, it serves no purpose for Beijing to invoke the Chiang Kai-shek maps of 1934-35. It is enough to examine the maps published in 1973 by the People's Republic of China or those printed in the historial sketch of contemporary China, where China's southern frontier extends as far south as the Zengmy Shoal close to the Malaysian Coast to get an idea of Chinese expansionist designs.

4. It is claimed that in some maps published abroad those archipelagoes are marked as Chinese. This [is] quite possible. Everyone knows that the history of those islands is a complicated one. Besides, if some maps consider them Chinese, others clearly indicate that they are Vietnamese, E.G. the map "East Indies and the Further India" published in Philips' Pocket Atlas of the World (London, 1969).

ANNIVERSARY OF KAMPUCHEAN NATIONAL DAY MARKED

Leaders' Greetings

BK071642 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 6 Jan 82

[Text] Today, 7 January, Vietnamese party and state leaders Le Duan, general secretary of the VCP; Truong Chinh, chairman of the Council of State; Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers; and Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the National Assembly; sent the following message to Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP and chairman of the PRK Council of State; Chea Sim, chairman of the PRK National Assembly; and Chan Si, acting chairman of the PRK Council of Ministers, in Phnom Penh.

On the occasion of the PRK National Day, 7 January, on behalf of the Vietnamese people, the VCP, the SRV National Assembly, the Council of State, the Council of Ministers and ourselves, we wish to convey to you, and through you to the Kampuchean people, the KPRP Central Committee, the PRK National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers, our deep sentiment and warm greetings.

Three years ago the heroic Kampuchean people, under the glorious banner of the KNUFNS, rose up and overthrew the reactionary Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique, saving Kampuchea from a danger of genocide unprecedented in its history and eliminating a hotbed of war and a base to attack Kampuchea's neighbors and to serve the Beijing authorities' expansionist and hegemonist policy. Following the historic victory on 17 April 1985 of the resistance against U.S. aggression for national salvation, the great victory of 7 January 1979 and the founding of the People's Republic of Kampuchea have ushered in a new, very resplendent era in Kampuchean history—the era of a genuinely independent and free Kampuchea when the Kampuchean people have become real masters of their national destiny.

Over the past three years, under the leadership of the KPRP and with their traditions of staunch struggle and industrious and creative labor, the Kampuchean people have effectively defended and built their country in all fields and foiled all the perfidious sabotage plots and acts of the Beijing expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces. The Fourth KPRP Congress and the first really free and democratic general elections of Kampuchean people were successfully held. Kampuchea's rebirth and the Kampuchean people's increasing confidence in and attachment to the new regime prove the steady advance and the irreversibility of the situation in Kampuchea. The prestige and position of the PRK are constantly rising in the world.

The Vietnamese people are highly elated at the fraternal Kampuchean people's major victories and draw a strong inspiration from this in building socialism and defending their beloved country. We are determined to fully discharge our duty under the Vietnam-Kampuchea treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation and will together with the Kampuchean people do all we can to protect and foster the special friendship and all-sided cooperation between our two countries as well as to strengthen the solidarity and alliance among Kampuchea, Laos and Vietnam -- one of our vital strategies, a firm guarantee for the independence and the success of socialist construction of each country and a factor for safeguarding peace, security and cooperation in Southeast Asia.

On behalf of the Vietnamese people, the VCP, the SRV National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers, we would like to avail ourselves of this opportunity to express our sincere and profound gratitude to the Kampuchean people, the KPRP and the PRK National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers for the great assistance and valuable support they have constantly given to the Vietnamese people's revolutionary struggle.

We sincerely wish the fraternal Kampuchean people, under the correct leadership of the KPRP, many new and still bigger successes in national construction and defense and wish that the friendship, militant solidarity and mutual cooperation and assistance in all fields between our two countries is constantly consolidated and fruitfully developed.

Our amicable and respectful salutation to you, comrades.

Nguyen Co Thach's Greetings

BK071140 Phonm Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] Comrade Nguyen Co Thach, foreign minister of the SRV, has sent a greetings message to Comrade Hun Sen, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and foreign minister of the PRK, on the occasion of the third anniversary of the 7 January Independence Day of the PRK. The message says: On the occasion of the National Independence Day of the fraternal PRK on 7 January, I would like to extend to you profound sentiments and best wishes.

In the past 3 years under the correct leadership of the KPRP, the fraternal Kampuchean people made great feats in building a new life and opposing the policy of hegemonistic expansion of the Beijing reactionaries and their lackeys.

By pursuing a correct foreign policy, the prestige of the PRK has been enhanced with every passing day on the international arena and the PRK has made active contributions to the cause of peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world.

May the great militant solidarity and friendship and the ties of all-round cooperation of our three fraternal countries -- Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos -- increase and develop ceaselessly with every passing day.

I wish you comrade good health and many more successes in your noble mission.

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] January 7, 1979, is an important landmark in the thousand-year old history of the Kampuchean people. On that day the Kampuchean people completely overthrew the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime, taking Kampuchea into a new era of independence and freedom in which the Kampuchean people will become the real master of their destiny.

The Vietnamese people and the whole of progressive mankind rejoice at this event. This victory dealt a heavy blow at Beijing expansionism, which masterminded and used Pol Pot to attack Vietnam's southwestern border provinces, thus threatening Vietnam's peace and security. This achievement is a measure of the strength of the three independent and free Indochinese countries, now advancing toward socialism.

Over the past 3 years, despite numerous difficulties, revival has indeed taken place in Kampuchea. From the throes of death, the Kampuchean people have risen once more. The greeness of the two annual rice crops can now be seen on previously fallow land. Schools and pagodas which were turned into prisons and torture centers have resumed normal activities. Cities, villages and markets which were once covered with an atmosphere of death are now crowded. Families are reunited. More than ever before, the Kampuchean people are the true master of the destiny of their country. The new administration, elected by the people, is effectively controlling the country. A new life is budding.

Over the past 3 years, with its independent, peaceful and nonaligned foreign policy, the PRK has become a positive factor for peace and stability in Southeast Asia. Its prestige is increasing in the international arena. The country enjoys strong support and warm sentiments from friends all over the five continents.

In face of the Kampuchean people's great victories and firm development, the Beijing expansionists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, are wooing the reactionary circles in some ASEAN countries and trying to foster the Pol Pot remnants and other Khmer reactionaries in an attempt to reverse the situation in Kampuchea. They mislead public opinion by attempting to set up various alliances and fronts. They masterminded the convening of the so-called international conference on Kampuchea and misused the UN forum to demand the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, opposing the legal agreement reached between the PRK and the SRV. They even demanded the imposition of a political solution on Kampuchea, interfering in the internal affairs of the Kampuchean people. But all their maneuvers and plots were smashed.

Events have shown the steady and irreversible advance of the PRK and affirmed that the State Council of the PRK is the sole authentic representative of the Kampuchean people.

As a sincere and close friend of the Kampuchean people, the Vietnamese people are elated at the great and all-sided victories of the Kampuchean people. We are very happy to note that the militant solidarity and cooperation between Vietnam and Kampuchea have been further consolidated and developed.

Welcoming Kampuchea's great festive day, we sincerely wish that the Kampuchean people firmly and steadily advance on the road toward socialism. With determination and loyalty, we will fully implement the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation between the two countries, thus strengthening the close militant solidarity between the two peoples of Vietnam and Kampuchea.

[NHAN DAN 7 January editorial: "Three Years of Glorious Successes for Kampuchea"]

[Text] Three years ago, on 7 January 1979, an event of historic significance took place on the Indochinese Peninsula when the Kampuchean people, in close coordination with the war for national defense of the Vietnamese people, won complete victory in their heroic offensive and uprising.

With this great victory the Kampuchean people eradicated the scourge of genocide and yoke of neocolonialist slavery imposed by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists and their henchmen -- the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique. The spearhead often used by the Chinese reactionaries to intimidate Vietnam in the past was broken up, and the military springboard prepared by Beijing for its annexation of the Indochinese countries and expansion to other countries in Southeast Asia was smashed with the birth of the PRK.

The 7 January 1979 victory has ushered in an era of independence and freedom for the Kampuchean people to begin socialist construction while marking the start of a glorious period of development of the militant solidarity and all-round cooperation among the three fraternal countries on the Indochinese Peninsula.

Over the past 3 years, under the leadership of the People's Revolutionary Party, the PRK has gone through a difficult but successful stage. With its own efforts and the solidarity and cooperation obtained from fraternal and friendly countries -- in just a short period of time -- the Kampuchean people have recorded many important achievements, thus creating favorable conditions for the future progress of their country. The revolutionary administration has been further consolidated at all levels and the revolutionary armed forces have been strengthened and have scored many successes in tracking down and wiping out enemy remnants and defending the revolutionary gains and people's peaceful labor.

On the economic front the revolutionary administration has paid great attention to stabilizing the people's lives and restoring and accelerating agricultural and industrial production. In 1981, despite natural calamities in certain areas, peasants throughout the country planted rainy season rice on 1.33 million hectares, doubling the area planted to this rice in 1979. Almost all factories have resumed operation while the postal communication system has been restored and the public health network has been expanded with more than 11,000 cadres.

In 1980 and 1981 hospitals in the country gave 15 million medical checkups, treated more than 400,000 patients and dispensed medicines for about 15 million prescriptions. As many as 1.4 million students from kindergarten to college levels enrolled for the 1981-82 academic year. Time-honored culture has been restored and preserved. As the situation in the country has become stable, general elections to the first National Assembly were held by the people and the first Constitution of the PRK has subsequently been adopted.

In the international arena, with its foreign policy based on peace, friendship and cooperation, the PRK has gradually broadened its diplomatic relations, winning the recognition of more than 30 countries and national liberation movements, including the Republic of India -- one of the important countries in the Nonaligned Movement. The peace initiatives it has made in conjunction with Vietnam and Laos with regard to Southeast Asia -- at various conferences of the foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries as well as at several international forums -- have won ever greater support from world public opinion. Implementing the resolution of the Fourth People's Revolutionary Party Congress, the Kampuchean people are continuing to move forward.

Despite their bitter setbacks, however, the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces, are frenziedly opposing the Kampuchean revolutionary administration in an attempt to reinstate the universally condemned genocidal clique. Over the past 3 years they have carried out the most barbarous schemes to counter and undermine the PRK and have continued to kill the Khmer people. Under the cover of humanitarian aid, they have supplied food and weapons to remnants of the Pol Pot clique and other reactionary groups and turned certain areas in Thailand into shelters for these elements so that they can carry out sabotage activities against Kampuchea. Their face is disgusting and their crimes are unforgivable.

Last year they called for the convening of the so-called international conference on Kampuchea and rallied the elements already forsaken by their own people in preparation for the performance of such villainous tricks as the formation of a united front and a coalition government. Everyone is well aware, however, that this was merely a plan by Beijing in an attempt to bring genocide to Kampuchea again.

We are elated at the great achievements recorded by fraternal Kampuchea. Vietnamese cadres and soldiers performing their duties in Kampuchea in furtherance of the treaty of peace, friendship and coorperation between the two countries and in the sprit of internationalism have won the love and assistance of the Kampuchean people. We are also elated at the glorious development of the militant solidarity and all-round cooperation between Vietnam and Kampuchea as well as among the Vietnamese, Kampuchean and Lao peoples. These constitute an invincible strength to foil all truculent schemes of the Beijing expansionists and the imperialists and to ensure victory for revolution in each country, thus contributing to the cause of peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world as a whole.

PRK Ambassador's Statement

BK080818 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Statement by the PRK ambassador to the SRV on Kampuchean National Day, 7 January -- recorded in Kampuchean fading into Vietnamese translation]

[Excerpt] All the people of Kampuchea are singlemindedly united around the revolutionary government and are determined to protect their revolutionary gains and their peaceful and happy life, to move forward to build their prosperous future and to prevent the reactionary Son Sann-Sihanouk-Khieu Samphan clique -- which is no different from the Pol Pot clique -- from setting fire to their own house and from ushering in a war of destruction against their people and the PRK.

At present, the so-called Kampuchean issue does not exist. The consequences of the killing and persecution of the people and the consequences of the untold suffering and grief created by the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary regime during its 3 years, 8 months and 20 days in power have been basically overcome following the glorious victory of 7 January 1979 -- the day on which the KNUFNS, supported by Vietnam, completely overthrew that brutal regime, unprecedented in mankind's history.

The revival of the Kampuchean nation is quite sensible and logical. It is a great source of joy for all of progressive mankind. Should an issue ever arise, it would only be the issue that all the hegemonist and imperialist forces must immediately end all their aggressive and interfering actions and that all the Southeast Asian nations must discuss and reach an agreement over various regional issues on the basis of equality, respect for each other, nonimposition of views on each other and nonexternal interference in order to guarantee peace and stability in the Southeast Asian region, as already proposed by the past conferences of Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao foreign ministers and as recently confirmed by the Vientiane consulative conference of the socialist countries' vice foreign ministers.

This is the greatest desire and the strongest demand by the innocent Kampuchean people as well as by the peace- and justice-loving people in the world. On the occasion of the third anniversary of the Kampuchean people's 7 January victory, once again I would like to express our goodwill and desire to establish good-neighbor relations with Thailand, as well as with other ASEAN states, and to establish stability and peace in Southeast Asia. We strongly condemn the dangerous maneuvers of the Chinese expansionists who, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries, are openly protecting, fostering and supporting the genocidal fascist Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique and the Son Sann-Sihanouk clique so that they can return to sabotage the peaceful life of the Kampuchean people.

The ploy used by the U.S. imperialists in collusion with the Beijing expansionists and other reactionary forces to secure the U.N. vote for the retention of the Kampuchean seat at the United Nations for the Pol Pot clique is a totally wrongful action which is tantamount to adorning a dirty guy with fragant flowers. We hope that the forces of justice will struggle to quickly kick the representative of a brutal guy by the name of Pol Pot out of this highest international organ, in conformity with the U.N. Charter and mankind's conscience.

The celebration of the third National Day -- the anniversary of the 7 January historic victory -- has shown more clearly to the enemies that the Kampuchean situation is irreversible. Although a period of 3 years of relatively short, thanks to the genuine and correct line of the KPRP, the clear-sightedness of the revolutionary administration, the firm confidence, singlemindedness and revolutionary heroism of all the cadres, combatants, workers and people and the cause of defending and building an independent, free, democratic and nonaligned PRK on the path toward socialism, the Kampuchean revolution has continued to make its irresistible headway.

The Kampuchean people will eternally preserve their exceptional solidarity — a solidarity which no force can destroy -- with the Vietnamese people and army and will preserve forever the firm solidarity between Kampuchea, Laos and Vietnam. This is a vital factor for the struggle of the nations on the Indochinese Peninsula for their common revolutionary cause and common interests.

The Kampuchean people would like to extend their profound gratitude to the VCP and the government and fraternal people of Vietnam for the invaluable support and assistance they have given the Kampuchean people's revolutionary cause during their long struggle against the imperialists and the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists.

The Kampuchean people would like to express their sincere gratitude to the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries as well as to various international organizations and the many progressive and peace- and justice-loving forces for giving their all-round support to the Kampuchean people's just struggle for national salvation.

Long live the National Day -- the 7 January historic day!

Long live the exceptional solidarity between Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos!

Long live the growing socialist system!

Long live the strength of the three revolutionary currents!

Thank you all friends, the radio and television audience.

DPRK DENOUNCES SR-71 'ESPIONAGE ACT' 8 JAN

SK081402 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1310 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] U.S. imperialist aggression forces have committed an espionage act by infiltrating an SR-71, high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance aircraft into the airspace over Kangyong Peninsula, located on the west coast of our country.

At around 1538 on 8 January, the U.S. imperialist aggression forces committed a spy act against the northern half of the republic by flying an SR-71, high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane deep into the air above Kangyong Peninsula in the southwest part of South Hwanghae Province of our country.

Their acts of aerial espionage against our country have occurred five times this month alone. Such aerial espionage acts by the U.S. imperialists are becoming more frequent as the U.S. imperialist war maniacs come one after another into South Korea to encourage war fever by frequently visiting the frontline areas.

Our people are vigilantly watching the U.S. imperialists who are further exacerbating tension by persistently committing espionage acts against our country since the beginning of the new year.

The U.S. imperialists should pay due attention to our repeated warnings and stop [KCNA report at 1518 GMT on 8 Jan reads: ...warnings and promptly stop...] ignominious acts of military espionage against the northern half of the republic.

FOREIGN MINISTRY SPOKESMAN DENOUNCES U.S.

SK081647 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1616 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 8 (KCNA) -- The spokesman of the Foreign Ministry of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea published the following statement on January 8 in denunciation of the scheme of the U.S. imperialists to provoke another war of aggression in Korea:

The manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists to start another war of aggression in Korea are becoming all the more undisguised and entering a very grave stage.

According to a report, the U.S. imperialists have of late worked out a new "combat power buildup program" for bringing more aggression armed forces into South Korea from the beginning of the new year, which they will push ahead in real earnest.

According to this "program," the U.S. imperialists intend to organise a new army electronic espionage battalion composed of 500-600 men and "deploy for a practical war" one group of "A-10" close support planes, together with more than 900 men, by September this year for the purpose of increasing the "capacity of collecting information" and "ground attacking capacity" against the northern half of the republic.

They are also said to increase the anti-tank helicopters loaded with tank-attacking missiles, ship in "M-60" tanks and reinforce the fire-power of the field artillery.

Earlier, some time ago, the U.S. imperialists announced without hesitation their plan to stage the "Team Spirit-82" military exercise again against the northern half of the republic.

This vividly indicates how desperately the U.S. imperialists are trying to start another war of aggression in Korea. Such reckless new war provocation manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists are an open challenge to the entire Korean people and the world peace-loving people.

The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the entire Korean people sternly denounce the criminal scheme of the U.S. imperialists, lording it over in South Korea, to reinforce their aggression armed forces and stage the massive "Team Spirit-82" military exercise against the northern half of the republic, regarding it as a gross violation of the Korean armistice agreement and a grave challenge to peace in Asia and the world.

All facts flaringly show that the U.S. imperialists, who are hastening their manoeuvres to provoke a new war in Korea are the very one increasing tension in Korea, harassing peace in Korea and obstructing her peaceful reunification. While making a massive shipment of aggressive armed forces into South Korea, the U.S. imperialists are goading the South Korean puppets deeper into the provocation of a new war and zealously holding confabs for inveigling the Japanese reactionaries into a Korean war.

As already well known to the world, after announcing the revocation of their "plan for the pullout of U.S. troops" from South Korea last year, the U.S. imperialists transferred large quantities of aggressive armed forces including "F-16" fighter-bombers of latest type to the South Korean puppets. More recently, the U.S. imperialists decided to hand over 28 sophisticated Hawk missiles to the South Korean puppets, breathing war fever into them.

At the instigation of the U.S. imperialists, the South Korean puppets declared the 1980's "years of decisive battle" with us and are invariably perpetrating military provocations, further whipping up North-South confrontation, actively mobilizing all manpower and material resources to new war preparations and concentrating numerous combat forces on the area along the Demilitarized Zone.

As a new step for turning Japanese land into a sortie base and supply base for a war in Korea and actively drawing the Japanese reactionaries into it, the U.S. imperialists will reportedly convene a "U.S.-Japan security consultative meeting" in Tokyo to work out a "Japan-U.S. joint plan for coping with an emergency in the Far East."

That they are massively introducing aggression forces into South Korea from the outset of the year, zealously stepping up the new war provoation manoeuvres, is aimed at keeping their troops in South Korea to seize it indefinitely as their colony and military base and realise their wild ambition to invade the northern half of the DPRK.

Yet, they are crying about "threat of southward invasion from the North" and "military superiority of the North" in an attempt to veil their aggressive crime. This reminds one of a thief calling others thief. This time, too, the U.S. imperialists, while bringing forward the new "combat power buildup program," did not forget to describe it as one to cope with the "North's build up of war potential."

With no preposterous pretext, however, can they cover up their criminal nature. The world people know full well that their clamouring about "threat of southward invasion" and "North's buildup of war potential" is a stereotyped excuse to camouflage their aggressive crimes.

The Korean people are watching with heightened vigilance the new war provocation manoeuvres stepped up by the U.S. imperialists in Korea these days.

The U.S. imperialists must discard the anachronistic dream to dominate the whole of the Korean Peninsula, discontinue their aggressive arms buildup and large-scale military exercises and withdraw all their aggression forces from South Korea as early as possible, putting off the "U.N. forces" berets in accordance with the U.N. resolution.

The traitor Chon Tu-hwan must discontinue the treacherous act of begging for the permanent occupation of South Korea by the U.S. forces and recklessly trying to provoke a new war, while turning his back on the nation.

The Japanese reactionaries must give up the criminal scheme to leave the Japanese territory as a military base of the U.S. forces for aggression of Korea contrary to the interests of the Korean and Japanese peoples and peace in Asia and the world and to intensify their military infiltration into South Korea under the pretext of "economic aid."

If the U.S. imperialists persist in the dangerous war provocation manoeuvres, defying our repeated warnings, they will be held wholly responsible for all the consequences arising therefrom.

The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Korean people express the belief that the justice- and peace-loving governments and peoples of all countries of the world will direct due attention to the criminal aggression and war manoeuvres committed by the U.S. imperialists in Korea today and further lift up their voices to pungently denounce them.

NODONG SINMUN ON U.S. MILITARY BUILDUP IN SOUTH

[10 January NODONG SINMUN commentary: "Delusion of Fanatics of Force"]

[Text] Since the beginning of the new year, the U.S. imperialists have been feverishly bolstering their military power in South Korea. According to a report, the U.S. imperialists, in accordance with their new combat reinforcement plan, have decided to organize and deploy an army electronic intelligence battalion composed of 500 to 600 troops and complete the deployment of 46 sophisticated F-16 fighter-bombers by the end of 1982. They will deploy a battalion of A-10 close support aircraft. They also reportedly are planning to deploy M-60 tanks and anti-tank helicopters in South Korea.

The U.S. imperialists recently decided to pour $141.8 million into improving and supplementing the facilities of U.S. Air Force units in South Korea. It has been reported that with the military buildup by the U.S. imperialists, the number of U.S. imperialist forces in South Korea will increase by some 1,500. A foreign press report says this rapid U.S. military buildup in South Korea is the first in recent years.

At a time when the U.S. warmongers are frequently visiting South Korea to hold war councils with the puppets, their espionage activities against our republic are more frequent than ever and the puppets are running wild to instigate a war hysteria, we can see the aim of the U.S. imperialists' recent military reinforcement racket. We can expose the true nature of the U.S. imperialists as aggressors and warmongers.

The U.S. imperialists' frantic military reinforcement is a reckless military act exacerbating the situation and leading it to the brink of war. This exposes the heinous intention of the U.S. imperialist aggressors to maintain South Korea as a military base and to provoke a new war against the republic. The policy of force -- the policy of war -- to keep South Korea as a permanent colony and military base and to oppose the northern half of the republic is a strategic policy of the U.S. imperialists. The U.S. imperialists' strategy toward Korea has been more unscrupulous in recent years. Clamoring that the Korean Peninsula is a region of vital importance to U.S. interests and South Korea is a geopolitically important area crucial to U.S. national interests, the U.S. rulers are openly saying they will not hesitate to provoke a war.

The U.S. reactionary ruling circles even canceled the plan to withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea and have constantly reinforced the U.S. troop strength in South Korea. Military and operational equipment have been dragged into South Korea in large quantities and many nuclear weapons have been deployed there.

They are planning to deploy intermediate-range nuclear missiles and neutron bombs in South Korea. The U.S. imperialists have prepared a plan for short-term tactical operations and nuclear warfare. According to the foreign press, the aim of the U.S. imperialists recent military buildup in South Korea is to strengthen their intelligence activities against the northern half of the republic and reinforce their ground attack capability and the mobility of the U.S. forces in South Korea.

Clearly, the U.S. imperialists' military buildup is linked to premeditated maneuvers to achieve their wild desire for aggression by completing preparations for a new war. The U.S. imperialists' military buildup and provocative maneuvers for a new war have converted South Korea into a powderkeg and a nuclear war base and have caused a dangerous situation in our country in which a war might break out at any moment.

It is not by chance that the U.S. reactionary ruling circles, calling the Korean Peninsula a battleground on which we and the enemy face each other, say that a weak armistice agreement exists.

The U.S. imperialists are war maniacs who believe in strength and have persistently schemed to ignite the fuse of a new war in Korea. The increasing of their military capabilities is proof of this. By kicking up rackets to increase their military capabilities, to reaffirm commitments to the puppets and to revive and encourage them, they have instigated them to make the country's division permanent and provoke a new war. The U.S. imperialists' military buildup and provocative maneuvers for a new war are unpardonable crimes against Korea's peaceful reunification.

The U.S. imperialists' policy for the occupation of South Korea and their war maneuvers are a source of the obstacles to the peaceful reunification of Korea and tension. If we allow the U.S. imperialists to occupy South Korea and maneuver to provoke a new war, we cannot think of peace in Korea or its peaceful reunification. The world's peace-loving people denounce the U.S. imperialists for scheming to permanently occupy South Korea and to provoke a new war and unanimously demand that they withdraw from South Korea. The theory of the North's military supremacy is a package of fraudulent propaganda which the U.S. imperialists have unleashed whenever they increase their military capabilities.

The U.S. imperialists have announced that their military buildup is a measure to counter the North's strengthening of its combat capabilities. No one will believe this. It is clear that this fradulent propaganda campaign is aimed at pacifying growing anti-U.S. sentiment and justifying the policy for occupation of South Korea and war provocation maneuvers. We are watching the U.S. imperialists' brazen maneuvers for a military buildup and the provocation of a new war. The U.S. imperialists' attempt to threaten someone by force and realize their wild desire for aggression is an anachronistic delusion. This will only hasten their downfall. The U.S. imperialists must behave discreetly and immediately withdraw from South Korea, taking along all their aggressive forces.

KCNA CITES PRC, USSR MEDIA ON U.S. ARMS IN SOUTH

RENMIN RIBAO Commentary

SK100917 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0847 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] Beijing, January 9 (KCNA) -- The January 9 issue of the Chinese PEOPLES DAILY carried a short commentary titled "Act Going Against the Trend of the Times" denouncing the U.S. imperialists' arms buildup in South Korea.

It says: The United States is further building up its combat power in South Korea, according to a Japanese paper. The reinforcement of the U.S. troops in South Korea lays more obstacles in the way of the Korean people's cause of independent and peaceful reunification and is unfavorable to the relaxation of tensions in the Korean Peninsula.

The key to the solution of the Korean question is to reject the foreign interference, remove tensions, make all foreign troops withdraw and let the Korean people achieve the reunification of the country by their own efforts.

The United States should have withdrawn its military forces from South Korea. But after his assumption of office, Reagan revoked even the "troop pullout" plan of the preceding president, more unscrupulously interfering in the internal affairs of Korea and increasing the U.S. military forces in South Korea.

Some time ago the U.S. forces staged a large-scale military exercise near the Military Demarcation Line. The U.S. aircraft carrier "Midway" and other warships are overbearingly making their appearance in the waters surrounding the Korean Peninsula. Synchronising with this, Chon Tu-hwan is strutting around the area along the Military Demarcation Line, thirsty for blood.

For the United States and the Chon Tu-hwan clique to make a show of force in the Korean Peninsula cannot but heighten the vigilance of people. Historic experience shows that any attempt to keep a country divided forever by force of arms and interference is bound to come a cropper.

The Korean people with the glorious traditions of the anti-imperialist struggle will finally frustrate the foreign interference and achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

TASS Account

SK100912 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0853 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 10 (KCNA) — TASS recently exposed the stepped-up scheme of the U.S. administration to rearm its troops present in South Korea.

It said: Under the plan of the U.S. Defence Department the U.S. ground force will be supplied with many "M-60" tanks, helicopters and self-propelled guns. The air force will be supplied with uptodate "F-16" fighter planes and a squadron of "A-10-A" attack planes. In this way the U.S. command calculates to substantially increase the strike power of its forces in South Korea.

The decision of the U.S. Defence Department to establish a large-scale subversive espionage base in South Korea proves the provocative nature of war preparations stepped up by the United States in the South of the Korean Peninsula. To this end, special units for electronic espionage and 1,500 specially trained military personnel will be deployed there in the fall of this year.

While carrying on the arms buildup, the United States increases its aid to the Chon Tu-hwan dictatorial "regime." According to Japanese press reports, the South Korean puppet clique embarked upon the "Second Five-Year Plan" for arms buildup from the beginning of the year. What holds an important place here is the purchase of more U.S. weapons and combat equipment. In this connection the Japanese magazine SEKAI says that the U.S. Defence Department expansion of military presence and the militarisation of South Korea will heighten tensions in the Far East.

NODONG SINMUN: SOUTH CONTROLLED BY U.S., JAPAN

SK090408 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0351 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 9 (KCNA) — NODONG SINMUN January 7 printed a signed article headlined "Others' Things Have Their Way in South Korea."

The article says: The actual rulers in South Korea are the U.S. imperialists. The South Korean "regime" is a puppet regime trumped up by the U.S. imperialists. It is no more than an instrument for enforcing the U.S. colonial domination over South Korea.

The South Korean people have their national rights and dignity totally trampled underfoot by the U.S. imperialist occupiers. Patent proof of this is that in South Korea extra-territorial right is exercised by the U.S. imperialist aggression forces. In compliance with the brigandish demand of the U.S. imperialists the South Korean puppets recognized in the "South Korea-U.S. status of forces agreement" that the U.S. imperialists alone have "jurisdiction" to deal with the crimes committed by the U.S. imperialist aggression forces occupying South Korea. In fact, this is a document openly allowing the U.S. imperialists to commit any outrageous and rowdish acts against the South Korean people in any area and any place of South Korea, not subject to legal sanction.

Exercising this extraterritorial right, the U.S. imperialists have imposed immeasurable misfortunes and hardships upon the South Korean people. One cannot imagine how many honest people fell, shedding blood under the bayonets of the U.S. imperialists, how many women were deprived of their chastity by the lewd Yankee soldiers and how much national property was looted by the rapacious U.S. imperialists.

The Japanese reactionaries have also obtained "leased territory" in Masan area and various other parts of South Korea under the name of "export free zone" and are lining their pockets, driving hard South Korean employees as if they were slaves.

At present most of the South Korean economy is controlled either by Americans or Japanese. Having seized the major economic arteries of South Korea, they are lording it over there, dominating the economic life as a whole.

Clear proof of this is the fact that 90-100 per cent of the oil refining, iron and metal industries and other key industrial branches and their production equipment in South Korea are under the control of U.S. and Japanese monopolies.

The South Korean economy is supplied with chief raw and other materials and operation funds by foreign countries and is entirely dependent on them for technique. The South Korean economy is one producing others goods with others' funds and raw materials, with others' equipment and materials and others' technique. This is the characteristic feature and basis of the South Korean economic structure. As a result, the South Korean people are totally deprived of the fruit of the sweat of their brow by the foreign monopolies.

National culture and way of life, customs are being suffocated by the corrupt "Yankee culture" and Japanese fashion and way of life. In all parts of South Korea, American gangster-like murder, robbery and rape are prevalent and various cases of fraud and swindle are increasing in number with each passing day. The American manner of life and way of dressing, extreme luxury and debauchery are in vogue in South Korea.

South Korea, where prostitution and kisaeng girl tourism are declared a "state enterprise", is visited by hundreds of thousands of lewd foreigners every year under the guise of "tourism" to gratify their carnal desire, making a plaything of South Korean women.

Reactionary literary and art works leading people to pathos, weariness of life, degeneration and immorality are totally ruining their spiritual world. Foreign words and mixed words are widely spreading, obliterating the purity of Korean language.

Unable to remain a passive onlooker to the present realities of South Korea, the people put up the slogan "Yankees, go home". Their wrath will flare up sooner or later into raging flames of struggle against foreign forces and fascism and for democracy.

VRPR SCORES U.S.-JAPAN SECURITY MEETING

SK100109 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Unattributed Commentary]

[Text] On 8 January in Tokyo, the ruling classes of the United States and Japan held the so-called 18th meeting of the U.S.-Japan Security Consultative Committee. In this meeting, they agreed to jointly study ways for the two countries to cooperate in the event of an emergency in the Far East.

Accordingly, the matters discussed in this meeting included detailed consultations on such matters as Japanese assistance to the U.S. Armed Forces, intensified supply of weapons, ammunition and food by using Japan as a rear base for South Korea and the use of Japanese Self-Defense Forces bases by the U.S. Armed Forces -- all in the event the United States starts a war of aggression on the Korean Peninsula.

Such meetings as this held by the U.S. and Japanese aggressors to discuss matters concerning the Korean Peninsula clearly show how frenzied they are to start a new war of aggression there.

As is known to all of you, the fact that the ruling classes of the United States and Japan plot for an invasion of the Korean Peninsula constitutes violent intervention in the internal affairs of our country and an unpardonable criminal act. The emergency in the Far East they are discussing means an emergency on the Korean Peninsula. This is an emergency concocted by the United States and Japan on the assumption that the United States triggers a war of aggression on the Korean Peninsula and that they take joint measures to cope with it.

This has been clearly shown in the discussion of such matters as the intensified U.S.-Japan joint strategy in preparation for an emergency situation on the Korean Peninsula, Japanese operational assistance to the U.S. Armed Forces dispatched to the Korean Peninsula and use by the U.S. Armed Forces of Japanese self-defense military bases -- the detailed strategic plans to be discussed in the current U.S.-Japan Security Consultative Committee meeting.

At a time when the masses at home and abroad long for peace and peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula, the ruling classes of the United States and Japan nakedly uttered powder-reeking falsehoods in a meeting to plot for an invasion of the Korean Peninsula. This clearly shows that they regard the provocation of a war of northward invasion as an immediate task and are further accelerating preparations for it.

As has been nakedly exposed in the U.S.-Japan Security Consultative Committee meeting, the United States is trying to achieve its ambition for an invasion of Korea by actively inducing Japan to participate in the event of an emergency situation on the Korean peninsula. Taking advantage of the U.S. policy toward Korea, Japan is maneuvering to achieve her ambition for another invasion of the Korean Peninsula at all costs.

What is more, Japanese Foreign Minister Sakurauchi prattled that the presence of U.S. troops in South Korea contributes to the maintenance of peace and security on the Korean Peninsula. This is an expression of the Japanese Government's stand and has exposed the aggressive designs of the Japanese reactionaries.

The U.S. troops stationed in South Korea are the aggressors who have illegally and forcibly occupied South Korea, the source of all misery and pain suffered by our masses and the main obstacles to peace and peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula.

The Japanese foreign minister's highest praise of such aggressors and obstacles to peace and peaceful reunification not only shows that the Japanese Government is not interested in our national reunification but also that, backed by the United States, it is exerting last-ditch efforts to regain the old greater east Asia co-prosperity sphere.

The fact that the Japanese Government is strengthening its collusion with the United States for aggression clearly shows that it is following, just as is the Reagan administration, the road of blocking peace and peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula, perpetuating Korea's division and igniting a war of northward invasion. This is nothing but an open challenge to the masses at home and abroad, who are ardently aspiring for peace and peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula.

In conclusion, the aggressive plot between the United States and Japan and the absurd remarks made at the U.S.-Japan Security Consultative Committee meeting show that U.S.-Japan conspiracy and collusion for starting a new war of aggression on the Korean Peninsula has reached a very dangerous point.

The U.S. and Japanese imperialists should correctly see the present situation and act judiciously. They should stop futile acts blocking peace and the peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula.

The U.S. imperialists should stop the stupid maneuvers of starting a war of aggression on the Korean Peninsula, in conspiracy and collusion with the Japanese reactionaries, and remove without delay all destructive weapons and military equipment, including the U.S. troops stationed in South Korea.

The Japanese reactionaries should correctly view the trend of the times, stop anachronistic and wild acts for regaining the old greater East Asia co-prosperity sphere under the protection of the U.S. strategy toward the Korean Peninsula, and instead, do something beneficial for peace and peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula.

Our people should expose and condemn the reckless maneuvers for aggression of the U.S. and Japanese imperialists at every step and stage a vigorous struggle to remove the U.S. troops from South Korea and achieve social democratization and the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland.

KYODO: DPRK CONDEMNS JAPANESE AID TO SOUTH

OW090624 Tokyo KYODO in English 0427 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, 9 Jan (KYODO) -- North Korea condemned Japan for its economic assistance to South Korea, according to a Radio Pyongyang report monitored here Saturday.

A spokesman for North Korea's Foreign Ministry was quoted as saying Friday that the Japanese reactionaries are running counter to the interests of the Japanese and Korean people and peace in Asia and the world and offering Japanese territories to the U.S. forces which are aiming at aggression in Korea.

The Japanese reactionaries are "strengthening their military infiltration into South Korea under an excuse of economic assistance," the spokesman said. "Such criminal maneuvers should be withdrawn," the radio quoted him as saying.

TONG-A ILBO VIEWS U.S.-PRC MILITARY COOPERATION

SK090603 Seoul TONG-A ILBO in Korean 8 Jan 82 p 2

[Editorial: "U.S.-China Relations and U.S. Troops in South Korea"]

[Text] With detente between the United States and the Soviet Union disturbed over the latter's invasion of Afghanistan and its interference, though indirect, in Poland, the United States has announced a plan to reinforce its armed forces at a cost of $1.5 trillion over the coming five years. It has decided to increase its defense budget by 15 percent this year. Meanwhile, signs are that U.S. strategy in Asia is toward promotion of U.S.-China relations and maintenance of the balance of power in northeast Asia, the Korean Peninsula in particular, by reinforcing U.S. forces in South Korea.

There have been reports that the United States has installed a military base near Lop Nor in China's Xinjiang Autonomous Region to monitor Soviet military activities, including nuclear tests; that U.S. technical personnel are working on the base; and that negotiations are ongoing between the United States and China over a U.S. request to allow ships of the U.S. 7th Fleet to call at Dalian on the Liaodong Peninsula.

Coinciding with these, there have been other reports that the United States is planning to activate, by this fall, an electronic intelligence unit in the U.S. Army in South Korea to beef up intelligence gathering on the Korean Peninsula and is also planning to update equipment for the U.S. Air Force and Army to bolster their air-to-surface and surface-to surface offense capabilities; accordingly, U.S. troops in South Korea will be augmented by an additional 1,500. If so, U.S. troops in South Korea would be reinforced in both quality and quantity -- for the first time since the plan to withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea, first announced by the Carter administration in 1977, was suspended by the Reagan administration. For us, this is encouraging news.

About the negotiations reported ongoing between the United States and China over the U.S. request for use of Dalian port, both the United States and China have denied them. However, the fact that the two sides have neither affirmed nor denied the reports on the U.S. military base makes people feel that the presence of the base is more likely.

The United States and China have been promoting cooperative relations in the military field since the Carter administration. When former Defense Secretary brown visited China in January 1980, he said that the United States would not export weapons to China but would be willing to provide China with military technology on a case-by-case basis, and that exchanges of military officials between the two countries and the dispatch to China of U.S. military advisors would be possible. It has been learned that included in U.S. items of advanced military technology are early warning radar aviation training devices and certain electronic communication facilities. In June 1981, the Reagan administration consented to continue such cooperative military relations with China as were agreed on between the Carter administration and China.

The United States used to operate a base in northern Iran to monitor nuclear tests and aircraft movements inside the Soviet Union. However, the base was closed in the wake of the Iranian revolution. Once, Pakistan was considered as an alternative but was rejected when its political situation and geographical conditions were taken into consideration. It is reported that in the end, the United States reached an agreement with China.

Both the presence of a U.S. base in China and the plan to beef up the gathering of electronic intelligence to monitor the movements of the North Korean Armed Forces, which are evaluated as having the upper hand over the South Korean Armed Forces, do not have an offensive character. They should rather be considered as defensive or war preventative. Accordingly, we view them not as factors conducive to disrupting the balance of power and speeding up the arms buildup.

If ever the Soviet Union moves mobile SS-20 nuclear missiles to places in the Far East as a consequence of the arms limitation talks now ongoing in Geneva, this will enhance the necessity of monitoring Soviet military activities. We believe that reinforcement of U.S. troops in South Korea will have a substantial and psychological effect, containing North Korea's interest in an invasion, and this will contribute to the stability of the Korean Peninsula and of Asia.

KOREA TIMES VIEWS 'DISARRAY' IN NATO ALLIANCE

[Editorial: "A Response in Discord"]

[Text] About this time two years ago, the world was in an uproar over the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and subsequently concerned about the extent and effect of a series of retaliatory steps taken by the United States. There were some disputes about the practicality and consequences of the sanctions, but most Western allies moved to follow the American initiative. One of the compelling factors was the growing sense of crisis as the Afghan issue flared up at the height of explosive tension over the American hostages held in neighboring Iran.

Today world attention is riveted on the martial law crackdown in Poland and also on the impact of new American sanctions taken against the Soviet Union as well as the communist military rulers in Warsaw. What makes a visible difference between the two cases is that Washington now faces far more outright repercussions and cool reactions from Western capitals toward its chastisement of Moscow and Warsaw.

Presenting their reply to the United States, the West Europeans were discreet to the extent that they announced nothing would be done to undermine the American actions -- and for one thing West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, an outspoken oppositionist, made it known that he agreed with U.S. President Ronald Reagan in a Washington meeting this week on the need for a "forceful" Western response to the repression in Poland. Nonetheless, the European allies have all made it clear that they will not follow the Americans in imposing economic sanctions of their own -- a stand that is largely shared by Japan.

Thus loud voices are heard in the United States and elsewhere, questioning the solidarity and usefulness of the Atlantic alliance -- all the more so as the Polish crisis is taking place at the very door of West Europe in the NATO sphere of interest. Here one finds a formidable gap between the American and European evaluations of the situation in Poland and moreover the Soviet role behind it, which President Reagan categorically described as Moscow bearing a "heavy and direct responsibility" for the repression.

Underlying the discord is a difference in their perspective about the utility and concept of East-West detente, about which the conservative American president has often voiced dubiety. In a more practical sense, the Europeans have a much greater stake in economic relations with East Europe, particularly with the Soviet Union, than the Americans have. Aside from the effect of the U.S. sanctions which clearly sent a formidable political signal to Moscow at the least, it is of great concern that the Atlantic alliance appears to be shambling in disarray over no other issue than a crisis developing on European soil.

One may blame this phenomenon on the passage of time, nearly four decades since the end of World War II, which has inevitably given rise to polycentrism in the international order and conflicts of divergent national interests even among allies. Others may attribute it -- even partly -- to lack of coordination, requiring ever growing subtlety, in the execution of American leadership. And there must be still more causes, both inherent and accidental. For all that, ways should be sought to remedy the ailing Western alliance and for that matter to keep the world order capable of managing international disputes and thus ensuring peace.

U.S. 'REUTILIZATION' OF THAI AIRBASE SCORED

Foreign Ministry Statement

BK110809 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0407 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 11 Jan (SPK) -- The spokesman for the Kampuchean Ministry of Foreign Affairs today made public a statement severely condemning the U.S. reutilization of the Utaphao airbase in Thailand and demanding that the United States put an end to this military adventure. The statement said:

The renewed use of the Utaphao airbase is a very dangerous act of the U.S. administration in collusion with the Chinese expansionists, within the framework of their policy consisting of provoking tension in the Southeast Asian region and, in particular, threatening the PRK's sovereignty and security. It is to be recalled that the United States, in the recent past, used this airbase in its devastating war of aggression against the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao peoples.

The PRK Ministry of Foreign Affairs severely condemns this dangerous maneuver and demands that the United States put an end to this military maneuver which, as in the past, will be doomed to certain failure, and that the Thai authorities forbid the reinstallation of U.S. military bases on their territory, in conformity with the aspirations of the Southeast Asian peoples for the cause of peace, security and stability in the entire region.

Phnom Penh Condemnation

BK100459 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary: "We Vehemently Condemn the U.S. Imperialists for Resuming the Use of Utaphao Airbase"]

[Text] According to U.S. and Thai military spokesmen on 26 December and published in the NATION on 27 December 1981, the U.S. imperialists have used Utaphao airbase in Rayong, Thailand, since November 1981 to carry out joint training between the United States and Thailand with the participation of P-3C planes. This newspaper indicated that these planes will drop mines in the sea and the Thai Navy will train and practice defusing them.

This is a poisonous trick and a new adventure among countless maneuvers and acts of the U.S. imperialists in collusion with reactionary powerholders of a number of ASEAN countries, especially Thailand. They have committed barbarous acts and implemented their ambitious and warmongering policy, which endangers various countries in Southeast Asia and the whole of Asia. We will always remember that Utaphao was a big military airbase of the U.S. imperialists among many others in Thailand which actively contributed to their aggressive war against Vietnam and later against Laos and Kampuchea. At that time, the U.S. imperialists used Utaphao airbase for their B-52's and other types of planes to bomb Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos barbarously day and night in order to reduce these three peoples to ashes. But the U.S. imperialists were shamefully defeated in their aggressive war in Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos in 1975 and they unwillingly closed the Utaphao airbase. We should remember the bitter souvenirs barbarously spread by the U.S. imperialists over our territory, from which our animals, crops, flora and fauna and, in particular, the lives of our innocent people and of our fraternal Vietnamese and Lao peoples tragically suffered. Even now there remains much evidence of the aggressive war all over our country. Tens and hundreds of thousands of B-52 bomb craters still exist, and there is the smell of gunpowder. This is concrete proof which clearly shows the criminal hand of the U.S. imperialists.

At present, the U.S. imperialists are once more up to their old, useless tricks. The program to use Utaphao airbase is a savage act of the U.S. imperialists which endangers various countries in Southeast Asia, especially the PRK. Many news analysts noted that the U.S. imperialists' activities in again using Utaphao airbase are in parallel with the acts of the Beijing Chinese expansionists in supplying weapons, ammunition, foodstuffs and medicines to Pol Pot soldiers who take refuge in Thai territory. On the other hand, by allowing their territory to be used by the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing Chinese expansionists as a springboard, Thai reactionary powerholders have facilitated, assisted and supported the Pol Pot remnants and other Khmer reactionary traitors in all fields. Thai authorities assist and push these (?units) to spy, kill and steal, destroying the Kampuchean people's livelihood, and facilitate their interference in the internal affairs of the PRK.

Therefore, the collusion among the U.S. imperialists, the Beijing Chinese expansionists and Thai reactionary powerholders reveals their ambition and warmongering very clearly to peace- and justice-loving public opinion all over the world. They plan to renew their threat to the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao peoples and to create tension in Southeast Asia. But the situation in Kampuchea is irreversible. The Kampuchean people, with the fraternal Vietnamese and Lao peoples, are determined to strengthen their solidarity with the USSR, socialist countries and peace- and justice-loving peoples all over the world in order to defeat all poisonous maneuvers and barbarous acts of the enemies. We demand that the Reagan administration promptly end its poisonous policy and its foolish and adventurous acts and cease its use of Utaphao airbase.

Further Commentary

BK110901 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0356 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Commentary: "Thailand Is Intensifying Its Collusion With the Bellicose Americans"]

[Text] Phnom Penh, 11 Jan (SPK) -- It has been learned from U.S. and Thai sources that the United States has again used the Thai airbase at Utaphao, since November 1981, 6 years after its departure in the wake of its defeat in Indochina. Under whatever pretext, this revelation is a new bellicose manifestation of the Reagan administration in the region. It is a direct threat to peace and stability in Southeast Asia, particularly at a time when the collusion between U.S. imperialism and Chinese hegemonism is becoming more and more dangerous. Their goal is to aggravate tension in Southeast Asia and to directly threaten the peoples of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos.

In its war of aggression against the peoples of the three Indochinese countries, the United States used Thai territory as a staging base for raids by its aircraft, including B-52's, to pour millions of tons of bombs on the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao peoples. Fifty thousand Thai troops were also sent to Vietnam and were at the disposal of the U.S. command. Finally, what did the Thai people gain after the shameful defeat of U.S. aggression if not subordination to the imperialists in all domains?

In its ambition to retake lost positions, the United States now counts on the treason of the Chinese leaders and colludes with them more and more closely. They are training regional reactionary forces within the framework of their policy of opposition to the Indochinese peoples. The Thai authorities once again want to sell the interests of their own people for the benefit of the bellicose forces. In placing the Utaphao base at the disposal of U.S. aircraft, the Thai authorities are involving their country in a possible U.S.-Chinese military adventure in Southeast Asia.

The presence of the U.S. Air Force on Thai territory marks a new stage in Thailand's close collusion with the United States and China, while Bangkok's hostile policy vis-a-vis Kampuchea and its almost daily military provocations at the Kampuchean border do not in the least contribute to peace and stability in the region. It is certain that neither the Thai people nor the American people will allow themselves to be inveigled into a new military adventure.

This new form of U.S.-Thai collusion is aggravating tension in Southeast Asia and opposes the aspirations of the peace- and justice-loving peoples in the world. The Kampuchean people vigorously condemn this growing military collusion and are firmly resolved to apply the KPRP's policy, which stipulates that defending the country is a prime, sacred task of all our people.

KAMPUCHEA CONDEMNS THAI 'HOSTILE ATTITUDE'

BK091355 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 9 Jan 82

[KAMPUCHEA commentary: "The Bangkok Ruling Circles Must Immediately Stop Provocations Against Kampuchea" -- date not given]

[Text] Foolishly implementing a policy of following in the footsteps of the U.S. imperialists and Chinese hegemonist-expansionists, the Bangkok ruling circles have adopted a hostile attitude toward their neighbors, provoking an endless series of acts detrimental to the Kampuchean revolution and creating a permanent state of tension between Thailand and Kampuchea despite the restraint and patience shown by the Kampuchean side. The armed provocation at the end of December 1981 was another demented act of the Thai authorities.

Let us have a closer look at the incident: On 28 December three warships of the Thai Navy blatantly violated the territorial waters of the PRK in Koh Kong Province by intruding as deep as 15 km inside Kampuchean territory and wantonly firing at a Kampuchean patrol boat, killing a number of crewmen. Moreover, the Thai aggressors forcibly removed five crewmen to Thai territory. This savage act of hostility constitutes a serious encroachment upon the sovereignty of the PRK and a direct threat to peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The Bangkok ruling circles must bear full responsibility for this incident, and we demand that the Thai authorities immediately release all the crewmen and pay compensation for our patrol boat.

It should be stressed again that such provocations occur frequently in the territorial waters, as the Thai authorities have ordered their warships or armed boats to violate Kampuchean waters and encourage repeated illegal fishing in Kampuchean territorial waters or, worse still, promote piracy against the fishing boats of innocent Kampuchean people.

Since the liberation of our country, the Bangkok ruling circles have vested in themselves the right to settle the so-called Kampuchean question, grossly interfering in our internal affairs. Blinded by their greed and ambition, the Bangkok ruling circles have shamefully pursued a policy consisting of licking the boots of the U.S. imperialists and Beijing expansionists gang.

The fact that the Bangkok ruling circles have authorized their territory to be used as sanctuary by the remnant genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique and other reactionary Khmer groups from which to launch subversive activities against the Kampuchean revolution and undermine the peaceful life of the Kampuchean people; the Kampuchean refugee phenomenon; the ASEAN foreign ministers conference in Phatthaya; the countless meetings on Thai soil between the traitorous Pol Pot gang and other reactionary Khmer groups the Kampuchean people have already discarded into the trash can; the farce about the team of experts investigating the use of toxic substances staged by the Thai authorities; the firing of artillery barrages into Kampuchean territory; the hundreds of violations of Kampuchean airspace every week; and the many other acts against Kampuchea -- are they the so-called sincere solutions the Thai authorities have peddled for the settlement of the Kampuchean question? All of these are merely Thai-style solutions that the Thai authorities are attempting to implement, for they have the interests of their Beijing and Washington masters at heart. The Kampuchean people vehemently condemn the perfidious maneuvers of the Bangkok ruling circles and demand an immediate end to all acts of aggression and provocation against the PRK.

We would like to remind the Bangkok ruling circles that the genuine solution should be efforts to settle the problems of Thailand itself, for the situation in Thailand is not at all rosy. In 1981 Thailand faced many difficulties and sources of instability. The April coup d'etat still makes [Thai Prime Minister] Prem and his cronies jumpy. The living conditions of the Thai people are worsening as the prices of consumer goods soar daily, increasingly sapping the purchasing power of the people.

The strike of the Thai communications workers that cut Thailand's contact with the outside world for 9 hours on 9 December reflected the serious instability and economic crisis in Thailand. Analysts note the heart-rending impoverishment of the Thai people. The gap between the living standard of a small handful of the privileged class and that of other classes — the overwhelming majority — for whom the state cannot guarantee a decent living is growing daily on Thai territory. The development plans estimate that there is a need to help the extremely poor people in the countryside who make up about 21 percent of the entire population, or nearly 13 million people. These figures are, perhaps, only the tip of the iceberg. Regarding the question of security in society, the Thai minister of interior admitted that as of last July there were an average of 40 murders in Thailand every day, and in the past 8 months there were an average 9,600 armed attempts on lives, with the criminals using firearms they could easily procure from the black markets that spring up like mushrooms in the capital city of Bangkok. Another worry is the opposition activities of the Maoists and the disturbances caused by the millions of Chinese residents in Thailand who grab all the vital sectors of the Thai economy. The splits, envies, rancors and tussles for power in the army are worsening with every passing day. The successive cabinet crises also clearly show a political hopelessness. All of these are just a small extract from the long list of hardships, crises and sources of instability in Thailand that the Thai authorities can enumerate with pride.

As we see it, it is to these questions that the Thai ruling circles should devote themselves, rather than concentrating on playing a conjuring act to mislead the opinion of the Thai people and international public opinion about the Kampuchean question which, in reality, does not require any solution at all.

The policy of playing puppet to the U.S. imperialists and Chinese expansionists is dangerous and constitutes a cheap betrayal of the interests of the Thai people. The fact that the Thai authorities have recently authorized the U.S. to use the Utaphao military base which for years was used by U.S. aircraft to launch bombing raids against the three Indochinese peoples constitutes further proof of the foolishness of the Thai authorities, who are more deeply bogged down under the pressure of the U.S. imperialists and Beijing expansionists.

The PRK, like Vietnam and Laos, has clearly affirmed its consistent foreign policy of desiring to coexist in friendship and cooperation with the countries of the region by putting forward good will proposals as prescribed in the joint statement of the conference of the three Indochinese foreign ministers in Phnom Penh and reiterated by the joint communique of the conference of socialist countries' vice ministers of foreign affairs in Vientiane. The Thai authorities must stop following in the wake of the U.S. imperialists and Chinese expansionists and immediately change their hostile attitude toward the PRK in the true interests of the Thai people and in contribution to the defense of peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world.

THAI 'PROVOCATIONS' IN EARLY JANUARY REPORTED

BK100622 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0404 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 10 Jan (SPK) — During the first week of January, 4 flights by Thai aircraft over Kampuchean territory and 72 shellings by 120-mm mortars, 82-mm mortars and H-12 rockets, including several in support of Pol Pot infiltrations, were reported by a military source.

Siem Reap-Preah Vihear: The region was pounded 17 times by artillery pieces based in Thailand. Battambang: 32 ground bombings were reported against this region, especially Ta Sen, Kamrieng and Pailin.

On 3 January Pol Pot elements intruded into a point west of Romiet. Kampuchean combatants put 11 of them out of action and seized 4 weapons, including an 82-mm mortar.

Koh Kong-Pursat: This region was subjected to Thai artillery shellings 23 times, particularly Hills 322 and 336, which came under 12 barrages.

Thai boats and armed vessels violated Kampuchea's territorial waters 226 times in the vicinity of Koh Kong and Koh Tang Islands. On 2 January a Thai cruiser entered the vicinity of Koh Tang Island, to the northwest.

[Text] Phnom Penh, 7 Jan (SPK) -- On Wednesday, 6 January, Yos Por, general secretary of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD], received in Phnom Penh a delegation of the PLO led by 'Ali Ahmad Fayad, member of the PLO Central Committee.

On this occasion, Yos Por spoke of the Kampuchean people's successes in national defense and reconstruction during the past 3 years under the clear-sighted leadership of the KPRP and the KUFNCD. He said that the Kampuchean people have always supported the Palestinian people's just struggle against Israeli Zionism.

For his part, 'Ali Ahmad Fayad highly appraised the Kampuchean people's efforts to defend and rebuild their country. He asserted the Palestinian people's support for the Kampuchean people's just revolutionary cause. 'Ali Ahmad Fayad promised to inform the Palestinian people and other Arab peoples of the true situation in the PRK.

The message reads:

I hope that the fraternal relations and militant solidarity between our two assemblies and peoples will be permanently developed and strengthened on the basis of Marxism-Leninism.

Would you please accept my best wishes. May you enjoy the best of health. With my best regards.

LEADERS GREET CUBAN COUNTERPARTS ON NATIONAL DAY

Heng Samrin Message

BK030414 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0354 GMT 1 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 1 Jan (SPK) — On the occasion of the 23d National Day of the Republic of Cuba, Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State, sent a message of warm congratulations to Fidel Castro Ruz, first secretary of the Communist Party of Cuba [PCC] and president of the Councils of State and Ministers.

The message said: We are elated that, since the triumphant entry of the liberation troops in Havana on 1 January 1959, an event of historic importance not only for the Cuban people but also for all Latin America, the Cuban people, under the leadership of the PCC, of which you are the respected leader, and their revolutionary government have achieved remarkable results in all domains in the building of socialism in Cuba.

True to its consistent anti-imperialist policy and its international duty of supporting all peoples who struggle for national liberation and in defense of their independence, Cuba has been its prestige grow incessantly. As chairman of the Nonaligned Movement, Cuba has played a decisive role in developing its anti-imperialist orientation. In view of the arrogant threats of aggression made by the U.S. imperialists, I would like to assure you once again that the Kampuchean people are and will always remain on the side of the fraternal Cuban people.

I avail myself of this opportunity to thank the Cuban Communist Party, Government and people for the precious assistance and support they have always given to our people, who are now struggling against Beijing expansionism which in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces, is attempting to reinstall the criminals of the genocidal Pol Pot clique in Kampuchea. I am sure that the fraternal friendship and militant solidarity between our two countries will be further developed and strengthened with each passing day, the message stressed.

On the same occasion, Foreign Minister Hun Sen addressed his congratulations to his Cuban counterpart, Isidoro Malmierca.

Hun Sen Message

[Text] Comrade Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs of the PRK, sent a message to Comrade Isidoro Malmierca, minister of foreign affairs of the Republic of Cuba, to congratulate him on the occasion of the 23d National Day of Cuba. The mesage reads:

On this solemn occasion, I would like to express sincere thanks to the revolutionary Government of Cuba and to the gallant fraternal Cuban people for the staunch support accorded under all circumstances to our just cause at all international forums. We categorically condemn the provocations and aggressive threats made by the U.S. imperialists against the Republic of Cuba and demand that these acts be brought to an immediate end. I can assure you that the Kampuchean Government and people resolutely support the line followed by Cuba and will always unite with the Cuban people.

HENG SAMRIN HAILS YOUNG PIONEERS ANNIVERSARY

BK050756 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 1 Jan 82

[1 January greetings message from Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the PRK Council of State, to children throughout the country on the occasion of the second founding anniversary of the Kampuchean Young Pioneers -- recorded]

[Text] Dear sons and daughters throughout the country: I take the occasion of the second founding anniversary of the Kampuchean Young Pioneers Group [KYPG] to extend, on behalf of the KPRP Central Committee and the Council of State, my heartiest congratulations to all of you, boys and girls. Two years ago -- on 1 January 1980 -- I attended the ceremony founding the KYPG and, on behalf of the party and state, presented red scarves to the first group of our young pioneers. Now I am extremely elated to see that the KYPG has chapters in all provinces and towns and counts tens of thousands of young boys and girls among its members. Children of both sexes throughout the country can now go to school. You are studious and industrious, and take part in various social affairs.

You have completed many good jobs. In particular, two boys in Pursat Province recently uncovered a group of five Pol Pot soldiers who were lying low, waiting to sabotage the revolution. They reported this to the armed forces, who arrested the five soldiers and seized three weapons. This is an example showing that you know how to use your little strength to contribute to the cause of national defense. On behalf of the party and state, I would like to express warm congratulations to all of you, sons and daughters throughout the country.

Dear sons and daughters, you are the future of the nation, the successors to the revolutionary cause. In order to join with the people as a whole in firmly safeguarding national independence and, step by step, building a peaceful, harmonious and happy fatherland, your duty in the days to come will be heavy and noble. Therefore, as of today, I hope that you will carry out will the following three principles:

1. You must always maintain the spirit of patriotism; love and respect the people and all ethnic minorities in our country; love the peoples of Vietnam, Laos and other socialist countries and progressive countries in the world; you must always maintain solidarity with the boys and girls of Vietnam, Laos, socialist countries and the entire world;
2. You must study hard, work hard and carry out many useful tasks, using your little strength in contribution to the cause of defending the fatherland and building the country;
3. You must be courageous, humble and obedient.

Our party, state and people pay special attention to you and hope that you will observe these three principles and temper yourselves into good sons, good daughters, bright students and excellent friends, so that you will become good citizens when you are grown up.

I take this opportunity to congratulate the Kampuchean Revolutionary Youth Association for striving hard in the past to establish the KYPG. I hope that the comrades in the association will make greater efforts to further strengthen and expand Young Pioneers groups in the schools of the rural as well as urban areas so that the children throughout the country can participate in life-style meetings and in activities of the groups. I also take this opportunity to most heartily congratulate the parents, teachers and custodians for taking care of and educating the boys and girls.

I hope that in the future all of us will necessarily make even greater efforts to provide the children with better care and education. The children are the young shoots that will replace the bamboo trees in the future. They are the very future of the nation. The care and education given the children are the cause of the entire party and people. I hope that all levels, sections, departments, ministries and mass organizations from central to local echelons will take greater care of and give better education to the children, creating favorable conditions for them to take part in life-style meetings and activities of Young Pioneers groups.

Once again, I would like to extend to the parents, teachers and custodians of our boys and girls throughout the country my most cordial and friendly regards.

KONG SAMOL ADDRESSES AGRICULTURAL MEETING

BK050906 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1100 GMT 1 Jan 82

[Text] The Ministry of Agriculture opened a national agricultural work meeting at the Chamka Dong School of Agricultural Techniques on 28 December to sum up the results of production efforts during the 1981 rainy season and the 1981-82 dry season in the presence of Comrade Kong Samol, minister of agriculture.

Through the various reports, Comrade Minister Kong Samol summed up the outcome of and appreciated the 1981 rainy-season production work. He said: Despite natural calamities, due to the wise leadership of the KPRP, in addition to the moral and material assistance of friendly countries -- particularly Vietnam -- our agricultural sector has overcome all obstacles and achieved very admirable results. At the same time, he thoroughly established the objectives to be carried out in 1982.

In conclusion, he recalled the significance of national unity and international solidarity, in particular close cooperation with friendly Vietnam. He recommended that the 1981-82 dry season and the 1982 rainy season production campaigns be vigorously promoted in order to restore the national economy and improve the people's living conditions so as to bring about happiness and advance step by step through the period of transition to socialism.

CORRECTION TO ITEM ON AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENTS

An error was inadvertently made in the item entitled "Phnom Penh Views 1981 Agricultural Developments," published in the 5 January DAILY REPORT, p H 8. Paragraph two, page H 9, concerns corn production rather than grain production. The paragraph, from line one, should read: "Concerning the production of corn, in 1981 there were 95,000 ha of corn planted. This exceeded the figure for 1979, during which 20,490 ha of corn were grown..."

Paragraph one, page H 10, from line two, should read: "...Kandal and Kompong Cham Provinces sold 15,000 tons of corn to the state..."

VODK: KHMER GROUP IN FRANCE ON COALITION PLAN

BK090600 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] On 20 December 1981 all members of the Committee of Democratic Kampuchean Patriots in France held a meeting to examine and discuss the issue of the union of forces to struggle against the Hanoi Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea and, in particular, the formation of the Democratic Kampuchean coalition government in conformity with the 4 September 1981 joint statement in Singapore by Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, His Excellency Son Sann and His Excellency Khieu Samphan.

This meeting was organized after being informed of the circular of the Standing Committee of the Kampuchean People's Representative Assembly, the Democratic Kampuchean Government and the PDFGNUK issued on 30 November 1981 to all Kampuchean people inside and outside the country. The committee examined, discussed and decided as follows:

As Khmers, we will never forget the historic lesson of the Kampuchean Kraom [Cochinchina] territory which was stolen by the Vietnamese and included in their country. The Vietnamese forced our brothers and sisters in Kampuchea Kraom to assume Vietnamese nationality. They destroyed the Khmer people, tradition and literature in order to demolish the Khmer race from the Kampuchea Kraom territory. There is another lesson that we will never forget, the lesson of Champa, which has vanished. Champa and the Cham race were destroyed by the Vietnamese expansionists. At present, the Hanoi Vietnamese leaders are continuing their expansionist policy of swallowing up the territory of neighboring countries and eliminating races of neighboring peoples. This is no different from the policy of Vietnamese emperors in centuries past. On the contrary, their current methods are more barbarous than before, such as the use of toxic chemicals and toxic gas to massacre the Khmer people without consideration of the alarmed world opinion.

Based on this and the fact that the Hanoi Vietnamese sent hundreds of thousands of their well-armed troops to invade Kampuchea and occupy Phnom Penh, our committee has firmly taken the following clear political stand:

1. To support the people's struggle inside the country against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors; and

2. To stage all forms of concrete activities against the Hanoi Vietnamese aggression until they withdraw all of their troops from Kampuchean territory.

In order to achieve this goal, we believe that it is necessary for all Khmer forces to unite, regardless of political leanings, because this current danger is enormous and affects the life of the country and the nation. Each Khmer must be responsible to history and to future generations of Khmer children. With this understanding, the committee has waged all its activities to search for solidarity and the union of Khmer forces in order to increase the forces struggling against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors.

All the Khmer people inside and outside the country were elated and acclaimed with hope the joint statement issued on 4 September 1981 in Singapore by Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, His Excellency Son Sann and His Excellency Khieu Samphan. To implement this joint statement an ad hoc tripartite committee was formed and started work. We noted that the work of the ad hoc tripartite committee was carried on in a good atmosphere and that Khmers joined hands to solve the Khmer problems. After nine meetings, the results were satisfactory to all parties, building a strong base letting them cooperate with each other with mutual guarantees even without feeling complete trust.

On the other hand, if we carefully examine the proposal of His Excellency Rajaratnam, Singapore deputy prime minister, we feel that the structure of the government he proposes is too loose and lacks a strong base, causing us concern about the chances for increasing forces to struggle against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors. The base is a very important factor because it guarantees the future of the country and the nation.

For these reasons, we, the members of the Committee of Democratic Kampuchean Patriots Residing in France, hereby believe that the Khmer leaders of the three parties should quickly solve the issue of the union of Khmer forces on the basis of:

1. The principles of the 4 September 1981 joint statement in Singapore;

2. The four principles adopted by the ad hoc tripartite committee during its past nine sessions; and

3. The good results achieved by the ad hoc tripartite committee.

U.S. USE OF AIRBASE IN THAILAND CONDEMNED

BK081149 Vientiane KPL in English 0916 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 8 Jan (KPL) — "The reusing of Thai Utaphao airbase by the U.S. Air Force, under the pretext of petroleum cransportation for joint U.S.-Thai military exercises, is intensifying tensions and provocating peace and security for the three Indochinese countries, and other countries in Southeast Asia," writes the commentary of SIANG PASASON on January 8.

The NATION, a Thai English-language newspaper, quoting U.S. and Thai officials, who reported to say that the reusing of this airbase for military exercise would not pose any military provocation to any country as in the past is not convincing. [sentence as received] The commentary pointed out that it is well known that during the past U.S. aggression against the three Indochinese countries, Utaphao airbase was the most reliable base for the U.S. Air Force in carrying out their criminal acts against the peoples of Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea, and the Thai people as well. The U.S. Air Force's bloody crimes, which involved the using of Utaphao and other Thai airbases, still remain in the deep memory of the Indochinese peoples. Hence, it is understandable that the return of the U.S. Air Force must be regarded as a U.S. attempt to increase its leading roles, with close collusion with Beijing hegemonists and expansionists, in the intervention in Kampuchea and against Laos and Vietnam.

As if they have not learned their past shameful and bitter defeat, the U.S. imperialists now seem to adventuristically plunge back to their old graves. On more [as received] they will end up with new and even more bitter defeat, the commentary writes.

The Lao people are convinced that the American and Thai peoples, as well as other peoples of the world, will not allow the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing hegemonists and expansionists to create new criminal acts. The Lao people on the one hand will not stay idly. The solidarity among the three Indochinese countries, and others in the world, will be the victorious force in defeating all U.S. adventuristic plans, the commentary concludes.

PAPER CONDEMNS U.S. 'ACCUSATION' ON CHEMICALS

BK091210 Vientiane KPL in English 0915 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 9 Jan (KPL) — SIANG PASASON, organ of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party CC, today runs a commentary ridiculing the (?latest) U.S. attempt to prove the using of chemical weapons in Laos.

It is well-known, the commentary observes, Washington and Beijing war-monger circles lately have jointly formulated a shameful accusation against Vietnam on the using of Soviet-made chemical weapons in Laos and Kampuchea. To add elements of excitement in their theatrical act, they have claimed to have evidences from Lao refugees, samples of tree leaves and soil — all of which were supposed to prove their imaginary "Orange Rain."

Realizing that this accusation has not received sufficient interest from the masses -- except from the White House, the Pentagon and the Beijing reactionary gangs -- they have urged the U.N. to form a sub-committee to investigate the so-called "evidence on chemical weapons" using in Laos and Kampuchea. This sub-committee has returned to Washington empty-handed. In itself, this is another fiasco for the U.S. on this matter, the commentary further reveals the dark intention of the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing hegemonists and expansionists.

Referring to the last month issue of a Thai weekly magazine PRACHAMIT which wrote that U.S. imperialists had paid twelve "Thai brave commandoes" to infiltrate into Laos for 17 days, SIANG PASASON condemned the continual hostile acts of Washington. The same magazine said that the twelve Thai commandoes' mission was to get soil samples to trace for chemical warfare in Laos. In fact, this sample has been sent to USA for laboratory test, claimed the magazine.

With regards to this matter, the commentary stresses, the entire world fully knows who was responsible in using chemical weapons in the Indochinese countries, the U.S. imperialists. It is also the fact that the poisonous effects are still endangering the livelihood of the three Indochinese peoples until these days.

The schemes to sow division within the socialist community, and the present adventuristic plans of Reagan administration to mislead world opinions and to create international tension are bound to fail, says the commentary. Not all allies agree with Reagan's schemes. Hence, if such theatrical scenes should continue, concludes the paper, no one else's prestige will be suffered but Washington's.

SOUPHANOUVONG OPENS PEOPLE'S COUNCIL SESSION

BK111007 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0430 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] On the morning of 11 January at 0830, the Supreme People's Council [SPC] convened its regular session for 1982 in Vientiane. On this occasion, Comrade Souphanouvong, member of the Political Bureau of the LPRP Central Committee, president of the LPDR and chairman of the SPC and the Central Committee of the Lao Front for National Construction [LFNC], delivered an opening speech.

[Begin recording] Respected prime minister, deputy prime ministers, ministers and deputy ministers; chiefs and deputy chiefs of various ministerial-level committees; the government adviser; and vice chairmen of the SPC; dear members of the SPC Standing Committee and SPC members: Today I am very happy to see SPC members attending our regular plenary session for 1982. The prime minister and many members of the Council of Ministers have also joined us in attending this session.

As we have just entered the international new year of 1982, while extending warm greetings and welcome to the SPC members, I would like to take this opportunity to express, on behalf of the SPC, best wishes with profound love and solidarity to Prime Minister Kaysone Phomvihan, the members of the Council of Ministers and the government adviser for their good health and long life in the new year. [applause]

Our session is convened in a situation in which our people have recorded great and firm achievements in many spheres in implementing in its first year the First 5-Year State Plan and at a time when world conditions are favorable to our people's struggle for the defense and construction of the country.

As for the imperialists, for example, the United States, despite their struggle to carry out their warmongering schemes and despite their collusion with the Beijing reactionaries to continue opposing socialism and the world revolutionary and peace movements, they are being isolated and weakened and are faced with serious all-round crises and many insolvable conflicts.

Our session is convened at a time when some of our members have attentively participated in political courses, which have become an enthusiastic revolutionary movement within the entire party, army and people and among cadres, aimed at fulfilling the task of consolidating the organizational work; improving the procedures of our work style; going to the grassroots level; stepping up agricultural, forestry, handicraft and other production; consolidating agricultural cooperatives; promoting and expanding family economy; and improving the living conditions of our cadres, state employees, soldiers, policemen and laboring people.

There will be two parts to this session. In the first part, we will listen to, study, consider and approve the prime minister's report on the situation in 1981 and the direction and tasks for 1982 and pass some documents of the Council of Ministers which will be the laws of the state. The second part will deal with the internal affairs of the SPC, including some remaining important documents.

I call on all SPC members to concentrate all their attention and intelligence on listening to and studying the prime minister's report and regard this as the main work, since the report provides a simple and clear briefing on many valuable lessons drawn from the first year of the First 5-Year State Plan ending in 1985, adopted for the cause of defending and building the country and of socialist transformation in the early period of transition.

I firmly believe that the SPC members will positively and fully contribute to making this important session successful. I hereby declare the regular plenary session of the SPC for 1982 open. [applause] [end recording]

On this occasion, Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP and prime minister, took the floor to deliver a report on the situation in 1981.

KAYSONE PHOMVIHAN VISITS TO PROVINCES REPORTED

Luang Namtha Visit

BK090428 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Text] In late 1981, Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee and prime minister, paid a visit to Luang Namtha Province. Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan heard reports presented by Comrade Pao, secretary of the party committee and chairman of the administrative committee of the province, and heads of the various services in the province on the local situation in 1981. To understand the situation clearly and precisely, Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan asked them several questions and explained to them in detail the line and policies of the party and state.

On 30 December, Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan gave a lecture to cadres of all services at the provincial and district levels as well as intermediate-level and senior military officers who are carrying out political work of the party Central Committee Secretariat among the people. The comrade said: After the complete liberation of the country, I visited this province for the first time in 1978. Over the past 3 years, this province has made numerous commendable changes for the better in various fields. Stressing the special characteristics of the province, the comrade said: Luang Namtha is situated on our border with three other countries — China, Burma and Thailand. This border area serves as a hiding place for reactionary and bad elements to carry out sabotage and infiltration activities. Speaking of the achievements scored by the province in national construction and national defense, the comrade hailed all cadres, combatants and people in the province for greatly and persistently persevering to score numerous significant victories in various fields. The comrade noted the achievements of the province in profoundly consolidating its awareness of the new enemy, strengthening the unity among the people of all strata and tribes, building and expanding the armed forces and paramilitary forces, and preventing and resisting enemy infiltration and sabotage activities.

The comrade specially hailed the province for its achievements in food production for self-sufficiency and the consolidation of agricultural cooperatives, in which some of them have now become leading production units capable of producing, on average, 900 kilos of rice per person, as in the Papua village cooperative in Thong Om Canton, Namtha District. The province has also scored considerable progress in the educational and public health fields. The comrade affectionately cautioned cadres of all levels and services in the province, saying that: We must clearly and thoroughly understand our weak points, shortcomings and remaining difficulties, and strive to solve them step by step. First of all, we must fully appreciate all resolutions and orders of the party Central Committee, outline plans to implement them thoroughly step by step, organize effective implementation and coordination, concentrate efforts on carrying out central tasks with great effectiveness, and pay attention to executing other secondary tasks encompassed by the central tasks. He said that all parties and people in the province must turn this leading province into a firm political entity, a strong military front, a rich economic region, and a province with progressive culture. He expressed conviction that all cadres, combatants and people in the province will efficiently fulfill their tasks in the new period.

On the evening of 31 December, Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan met with the learned persons and chiefs of various tribal communities in the province. He held intimate conversations with them and asked them to encourage their children and local residents in their respective localities to step up agricultural and handicraft production, develop the three-cleanliness movement, attend school for more knowledge, and know how to identify friends and foes, particularly the new enemy.

Luang Prabang Visit

BK090442 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the Kinchiang tribal festival and the international new year, Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee and prime minister, visited some tribal villages in mountainous areas in Siang Ngeun and Nan Districts, Luang Prabang Province.

Accompanying Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan were Comrade Mrs Khampheng Boupha, alternate member of the party Central Committee and chairman of the Mobilizing Committee of the Lao Patriotic Women's Union; Comrade Vongphet Saikeu, secretary of the party committee of Luang Prabang Province; Comrade Souvandi Phommali, chairman of the Luang Prabang Provincial Administrative Committee; Comrade Brig Gen Khampha, commander of the northern military region; and a number of local cadres.

Upon his arrival in Ban Long Lam, Phou Soung canton, Siang Ngeun District, his plane landed on a hilltop near the village. The local people of Ban Long Lam and nearby villages dressed festively and gathered to greet him. Uncle Sen Sitthapan-nga, a chief of the Lao Mong tribe, member of the Supreme People's Council and a hero of the armed forces; and comrade members of the administrative committee of Phou Soung canton and the head of Ban Long Lam village led the people to welcome Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan and invited him to the canton office, where he cordially addressed the Lao Mong cadres and people. He inquired about their public security and production situation and the people's living conditions in all respects.

Taseng Phou Soung is a canton located in a mountainous region and comprises 24 villages, including 12 Lao Mong villages, 7 Lao Theung villages and 5 Lao Loum villages. It is inhabited by more than 4,000 people. This canton has set up four guerrilla companies, one secondary school and many primary schools.

During the past few years Long Lam and other villages in Phou Soung canton have achieved self-sufficiency in food. They also grow soy beans, pineapples and bananas. The most outstanding of all is pig raising. On average, each family raises between 20 and 30 pigs.

Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, representing the party Central Committee, extended regards and new year greetings to all the people and cadres in the canton. He encouraged the villagers to grow rice, industrial crops and other plants, engage in terraced rice cultivation and resolve irrigation problems. He mobilized the three-clean [referring to eating, sleeping and living] movement and cultural training courses so that they can more clearly understand party and state line and policies. He asked the people to heighten their vigilance to oppose the enemy's bribery tricks, particularly the fact-distorting propaganda of the reactionaries currently operating and hiding in jungles.

Uncle Sen Sitthapan-nga presented a knife made by himself to Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan and asked him to present three others to President Souphanouvong, Vice Chairman [of the Supreme People's Council] Faidang Lobaliayao, and Comrade Nouhak Phoumsavan. Before departing, Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan joined the local youths and children in playing a game and had his picture taken with the people who saw him off.

On 2 January 1982, Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan visited Kieu Kacham Canton in Siang Ngeun District. Comrade (Siyang), chairman of the canton committee, reported to Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan: This canton was established in 1975 for people from different areas. It now comprises 10 Lao Mong villages and 5 Lao Theung villages and is inhabited by 4,225 people of 629 families. It has 15 primary schools, 1 secondary school and 1 clinic. This canton has achieved self-sufficiency in food during the past 2 years and expanded the cultivation of grain and industrial crops such as corn, cassava, soybean. cotton and other crops. Animal husbandry is developing effectively. On average, each family raises between 30 and 40 pigs. The local guerrillas have recorded achievements in attacking the enemy and defending their homeland.

On 9 December 1981, about 13 bandits sneaked into the canton to create disturbances. They were intercepted and dispersed by the guerrillas. There is a 110-year-old man living in good health in Ban Kieu Kacham. Other old men are (Sua Teng Heu), a Lao Mong tribesman, who is a member of the Central Committee of the Lao Front for National Construction, and (Phia Yen Ma), who some 10 years ago led President Souphanouvong through Siang Ngeun after the latter had escaped from the Phon Kheng Prison [in Vientiane municipality].

Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan expressed great satisfaction over the progress made by Taseng Kieu Kaham in many respects. He praised the efforts and outstanding achievements of the local cadres and people. He urged them to strengthen unity among various nationalities, heighten vigilance and always stand ready to defend their homeland. He called on misled people to return to their families. He encouraged the local people to step up animal husbandry and cultivation and strive to study culture so that they can gradually raise their cultural level.

The local people invited Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan and the accompanying cadres to join a dance and view art performances organized by the canton. The atmosphere was joyous and cordial.

Then Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan proceeded to Na Muang Canton in Nan District. Upon learning of his visit, the people in various villages in the canton gathered in Ban Pong Dong. Children, youths and aged people of the Lao Loum and Lao Yao nationalities were in festive mood and dress. They stood around Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan to listen to his cordial speech. He open-mindedly and informally answered questions raised by many people. Before leaving, he wished all cadres and people good health and fine success in their work. The people expressed their happiness by loud applause. The chairman of the canton committee spoke on behalf of the local people. He pledged to strive to carry out all tasks successfully.

GDR DEFENSE MINISTER CONTINUES FRIENDSHIP VISIT

SRV, GDR Delegations' Talks

OW081712 Hanoi VNA in English 1634 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 8 -- The visiting high-level military delegation of the German Democratic Republic today held talks with leaders of the Vietnamese Ministry of National Defense. Present at the talks on the guest side were Army General Heinz Hoffmann, Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, (SED) and minister of national defence; Colonel-General Heinz Kessler, S.E.D. Central Committee member, vice-minister of national defence and head of the Political Department of the People's Army; Colonel-General Horst Stechbarth, S.E.D. Central Committee member, vice-minister of national defence and commander of armed forces; Major-General Gunter Hiemann, member of the Air Force Command; Rear-Admiral Theo Hoffmann, member of the Navy Command; Major-General Heinrich Winkler, head of the International Relations Department of the National Defence Ministry; Colonel Werner Zick-mann, National Defence Ministry official; and Colonel Dr. Karli Arnold, Navy and Air Force attache to the G.D.R. [Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 8 -- A meeting was held here this evening by the Ministry of National Defence and the Hanoi Garrison in honour of the visiting high-level military delegation of the German Democratic Republic. Present on the occasion were representatives of the Defence Ministry, the Hanoi Garrison and the Command of the Border Guard, officials of the G.D.R. Embassy, and others.

On the presidium of the meeting were General Heinz Hoffmann, head of the delegation; Colonel-General Heinz Kessler, Colonel-General Horst Stechbarth, Ambassador Klaus Zorn, General Van Tien Dung, Colonel-General Le Trong Tan, Lieutenant-General Tran Van Quang, Major-General Lu Giang and Major-General Dinh Van Tuy.

Opening the meeting, General Van Tien Dung said: "We are very glad to welcome oustanding representatives of the army and people of the German Democratic Republic, glorious messengers of the G.D.R-Vietnam friendship, and brothers from the land of the great Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, who have brought us the warm friendship and rock-like militant solidarity of the working class, people and army of the G.D.R." Van Tien Dung said he believed the visit of the G.D.R. delegation would mark a new development in the relations between the G.D.R. and Vietnamese peoples and armies.

The next speaker was Major-General Lu Giang, commander of the Hanoi Garrison, who praised the G.D.R. People's Army for their traditions of indomitableness and their ever higher performance. "Under the leadership of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany," Lu Giang said, "The G.D.R. People's Army has become a modern socialist army and a worthy member of the socialist defence alliance under the Warsaw Treaty. It is firmly defending its country while contributing actively to the safeguard of peace in Europe and the world."

Lu Giang expressed deep gratitude to the S.E.D. and the government, the armed forces and the people of the G.D.R. for their heartfelt assistance to Vietnam.

In his speech General Heinz Hoffmann thanked the Vietnamese people for their very warm welcome. He said the Vietnam People's Armed Forces are loyal friends of the G.D.R. people and staunch defenders of the outpost of socialism in Southeast Asia." Few nations can be compared to the Vietnamese people who, unbending, determined to be independent, ardently patriotic, and wisely led by the C.P.V., have recorded glorious victories over all kinds of foreign rulers and aggressors, be they French, American or Chinese," Heinz Hoffmann stressed. He ended by reaffirming strong, complete support for the Vietnamese people in their efforts to build socialism and defend their country.

Closing the meeting General Van Tien Dung wished the G.D.R. People's Army still greater success in putting into practice the resolutions of the 10th SED Congress.

General Van Tien Dung then presented the G.D.R. delegation with a portrait of President Ho Chi Minh and received from General Heinz Hoffmann [an] embroidered picture of Karl Marx. A show was given at the end of the meeting by the army art troup to entertain the guests.

In the morning General Heinz Hoffmann and a number of other guests paid a visit to the military institute, where they were given a warm welcome by Lieutenant-General Hoang Minh Thao, director of the institute. Meanwhile, other members of the delegation visited the army museum.

Chu Huy Man, GDR Official Talk

OW090418 Hanoi VNA in English 0337 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 8 — Colonel-General Heinz Kessler, member of the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany (SED), vice minister of national defence, and head of the General Political Department of the GDR People's Army, this evening visited the General Political Department of the Vietnam People's Armed Forces.

He was warmly received by General Chu Huy Man, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Communist Party and director of the department. Chu Huy Man informed Heinz Kessler of the situation in Vietnam and of the Vietnamese Armed Forces' determination to defeat the Chinese war of sabotage and to follow up their success in national defence and socialist construction.

The guest informed Chu Huy Man of the implementation of the resolution of the 10th SED Congress, and of the high vigilance of the GDR People's Army against sinister moves of imperialism. He reiterated strong support for the Vietnamese revolution.

Chu Huy Man presented Heinz Kessler with a silk painting representing President Ho Chi Minh on an inspection tour of a mountain region.

Banquet, Other Activites 9 Jan

OW091525 Hanoi VNA in English 1458 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 9 — The visiting high-level military delegation of the German Democratic Republic headed by General Heinz Hoffmann today paid a floral tribute at the Ho Chi Minh Mausoleum. It was accompanied by Vietnamese Vice-Ministers of National Defence Lieutenant-General Tran Van Quang and Major-General Dang Vu Hiep.

This morning the delegation called on an infantry unit. Senior Lieutenant-Colonel Tran Thanh Van, commander of the unit, praised General Heinz Hoffmann as a veteran revolutionary and an experienced commander. He presented the head of the delegation with a lacquer painting representing the overrunning of the bunker of French General de Castries at Dien Bien Phu, and with the pistol of a Saigon general captured during the Ho Chi Minh campaign.

Colonel-General Horst Stechbarth, vice-minister of national defence, on behalf of the delegation, expressed his joy to meet loyal Vietnamese comrades-in-arms. He wished the officers and men of the unit many and still bigger exploits. On this occasion, the G.D.R. National Defence Ministry awarded a number of medals and badges of the G.D.R. National People's Army to officers and men of this unit.

On the same day, Colonel-General Heinz Kessler, vice-minister of national defence and director of the General Political Department of the People's Army; Major-General Gunter Hiemann, member of the Air Force Command; and Rear-Admiral Theo Hoffmann, member of the Navy Command, called at the Thang Long Air Force Unit.

Senior-Lieutenant Colonel Pham Thanh Ngan told them of the traditions of the Vietnam People's Air Force, and presented the guests with a flight helmet of a U.S. pilot shot down during the U.S. air war. On behalf of the G.D.R. National Defence Ministry, Colonel-General Heinz Hoffmann awarded medals of the G.D.R. National People's Army to several officers and men of the unit.

This evening, the G.D.R. delegation gave a banquet before leaving Hanoi to visit other Vietnamese Army units. Its Vietnamese guests included Minister of National Defence General Van Tien Dung, Vice-minister of National Defence General Hoang Van Thai, Chief of the General Staff Colonel-General Le Trong Tan, Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs Hoang Anh Tuan, and Vice-Chairman of the External Relations Commission of the Communist Party Central Committee Tran Danh Tuyen.

General Heinz Hoffmann and General Van Tien Dung invited everybody to join in a toast to the brilliant success of the delegation's visit and to the constant consolidation and development of the great solidarity and friendship and fraternal cooperation between the peoples and armed forces of Vietnam and the G.D.R.

Meeting With Pham Van Dong

OW101537 Hanoi VNA in English 1525 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 10 — Pham Van Dong, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and chairman of the Council of Ministers, received here today the military delegation of the German Democratic Republic led by General Heinz Hoffmann, Political Bureau member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany Central Committee and minister of national defence. Present were General Van Tien Dung, Political Bureau member of the C.P.V. Central Committee and minister of national defence; Lieutenant General Tran Van Quang, vice minister of national defence; and G.D.R. Ambassador Klaus Zorn.

Chairman Pham Van Dong welcomed the visit of the high-level G.D.R. military delegation which, he said, reflected the vigorous support of the people and army of G.D.R. for the people and army of Vietnam in their national construction and defence. This visit, he continued, and the complete identity of views between the military delegations of the two countries marked a new development of paramount importance for the friendship, militant solidarity and comprehensive cooperation between the peoples and armed forces of the two countries.

In reply, General Heinz Hoffmann said that the people and army of the G.D.R. who have long followed with profound sympathy the just struggle of the Vietnamese people and their armed forces will for ever side with the people and the army of Vietnam in their national construction and defence.

The reception took place in a very cordial atmosphere of fraternal militant solidarity.

Cooperation Accord

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 7 January editorial: "Warm Welcome to the GDR People's National Armed Forces Delegation"]

[Text] Our people's armed forces' cadres and combatants are very happy to welcome the GDR military delegation led by Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann, member of the Political Bureau of the SED Central Committee and GDR minister of national defense, which will make an official friendship visit to our country.

At a time when the people of our country are enthusiastically emulating in registering achievements to greet the fifth party congress and when they are entering a year full of promises, this visit will be an important event and a vivid expression of the close militant solidarity binding the peoples and armies of the two fraternal countries and will give great encouragement to our people's armed forces.

Enthusiastically welcoming Gen Heinz Hoffmann and the GDR military delegation, we express our warmest sentiments of friendship toward the outstanding delegates of the GDR people's armed forces, the staunch fighters at the western outpost of the socialist community. For the past quarter of century and more, the GDR people's armed forces have grown incessantly and become the core force of the proletarian dictatorship in firmly defending the GDR people's fatherland and their building of advanced socialism.

Sons of the working people, remaining absolutely faithful to the GDR working class's and laboring people's revolutionary cause and imbued with patriotism and proletarian internationalism, the GDR People's National Armed Forces are a powerful revolutionary force, an important member of the Warsaw Pact organization. Today these armed forces have become a regular and modern armed force whose cadres and combatants have attained deep revolutionary consciousness and a high cultural level and scientific knowledge, are versed in strategy and tactics and are ready to assume and successfully fulfill all assigned tasks.

Equipped with modern combat means, the GDR People's National Armed Forces have attained a high level of combat readiness and strength. They are firmly defending the GDR and, closely coordinating with the armed forces of the other socialist countries, are steadfastly maintaining security in Europe, thus making an important contribution to the cause of world peace and revolution.

Closely linked to one another by pure revolutionary ideals, Vietnam and the GDR have had a fine tradition of militant solidarity, which constitutes a source of strength and pride of the two fraternal nations. We are sincerely grateful to the GDR people and their National Armed Forces for having constantly given our people great and extremely valuable support. This noble socialist international solidarity has reinforced our people in their past resistance against U.S. aggression, for national salvation, as well as in their present building of socialism and firm defense of their beloved fatherland.

Our people's armed forces are greatly elated over the GDR people's and their National Armed Forces' great successes. We are very proud of the fact that the militant solidarity between the peoples and armed forces of Vietnam and the GDR is developing with every passing day. The Vietnam-GDR treaty of friendship and cooperation signed 4 years ago has affirmed the ironlike determination of the two parties, governments and peoples of the two countries in making the Vietnam-GDR friendship and militant solidarity forever pure and lasting.

In conformity with the aspirations of the two peoples, the visits full of comradeship of the delegations of the two countries' armed forces over the past few years have contributed to vigorously strengthening the traditional relations of all-round cooperation between the two fraternal armed forces. The visit to Vietnam this time of a highest-level GDR military delegation will constitute a new development of this close solidarity and these relations of cooperation.

We wish the GDR people and their National Armed Forces many new achievements in their national defense and consolidation of peace and security in Europe, thus making an outstanding contribution to the cause of world revolution. May esteemed Comrade National Defense Minister Gen Heinz Hoffmann and his delegation's members have good health. May his delegation's Vietnam visit be a splendid success.

SECURITY CONSULTATIVE TALKS WITH U.S. HELD 8 JAN

OW081315 Tokyo KYODO in English 1206 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 8 (KYODO) -- Japanese and U.S. representatives to the 18th Japan-U.S. Security Consultative Committee agreed Friday to study responses to possible emergencies in the Far East that could threaten Japan's security. The decision represents a dramatic step forward in Japan-U.S. military cooperation, previously limited to the Japanese islands themselves. However, Defense Agency Director General Soichiro Ito avoided committing Japan to supplying the U.S. with military technology, saying the government is "earnestly" studying the issue.

The Security Consultative Committee meeting, the first since November 1978, was attended by Ito and Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield and Adm Robert Long, commander in chief of U.S. Forces in the Pacific, represented the American side. Lower ranking staff were also present. Meeting at the Foreign Ministry, the participants agreed to begin a joint study of Far East emergencies by the end of the month. The studies will be made in accordance with the "Guidelines for Japan-U.S. Defense Cooperation" approved by the committee at its last meeting. They will focus on emergencies outside Japan which would directly influence Japanese security.

Following the meeting, Foreign Ministry sources said the study, in accordance with Article Five of the Japan-U.S. security treaty concerning the study of emergencies in Japan, would not address the question of consultation between the U.S. and Japanese Governments.

Following the conference, William Clark, minister-counselor at the U.S. embassy in Tokyo, told reporters the U.S. would like to establish guidelines for responding to crises in the Far East. However, he added that such guidelines would have to be in accordance with existing Japanese laws.

Long, meeting with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki later in the day, said he was "very satisfied" with the agreement.

The committee meeting also discussed the international situation, the upgrading of Japan's defense capability and U.S. bases in Japan.

Mansfield stressed the Soviet threat, stating that conditions have worsened since the last committee meeting. He called for expanded cooperation between the two countries on defense problems, including the cost of basing U.S. forces in Japan, military technology transfers and joint training exercises.

Long called on Japan to be aware of the Soviet military capability, and cited conditions on the Korean Peninsula, where he said North Korea had achieved military superiority. Sakurauchi countered that the Soviet Union was itself facing serious problems in Afghanistan and Poland. He said Japan wanted to "contribute" to restoring the troubled South Korean economy, but added that it was also necessary to Seoul to show better understanding of Japan's approach to economic assistance.

During his meeting with Suzuki, Long praised Japan's 7.75 percent increase in its fiscal 1982 defense budget as a "welcome first step" made possible by the prime minister's strong leadership. However, U.S. participants at the afternoon committee meeting stressed the need for further increases in Japan's share of the defense burden.

Referring to the sensitive issue of military technology transfers, the U.S. side said they hoped to establish procedures for such exchanges before discussing any specific technologies. Observers said Ito's failure to make any clear commitment reflected the lack of a firm decision within the Japanese Government on the issue. They predicted the government would cooperate with the U.S. once a final decision was reached.

LAW CHANGE PLANNED FOR MILITARY SUPPORT TO U.S.

OW091257 Tokyo KYODO in English 1236 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 9 (KYODO) -- The government plans to amend domestic laws to enable Japan to provide logistics support for U.S. forces in the event of an emergency in the Far East, it was disclosed Saturday. The plan was revealed by Soichiro Ito, Defense Agency director general, in a TV political debate program videotaped by the Japan Broadcasting Corporation (NHK) Saturday afternoon.

Ito said the Japan-U.S. study group on Far East emergency steps, agreed upon at Friday's meeting of the 18th Japan-U.S. Security Consultative Committee, would study emergency legislation for Japan's logistics support for U.S. forces. He suggested studies might be made of amending domestic laws as well as emergency legislation for the nation's self-defense forces [SDF] in the future.

Ito said the study would be made by nonuniformed officials of the Defense Agency and the Foreign Ministry on the Japanese side and of the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo on the U.S. side. Consultations would be held with uniformed officers if necessary, Ito said. He added that the "Guidelines for Japan-U.S. Defense Cooperation" on which the study will be based do not oblige the government to take legislative measures for the purpose. However, the U.S. is expected to call on Japan to aid in the transport of personnel and materials, rescue and search operations, medical care, military equipment repairs and the procurement of ammunition. The present self-defense force act bans the SDF from providing U.S. forces with ammunition, fuel and information, and from participating in rescue and search operations.

In the TV program, representatives of the Japan Socialist and Communist Parties opposed the study, which they said is aimed at changing the nation's defense structure into a collective defense system.

Motoharu Arima, acting chairman of a ruling Liberal-Democratic Party panel on national defense, said the party would also study legislative measures for Japan's logistics support of U.S. forces.

Meanwhile, Shinichiro Asao, head of the Foreign Ministry's North American Affairs Bureau, asked Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa Saturday to work out the government's unified view soon on the U.S. request for Japanese cooperation in military technology. Miyazawa told Asao that the government would make a decision on the controversial matter after consulting with the Defense Agency and the ruling party, officials said. Asao stressed that bilateral military technology cooperation is vital to Japan-U.S. defense cooperation, they added.

SAKURAUCHI: NO IMMEDIATE SANCTIONS AGAINST USSR

OW120411 Tokyo KYODO in English 0342 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Jan 12 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Tuesday Japan would not take immediate sanctions against the Soviet Union in connection with events in Poland.

Foreign ministers of the north Atlantic alliance Monday expressed readiness to take such economic sanctions, he noted, adding that the (?north Atlantic alliance) no doubt had helped strengthen unity among countries in the Western camp. The foreign minister thus indicated that Japan would watch developments and consult its allies closely before taking any action.

IRAN ASKS COMMERCIAL BANKS FOR EMERGENCY LOANS

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 12 (KYODO) -- Iran's Central Bank has asked major West European and Japanese commercial banks for emergency loans of about $100 million each, bank sources here said Tuesday.

Among the several Japanese banks that have received such a request is the Bank of Tokyo, according to the sources. Other sources said the Iranian Government has proposed chemicals-for-oils deals with a few major Japanese trading houses. The sources said the Tehran government wishes to buy raw materials for synthetic resins, caustic soda and polyvinyl chloride totaling about $100 million from Japan in exchange for crude oil. The sources said, however, Japanese banks and trading houses were not showing much interest in the Iranian request and proposal.

Iran's foreign exchange reserves are reported to have plunged recently as a result of sagging oil revenues and the prolonged war with Iraq.

BREAK WITH IRAN ON OIL PROJECT THREATENED

OW090821 Tokyo KYODO in English 0151 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 9 (KYODO) -- Japanese partners have threatened to terminate negotiations with their Iranian counterparts on the suspended Japan-Iran petrochemical project in southern Iran unless the Iranians agree to a repeated Japanese proposal. The threat was indicated in another questionnaire sent Friday to Iran requesting a reply by January 15.

The questionnaire said, in part, "We are afraid it may become difficult for us to continue further communication with you," unless the Iranians agree to the Japanese proposal that additional funds for the giant project come from the Iranians and that the basic agreement be revised. It also pointed out that the economic viability of the $3.6 billion complex in Bandar-e Khomeyni had already been lost due to the protracted suspension in the engineering work as a result of the Iran-Iraq war. A similar questionnaire was sent late last year to Iran, but the Iranians rejected the Japanese proposal in a reply sent on Tuesday. The basic agreement stipulates that the Japanese and Iranian partners shall equally bear the project costs.

The questionnaire was sent (?by) Iran Chemical Development Co (ICDC), the Japanese partner in the 85 percent-complete project, to National Petrochemical Co (NPC), the Iranian counterpart.

SUZUKI ORDERS TOP PRIORITY FOR AIR, SEA DEFENSE

OW120949 Tokyo KYODO in English 0701 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 12 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Tuesday instructed Defense Agency Chief Soichiro Ito to give top priority to improvement of Air and Maritime Self-Defense Forces in building up the nation's defense capacity. This was necessary to cope with the growing demands on Japan as one of the world's leading maritime powers, he said. Suzuki's instructions were given in preparation for possible debate on the defense issue when the ordinary Diet session resumes January 25 after the New Year holiday recess.

Suzuki stressed to Ito, however, that the planned 7.75 percent increase in defense spending for fiscal 1982 -- to a level of yen 2.6 trillion -- should not be considered as a reaction to current mounting international tension. If so, the government would have had to create an open-ended defense budget to sufficiently improve the self-defense force's capabilities, he said. Rather, Ito was instructed, the increase should be regarded as merely part of the build-up scheduled under mid-term defense programs, the next one (1983-87) of which is the process of study by the Defense Agency.

The defense issue is expected to be raised in the Diet session by leftwing opposition parties, who object to the budgetary increase at a time when most other expenditure items are being frozen as part of a government plan to reduce chronic budgetary deficits.

They claim that the government has given in to pressure from the United States, which has been pressing Japan for some time to assume a larger defense role within the fra work of their bilateral security treaty.

Apparently in anticipation of various controversies that lie ahead, Suzuki also carefully instructed Ito to take prudent measures in working out a draft revision of various domestic laws to be applied to defense force activities in the event of an emergency. In particular, there should be sufficient prior consultation with the Foreign Ministry and Cabinet Legislation Bureau on the matter, Suzuki said.

During the meeting, the prime minister also explained his "porcupine" theory of national defense, which he said was most suitable for a maritime nation like Japan. Under this, Japan would possess sufficient defensive power to make an enemy force pay a prohibitive price for any attempted landing on Japanese soil.

JSP CHAIRMAN ASUKATA INTERVIEWED ON 1982 ISSUES

OW041401 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 2345 GMT 1 Jan 82

[Part 1 of series "New Year Interviews With Party Heads — Political Choice and the Responsibility of the Opposition": NHK Political Department Director Masao Naito interviews Ichio Asukata, chairman of the Japan Socialist Party: recorded at JSP headquarters; date of recording not given]

[Excerpts] [Question] Happy New Year, Mr Chairman.

[Answer] Happy New Year.

[Q] At the outset of the new year, could you comment on how you see the international political situation developing this year and how you view the prospects for the domestic political situation?

[A] Of course there are various arguments, but I believe that the first issue should be none other than the question of strategic nuclear arms, is which the existence of the world is at stake. They call it a limited war, but actually the world is faced with the grave danger of extinction. We must ponder this. This danger is likely to further increase this year. Strategic nuclear arms are referred to as — please excuse my snobbishness in using the English term -- theater nuclear weapons. They mean to shoot nuclear weapons at each other in the European theater or the Asian theater while the Soviet Union and the United States remain safe because they are made sanctuaries. So, the European people are taking the matter seriously, and as you can see, they are carrying out widespread antinuclear campaigns — 300,000 people in Bonn, 200,000 in another city and the like. I think that this is quite a natural turn of events. However, this issue is not being given due attention in Asia, although the deployment of theater nuclear weapons is already in progress in Asia as well. This also holds true in Japan, does it not? I do not think anyone can speak of this year without paying attention to this issue. In my opinion, this is one of the most important issues.

[Q] A UN General Assembly session on nuclear disarmament is scheduled for this year.

[A] Yes. But we should not rely only on the United Nations. What attitude should Japan, one of the world's advanced nations, take toward that issue? Should Japan follow in Mr Reagan's steps and tread the road to war or should it proceed in the direction of a nuclear ban and total disarmament? I think Japan stands at the very crossroads this year. If Japan fails to take the correct path, the existence of the nation itself will be in danger. Of course, people have different arguments because they have different world outlooks and believe in different economic policies. But anyway, you cannot do anything unless you remain alive. Therefore, I think that this year we will be faced with a crisis on which our existence will be at stake. So, our socialist party should serve as a firm [word indistinct]. That was a call I made in the recent election.

[Q] How about the prospect for the political situation at home?

[A] Looking at the political situation at home, the issue has become very clear. The administrative reforms are intended for an arms race, are they not? Is that sort of arms race permissible?

The world faces a number of problems -- for instance, the Polish question and the Middle East question. At such a time, Japan pursues a policy giving priority to trade. It is clear that this policy has become bogged down. The word frictions is used to describe this situation, but the word frictions is not enough to describe it. Exports have decreased, and business at home has cooled off. I think this year will be the worst since the war. Instead of using this abstract term -- the worst year since the war -- I rather feel the urge to shout aloud: What are you going to do with the aged people? What about the sick people? What about education? And what about the really needy people?

[Q] So you are saying that this year will be a year of hardships. Now, the Diet is scheduled to resume its ordinary session toward the end of this month. It will begin deliberating on the proposed budget. In general, what do you think of the draft budget announced by the government?

[A] In a nutshell, it shows that the administrative reforms are designed for an arms race. Frankly, it ignores the people. Take the defense spending, for example -- the draft budget calls for a 7.754-percent increase. This is unusual. This is indeed an unusual situation because Japan, an advanced country, is compelled to take this course because of pressure from the United States. I even feel that this is a national humiliation. Defense spending is sharply increased at the expense of the aged, the sick and the needy, education and everything else.

These people are not the only ones who will suffer. Since there will be no tax reduction, there will a de facto tax increase of approximately 3 trillion yen. This will result in the cooling off of business activity. This will make all of us suffer. I feel the public is in a veritable straitjacket. To make matters worse, railway fares will go up and college tuition fees will rise. How will the government bail small and medium business out of recession? No matter how closely we examine the budget, we cannot find in it any measures against recession. I feel great rancor, particularly this year, at this indifference, this heartless apathy, if you will excuse my harsh expression. This is unusual for me because I am comparatively a man of poise. I feel surging anger.

Therefore, at the forthcoming Diet session we will do everything in our power to oppose the proposed budget. I think that this is quite natural. Mere opposition is not enough. I think that we should form a big national union against the Liberal Democratic Party, and we hope to serve as the core of this national union.

VRFR SCORES REAGAN'S DRAFT REGISTRATION STAND

SK111200 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] U.S. President Reagan, on the pretext of coping with a contingency, issued an order on 8 January that all draft age young men 18 to 21 years old should register for the draft.

In accordance with the restoration of draft registration, about 800,000 young men aged 18 to 21 must register for the draft. If they disobey this order, they will be sentenced to 5 years in prison or fined $10,000. The aim of Reagan's draft registration program is to secure military manpower to provoke a war of aggression.

TANJUG INTERVIEWS PRESIDENT KIM IL-SONG

LD101836 Belgrade TANJUG Domestic Service in Serbo-Croatian 0748 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, 10 Jan (TANJUG) -- Kim Il-Song, president of the DPRK, has repeated his country's proposal for the reunification of Korea, advocating a confederative system and the formation of a united national government with full respect for the social systems in both North and South and for the regional autonomy of both parts of divided Korea.

Kim Il-Song had proposed to the United States, as a signatory of the Korean military agreement on armistice signed at the end of the Korean war in 1953, that a peace treaty be signed and U.S. troops be withdrawn from South Korea, rejecting the idea of "two Koreas."

The DPRK president said this in a conversation he had in Pyongyang with a TANJUG delegation consisting of Aleksandar Bakocevic, TANJUG director; Mihailo Saranovic, chief editor; and Sonja Badel, correspondent for Korea and China. In this interview Kim Il-song spoke highly of the significance and role of the Nonaligned Movement in the present international situation and of President Tito's role in the creation and development of the movement; advocating the preservation of the original principles of nonalignment and unity of the member countries.

Talking about internal developments in the DPRK, Kim Il-song said that the results achieved last year made it possible to raise high the banner of chuche -- of full national independence and reliance on the country's own resources -- and to steer the country along the road of faster and more comprehensive development. He added that at the Sixth KWP Congress in the fall of 1980 a historic task was set for all society to develop along the lines of the chuche idea. This means that all members of society should become communists of the chuche type and that society should be revolutionized, and the worker-class approach and intellectual education of the people achieved.

Kim Il-song said, we will thus conquer the ideological bastion of communism and achieve full social equality of the working people. This also implies that the national economy should become chuche-oriented, modernized and scientifically based. Once we can firmly guarantee the independent nature of the national economy and can consistently improve its supplies of modern technology and its production and management on the new scientific base through the introduction of the chuche orientation, modernization and application of science in the economy, we can then lay firm material and technical foundations of socialism and communism and secure in an appropriate way an independent material and cultural life for the working people.

The DPRK president talked about the aims set by the sixth party congress, which involved securing the production in the near future of 100 billion kWh of electricity, 120 million tons of coal, 15 million tons of steel, 1.5 million tons of nonferrous metals, 20 million tons of cement, 7 million tons of chemical fertilizers, 1.5 billion meters of cloth, 5 million tons of sea products, 15 million tons of wheat, and transforming an area of 300,000 hectares of uncultivated land into arable land within the next 10 years.

When these aims are realized, Kim Il-song said, our country will be among the first in the world in economic progress and will have laid firm material and technical foundations which will reliably guarantee a complete victory for socialism and a considerable rise in the material and cultural standard of living of our people. He added that, bearing in mind the people's great revolutionary enthusiasm and militant spirit, he believes that these tasks will be realized even before the set deadline.

As for the unification of Korea, Kim Il-song said that the new proposal contains three principles: those of independence, peaceful unification and great national unity. The proposal implies that the country should be reunited by establishing a confederative republic and by forming a united national government, while both North and South would recognize their different ideas and social systems. Both sides would be equally represented in the government and North and South would have regional autonomy, with equal rights and obligations.

It is envisaged that the Democratic Confederative Republic of Korea should be formed as a coalition of North and South, whereby it would become a unique state of the entire Korean nation and as such pursue an independent, democratic, neutral, nonaligned and peace-loving policy.

Kim Il-song said that the program for the reunification of the country by forming the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo received the full support and wide approval of all the people in both the North and the South of the country, as well as among peoples of the whole world. He added that reunification implies that the ruling fascist military regime in South Korea should first be liquidated and society there democratised.

There is in South Korea today the most cruel and most shameless fascist rule without precedent in history, Kim Il-song said. The present South Korean military fascist clique, which gained power thanks to the plotting and manipulations of American imperialists, denies basic democratic human rights and freedoms and openly terrorizes the people by passing various fascist laws and using a colossal repressive machinery, the DPRK president stressed, adding that as long as the military fascist regime, which brutally oppresses the people and kills patriots, is in power, it is impossible to achieve national reconciliation and unity or realize any proposal for a peaceful reunification of the country.

Advocating relaxation of tension in Korea, Kim Il-song said that large armed forces were now confronting each other in North and South Korea, divided by the military demarcation line. Under the pretext of fictitious "threats of an invasion from the North, the South Korean military fascist rulers acquire from the United States large quantities of the most modern arms and military equipment and almost every day conduct unrestrained military exercises with the participation of American troops. Because of all this, Kim Il-song said, the situation is now extremely tense and there is a danger that war might break out any moment; in such circumstances the country cannot be reunited in a peaceful way.

In this context Kim Il-song said that, with a view to defusing the tense situation and eliminating the danger of war, the Korean military agreement on armistice should be replaced with a peace treaty, something which the DPRK has constantly been proposing to the United States.

If the U.S. authorities have even the slightest interest in peace in Korea and the peaceful solution of the Korean question, they should accept our just proposal on signing a peace treaty and should withdraw their troops from South Korea as soon as possible. With the aim of establishing a peaceful reunification of our country, the DPRK president stressed, it is necessary to destroy the plot of the American imperialists concerning "two Koreas," since this policy is contrary to the aspirations of the entire Korean people and to the trends of our times.

The proposal for unification by forming a Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo implies the creation of great unity of the entire nation, since national reunification cannot be imagined without cooperation and unity. Kim Il-song called on all Koreans North and South of the border and those abroad to become firmly united, overcoming differences at the ideological level and at the level of the social system, party affiliation and political views, and to participate actively in the formation of a great national united front. I take this opportunity, Kim Il-song stressed, to express my deep gratitude to the LCY and to the government and people of the SFRY on their active support and encouragement for the realization of the aim of national reunification of our people.

Kim Il-song went on to say that the Nonaligned Movement is a mighty revolutionary force of our time which opposes imperialism. It has become a world movement and its influence grows daily, while imperialists are making attempts to cause division in the movement and place its members under their wing and domination. This has caused numerous complex problems within the movement, so that it is going through a difficult phase. In order to strengthen and develop the movement it is necessary to have unity and solidarity, Kim Il-song said, adding: The most important thing in achieving unity in the Nonaligned Movement is that all its member countries should preserve their independence. Preservation of independence is the main ideal and basis for the unity of the Nonaligned Movement. Only when all its member countries become firmly independent can this movement achieve unity, and only unity based on independence can be firm and true unity.

Listing tasks and principles which the nonaligned must follow, President Kim Il-song said that nonaligned countries must be firm in maintaining an independent stand and must resolutely oppose any kind of outside interference. They must not blindly follow other countries or act as their agents. They must respect the independence of other countries. They must have strict respect for the original principles of the Nonaligned Movement and preserve their own characteristics in the right way. They must not follow any one of the blocs or allow themselves to be drawn into one. They must resist involving outside forces in the Nonaligned Movement or directing the movement toward one of the blocs.

Nonaligned countries must solve conflicts and differences between individual countries on the basis of principles of unity. They must not be in conflict with one another, blinded by imperialist tricks which are aimed at inciting one country against another; differences in views and conflicts between individual countries must be solved by negotiations between the interested sides in the national interest of both sides and to the benefit of nonalignment in general.

Nonaligned countries must not only be firmly united in a political sense but also cooperate closely at the economic and technical level, since conditions for this exist: conditions which will enable them to solve difficult and complex questions facing them in the construction of a new society without asking for help from the great powers.

Kim Il-song stressed that by strengthening political unity and establishing close economic and technical cooperation [passage indistinct] entrusted to them by the history of mankind and newly-liberated peoples.

He stated that Yugoslavia is an old member of the Nonaligned Movement. Twenty years ago, when the world was divided into blocs and spheres of influence and when the danger of a new world war was increasing, heads of state of many countries, including Yugoslavia, met in Belgrade, inspired by a noble idea of freedom and independence, peace and progress, and raised the banner of nonalignment. I would like, Kim Il-song stressed, to acclaim highly the great contribution by Comrade Tito, prominent leader of the Yugoslav people, to the creation, consolidation and development of nonalignment.

Our country became a member of the Nonaligned Movement not long ago. However, from the moment we joined the ranks of this movement, we have made great efforts to strengthen and develop it. As it has done in the past, the DPRK will continue to adhere to the principles and ideas of nonalignment and aspire toward the consolidation of this movement.

Assessing the overall international situation, Kim Il-song said that it is very complex and tense. A tough struggle is being waged at present between anti-imperialist forces of independence and forces of domination on the international scene. The struggle for independence is gaining strength, while steps taken by the great powers aimed at aggression and seizure, with a view to expanding their nomination, are becoming increasingly blatant.

Pointing to the danger of war, Kim Il-song advocated an active struggle for the defense of peace and security. Today there is no task which is more important to peace-loving and progressive peoples of the world than the task of preventing a new world war, he said.

Advocating an end to the arms race and an adoption of the policy of total disarmament, Kim Il-song went on to demand that all military blocs be dissolved. Military blocs, he said, are a constant threat to peace and security in the world and dissolving the blocs should put an end to aggressive military bases in other countries and should lead to a withdrawal of foreign troops. He also advocated the establishment of nuclear-free zones or peace zones in various parts of the world.

We will attempt to turn the Korean Peninsula into a nuclear-free zone of peace and will actively support the struggle by peace-loving peoples in the world for the establishment of such zones in Asia, the Middle East, Africa, Latin America and Europe.

At the end Kim Il-song said: The Korean people are devoted to peace. To struggle for lasting peace and security in the world is a consistent policy of our party and the government of our republic. As in the past, our party and the government of our republic will continue to cooperate closely with peoples of all progressive countries in the world, including socialist and nonaligned countries, and will attempt to stop and prevent imperialist policies of aggression and war and to preserve peace and security in the world.

KIM CHONG-IL ACTIVITY DURING 1976 CRISIS CITED

SK081407 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 5 Jan 82

[From "Today's Feature": "The Legend of Chamae Isle"]

[Text] There is a small remote isle called Chamaedo which takes about 2 hours to reach by motorboat from Nampo at the estuary of Taedong-kang in the north. There is a sad legend about the isle, which is divided into two small islands when the tide is in and is united again at low tide. The story goes like this: Once upon a time two young sisters were waiting for the return of their father who went fishing under pressure from a shipowner, but he never returned. After crying for a long time they finally turned to rocks. Since then, the isle has been called Chamaedo or "Isle of Sisters."

Chamae Isle is so small that it is not found even on a wall-size map. On the isle there is a lighthouse and two houses for the lighthouse keepers and a school. The residents of the isle number about 10 -- three lighthouse keepers, their family members and a teacher.

We visited the isle to report on the status of its residents who enjoy the same happy life as those who live on the mainland, despite its remoteness. While there we heard about a new living legend that will be passed on from generation to generation as long as Chamae Isle exists.

It was in August 1976 when a tense situation leading to the brink of war was created because of the 18 August Panmunjom incident. It was during that tense situation that an urgent matter arose on the isle.

One of the lighthouse keepers called Yi Chun-ki suddenly became sick. He was in a serious condition. Medicines kept for emergency use were tried to no avail. The condition of the sick man went from bad to worse.

While watching the sick man, who was unconscious and delirious, the residents of the isle felt helpless. The high waves were pounding against the isle as if they would swallow it at a stroke. It was unthinkable to launch the island's motorboat.

The person in charge of the lighthouse informed his supervisor on the mainland of the serious condition of the lighthouse keeper while making his daily report. The organization concerned, once informed of the illness of the lighthouse keeper, reported it to the dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il.

Under the circumstances -- in which the situation was extremely tense and complicated because of the Panmunjom poplar tree incident kicked up by the U.S. imperialist aggressors -- the dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il, who considers people most precious and always looks after their well-being, upon hearing the report, stopped all other work and took emergency action to save the lighthouse keeper on Chamae-to.

The Ministries of People's Armed Forces, Public Health and Land and Sea Transportation, the Nampo Municipal Hospital and other organizations concerned received directives from dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il saying "Save the lighthouse keeper of Chamaedo without fail! Mobilize a helicopter immediately! Mobilize a capable medical team!"

This news was immediately radioed to Chamaedo: the dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il has given orders to save the lighthouse keeper. Aircraft and naval vessels are being mobilized. Make a fire to illuminate a spot where the helicopter can land.

Upon receiving the unexpected message, the residents of the isle embraced each other and burst into tears of joy.

Meanwhile, the helicopter dispatched on the order of the dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il was flying in pitch darkness toward Chamaedo. At sea, three fast boats were speeding to the isle, braving the high waves. And, along the highway from Pyongyang to Nampo, 10 passenger cars carrying responsible cadres of the Ministry of Public Health and a skilled medical team were traveling at full speed with their horns blaring. At the Nampo Municipal Hospital an emergency meeting was held on saving the lighthouse keeper, a medical team was formed, and all other preparations were fully made.

Under the endless consideration of the dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il, great things were happening in the air, at sea and on the ground to save a poor lighthouse keeper.

Twelve minutes after the message about the illness on the remote isle was transmitted to the mainland, the helicopter landed on the isle. And, 17 minutes later, the sick man was resting on a comfortable bed at the Nampo Municipal Hospital.

The lighthouse keeper recovered his health thanks to the good medical treatment accorded him. Then the dear comrade Kim Chong-il again extended great benevolence to the lighthouse keeper by offering him an opportunity to rest at a sanatorium.

Yi Chun-ki, the lighthouse keeper of the small remote isle, cried over the love and benevolence of the dear comrade leader Kim Chong-il, which even a best friend would not extend. Today he is still working at the lighthouse on Chamae Isle.

CHINA'S ECONOMIC POLICY TERMED 'RUINOUS'

OW092056 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1710 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 9 Jan (MONTSAME) -- Having declared in 1978 an ambitious "four modernisation" program the Beijing leadership staked on Western technology import and active Western support of the Chinese economic development plans, writes the newspaper MENGU SHIAOSHIPAO [NEWS FROM MONGOLIA] published in Chinese.

That was the period of "Chinese boost" full of salutary addresses and toasting. But behind a smoke screen of assertions of "sincere disinterested friendship" and statements on "mutually advantageous cooperation" every party made its own, not so disinterested calculations. That is, if Beijing hoped to be economically rewarded for its open alliance with imperialism, the overseas partners considered the expansion of economic relations with China as a possibility to entangle it in chains of economic dependence and tie the P.R.C. to the world capitalist system. In the atmosphere of a new "leap," Chinese foreign trade organisations concluded contracts without thorough elaboration, relying wholly upon the discretion of their new friends, and this made it easier for the West to attain its goals. Such "trustfullness," which it is more suitable to call a "disregard of national interests," costs the Chinese people a pretty penny.

Scandalously famed is the Baoshan metallurgical works affair. The agreement on the deliveries of equipment for it was pompously signed in 1978 by the Chinese and Japanese, West German and U.S. corporations. The Baoshan metallurgic works were intended to become a "model of the Chinese cooperation with the West."

Although late, it was found out that the production profile of the enterprise was quite limited and did not meet the requirements of the home economy. On the other hand, Japan-made equipment was meant for operating on raw material China did not have. The blast-furnace production was designed on the use of Australian ore and 5 other components of foreign origin. Preliminary talks in Canberra revealed that 8 [word indistinct] tons of Australian ore would have been needed annually for a normal operation of the Baoshan combine.

The Chinese Communist Party session held in September 1980 brought to light another embarrassing aspect of the Chinese-West cooperation. As it turned out the imported equipment had a very short term of exploitation. "If the term of exploitation of this equipment expires by the time we pay off the construction credits -- said at the session a disappointed deputy -- then, it means we have fallen to Japanese bait." No less serious difficulties arose at the commissioning of the West German installed metallurgic equipment at Ukhan [as received] combine. The Chinese raw materials proved to be unfit.

Half of (?the) chemical fertilizer plants bought abroad stand idle. Shortage of raw materials affects also the synthetic fibres industry which cost China several billion dollars. Over half of the Japanese 1.5 billion dollar loan, agreed upon in September 1981, the Chinese authorities will be forced to spend on buying in Japan of raw materials to keep these enterprises working.

Foreign businessmen willingly invest in so-called mixed enterprises, where Chinese workers are engaged in simple assembling of the imported components. At the same time little of modern technology is introduced in China and the produce of these mixed enterprises meets limited market because of demand fluctuations. This leads to higher unemployment and instability in production. Nevertheless, China goes on with this ruinous policy of open doors in order to accumulate means for military build-up. "The domestication of the Chinese dragon" — called a Western journalist the process of drawing China into the world of capitalist system.

LEADERS GREET THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF PRK

OW081751 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1714 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 8 Jan (MONTSAME) — The M.P.R.P. C.C. general secretary, chairman of the presidium of the M.P.R. Great People's Hural Y. Tsedenbal and chairman of the M.P.R. Council of Ministers J. Batsuuh sent congratulations to the P.R.P.K. C.C. general secretary, chairman of the P.R.K. State Council Heng Samrin and to the member of the P.R.P.K. C.C. Politbureau, acting chairman of the P.R.K. Council of Ministers Chan Si on the occasion of the Kampuchean national holiday — the 3d anniversary of founding the People's Republic of Kampuchea. The victory of the January 1979 revolution has played an outstanding role in the destinies of the long-suffering Kampuchean people, opened up bright perspectives of building a new society based on genuine democracy and social justice.

The past three years have been marked by great achievements made by the Kampuchean people in the struggle for safeguarding the country's independence and sovereignty from the encroachments of imperialist and hegemonist forces in strengthening the country's position in the international arena, in restoring the economy and culture, an in consolidating the foundations of the new system. The Mongolian people sincerely hail these remarkable successes, gained by the heroic Kampuchean people under the guidance of the People's Revolutionary Party of Kampuchea, in close union with the U.S.S.R., the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and other countries of the socialist community, the telegram reads.

The militant solidarity of the three fraternal countries of Indochina — P.R.K., S.R.V. and P.D.R.L., their active political course play in important role in stabilizing the situation in the Southeast Asia, in controlling the aggressive encroachments of imperialism and expansionism in the region, all of which meet the strivings of the peoples of Asia and the world.

It is stressed in the telegram that the results of the recent Kampuchean party and government visit to Mongolia have become a new milestone in the development of fraternal friendship and cooperation between the M.P.R.P. and P.R.P.K., the M.P.R. and P.R.K., which are based on the principles of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism.

Meeting With Heng Samrin

BK120937 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0400 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 12 Jan (SPK) — On Monday, 11 January, Heng Samrin, KPRP general secretary and chairman of the State Council, assisted by Vice Defense Minister Soy Keo, received in Phnom Penh a high-ranking GDR military delegation led by Heinz Hoffmann, member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany [SED] Central Committee Politburo and defense minister.

Chairman Heng Samrin spoke of the Kampuchean people's achievements in all domains during the past 3 years under the correct leadership of the KPRP and the front. The Kampuchean leader stressed: The visit of the PRK's party-government delegation, led by Chea Sim, to the GDR in 1981 and the latter's presence at the 10th SED Congress reflect the further deepening relations of friendship, militant solidarity and cooperation between the PRK and the GDR.

He added: Under the correct and clear-sighted leadership of the SED and the GDR Government, the GDR people have recorded shining successes in national defense and reconstruction. The party, government and people of Kampuchea highly regard the initiatives of the SED and the GDR Government to check the arms race and to promote peace and stability in the world.

On behalf of the party, government and people of Kampuchea, General Secretary Heng Samrin expressed his gratitude to the GDR party, government and people for their unselfish material and moral support and aid to the Kampuchean people's cause of national defense and reconstruction.

For his party, Gen Heinz Hoffmann highly appraised the achievements recorded by the Kampuchean people under the leadership of the KPRP and the front. He expressed his gratitude to the party, government and people of Kampuchea for their cordial welcome of the GDR military delegation. He stressed: The current visit of our delegation has further reinforced the relations of friendship, militant solidarity and diversified cooperation between Kampuchea and the GDR.

Gen Heinz Hoffman conveyed the warm greetings of SED General Secretary Eric Honecker to General Secretary Heng Samrin, and asserted: The party, government and people of the GDR will always remain by the side of the Kampuchean people in their just revolutionary struggle.

The GDR ambassador to Phnom Penh, Rolf Dach, was also present at the reception.

Editorial Hailing Visit

BK120952 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Station editorial: "Warmest Welcome to the High-Ranking GDR Military Delegation Which Is Visiting Our Glorious Angkor Land"]

[Text] Today our Kampuchean people, particularly our Kampuchean revolutionary army, are greatly elated to extend warmest and most cordial welcome to the high-ranking military delegation of the friendly GDR headed by Gen Heinz Hoffman, member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany [SED] Central Committee Politburo and GDR defense minister, which is currently paying an official friendship visit to our glorious Angkor land at the invitation of the PRK Defense Ministry.

This is evidence clearly attesting to the firm ties of solidarity and close cooperation that have existed and will further be strengthened and developed between the armies and peoples of the two countries -- the PRK and GDR. the GDR National People's Army is a powerful army in Europe. It is a well-disciplined army that always adheres to modern and scientific Marxism-Leninism. Moreover, this valiant army has had good relations with the armies of the three Indochinese countries since time immemorial. We still recall that, after the GDR People's Chamber adopted a resolution on 18 January 1956 concerning the formation of a national people's army, on 1 March of the same year the National People's Army of the GDR was founded and took the oath in a grand ceremony. Since then, this army has grown more powerful with every passing day and has become the core of the national defense forces and the important and strongest part of the Warsaw Pact. Moreover, this army is the genuine military apparatus of the GDR worker-peasant state power.

The strategic political task of this army is defense -- the most important obligation for supporting the rebirth of the people in the GDR. Under the correct leadership of the SED, the National People's Army of the GDR has been founded and supported by the people. Having been trained and guided in accordance with genuine Marxist-Leninist theories, each combatant of the GDR National People's Army, male or female alike, has the lofty spirit of patriotism and proletarian internationalism. Up to the present, the GDR National People's Army, armed with modern sophisticated weapons, has always tested and tempered itself in accordance with the revolutionary line, thus turning itself into strong and powerful armed forces that can firmly defend the GDR, maintain security and social order and provide border defense, and constitute an important part of the Warsaw Pact. In particular, the GDR People's Army has always held aloft the banner of combat solidarity by linking itself closely with the army of the Soviet Union and cooperating in all fields with the armies of the Soviet Union and other friendly socialist countries.

Therefore, the current official friendship visit to our country by the high-ranking GDR military delegation is a great encouragement to our army and people. In the past as well as at present, the inexhaustible sentiments of solidarity between the armies and peoples of our two countries, particularly the all-round assistance and support that the GDR has given the three peoples of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos, have always flourished. The party and government of the GDR have warmly welcomed the great victories in all fields that our army and people have scored and are scoring in the defense and construction of our fatherland and in our struggle against the enemy, particularly the Beijing expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries. The current visit to our country by the high-ranking GDR military delegation is a great encouragement to us and further consolidates the sentiments of friendship, militant solidarity and cooperation between the armies and peoples of our two countries -- the GDR and PRK. The traditions of valiant struggle and the constant growth of the GDR National People's Army have provided immortal and good experiences and lessons for our army and people in carrying out the tasks of defending and building our fatherland.

For us, it is a great honor that the high-ranking GDR military delegation has come to visit our country at a time when our people are celebrating the great achievements realized in 1981, the success of the third front congress and the third anniversary of the 7 January National Independence Day.

Imbued with sentiments of friendship and solidarity, our army and people extend warmest welcome to the high-ranking GDR military delegation led by Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann, member of the SED Central Committee Politburo and GDR defense minister. We wish the delegation brilliant successes during its stay in our PRK territory.

HENG SAMRIN INTERVIEWED ON SOVIET TELEVISION

BK080722 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1443 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 7 Jan (SPK) — During an interview granted on Wednesday, 6 January, to Vladimir Ronanchenko, a permanent representative of the USSR Radio Broadcast and Television Service, Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the State Council, affirmed that the Kampuchean people are well aware of the enemy maneuvers and that regardless of what the enemy does, it will fail because nothing can conceal facts.

Speaking of the successes achieved by the Kampuchean people during the past 3 years, Chairman Heng Samrin noted: The people's power has been consolidated from the top to the grassroots level. The leading organs of the country were elected in a free and democratic manner, and the Constitution has been adopted. The resolutions of the Fourth KPRP Congress and the Third Congress of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense (KUFNCD) are the compass leading the Kampuchean people to new successes. Rice production in 1980 was double that of 1979. In 1981 we planted only 1.3 million hectares because of drought and flash floods. Some 1.5 million children have gone to school. The public health sector has 200 hospitals and hundreds of dispensaries throughout the country to provide medical care to the people in all localities. Thanks to the close cooperation with the Vietnamese army in the military field, we have succeeded in defending the peaceful life of the people and in frustrating all the enemy's aggressive and subversive activities.

Chairman Heng Samrin noted: The enemies are mad at the shining successes of our people. The Chinese expansionists are coming to terms with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries -- particularly with Thailand, which has repeated its provocative acts against the PRK -- and have made every effort to regroup the Khmer Pol Pot-Son Sann-Sihanouk reactionaries in order to establish a so-called coalition government aimed at checking the Kampuchean revolution and deceiving world public opinion. In fact, these traitors have taken refuge in Thai territory and have been sustained by the Chinese expansionists and the U.S. imperialists. The PRK maintains a policy of independence, peace, friendship, cooperation and nonalignment.

Chairman Heng Samrin concluded by saying that the loyal aid given by the party, government and people of the USSR has contributed to these successes in the PRK.

VODK: AID TO SRV AKIN TO INCREASING AGGRESSION

BK111052 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary: "To Give Vietnam Aid Under the Current Circumstances Is To Increase Its Aggressive Force"]

[Summary] "On 23 December the French Government decided to grant an economic aid package worth 200 million French francs to the Hanoi authorities.

This decision to give aid to the enemy Hanoi authorities who are carrying on their war of aggression against Kampuchea in a most cruel, savage and stubborn manner has greatly worried countries in Southeast Asia and peace- and justice-loving countries in the world." The Indonesian ambassador and other ambassadors of ASEAN countries accredited to France protested against such a decision.

After Vietnam invaded Kampuchea in late 1978, many countries and international organizations took measures to cut aid to Hanoi in a protest move against Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea and with the aim of forcing Vietnam to pull out of this country. Because of the resistance of the Kampuchean people and the pressure of the international community, the Vietnamese are bogged down in Kampuchea and experiencing dire difficulties at home.

Despite their predicament in Kampuchea, at home and on the international scene, the Vietnamese remain very arrogant, completely spurning the resolutions of the UN General Assemblies. "With renewed assistance to beef up its force, Vietnam will certainly become even more arrogant. The granting of aid to Vietnam under the current circumstances will certainly not help the settlement of the Kampuchean question through political means in accordance with the resolutions of the UN General Assemblies. So far, no type of aid to Vietnam — be it economic, financial, development or humanitarian aid — has ever reached the hands of the Vietnamese people. The Le Duan gang has used it to serve its war of aggression against Kampuchea and to finance its aggressive and expansionist strategy." The Vietnamese people, including public figures who fled abroad, have denounced this anomaly. Up to the present, the world truly opposes the granting of all kinds of aid to Vietnam, for it is tantamount to increasing the aggressive force of the Vietnamese authorities.

"The Kampuchean people, who are suffering most tragically from the war of aggression, expansion, annexation and genocide of the Hanoi authorities, categorically oppose the granting of any kind of aid to Vietnam — be it economic and financial aid or any other kind of aid — at this time when the Le Duan authorities are waging a war of aggression against Kampuchea to massacre and exterminate the Kampuchean nation. They regard any aid to Vietnam as complicity, either willing or unwilling, with Vietnam in massacring the Kampuchean people. Therefore, the Kampuchean people who are fighting arduously and persistently in a pool of blood to drive out the Vietnamese enemy aggressors, expansionists, annexationists and race exterminators in defense of their own lives and for the survival of the Kampuchean nation and race would like to appeal to all peace- and justice-loving countries throughout the world to refrain from giving any aid to Vietnam so long as it refuses to abide by the resolutions of the UN General Assemblies by completely withdrawing all its aggressor troops from Kampuchea; refuses to give up its expansionist, aggressive, annexationist and genocidal ambitions toward neighboring countries; and refuses to stop selling itself as a cat's paw of the Soviet Union and as a Soviet military base in service of the Soviet Union's expansionist and aggressive strategy in Southeast Asia."

VODK BROADCASTS LETTER FROM FRANCE ON COALITION

BK070302 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Text] Mr (Yem Yi Sin), a retired primary education inspector and former chief of offices of the Ministry of Education, who is living in France, has sent a letter to our Democratic Kampuchean Government expressing his views on the issue of national union. would like to broadcast the entire contents of this letter:

Gentilly, 13 December 1981; to His Excellency the Prime Minister of the Democratic Kampuchean Government, through the Committee of Democratic Kampuchean Patriots Residing in France.

Concerning the issue of national union for the struggle to liberate the Khmer race, country and nation, I would like to express my opinions to Your Excellency as follows:

1. I completely support the Singapore joint statement of 4 September 1981.
2. I completely support all results realized by the tripartite ad hoc committee during its nine meetings in Bangkok.

The following cause me to hold these opinions:

1. I love my race, country and nation and I want the Khmer race, country and nation to last forever.
2. I believe that when Khmers are divided and when they prefer favoritism and rankism, they are weak, and the Khmer race will be extinguished. The Khmer country and nation will vanish.
3. I believe the only way to avoid the extinction of the Khmer race and the disappearance of the Khmer nation is for Khmers to promptly unite with each other at present and remain permanently united in the future.
4. I believe that with the spirit of the union of the entire nation, each Khmer should have only one belief -- a genuine nationalist ideal in a national society where the majority of the Kampuchean people want to live with each other.

If I could make any wish, I would like to pray to the divinities, Indra, Brahman, Buddha and all sacred beings in the world, for help in showing the way for Khmers to unite with each other quickly and for the formation of a national coalition government in the shortest period of time. Would Your Excellency accept my sincere salutations.

[Signed] (Yem Yi Sin), retired primary education inspector

VODK REPORTS ARRIVALS OF FOREIGN VISITORS

Visit of Germans, British

BK040424 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 28 Dec 81

[Text] Three representatives of foreign mass organizations, namely, (Teodor Domh), representative of the (T.D. John organization, Germany) in Bangkok; (Hans Tot), a Catholic priest who is the coordinator of the West German Group for Solidarity With Kampuchea; and (Nusas Antony McColkan), a British professor of University [name indistinct] and chairman of the British Committee for Support to Kampuchea, arrived on the afternoon of 14 December for a visit to Democratic Kampuchea.

On the morning of 20 December leaders of the Democratic Kampuchean Government received and conversed with the friendly guests at an office of the Democratic Kampuchean Government. From 21 to 23 December the guests visited Phum Leu, Phum Chanka Trap, Phum Ba, Phum Sralau Chrum and Phum Tuol Chrei. On their way to visit these villages, the guests saw Phum Sangke, where our people who returned from refugee camps were jointly clearing brush in order to build a new village. A guest asked a 74-year-old woman: Why did you leave the refugee camp to stay in this place? The old woman answered: No place is better than my homeland.

During his stay and visit in the Democratic Kampuchean zone, Professor (McColkan) commented: We were impressed by the spirit of united struggle of the people in all the villages we visited. In implementing its new political line, the Government of Democratic Kampuchea is building a firm and clear foundation in order to coordinate all patriotic groups for more resolute resistance against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors. All this made us confident that the Kampuchean people would certainly win. As for the Catholic priest, (Hans Tot), he commented: All the people I met have the same spirit, that is, they sacrifice everything for their national salvation struggle. We were impressed by the people's efforts to build a new life, their active participation in the transport work for the front and their resolute struggle against the Vietnamese aggressors. We hope that all the Kampuchean people will unite, and want all the forces inside and outside the country to join with Democratic Kampuchea in the struggle against the Vietnamese aggressors who are occupying Kampuchean territory.

The guests left Democratic Kampuchea safely on the afternoon of 25 December.

French Guests' Visit

BK060741 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2230 GMT 3 Jan 82

[Text] On 22 December 1981 Mrs Im Saroeum (Odile), a French professor from Montpellier and wife of Dr Im Saroeum, deputy permanent representative of Democratic Kampuchea to UNESCO in France, paid a friendly visit to the Democratic Kampuchean zone. On 25 December 1981 Mr (Guerin), a French professor from Grenoble, also paid a friendly visit there.

On their arrival, the friendly guests were warmly welcomed by cadres and employees of various ministries and offices. On the night of 25 December 1981 Mrs Ieng Thirith, minister of social affairs; Thiounn Mumm, chairman of the State Scientific and Technical Commission; and Mey Mann, second vice chairman of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross, met and held cordial talks with the friendly guests.

During their stay in the Democratic Kampuchean zone, the guests visited a number of villages, including ones currently being built. They also visited schools, laboratories, hospitals, villages for the disabled and various handicraft shops, and attended an artistic show. When they arrived in each village, the chairman of the village and representatives of the PDFGNUK cadres, as well as our people of all ages and both sexes, warmly and cordially welcomed them. The friendly guests spoke with many of our people who have just returned from various camps in Thailand. They visited our people injured by Vietnamese chemical weapons, who are being treated in hospitals.

The friendly guests left Democratic Kampuchea on 30 December 1981. They had the impression that the Kampuchean people are patriots who love their territory and their race. Although they face all types of difficulties, they are trying to unite with each other to wage the struggle to increase production in order to consolidate the people's living and also to assist the frontline battlefield. Faced with these conditions, the friendly guests expressed confidence that the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government will win over the Vietnamese enemy aggressors, expansionists and race exterminators, and are advancing toward completely and permanently liberating Kampuchea's territory.

Visit of Japanese Group

BK060918 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 4 Jan 82

[Text] A delegation of a Japanese humanitarian organization -- Program of Relief for Kampuchean Refugees, Tokyo -- led by Mrs (Satoyo Ono) and consisting of (Osano Ono) and a nun, (Maria Honan), as members, paid a visit to Democratic Kampuchea from 27 to 30 December 1981.

On the morning of 28 December Mrs Ieng Thirith, minister of social affairs and chairman of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society, received and held talks with the delegation at an office of the Government of Democratic Kampuchea. Mey Mann, vice chairman of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society, and other members of the society also attended the talks. On 28 December the visitors toured Phum Leu, Phum Chamka Trap and Phum Boeng villages in western Battambang. The guests noted they could see that between August and December many new houses had been built. They said the smiling faces of the people they met were a sign of happiness.

This Tokyo-based Japanese humanitarian organization handed over a quantity of medicine and four tons of corn, pumpkin and rice seed to the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society to be distributed to the Kampuchean people who have suffered from the persecutions of the Vietnamese aggressors and who have been forced to leave their hometowns and take refuge in the jungles and mountainous areas.

On the afternoon of 30 December the guests left for Japan after promising to continue assisting the Kampuchean people.

PRK NATIONAL DAY CELEBRATION COMMEMORATED

Leaders' Greetings Messages

BK070450 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] On 6 January 1982 Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee and prime minister; and Comrade Souphanouvong, president and chairman of the Supreme People's Council [SPC] of the LPDR, sent a joint greetings message to Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party [KPRP] Central Committee and chairman of the State Council; Comrade Chea Sim, chairman of the National Assembly; and Comrade Chan Si, acting premier of the PRK, in Phnom Penh. The message read as follows:

On the occasion of the third anniversary of the PRK National Day, on behalf of the LPRP Central Committee, the SPC, the government and people of Laos, we are very pleased to convey fraternal salutations and warmest greetings to you, comrades, and through you, to the KPRP, the government and heroic fraternal people of Kampuchea.

Three years ago, the various revolutionary forces and people of Kampuchea, with sincere assistance from the Vietnamese people, rose up and overthrew the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary regime, thereby opening a new era of independence and freedom and bringing into being an administrative power genuinely in the hands of the people. During the past 3 years, thanks to the resolute and correct leadership of the KPRP, the Kampuchean people have concentrated their labor on maintaining their revolutionary gains and tranquillity in the country, while restoring the national economy, promoting production and developing education and culture, thereby scoring great achievements step by step. As a result, the living conditions of the Kampuchean people have improved daily.

Our Lao people are very pleased with and highly appreciate the aforesaid great achievements scored by the fraternal Kampuchean people in that short period of time. The achievements of the Kampuchean people are an important contribution to the strengthening of the relations of friendship and special solidarity among the three fraternal countries in Indochina. They have also contributed to the struggle to turn Southeast Asia into a region of peace, independence, friendship and cooperation. We wholeheartedly hail those achievements and consider them as our own.

At present, the fraternal Kampuchean people are carrying out a struggle against the schemes and acts of the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists, in collusion with the imperialists and reactionaries, in interfering and creating disturbances with a view to sabotaging and destroying the PRK and disrupting the solidarity among the three fraternal peoples in this region. We are convinced that the fraternal Kampuchean people — who have continuously maintained the fine tradition of the renowned Angkor — promoting and expanding the tradition of the indomitable and heroic revolutionary struggle during the past dozens of years, under the leadership of the KPRP with Comrade Heng Samrin as general secretary, with solidarity and mutual assistance among the three nations of Kampuchea, Laos and Vietnam and with the great support and assistance provided by the Soviet Union, various fraternal socialist countries and peace- and justice-loving people throughout the world, will be able to smash all sabotage schemes of the enemies, create favorable conditions for the building and defense of the country and lead their beloved country to firmly advance on the path of socialism.

On this auspicious occasion, we express our wishes for the daily growth and development and further strengthening of the special militant solidarity, the friendly relations and the special militant solidarity, the friendly relations and the fraternal cooperation between the two parties, governments and peoples of Laos and Kampuchea. We wish the fraternal Kampuchean people new, still greater successes, and wish you, comrades, good health.

On the same day, Comrade Phoun Sipaseut, deputy prime minister and minister of foreign affairs of the LPDR, also sent a greetings message to Comrade Hun Sen, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs of the PRK.

[Text] On the evening of 4 January the Laos-Kampuchea Friendship Association, the Ministry of Propaganda, Information, Culture and Tourism and the PRK Embassy in Laos opened a photo exhibition at the exhibition hall of the Propaganda Ministry to commemorate the third anniversary of the 7 January National Day -- a historic day of victory for the Kampuchean people in defeating the genocidal counterrevolutionary Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique, lackey of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists who want to make Kampuchea one of their provinces for use as a springboard for committing aggression against their neighboring countries and for sabotaging peace and stability in Indochina and Southeast Asia.

Attending the opening ceremony were Chanmi Douangboutdi, member of the LPRP Central Committee and president of the Laos-Kampuchea Friendship Association; Sisana Sisan, alternate member of the party Central Committee and minister of propaganda, information, culture and tourism; Kou Souvannamethi, minister of justice and vice president of the Laos-Kampuchea Friendship Association; Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, deputy minister of communications, public works and transportation, and vice president of the Laos-Kampuchea Friendship Association; and some ministers, deputy ministers and cadres from various ministries and offices. Neou Samon PRK ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Laos, and diplomats of socialist countries in Laos were also present.

Kou Souvannamethi and Neou Samon made speeches on this occasion. They mentioned the significance of the 7 January victory, which opened a new page in the history of the Kampuchean revolution. As a result, the beautiful land of Angkor has been redecorated and rebuilt. The 7 January victory was a victory of the militant solidarity among the three countries of Kampuchea, Laos and Vietnam. This solidarity is a strength that cannot be shaken by any reactionary force and is being consolidated and strengthened daily.

They pointed out: The past 3 years constituted a short period of time for the rebuilding of a completely-destroyed society in both the construction and national defense spheres. Nevertheless, thanks to the Kampuchean people's great determination, unity, spiritual and physical strength and lofty spirit of patriotism, they have successfully surmounted various difficulties and hardships. Under the correct leadership of the KPRP, which has persisted with Marxism-Leninism as its compass, and with the broad support and assistance of Laos, Vietnam, the Soviet Union, other fraternal socialist countries, various progressive nations in the world and international organizations, the PRK is firmly advancing. The PRK's prestige has resounded throughout the world. In conclusion, they hoped that the special solidarity and friendship between Laos and Kampuchea would be everlasting.

Then Chanmi Douangboutdi cut the ribbon to open the exhibition and invited local and foreign guests to view the PRK's photos.

Amity Group Function

BK081153 Vientiane KPL in English 0923 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 8 Jan (KPL) -- The Laos-Kampuchea Friendship Association on January 7 held here a function to mark the third National Day of the People's Republic of Kampuchea.

Present on this occasion were Chanmi Douangboutdi, president of the Laos-Kampuchea Friendship Association, and other officials. Neou Samon, Kampuchean ambassador to Laos, was also on hand. Pao Hom Phan, deputy head of the Propaganda and Training Board of the party CC and head of the visiting Kampuchean delegation, was also present on this occasion.

Chanmi Douangboutdi and Neou Samon respectively took turns to address the gathering, recapitulating the past heroic struggle of the Kampuchean people against the genocidal regime of Pol Pot-Ieng Sary.

They also pointed out significant achievements in all fields scored by the people since the fall of Pol Pot. The enhancement of the special solidarity and all-round cooperation between Laos and Kampuchea, as well as those enjoyed by the three Indochinese countries, were hailed in their speeches.

Chanmi Douangboutdi Speech

BK120544 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Speech by Chanmi Douangboutdi, president of the Laos-Kampuchea Friendship Association, at a PRK National Day function held in Vientiane on 7 January -- read by announcer]

[Excerpts] Beloved and respected comrades: The entire world is now aware of the fact that Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan are the most barbarous of executioners. Nevertheless, the U.S. imperialists continue to collude with Beijing and other reactionaries to support the rentention of the UN seat held by the Pol Pot clique of executioners, who do not represent a single Kampuchean. Meanwhile, they have energetically encouraged this clique to try to form a coalition government in exile and an anti-Vietnam united front. They have also used Thai territory as a springboard for sending Pol Pot and Lon Nol soldiers to create disturbances in Kampuchea in order to prepare the way for the return of the executioners so they can once again shed the blood of the Kampuchean people.

For this reason, in order to smash such schemes, we must strengthen the internal solidarity and special solidarity among the three Indochinese nations, further consolidate our long-term all-round cooperation, strengthen our solidarity and cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries and win the support and assistance of those countries in the world who cherish peace and justice so that we may increase our overall revolutionary strength. Those on the side of justice are bound to triumph.

Beloved comrades, the victories and achievements of the Lao revolution during the past 6 years, of the Kampuchean revolution during the past 3 years and of Vietnam are only initial victories and achievements. The imperialists and the international reactionaries have not renounced their schemes to sabotage and destroy the revolutions of the three Indochinese countries. After failing in their military war in Indochina and other parts of the world, they are turning to psychological warfare. This is the most dangerous type of war. They are resorting to all sorts of psychological tactics and are studying each of their objectives so they can attack the weak points of each individual, nationality and country in order to sabotage our internal solidarity, the solidarity among our nationalities and the spirit of proletarian internationalism.

In Indochina in particular, they are concentrating their attacks on our special solidarity in a bid to separate Laos from Vietnam and Kampuchea from Vietnam, with a view to pressing the young one to turn to the old one [phua cha bip hua phou noi pai ha phou gnai]. They are concentrating on separating the three Indochinese countries from the Soviet Union and other socialist countries, bringing to bear as many forces as possible under many guises.

The possibility of armed attacks continues to exist. Whenever we relax our attention, or when we are weakened by their psychological warfare, they may mount armed attacks. Therefore, to safeguard the gains of our revolution, achieved at the cost of our blood and flesh, and to build the country along the path of socialism, we must pay attention to building and strengthening the revolutionary forces of each nation. We must effectively carry out the two strategic tasks of defending the country and maintaining public security; build and make the country prosperous and strong in all respects; and effectively implement the foreign policy of each party -- that is, to strengthen the special solidarity and all-round cooperation among the three Indochinese countries, for example, in the political and ideological spheres. The more than 60 million people in Indochina must join together in a singleminded struggle, mutually sharing weal and woe.

We must not hesitate to rely on the socialist camp and, at the same time, win the support and assistance of the various progressive nations in the world in accordance with the principle of mutual interest. Then no enemy on earth can break us!

SIANG PASASON Editorial

BK071316 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 7 Jan 82

[SIANG PASASON editorial: "Three Years of the Revival of the Kampuchean People" -- dated 7 January]

[Text] Today all the Lao people are very elated to celebrate, together with the fraternal Kampuchean people, the third anniversary of the glorious National Day of the Kampuchean people. The past 3 years have marked the revival of the Kampuchean people, who have emerged from the darkness created by the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphar clique -- lackeys of the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists.

Three years ago, with nothing more than their bare hands, the heroic Kampuchean people -- under the clear-sighted leadership of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party [KPRP] -- were not discouraged by the gloomy conditions of the country. They united and advanced to build a new life full of happiness, and have successfully normalized their living conditions. The conditions of disaster, broken homes and cruel and barbarous suppression and massacre by the Angkor group have passed and will never return. The Kampuchean people have returned to their homes, where they are freely earning their living. Their families are living together in a warm atmosphere. All the Kampuchean people are earning a living as the genuine owners of the country. The PRK has rallied together with its relatives and friends in the big family of socialism.

The past 3 years have clearly proven the excellent practice of the heroic Kampuchean people in the cause of national defense and construction. Despite the fact that agricultural production was obstructed by natural disasters and was repeatedly sabotaged by the enemies, Kampuchean farmers -- who have worked rain or shine -- have victoriously endeavored to surmount all difficulties and obstacles. The ricefield area in 1981 has been expanded two-fold compared with that in 1979. Most Kampuchean farmers have volunteered to carry out production through a collective system. Throughout the country, as many as 106,000 production units have been set up.

The Kampuchean people have also scored satisfactory achievement on the educational battlefield. In the 1981-82 academic year, there are as many as 1.5 million students attending school, or 614,000 more than the number of students attending the schools in the 1979-80 academic year. The curriculums are characterized by national advancement in the socialist direction. During the past 3 years, some 200,000 people have become literate.

They have also achieved a significant step in development of public health work. There are six hospitals in the central area, while there are one or two hospitals in every province and town. Sanitation and obstetrical centers have been set up in 93 percent of the 1,300 cantons. In 1980 and 1981 alone, medical treatment was provided for patients on as many as 15 million occasions, while medicine was distributed to 404,500 people. All medical treatment has been provided free of charge.

The success of the PRK's foreign policy line has been acclaimed throughout the world. The visits of the Kampuchean party and state delegation led by Heng Samrin to Laos, Vietnam, the Soviet Union and other socialist countries, as well as the PRK's gloriously successful activities in the foreign field, have raised the status and role of the PRK in the international arena to a high level.

The victories achieved by the Kampuchean people during the past 3 years are victories of a nation that has persistently struggled for revival and for social progress. Those victories cannot be separated from the sincere assistance given by the Vietnamese army and people, from the close combat alliance of the three Indochinese countries or from the support and assistance rendered by the Soviet Union, various socialist countries and peace-loving and progressive forces throughout the world.

The enemies of the Kampuchean people, however, have stubbornly continued to carry out sabotage activities. The imperialists -- with the U.S. imperialists as chieftains -- the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists and other reactionaries strived to revive the corpse of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique and use the Sihanouk card to sabotage the peaceful life of the Kampuchean people. All their tricks and schemes, however, have been shamefully defeated.

The PRK, under the leadership of a genuine Marxist-Leninist party and having a legitimate government and an assembly elected by the people, has been wholeheartedly supported by progressive public opinion in the world. It is clear that in the present situation in Kampuchea, the Kampuchean people can fulfill their own destiny by themselves. The present situation in Kampuchea is irreversible.

All the Lao people wholeheartedly salute the brilliant achievements scored by the fraternal Kampuchean people during the past 3 years and consider those achievements as their own. The Lao people maintain that the Kampuchean problem must be settled on the basis of the just proposal adopted by the PRK Government along with the appropriate terms as stipulated in the seven-point proposal recently submitted to the UN General Assembly by Comrade Phoun Sipaseut.

On the occasion of the PRK entering its fourth year, the Lao people wish the Kampuchean people, under the KPRP's leadership, and the PRK Government, with Comrade General Secretary Heng Samrin as leader, new successes in the cause of defending and building their sacred, beloved country.

PHOUMI VONGVICHIT RECEIVES MPR DELEGATION

BK311209 Vientiane KPL in English 0937 GMT 1 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 1 Jan (KPL) -- The close cooperation in the agricultural field between Laos and Mongolia was highly praised by Lao Vice Prime Minister and Minister of Education, Sports and Religious Affairs Phoumi Vongvichit in this morning's meeting with a Mongolian delegation in Vientiane.

Speaking on this occasion, the Lao vice prime minister referred to the official handover of the sheep- and goat-raising station by Dendevin Jatamba, deputy minister of agriculture and head of the Mongolian delegation. This sheep- and goat-raising station constructed on 65 hectares in northern Xieng Khouang Province (approximately 250 km from Vientiane) was funded by the Government of the Mongolian People's Republic. The station was composed with two workers' dormitories, one stockraising school, one laboratory, a hay storing house, one water pumping machine and other facilities.

According to the agreement signed in Vientiane on December 3 between Khamphet Phommavan, Lao deputy minister of agriculture, forestry and irrigation, and Dendevin Jatamba, the Mongolian Government will man the station with two of its experts.

ARUN ON 'RUDE NOTE' ALLEGEDLY FROM USSR EMBASSY

BK090233 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 9 Jan 82 pp 1,10

[Text] Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong, miffed over a "rude, undiplomatic" note addressed to him allegedly from the Soviet Embassy here, yesterday ordered a senior official to summon Soviet Ambassador Yuriy Kuznetsov to the Foreign Ministry as a protesting gesture. The Soviet ambassador met director general of the Political Department, Mr Asa Sarasin, who handed back the note, addressed to the deputy minister, and informed the envoy that the letter represented a "gesture of rudeness" shown by an embassy towards the host country.

The note was purported to have been written by the new press officer of the Soviet Embassy here calling upon Thailand to "cease its collaboration with the U.S. and Chinese imperialists."

Arun told reporters that he had told Asa to relay his dissatisfaction to the Russian ambassador over the "inappropriate act" which was described by the Thai deputy minister as "unfriendly and abrasive." The deputy minister said the Russian ambassador appeared "somewhat surprised" over the incident. The embassy later said the letter was a "hoax."

Informed Thai sources said the Russian envoy promised to probe into the origin of the letter. The Russian ambassador also asked the Thai deputy foreign minister, the sources said, to help in the investigation. Kuznetsov also told Asa that he would meet him again next week to report on the outcome of the investigations.

The letter, reportedly sent to a large number of senior government officials and newspaper offices this week, accompanied a three-page press release entitled: "Afghanistan: Exposing the Big Lie," was purported to have been signed by Mr V.I. Pisarchik calling himself the Russian ambassador's assistant for press affairs. Dated Jan 5, the letter, written under the letterhead of the Soviet Information Service, asked Thailand to "cease its collaboration with the U.S. and Chinese imperialists who seek to overthrow legally constituted governments in Indochina as well as in Afghanistan and other parts of the world."

The NATION received the note by mail on Thursday. Deputy Minister Arun said he also received it on the same day and instructed director general of the Political Affairs Department, Mr Asa Sarasin, to ask the Soviet ambassador for a meeting at the Thai Foreign Ministry to demonstrate Thailand's displeasure over the incident. The accompanying press release, dated Dec 28, was written under the usual "SOVIET NEWS BULLETIN" format issued by the USSR Embassy on Sathon Nua Road. The article quoted TASS as the source of a commentary devoted to the role of the Soviet Union in Afghanistan.

The article also blamed the "controlled monopolist press" which it charged had been engaged in a "campaign of distortion and falsehood with regard to events in the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan." The overall tone, observers said, was pro-Soviet.

Deputy Minister Arun did not comment on the Soviet ambassador's explanation that the letter and the press release were a "hoax."

USSR Spokesman's Reply

BK090258 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 9 Jan 82 pp 1, 10

[Text] The new chief of press and information office at the Soviet Embassy in Bangkok, Mr Vyacheslav I. Pisarchik, claimed yesterday that a letter dated Jan 5 and an attached press release entitled "Afghanistan: Exposing the Big Lie" sent to various newspapers in Bangkok this week were a "hoax." The Soviet spokesman, who has been posted here for only two and a half months, said: "I want an investigation into the case." He said the Thai Foreign Ministry also received a copy of the "fake press release."

The letter, carrying the letterhead of the Soviet Information Service, was purported to have been signed by him. "The signature in the fake letter was very much similar to mine. But the spelling is wrong. Also the title is wrong," he said. Mr Pisarchik said the alleged falsified letter carried his name spelling "V.I. Pissartchik," while his name is V.I. Pisarchik.

"Did you notice that the fake name carried Pissartchik, while my real name is Pisarchik — one 's' not two and no 't' there," the Russian official, who had been posted earlier in Pakistan for five years as TASS correspondent, told the NATION. He also said that his position in the embassy here is: Second secretary, press and information, USSR Embassy — and not "Ambassador's assistant for press affairs, the Embassy of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics" as was stated in the letter accompanying the press release, itself dated Dec 28, 1981, purported to be a TASS report dated Dec 24.

"Also, the paper used for the letter is different. We usually use flimsy paper from Finland. The fake letter used whiter, and thicker paper. And the typewriter we use is different. All our typewriters at the embassy are the same: all made in East Germany. The fake letter was obviously typed on a different kind of typewriter...." Mr Pisarchik, asked whether the alleged "hoax" could have been an "inside job," said he would have to check out the suspicion. "This is the biggest shock I have received in this job," he said.

The letter accompanying the press release called upon Thailand to "cease its collaboration with the U.S. and Chinese imperialists who seek to overthrow legally constituted governments in Indochina as well as in Afghanistan and other parts of the world. Our wish is to maintain friendly relations with all countries and to support progressive elements in all states. We petition for your supports to these ends."

The NATION's columnist, Bangkokian, commented on the letter in his "Bangkok Diary" column yesterday suggesting that Moscow might have launched a new "propaganda campaign" over the Afghanistan and Kampuchean issues.

The three-page press release carried the logo of the SOVIET NEWS BULLETIN with series No 117, which Pisarchik claimed did not exist. Pisarchik said his ambassador had questioned him about the case after reading yesterday's edition of the NATION. "That is a shocking new year's gift for me..." he said.

Invitations, which later turned out to be false, were sent out in December, 1980, under the name of the Soviet Embassy here for a party to mark the first anniversary of the Russian invasion of Afghanistan.

THANAT KHOMAN SAYS USSR, PRC NOT 'TRUSTED'

BK090212 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 9 Jan 82 p 3

[Text] Deputy Prime Minister Thanat Khoman said yesterday that the Soviet Union has been trying without success to gain admiration and trust from Thailand and other ASEAN partners. "The Soviet Union could not be trusted as long as it still maintains its troops in Afghanistan and continues to back the Vietnamese in their occupation of Kampuchea," he said.

He said that China could not be trusted either, as the country still supported the communist movement in Thailand secretly. The deputy premier was speaking at the Rama Tower Hotel to members of the Rotary Club. Over 100 persons attended the luncheon.

[Text] The Thai Foreign Ministry, having stepped up its public relations campaign with a special budget of more than 10 million baht in the past year, yesterday inaugurated its "press centre" to cater to local newsmen and the more than 100 foreign correspondents based in Bangkok.

"We will from now on have weekly press conferences or briefings for newsmen to offer facts and the ministry's thinking on topical subjects related to foreign policy," reported director general of the Information Department, Foreign Ministry, Chet Sucharitkul. He told the NATION in an interview that decorations and partial reconstruction of the "press centre" amounted to about 2 million baht. The building was previously the Foreign Ministry's passports division premises which had been moved to the former SEATO building on Si Ayutthaya Rd.

"In the briefings, we would be offering facts to newsmen. We won't offer conclusions to any issue. At times, specialists and desk officers responsible for certain issues will be assisting in briefing reporters," the director general said.

The opening of the "press centre" at the Foreign Ministry represents yet another attempt by the Foreign Ministry to brush up Thailand's "image" abroad in various issues, including refugees, piracy and even such social problems as child slavery which has become a popular topic of certain foreign publications.

Director General Chet said: "Some of these problems played up by foreign publications and agencies may be real. What we try to do is to explain why poverty and other related problems common among developing countries remain a hard nut to crack," he said.

The Foreign Ministry's spokesman indicated that some of these problems besetting Thailand might have also been caused by the selfish and protectionistic policies of developed countries. "For example, if our garments and tapioca could not be sold to some European countries due to their protectionism, poverty will continue to haunt our people. Hence the social problems," Chet said.

The spokesman said the ministry's campaign had also been to retaliate against Vietnam's frequent accusations against Thailand. "In the past, we were criticized for being slow in hitting back at Vietnam's propoganda. Now, we are on the offensive in our broadcasts as well," he said. Chet said that the ministry's Radio Free Asia, a medium-wave radio station which could be heard as far as Iraq, had become a major mechanism in beaming Thailand's line to foreign audiences. "We hit back at Vietnam nearly every day. We try at the same time to tell the Soviet Union that Vietnam has said it is ready to wage war for 30 more years. Could Moscow afford to subsidize such a war of attrition? We want Moscow to understand that a more friendly policy toward ASEAN would be a wise and less expensive line," the spokesman said. At the same time, Chet said that the Thai Foreign Ministry's information channels had adopted a policy of refraining from criticizing Laos and its policies. "We believe in cultivating closer relations with Laos," he added.

The director general said that in the past, the ministry's information system might have suffered from a lack of a definite policy. "Access to the foreign minister is also important to move the information channels through to the press to prevent misunderstanding. Now we have that, too, and I can pick up the phone and ask the foreign minister over all major issues for public statements," Chet said.

SITTHI COMMENTS ON SIHANOUK VISA, COALITION

BK090612 Bangkok POST in English 9 Jan 82 p 18

[Text] Thailand would allow former Kampuchean head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk to transit through the country on route to Kampuchea to visit the Khmer people if the three Khmer resistance factions can form a coalition government, Foreign Minister ACM Sitthi Sawetsila said yesterday. However, the government has not yet received such a request from the prince, he added. Speaking to reporters at the opening ceremony of a press centre at the Foreign Ministry, he said ASEAN will not make any move on the coalition issue for the time being, but will let the three Kampuchean factions "decide their own fate." ACM Sitthi said Prince Sihanouk was not an obstacle to the Khmer coalition as he had accepted in principle the formation of the coalition. He said Sihanouk is to meet Democratic Kampuchea's President Khieu Samphan in Beijing.

GDR DEFENSE MINISTER CONCLUDES FRIENDSHIP VISIT

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 11 — The high-level military delegation of the German Democratic Republic led by Minister of National Defence Gen. Heinz Hoffmann on Sunday visited Ho Chi Minh City and the Seventh Military Zone in southern Vietnam in the company of Vice-Minister of Defence Tran Van Quang.

Speaking at the ceremony held at the Seventh Military Zone headquarters to welcome the delegation, Maj Gen. Nguyen Minh Chau, acting commander of the military zone, praised the role played and the achievements made by the G.D.R. National People's Army in national defence and in contributing to maintaining peace and security in Europe and elsewhere in the world. He said he believed that the visit would help promote the militant solidarity between the two peoples and their armed forces.

On behalf of the armed forces in the zone, Maj. Gen. Nguyen Minh Chau presented the delegation with a flower pot made from the shell of a cannon fired by Vietnamese liberation troops on the general headquarters of the Saigon puppet army during the 1975 Ho Chi Minh campaign.

On the afternoon of Jan 10 General Heinz Hoffmann and his party called at the Party Committee and People's Committee of Ho Chi Minh City. Mai Chi Tho, chairman of the city people's committee, said the local people were very happy to welcome the G.D.R. comrades-in-arms and asked them to convey to the people of the sister city of Leipzig the warm feelings of the people in Ho Chi Minh City. General Hoffmann presented the city people with a wood-engraved portrait of Lenin.

In the evening the command of the Seventh Military Zone gave a reception in honour of the delegation.

On January 11 General Hoffmann and his party called at the technical school for officers of the General Technical Department. Speaking on this occasion, the major-general head of the General Technical Department expressed gratitude to the party, the state and army of the G.D.R. for their wholehearted assistance to the Vietnamese army and people, and especially their assistance to the Vietnamese Defence Ministry in building the technical school for non-commissioned officers and now in helping change it into the technical school for officers, with adequate equipment.

Colonel-General Horst Stechberth, G.D.R. vice minister of national defence, conveyed to the technical school for officers a sum of money collected by the G.D.R. National People's Army to help build the school and presented the latter with the "outstanding fighter" insignia of the G.D.R. National People's Army. Also today the guests called on people's navy units in Ho Chi Minh City. This afternoon General Hoffmann and his party successfully concluded their friendship visit to Vietnam.

SERIES ON SOVEREIGNTY OVER SPRATLYS, PARACELS

[For the first part of this article see the 8 January DAILY REPORT, page K 6]

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 8 — The Chinese side thinks it is producing a clincher when it says that Vietnam has previously recognized that Hoang Sa and Truong Sa are Chinese and now tries to turn its coat. But the Chinese document dated 30 January 1980 contains no proof whatsoever that the Vietnamese Government has given up its rights to those islands. The only reference it makes is to a note of 14 September 1958 sent by the Vietnamese prime minister to his Chinese counterpart.

This note, being a very short one, can be reproduced here in full. It was an answer to a declaration of 4 September 1958 of the Government of the Chinese People's Republic which fixed a 12-mile limit to Chinese territorial waters, and merely expressed Vietnamese agreement:

We have the honour to inform you that the Government of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam takes note and approves of the declaration of 4 September 1958 of the Government of the Chinese People's Republic concerning its territorial waters. The Government of the D.R.V. respects this decision and will give all state organs concerned directives aimed at ensuring strict respect of Chinese territorial waters fixed at 12 nautical miles in all relations with China at sea. Respectfully yours.

This note made no reference to the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes. It did not make the vaguest allusion to the territorial problem, and certainly contained no renunciation by Vietnam to those islands and no recognition of Chinese "sovereignty" over them. What is obvious is that it merely expresses the Vietnamese Government's goodwill toward a fraternal country with regard to a decision it had taken concerning its territorial waters and its pledge to respect this decision.

But Beijing wishes to turn this gesture of friendship into a declaration "recognizing Chinese sovereignty over Hoang Sa and Truong Sa" and claims that Vietnam has turned its coat. Beijing also claims that some Vietnamese geographical maps and school text-books indicated that Xisha and Nansha were Chinese. In the context of the Vietnamese people's war of resistance to American aggression, some errors may have been committed but they should not be attributed to the Vietnamese Government. The undeniable facts are that those archipelagoes were then under the jurisdiction of the former government of Saigon and were defended by its troops. What better proof can there be of Vietnamese sovereignty over those islands?

Before the Chinese armed invasion of Vietnam on 17 February 1979, there could perhaps still have been some misunderstanding of the true nature of the Beijing expansionists, but since that date all people of conscience throughout the world have clearly seen which side has betrayed the other.

There is no need to go back a long way. During our resistance to American aggression, China always played a double game. While beating the big propaganda drums in support of the Vietnamese resistance so as to pose as intransigent anti-imperialist revolutionaries, those in Beijing secretly manoeuvred to prolong the war in order to wear out and weaken both the aggressor and his victim, drive the Americans into a blind alley, and compel them to hold out their hand to China. That double game, even before the Chinese seizure of Hoang Sa, was quite visible: After the fall of Ngo Dinh Diem in South Vietnam, Beijing gave the green light to American bombing raids on the north and troop landings in the south. And when Vietnam, on the point of winning victory, wanted to sit at the negotiating table so as to wage the struggle on three fronts -- military, political and diplomatic -- they did not hesitate to enter into collusion with the Nixon administration in the hope of bartering Vietnamese blood for the position of Third World superpower and a solution to the Taiwan problem. Later, South Vietnam having been liberated and our country reunified, they used all available weapons -- political, economic, military, diplomatic -- to try and weaken Vietnam and bring it to its knees, eventually even launching armed aggression, through the agency of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary forces in the southwest, and with Chinese forces themselves in the north.

The Hoang Sa affair must be examined in the context of the deceptive policy practised by Beijing. This archipelago was occupied by China through a lightning armed assault on 19 January 1974. Washington's approval had been given when Richard Nixon visited China in 1972.

At that time of the attack, public opinion took note of the silence observed by the White House towards a military action undertaken in a zone which has always been considered closely bound to the strategic interests of the USA. This attitude was explained by Tran Kim Phuong, the Saigon ambassador in Washington, in a message to Vuong Van Bac, the Saigon foreign minister, on February 1974:

"From my conversations with Assistant Secretary of State Arthur Hummel and members of the National Security Council at the White House, it appears that the secretary of state, Henry Kissinger, looks upon the conflict on the subject of the Hoang Sa (Paracels) Island as a marginal problem, even an inconvenience, within the framework of the joint efforts with Communist China to contain North Vietnam. Thus, the secretary of state wishes to minimize it, not to get involved in it, in order to concentrate on the sole problem of stepping up military aid to Vietnam (...)

"They (i.e., Kissinger, Senator Fulbright and Congressman Morton, the last two respectively chairman of the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee and chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee -- ed), recommend that we abstain from alluding to war with Communist China. A spirit of compromise with Communist China prevails at present in both assemblies. They are ready to give us military assistance against North Vietnam but not Communist China."

This message was found in 1975 in the archives of the Saigon Foreign Ministry. It sheds light on Washington's attitude in face of the Chinese military occupation of Hoang Sa. It also shows that Beijing and Washington are thick as thieves; while the former betrayed Vietnam by seizing the Hoang Sa Islands, the latter betrayed Nguyen Van Thieu by preventing him from seizing them back.

By producing dubious or doctored evidence, Beijing strives to justify its claim of sovereignty over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, which they stubbornly call Xisha and Nansha, but in spite of the verbal efforts they have deployed after having presented Vietnam with a fait accompli in Hoang Sa, the truth remains: Hoang Sa and Truong Sa are an integral part of Vietnamese territory and come under the sovereignty of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam. The sophistries and falsifications resorted to by Beijing at present are but a rehash of those it has repeatedly used following occupation or attempted occupation of territories belonging to its neighbours: Burma, India, Mongolia, the Soviet Union....

OW120741 Hanoi VNA in English 0659 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 12 -- The following is the 5th in a series of six on the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes published recently by the Hanoi monthly VIETNAM COURIER:

Chinese Archaeology in the Service of Expansionism

After the occupation, with tacit approval from Washington, of the Hoang Sa Islands, Beijing's propaganda machine swung into action both at home and abroad in a desperate attempt to prove China's sovereignty over this and the Truong Sa archipelagoes. Besides their usual propaganda weapons, the Chinese leadership sought the services of archaeology in order to dazzle their audiences, who would be overwhelmed by the prestige of this science and incapable of controlling the results of the excavations.

Since their territorial conflict with the Soviet Union, the Chinese side had used archaeological evidence to support their claims. Thus, in early 1972, some years after the defeat of their troops at the hands of the Soviet Army, the results of archaeological excavations around the Damanskiy Islands on the Ussuriy River were published in an attempt to demonstrate that these territories had belonged to China since time immemorial. Their pseudo-scientific conclusions were easily refuted by the Soviet Union.

Beijing is now repeating that very tactic. In early 1974 Chinese troops occupied the Hoang Sa Archipelago; later that same year the journal WEN WU published some results of archaeological researches undertaken on the islands. Two 20-page papers on that same topic were then published in the September 1976 issue of WEN WU. Meanwhile, in November 1975, GUANGMING RIBAO and the PEOPLE'S DAILY published an article about the excavations, signed Shi Dizu. Radio Beijing, for its part, has repeatedly broadcast communiques on this matter. The CHINA PICTORIAL has also published an article about the islands' formation throughout the various geological epochs. The Chinese journal GEOLOGY has mentioned signs of there being oil deposits under the more recent reefs in the archipelago and the journal CHINA RECONSTRUCTS reviews the islands' biological and other resources. One should also mention the numerous exhibitions of photographs and displays brought back from archaeological expeditions and shown in Beijing and various other places in China.

Drawing on the finds of these expeditions, which for the time being cannot be checked, the Chinese propaganda machine has concocted a whole series of arguments aimed at demonstrating China's sovereignty over the archipelago.

Thus, for instance, the Chinese side claims that the ancient objects discovered on Hoang Sa were made in China. The article "Preliminary Report on the Second Archaeological Expedidition to the Xisha Islands in Guangdong Province" published in the September 1976 issue of the journal WEN WU states the following:

"The four above-mentioned types of objects (double handled container; containers with braided rims; cusped vases; lids) are archaeological remains dating back to the Tang and Wu Dai dynasties. They are in the same style: made from a rough, grey coloured earth, fired at low temperatures and covered in green enamel. (...)

"These items were made in kilns in Jiangxi, Zhejiang, Hunan, Fujian, Guangdong and Guangxi (...) There is also a smaller lid, with a blue motif of lotus petals from the Yuan period, made in Zingdozhen (Jiangxi) (...).

"These remains are spread over an area 10 metres in radius on a submerged reef, covered in bronze sapekes (Chinese coins) of various kind and other bronze objects (...) 1,995 sapekes were found with decipherable characters including: 1 "Banliang" sapeke from the Qin period; 45 sapekes of three Kaiyuan Tongbao types from the Tang period; 71 sapekes of 30 Taiping Tongbao types from the northern Song period, etc (...).

"On the Xisha islands shrines built to the memory of wandering souls in the times of Ming and Qing are still standing. The book Shuilu Bu, considered to be the classical work of reference for maritime navigation, was copied by fishermen who handed it down from generation to generation (...). The objects (retrieved from wrecks) were made in our country (...). All this testifies to numerous comings and goings of our junks throughout the ages to and from the Xisha Islands".

The authors are thus led to draw the conclusion, both simplistic and peremptory, that China has since long been the (?real) master of Xisha... The same article then goes on to say: "Since the Tang and Song period, at least our people have continued to develop the resources of the Xisha Islands and the other islands of the South Sea.

"In the course of two expeditions our achaeologists have surveyed practically all the islands, submerged reefs and shoals of the Xisha Archipelago, and practically everywhere they came across ancient objects and historical remains from our country: The large quantity of finds constitutes irrefutable proof of the fact that Xisha has been part and parcel of the sacred territory of our country from antiquity and that our people are its rightful masters".

Beijing's often Machiavellian propaganda tends to make one doubt the veracity of the above-mentioned excavations and finds. However, let us assume that the excavations were indeed carried out, that the published finds do indeed exist, and that their analysis does indeed carry all the guarantees of scientific methods, especially concerning their dating and origin.

What other conclusion can we then reach but that these objects were transported to Xisha in Chinese junks which were shipwrecked and buried just like ships from many other countries or at best that Chinese came and lived for a while on these islands at some point. But in no way does the presence of Chinese objects on Hoang Sa in itself show that "since the Tang and Song period" the Chinese have been the "rightful masters" of the islands or that the latter are part of China's sovereign territory.

The argument that any place where ancient objects from a given country are found automatically belongs to the latter has no basis in archaeology. National sovereignty is a judicial problem, strictly defined in international law. To use archaeological research in support of a territorial claim is both to flaunt international law and one's own naivete.

Determining the origin of an archaeological find has no connection whatsoever with determining the sovereignty of a state over a given territory: These are two separated questions, each with its own scope and aim. The study of ancient objects, dwelling places and burial chambers enable archaeologists to explore the past and reconstitute the way of life, the modes of production, the techniques and, to some extent, the spiritual life, the beliefs and the art of communities which existed thousands of years ago. The study of bone fragments discovered in old tombs also makes it possible to discover the age, sex and race of the dead person. But, once again, none of this has any bearing upon the issue of national sovereignty over the site.

That archaeological excavations in one country reveal objects coming from another is a common occurrence. Ancient sapekes, gilded silver containers and cloth from the ancient kingdom of Persia were discovered in China by Chinese archaeologists. Large numbers of bronze swords and spearheads from China and introduced into Japan towards the end of the Neolithic Era were discovered by Japanese archaeologists. Roman coins bearing the effigy of Antoninus Pius or Marcus Aurelius, Rome emperors of the 2nd Century A.D., were discovered at Oc Eo [as received] in southern Vietnam, having been brought there in the first centuries of our era. Malaysian archaeologists have published the results of their research on the Dong Son bronze drums discovered on the west and east coasts of their country, one of the wooden supports of which was carbon-dated to the period between 6th-4th centuries B.C. Indeed B.V. Peacock was referring to this discovery when he remarked that this discovery at Kuala Trengganu is the first proof of the influence of the Dong Son culture on the eastern coast of Malaysia (Of B.V. Peacock in Malaysia in History, Vol. 2 -- 1967).

In Vietnam archaeologists have discovered a number of ancient objects made in China or in Chinese style and left there by merchants, administrators, or soldiers of the ancient Chinese dynasties. Thus recent excavations of 16 tombs of the "Western Han" type at Thieu Duong (Thanh Hoa Province) brought to light several bronze objects including 13 mirrors bearing Chinese characters. At Van Don (Quang Ninh Province) an ancient and much frequented Vietnamese port, large quantities of Chinese sapekes were discovered, dating back to the times of the Tang, Song and Qing Dynasties.

If one were to accept the principle that any place where ancient objects from a given country are found belongs to that country, then Iran could claim Chinese territory, China could claim Malaysian territory, and the planet would thus be held in sway by the "world chaos" the Maoists seem to dream of.

To explain the above facts one does not need to specialize in historical science. Exchanges between the various parts of the world have taken place right from the dawn of history and have continued to develop since then. Thus, today there is nothing special about discovering in one country products of another. The silk route, as the Chinese will proudly tell you, enabled Persian goods and even artisans to reach as far as Xi'an, and according to Chinese archaeologists, objects in the Persian style but made in China by Chinese artisans have been discovered. Similarly the discovery in Vietnam of Han bone fragments and of objects made by the Hao or in Hau style is not surprising given the relations Vietnam has had with China over the centuries.

But return to the Hoang Sa Archipelago: Having dreamt up spurious archaeological evidence on which to base their gratuitous affirmations, the Beijing pseudo-scientists claim to have reconstituted a picture of life on these islands. Thus, in his article "Since Antiquity the Islands of the Southern Sea Are Part of Our Country's Territory" published in GUANGMING RIBAO on 24 November 1975 and in the PEOPLE'S DAILY on the following day, Shi Dizu wrote:

"Since the times of the Song our people have been settling on the islands of the Southern Sea and engaging in productive activities there. Furthermore, the archaeological finds from these islands or the seabed are evidence that they began to settle on several islands in the Xisha Archipelago very long ago indeed, and, in particular, without interruption ever since the Tang-Song period until the present day."

The Foreign Ministry of the People's Republic of China goes even further, not hesitating to reproduce these fallacious arguments in its official texts, such as the 30 January 1980 document entitled "China's Incontestable Sovereignty Over the Xisha and Nansha Islands."

"Already under the Northern Song (960-1127), the Chinese Navy sent patrols as far as the Xisha Islands. The Wujing Zongyao (general blueprint for military affairs), of which Emperor Rensong (1023-1063) of the Northern Song himself wrote the preface, stated the following: The court of the Northern Song ordered the imperial forces to conduct patrols, to install a garrison in Guangana (now Guangdong) as a base for patrols at sea and to build keeled warships.

"A sailing boat on a south-westerly course takes seven days from Tumenshan to Jiuruluzhou-Jiurulezhou, today called Xisha. This shows that the northern Song already exercised its jurisdiction over the Xisha Islands".

The argument that chinese settlers arrived on Hoang Sa in the Tang-Sang period is not just fallacious on judicial and historical grounds; it is simply nonsensical, as human life on these islands is well-nigh impossible.

First there is the climate. The Hoang Sa Archipelago lies in one of the world's five areas from which typhoons originate; the sea to the east of the Philippines is where most of area's typhoons form. Statistics collected over 55 years from 1911 to 1965 show that an annual average 9.6 typhoons occur in the Bien Dong. Halfway through the season they move towards the coastal areas stretching from south China to north Vietnam, before moving due west after October, toward the central Vietnamese coastline.

The Hoang Sa Archipelago is thus very much prone to typhoons. Whenever they come from the direction of Luzon the glass falls, the air becomes sultry, the sky fills with ominous black clouds which bring heavy rain driven by gale force winds. Huge waves from the open sea come crashing against the islands, occasionally sweeping right over them. On these islands, which barely emerge from the sea, everything, metal sheeting, tiles, etc, is eventually ripped off and blown away like bits of straw by the raging winds. The Saigon administration had to build low fat-roofed dwellings of reinforced concrete to resist the elements.

Such extreme climatic conditions, together with the distance of the islands from the coast and of one island from the next, explain why they could not be inhabited for any length of time. Fishermen occasionally went there, depending on the season, to stay there for short spells before returning to the mainland, occasionally leaving their equipment in some well protected niche.

Human settlements on these islands are all the more unthinkable in that drinking water is almost completely lacking for both people and animals. Wells have indeed been sunk there, but in the dry season each one provides little more than thirty litres of brackish water per day. Some kind of agriculture is possible in the rainy season but as soon as the rains stop irrigation becomes impossible. According to statistics gathered in 1939-43 and 1948-62 and published by the Saigon administration in 1964, the average rainfall over Hoang Sa is 1,173 mm as compared with 3,000 mm at Hue, with a maximum of 200 mm in September-October and a minimum of 17-21 mm in January-March. The Saigon soldiers garrisoned on the archipelago were regularly supplied with fresh water and food, especially vegetables.

These difficult conditions also explain why Vietnam's feudal administration had to set up special brigades to exploit and defend Hoang Sa. Although they were strictly organised, they were not permanently based on the archipelago. China's "documentary" on Hoang Sa, showing a herd of quietly browsing cows with the comment that "the cattle brought by Admiral Li Zhun in 1909 head" [as received] just cannot be taken seriously. Their claim is preposterous: given the lack of fresh water, the pedological composition of the soil and the vegetal cover of these islands, most of which barely extends over one square kilometre, one wonders how these animals could possibly have bred.

Account by Western sailors who were shipwrecked in the vicinity in the 17-19th centuries never mentioned the existence of Chinese settlements on the archipelago, or ever having been assisted by Chinese. They only survived because they met Vietnamese fishermen.

Furthermore, credibility is stretched a bit too far when the Chinese claim that they established themselves on the islands as far back as the Tang and Song period, over a thousand years ago. Hoang Sa is a coral formation, polyparies of the coelenterate family. Corals develop in a marine environment under certain depth. The water must be limpid, of a certain temperature and salinity, etc. Research on the origins and formation of atolls, coral reefs, and lagoons was undertaken right from the last century. Having noticed that coral reemerge further from the water as time passes, scientists paid particular attention to studying the growth of such reefs and of ramified and solid coals. It has been calculated that their growth rate is 25 mm/year in the Solomon Islands, 26 mm/year in the Maldive, but only 2 to 3 mm/year for Funafuti Islands, namely 25 m, 26 m, and 2-3 m respectively every one thousand years.

Accurate figures do not exist for the Hoang Sa Archipelago. However, a piece of research by E. Saurin published in 1953 on this topic throws some light on the matter:

"An interesting discovery has made it possible to calculate the growth rate of Hoang Sa corals. By dynamiting living coral below and off a rocky point barely emerging from the water on an as yet unidentified island of the archipelago, fishermen have exposed a quantity of Chinese sapekes hidden under the rock. The most recent coins, which show no traces of rust, date back to the Yonglo period of the Minh (1403-1424). This treasure, probably from a wrecked ship, is deep. On this basis their growth rate is constantly battered by waves, one can assume that this growth rate does not (?occur) everywhere such as 25 mm in the Solomon Islands, 26 mm in the Maldives, and is equivalent to the quoted figure for Funafute: 2 to 3 mm".

During the Tang and Song period, one thousand years ago, the Hoang Sa islands must therefore have been some 3 m lower than they are today according to Saurin's evaluation of their growth rate, or 25-26 m lower if their growth rate equals that of the Solomon Islands and the Maldive.

The average height of the islands today is some 4-6 m above sea level. Future research will determine whether, a thousand years ago, they were some 2-3 m above sea level or several dozen metres below. In any case, to claim that ever since the Tang and Song period Chinese settlers have been living and working there indicates nothing more than a fertile imagination.

Ever since it achieved the status of a science, archaeology has never played any role whatsoever in determining a state's sovereignty over a given territory. This is common knowledge. How then can one explain the unscrupulous attitudes of the Chinese leadership and their pseudo-archaeologists? In his contribution to the international conference against expansionism held in Moscow in May 1979, Academician A.P. Oklatnilev, a Soviet archaeologist of repute, condemned the practice of conducting excavations for political ends and counterfeiting archaeological remains as currently done in China, making imitation antiques for unsuspecting collectors, counterfeiting archaeological objects and monuments or distorting their significance to further their expansionist ambitions.

Misuse of science for hidden aims is not however a new development. Haven't Western archaeologists already denounced the phoney Piltdown skull as the work of impostors greedy for money and kudos? But promote such practices to the rank of state policy in order to legitimize territorial ambitions constitutes a very real menace to world peace. Nobody has forgotten the suffering which the Nazi thesis of the "superior race" caused to the whole of humanity not so very long ago. Following in those very tracks, China is seeking to develop an archaeology imbued with Great Han chauvinism in order to justify its hegemonic claims.

These attempts have already been widely condemned by progressive opinion, and are doomed to failure.

OFFICIAL CRITICIZES ASEAN STAND ON FRENCH AID

BK121130 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] A representative for the Fourth Asia Department of the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry has criticized the ASEAN countries for intervening in the relations between the two sovereign countries -- the Republic of France and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam -- and seeking to prevent France from aiding Vietnam. Meeting with the ambassadors and charges d'affaires of the ASEAN countries in Hanoi recently, the Vietnamese representative asked them to convey the criticism back home. He said: these actions of the ASEAN countries are contrary to their professed claim that they do not follow China to oppose and weaken Vietnam.

LE DUAN, OTHERS NAMED HANOI CONGRESS DELEGATES

OW120835 Hanoi VNA in English 0755 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 12 -- Le Duan, general secretary of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee; Truong Chinh, Political Bureau member of the party Central Committee and president of the Council of State; and Pham Van Dong, Political Bureau member of the party Central Committee and chairman of the Council of Ministers; have been nominated for a delegation of the Hanoi party organization to the fifth party congress to be held in March. The nominations were announced at a Hanoi party organization congress, opened here yesterday, to discuss draft documents to be submitted to the national congress.

Hoang Quoc Viet, member of the party Central Committee and president of the Presidium of the Fatherland Front Central Committee, was also nominated for the delegation. The Hanoi congress is attended by 659 delegates representing 150,000 party members throughout the capital city.

ROUND OF HO CHI MINH CITY PARTY CONGRESS HELD

BK120619 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] The Ho Chi Minh City-based correspondent of the Voice of Vietnam reported that the first round of the third congress of the city party organization delegates was opened solemnly this afternoon, 11 January. Some 500 official delegates representing the party members of 1,500 party bases from 190 party organizations in the city attended the congress.

The delegates to this congress included 406 comrades directly engaged in work at the party bases, 60 delegates from the people's armed forces, 60 women, 3 heroes and 37 emulation fighters. The youngest delegate was 24 years old. There were more than 90 delegates in their late 20's and early 30's and 185 delegates with college education level or higher.

On behalf of the congress presidium, Nguyen Van Linh, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and secretary of the Ho Chi Minh City Party Committee, delivered an opening speech. Then the delegates heard a report recapitulating the suggestions that the participants in the congresses of various grassroots levels, namely, district and precinct, and the various party organizations subordinate to the city party committee had contributed to the documents to be presented by the party Central Committee at the coming nationwide fifth party congress.

NHAN DAN EDITORIAL ON STAGES OF REVOLUTION

BK060152 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 3 Jan 82

[NHAN DAN 4 January editorial: "The Essential Stages of Revolution"]

[Text] Because it is an unprecedentedly profound revolution aimed at uprooting the capitalist system and the system of private ownership and creating favorable conditions for the establishment of a new communist society both in infrastructure and superstructure which did not exist in the old society, the socialist revolution in each country as well as throughout the world is a complex, sinuous and protracted historical struggle.

Theoretically, the law of development in each stage of this revolution has been discovered and analyzed firmly and scientifically by the founders of our doctrine. However, in their theoretical and practical activities, those fighting for communist ideology tend to bypass certain stages and simplify the historical development of the essential steps necessitated by objective conditions. Utopian socialists try to replace the unjust society with an ethical society through ethics, scientific socialism and a doctrine to eliminate the system of private ownership and distribution of production materials by a mass revolution while reorganizing production, redistributing land and property, and creating a cultural and moral life for the collective masters, thus ushering in an era of freedom for man's society.

When the administration of the working class is established in a developed capitalist country, large-scale industry and modern science and technology in that country can be reorganized in the socialist direction. The needs of socialist society, however, cannot be satisfied by these production forces alone. A communist society still cannot be realized immediately after the system of public ownership of production materials is established. To change social consciousness is a revolutionary task which cannot be carried out easily and quickly. Therefore, socialist revolution in developed capitalist countries must go through many different stages.

Before its crisis and piecemeal collapse, capitalism controlled the economic and political life of people throughout the world. Capitalist economy, however, has developed only in some countries. Today, more than 100 countries are still backward agricultural countries and have not yet actually started their first technical revolution. Meanwhile, due to new world conditions, many countries in succession have embarked on the socialist path.

As the first socialist country, with a long and most diversified history of development, the Soviet Union has gone through many stages, from the transitional period after the establishment of the system of proletarian dictatorship to the basic completion of the socialist society. The war against fascism, however, hampered its progress. After restoring its economy and carrying out its second scientific and technical revolution, the Soviet Union switched to the establishment of a developed socialist society, while gradually building the material and technical bases of communism.

Thanks to the assistance given by the Soviet Union and cooperation among themselves, other countries in the socialist community have been able to achieve a relatively high rate of development. From the very outset, however, these countries have also been compelled to go through many steps in conformity with the specific conditions in each country.

Our revolution is a complex one because it has taken place in a region full of contradictions between revolutionary and counterrevolutionary elements and sharp conflicts among the big imperialist powers and other reactionary forces. For more than 30 years since the founding of our worker-peasant administration in 1945, we have fought aggressors in several wars. Despite the fact that half the country embarked on socialism more than 20 years before the working class' administration was established throughout the country, socialist construction has not actually started until recent years, when our people have been compelled to heal the multifaceted wounds of past wars while engaging in wars for national defense and standing ready to cope with the danger of a new war.

The process of socialist construction in our country is a relatively complex struggle which must be carried out through many stages. This struggle is not a direct transition from a capitalist economic and social system already equipped with a relatively perfect industry. Capitalism here in our country is equipped only with initial industrial installations and a small-farmer economy -- the major economic base which has just escaped from the control of feudalism and capitalism.

The establishment of the system of public ownership of production materials is merely a premise for the expansion of the production force. One of our socialist revolution's central tasks is to create a production force commensurate with our new production relations, which includes a modern and large-scale industry and advanced science and technology. To turn our small-farmer economy into a collective agriculture and transform our industry and trade along socialist lines means to begin a revolutionary change from a small self-sufficient production to large-scale production with efforts to continue, on the basis of what has been produced, to carry out production on a larger scale. This change is a process and combined result of the three revolutions in which the scientific and technical revolution is the key one.

By relying on the proletarian state and the right to collective mastery of the working people, combining industry with agriculture and heavy industry with light industry, including handicrafts, and applying the achievements of the scientific and technical revolution in an intensive manner, we will be able to expand quickly the production forces of all national economic sectors, thus gradually satisfying all the needs arising from the people's material and cultural life.

The initial strength of socialism in our country is our labor force, arable land and other material bases. If this strength is reorganized under various appropriate forms, we can make a qualitative change in the productivity of cultivation, animal husbandry and other consumer products as well as in social labor productivity, thus making it possible for us to solve all the urgent problems concerning the livelihood of our laborers while gradually increasing accumulation to support industrialization and the consolidation of national defense.

Combining our own efforts with international cooperation in the process of advancing from small production to large-scale production, we have begun to build many large and modern industrial installations. The initial stage of our revolution will be concluded when expanded reproduction has been carried out extensively in our production and when a balance between production and consumption has been achieved with accumulation and industrialization has been accelerated firmly. By that time, our revolution will be switched to the stage of industrialization and improvement of production relations at a higher degree.

SUHARTO ADDRESSES PARLIAMENT ON POLICY, BUDGET

BK091430 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 0300 GMT 5 Jan 82

[President Suharto's 5 January 1982-83 budget speech to parliament -- live]

[Summary] I am happy to present to you today the 1982-83 budget bill. In drafting the bill, the government has always kept in mind the wishes of the people.

Before going further into the new budget, I wish to make an assessment of our present situation and the international developments influencing us. "Generally speaking, we have succeeded in building political, economic and social structures that can serve as a foundation for still greater development in the future."

Let us safeguard our national unity and integrity with the greatest sense of responsibility, particularly with the approach of the general election that is to be held several months from now. I am urging the people to make use of their political right -- a very important one -- by taking part in the general election. We hold a general election only once every 5 years, but I am asking everybody not to become tense. Please carry out your daily activities as usual. Let us make the general election a natural part of our political life and system of government. I am asking all those concerned with the holding of the general election and all political parties to observe the rules of the game, so as to ensure a truly direct, general, free and secret election and, subsequently, enhance our democratic way of life.

"Although our national security is quite stable, we are, however, very concerned about violent and inhuman acts taking place in our midst. We must bring an abrupt end to this kind of brutality." I am asking all security agencies to make all-out efforts to end this brutality.

The enactment of a new penal code in 1981 reflected our determination to ensure public order, harmony and justice. It was a great achievement because it was the first penal code formulated by the nation since independence 36 years ago. I am asking the public at large to become familiar with the essence of the penal code, because it is a penal code that protects the civil rights of a citizen.

Despite the world economic recession, we have been able to attain satisfactory economic growth. In 1981 the rate of inflation was only 7.29 percent, a figure much lower than those of the previous years.

In the agricultural sector, a considerable increase in food production was recorded in 1981. Rice production in that year was estimated at more than 22 million tons, about 10 percent more than in 1980. New investment was made in the construction of a number of large projects. They included the construction of refineries in Balikpapan, Cilacap and Dumai, which are expected to be completed in 1983. With the completion of these refineries, we will no longer have to depend on imported fuel oils. Furthermore, the construction of liquefied natural gas manufacturing projects in Aceh and East Kalimantan, with each having a production capacity of 3.3 million metric tons per year, is expected to be completed before the end of 1983.

The construction of urea fertilizer manufacturing plants in Aceh and East Kalimantan, the expansion of fertilizer plants in Gresik and the expansion of a paper mill in Leces and cement factories in Padang, Tonansa, Kupang and Madura will be completed in 2 to 3 years. The aluminum smelting plant in Asahan will begin operation soon.

The government has decided to increase fuel oil prices, to take effect as of yesterday, 4 January. "The decision was taken with a heavy heart, but with a great sense of responsibility." Thanks to OPEC unity, Indonesia has managed to maintain its crude oil export volume and prices at the same level. We are grateful that in 1981 OPEC countries agreed to a unified price system through 1982.

In the 1981-82 fiscal year, the volume and prices of our non-oil export commodities declined at an alarming rate and subsequently reduced the country's revenues. We cannot cover the loss by printing money, because this is not only contrary to the broad outline of the state policy and the principle of a balanced budget, but because we do not wish our economy to be hit by further inflation. Therefore, it was deemed necessary to decide on reducing the subsidy for fuel oils in particular, in order to make more funds available for development purposes. Furthermore, various measures have been taken to boost our exports.

Our foreign exchange reserve is still quite strong, due, among other things, to our decision to devalue the national currency on 15 November 1978. "I wish to stress here that it is not necessary to devalue the rupiah again."

"Let us now look at the present world situation, which — whether we like it or not — will influence our own situation. Contrary to the hopes of mankind, the world has not only hit by an economic depression, but is becoming less secure. Tension in various parts of the world has not only failed to subside, but new and graver tensions have emerged instead.

"The Kampuchean problem has not been solved yet. The South Asian subcontinent is restless because of the situation in Afghanistan. The temperature of the situation in the Middle East is rising because of the Palestinian issue, which has remained complicated, and the Iranian-Iraqi war. A new crisis has emerged in Europe because of the developments in Poland. Detente between the major powers, which gave rise to new hopes several years ago, is dimming and, on top of this, the arms race seems to be increasing.

"In the face of such a world situation, Indonesia must make greater efforts to strengthen its national resilience and hold firmer to its independent and active foreign policy for the sake of its own national interests. This is the main guideline used by Indonesia in formulating its attitude toward the world political situation as I outlined above.

"Together with our friends — our ASEAN neighbors and other peace-loving and independence-loving countries — we must work to ensure that this region does not become an arena of rivalry and power conflict of the big powers and other foreign interests.

"In the context of ASEAN cooperation, we continue to step up mutual cooperation in various fields, so that each ASEAN country can enhance its national resilience and we can collectively build regional resilience in Southeast Asia.

"Regarding the Kampuchean problem, we actually want the withdrawal of all foreign forces from that territory, so that the Kampuchean people can determine their own future and government. If the Kampuchean people can state their own wishes freely and without external pressure, we shall respect these wishes. We reject any government that has been set up by and with the help of foreign armed forces, because that is contrary to the principles of the sovereignty and freedom of states.

"Meanwhile, it is to be hoped that Vietnam can show an attitude such that the country does not endanger the security of its neighbors and does not have ambitions of territorial expansion.

"As neighbors living in the same region — namely, Southeast Asia — we, despite our different political ideologies and systems, must build harmonious and good-neighbor relations and work together in the interests of our respective nations, without sowing the seeds of suspicion and enmity among us.

"Regarding the Middle East problem, we firmly oppose the arrogant acts of Israel, which continues to refuse to recognize the legal rights of the Palestinian people to determine their own future and which continues to harbor the ambition of annexing the territory of neighboring countries that it is occupying with armed force. All this endangers the principles of world peace and order.

"Regarding the upheavals affecting Poland recently, it is our hope that the Polish people will be able to solve their national problems by themselves in accordance with their wishes and aspirations. The great powers of the world must be willing to restrain themselves and refrain from interfering in Poland's domestic affairs, thereby also saving the world from the threat of a wider conflict."

With the background of the domestic and international situation I have described, we formulated the budget bill for the fourth year of the third 5-year plan — the 1982-83 state budget. The experiences we have gained from year to year have strengthened our conviction for stability to carry out development. Therefore in formulating this budget bill, the government attached great attention to economic stability in the coming fiscal year. The government is also aware, however, that development can only be successful if it results in progress and welfare for the nation and the people. This means that the next budget should be greater than the present one so as to increase routine and development expenditures. The basic policy should be to maintain the required stability for development and to see that the rate of development does not affect stability.

Guided by this basic thinking, the government, in formulating the 1982-83 budget, held fast to the principle of a dynamic, balanced budget, greater than the 1981-82 budget, to enable us to attain proportionate growth and tackle in stages the yet-to-be resolved social and welfare problems, such as education, employment, health, housing, population and so forth.

Because of the world recession, it will not be as easy to increase revenues in the 1982-83 fiscal year as in the past few years. This obliges us to work harder to mobilize existing domestic potential resources and to utilize revenues more rationally and efficiently. In this connection we should increase government savings.

Since the problems to be tackled are greater than the availability of development funds, we should adopt priorities. Knowing that it would be impossible to meet all the demands simultaneously, whether we like it or not, we must diligently adopt priorities, which means to tackle the urgent ones first while postponing the less urgent ones. By adopting correct priorities backed by coordinated programs, we can attain results. That was the basic thinking behind the formulation of the 1982-83 budget bill.

"Honorable assembly, in formulating the 1982-83 budget bill, the government calculated that revenue and expenditures will be balanced at more than 15.6 trillion rupiah, which is an increase of more than 12 percent from the present state budget. Of this figure, 13.75 trillion rupiah will come from domestic resources while 1.85 trillion rupiah will come from foreign resources as development expenditure. Domestic revenues will increase 12.1 percent compared with the 1981-82 budget, while development expenditures will increase 13.8 percent."

The government is aware that it should make greater efforts to attain this revenue so as not to affect the smooth implementation of development. We are determined to further accelerate the development momentum to fulfill development targets in the interest of progress and the betterment of the just and equitable welfare of the people. Therefore the government expects the people to help it attain the targets and invites every taxpayer to fulfill his obligation in an orderly manner.

"As I emphasized earlier, we should rationalize and improve the efficiency in utilizing expenditures in order to increase our capability to finance development. In this context a routine expenditure of slightly over 7 trillion rupiah has been planned. This is 6.7 percent less than in the present budget, as the result of a decrease in subsidies, including the fuel oil subsidy I mentioned earlier. A more efficient utilization of the routine expenditures will create a government saving of 6.78 trillion rupiah which is 40 percent higher than that in the present budget. Added with the 1.82 trillion rupiah development expenditure from foreign sources, the development budget will be more than 8.6 trillion rupiah which means an increase of 34.5 percent. Thus, in the 1982-83 budget bill, the development expenditures will be greater than the routine expenditures.

"Brother speaker, now allow me to further explain the details of the 1982-83 budget bill. Domestic revenues are planned to be more than 13.7 trillion rupiah comprising 11.1 trillion rupiah from direct tax, 2.2 trillion rupiah from indirect tax and 392 billion rupiah from nontax revenues. Domestic revenues can also be divided into revenues from the oil sector and other revenues. The oil revenues come from oil corporate taxes, which are estimated at 9.1 trillion rupiah. This is only 6.4 percent higher than in the present budget. Another 4.6 trillion in domestic revenues is being planned which is a 25.3 percent increase from that of the 1981-82 budget."

Direct taxes will come from income taxes, oil corporate taxes, corporate prepayment taxes, and regional development contributions. The 1982-83 direct taxes -- not including oil -- are estimated at 1.9 trillion rupiah, which is an increase of more than 528 billion rupiah compared with the present budget. Income taxes are estimated at more than 256 billion rupiah, or an increase of 24 percent over the present budget. This increase is attributed to the increase in the number of taxpayers. Meanwhile, corporate taxes are expected to reach 822 billion rupiah or an increase of 47 percent as a result of a healthier growth in business and industry and an increase in the number of enterprises which completed their tax holiday granted under the capital investment law. In this connection the corporate prepayment taxes will increase by about 33 percent to 680 billion rupiah. Regional development contributions have increased from year to year and are expected to reach 109 billion rupiah or an increase of 24 percent. Other revenue -- from property taxes, interests, dividends and royalties -- will reach 123 billion rupiah.

In the 1982-83 fiscal year the increase in oil corporate taxes is relatively small, and this is expected from the possible increase of the volume of oil exports.

Now I would like to explain the indirect taxes comprising sales taxes, import sales taxes, excises, import duties, export taxes and so forth. Sales taxes will be 442 billion rupiah, or an increase of about 50 percent as a result of the growth of our industry. Import sales taxes will be 298 billion rupiah or an increase of 34 percent, while excise taxes will reach 618 billion rupiah -- an increase of 11.8 percent -- and import duties will reach about 678 billion rupiah, or about a 26 percent increase. Export taxes will decrease by more than 55 percent to only 170 billion rupiah. This is caused by obstacles arising from the world economic recession and protectionism practiced by the advanced industrialized countries. Other indirect tax revenue will be 44 billion rupiah. Nontax revenues will be 392 billion rupiah, a fairly large increase of almost 79 percent, coming from profits earned by state corporations and government banks.

Besides domestic revenues -- as in the past years -- the budget bill contains development revenues from abroad totalling 1.85 trillion rupiah or an increase of 13.8 percent. Development revenues comprises program aid of 25 billion rupiah and project aid of more than 1.8 trillion rupiah. These are the broad outlines of the state revenue.

Now allow me to explain the expenditures. As in past year, the expenditures are divided into two parts — routine and development expenditures. "Routine expenditures for the next year will be about 7.1 trillion rupiah and development expenditures will be 8.6 trillion rupiah. There will be a 6.7 percent decrease in routine expenditures compared with the present budget." As I explained earlier, the decrease is due to the decrease in food and fuel oil subsidies. The fiscal policy calls for improving the quality of government apparatus services, better management and utilization of state property, stable prices of various basic necessities and increasing government savings.

The routine expenditures are for personnel and material expenditures, subsidies for autonomous regions, interest and debt installments and other routine expenditures, including food and fuel oil subsidies.

"Personnel expenditures will account for 2.5 trillion rupiah, an increase of 3 percent." These will be for payment of salaries, pensions, rice allowances, meal allowances and salaries for personnel abroad. "The increase in personnel expenditures is small because the government will not increase salaries in this fiscal year."

"Material expenditures account for more than 1 trillion rupiah, an increase of more than 7 percent." These will be for the procurement of materials from both inside and outside the country. Although the increase is also small, it is hoped that the government will be able to maintain the smooth flow of the government's routine operations. "More than 1.3 trillion rupiah will be allocated as subsidies for autonomous regions -- 43 billion rupiah for Irian Jaya and more than 1.2 trillion rupiah for other regions, including an 11.1 billion rupiah subsidy to East Timor, increasing the subsidy for this region by more than 8 percent from the present expenditures."

"The next routine expenditures are for the payment of interest and debt installments amounting to 976 billion rupiah — 30 billion rupiah for internal interest and debt installments and 946 billion rupiah for external interest and debt installments. The foreign debt installments account for 11 percent of our export revenue."

Other routine expenditures are for food and fuel oil subsidies, general elections and so forth. The food subsidy is reduced as the government has been increasing food prices and it will continue to do so in order to terminate the food subsidy. "The fuel oil subsidy amounts to 924 billion rupiah, far less than the subsidy in the present budget, which amounted to 1.5 trillion rupiah." The reduction is the result of the increase in fuel oil prices.

The 34 percent increase in development expenditures is made possible by the cut in subsidies, particularly the fuel oil subsidy, and the fairly large increase in tax revenue. This means that the cut in the fuel oil and food subsidies will increase our capability to develop as the savings will be utilized for development. "I also deem it necessary to state here that 78.5 percent of the development expenditures will come from domestic revenue, while a mere 21.5 percent will come from foreign countries. This shows that our capability to finance development increases every year."

Honorable assembly, I would also like to explain details of the expenditures for all sectors, particularly the main sectors. First of all I would like to say that expenditures for each of the 18 development sectors will also increase. Three sectors will each be allocated over 1 trillion rupiah. "These are the education sector, 1.3 trillion rupiah; the agriculture and irrigation sector, 1.2 trillion rupiah; and the communications and tourism sector, more than 1 trillion rupiah.

"The 1.3 trillion rupiah allocation to the education sector is a 66 percent increase from the 1981-82 budget and is the greatest development expenditure allocation." In this connection in 1982-83 we will build another 22,600 primary schools, including 200 multistoried schools in big cities because of the difficulty in acquiring land. We will also add 35,000 classrooms and rehabilitate 25,000 school buildings. We will also build 20,000 houses for school principals in remote areas, about 12,000 houses for school guards and make available 30 million reading books to students. For the first time we will provide sports facilities for 50,000 schools. Parallel with the increase in the number of schools and classrooms, we will employ more than 109,000 teachers, including religious teachers. With the implementation of the primary school development program under presidential instruction, there will be an increase of more than 3.9 million places in 1982-83 and in the 1983-84 school year there will be enough places for all children between 7 and 12 years old.

In 1982-83, 1,000 junior high schools and an additional 5,000 classrooms will be built, thereby providing more than 400,000 additional places for students in the 1983-84 school year. The junior high schools will be distributed so that there will be at least one in every subdistrict. In the meantime we will continue to improve the education facilities and standards at vocational schools, senior high schools and universities.

We will continue to develop the agricultural sector in order to increase food production. If food production, particularly rice, continues to increase in 1982 as in the past 2 years, we may expect to become self-sufficient in rice under the third replelita. Within the framework of intensifying agriculture, we will open up no fewer than 80,000 hectares of new ricefields, continue to develop tertiary irrigation networks to irrigate more than 200,000 hectares of ricefields, repair and upgrade irrigation networks which can irrigate 45,000 hectares of land and build new irrigation networks to irrigate 65,000 hectares of land.

We will also further step up livestock breeding. For this purpose we will develop large breeding projects with at least 100,000 head of cattle and buffalo.

In the plantation sector we will increase sugar production by building new sugar mills and rehabilitating old ones, and expand sugarcane plantations, particularly outside Java. Although sugar production is increasing every year, we still have to import sugar. We will also expand and rehabilitate rubber, coconut, coffee, pepper, cocoa, tea, castor oil, cashew, cotton, clove and other plantations.

We will also continue to develop the communications sector — improving the railway service, rejuvenating our seagoing and coastal ships, expanding existing harbors and building new ones and further developing the pioneer air and sea transport. Besides carrying on the development of the new international airport at Cengkareng, Jakarta, we will also upgrade the capacity of the Medan Polonia Airport, the Bali Ngurah Rai Airport, the Surabaya Juanda Airport and other airports, and also expand postal, telecommunications and telephone services.

"More than 938 billion rupiah is allocated to the mining and energy development sector. Among its activities will be to develop oil, geothermal energy, coal and hydro energy resources and to carry out important research on diversification of energy utilization." A fairly large budget is also allocated for the development of electricity through the construction of dozens of big and small power stations and the expansion of electricity distribution networks to supply electricity to rural areas.

In order to maintain the development momentum, great attention is directed to the industrial sector by allocating expenditures of 366 billion rupiah. The main thrust will be the development of light industry by providing technical, organizational and managerial guidance; upgrading skills, entrepreneurship, education and training; supplying equipment and basic materials; and so forth. We will continue the development of basic and petrochemical industries.

Some 281 billion rupiah will be allocated for the improvement of people's welfare. The Perumnas Housing Development Corporation will build no fewer than 24,000 houses in 50 cities throughout the country. We will also further step up transmigration and further improve cooperatives.

No less important is regional and rural development, particularly through the presidential instruction [Inpres] programs. The village Inpres program will receive more than 88 billion rupiah to boost activities in 65,000 villages. The subsidy to each village will be increased from 1 million rupiah to 1.25 million rupiah.

We will also increase the district Inpres program allocation from 1,000 rupiah to 1,150 rupiah per person. The minimum subsidy to each district will be increased from 150 million rupiah to 160 million rupiah. Total expenditure for the district Inpres program will be about 194 billion rupiah.

The allocation for the province Inpres program will also be increased to 253 billion rupiah. The minimal subsidy to each province increases to 9 billion rupiah from the present 7 billion rupiah. Of the 27 provinces, 22 will receive the minimal subsidy.

The health Inpres program will also increase to more than 98 billion rupiah. Some 200 new public health centers, 2,000 public health subcenters, 500 mobile public health units and 600 houses for public health doctors and personnel will be built.

To further develop the economically weak group and to boost their income, an expenditure of more than 10 billion rupiah will be allocated to the market Inpres program.

An 80 billion rupiah expenditure is allocated for building no less than 8,000 km of roads and 14,000 meters of bridges in all districts. Finally, the aforestation Inpres program will receive more than 87 billion rupiah for flood control.

That is the picture of the development we plan to undertake. There are still many other sectors which will be further developed, but I did not touch on them on this occasion.

Honorable assembly, it is true that the world economic recession has created difficulties for us, but we are not the only ones who have been affected. We have responded by increasing our development capability, among other things, by tightening our belt, reducing subsidies and other important steps. We will utilize the savings from the reduction of subsidies for development because we have no other choice but to develop. Let us further strengthen our national resilience.

U.S. CONGRESSMEN CONFER WITH OFFICIALS ON TRADE

Meetings With Abe, Sakurauchi

OW111151 Tokyo KYODO in English 1059 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 11 (KYODO) -- Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry, said Monday that "conditional reciprocity" is dangerous and violates the spirit of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). Abe made the statement when he met with eight U.S. Congress members, including Senator Max Baucus, Democrat-Montana.

He was referring to the mounting U.S. demand that Japan open its domestic market to American commodities, based on the spirit of reciprocity. U.S. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield, for instance, said Wednesday that Japan should let other nations gain a market share in Japan by giving them the same kind of free and fair access to the Japanese market that Japan now enjoys in their markets.

Such conditional reciprocity will only promote protectionism, Abe told the U.S. Congress members. Abe later told a press conference he will explain Japan's current efforts to open its domestic market wider to foreign imports when he visits the United States to take part in the January 15-16 trilateral trade conference.

In a separate meeting with Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, the U.S. Congressman said the U.S. is at a turning point of moving toward protectionism or keeping the free trade system, and warned that unless Japan opens its market, it will be called the cause of all evils. Sakurauchi countered that Japan is making efforts to open its market and asked the U.S. to sell Alaskan oil.

Meetings With Suzuki, Nikaido

OW121111 Tokyo KYODO in English 1042 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 12 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Tuesday told a visiting U.S. mission that Japan is studying the possibility of creating a trade ombudsman to deal with trade frictions. Suzuki told the nine American Congressmen, led by Representative Thomas S. Foley, that the two countries should deepen mutual understanding lest economic issues develop into political issues which could mar Japan-U.S. relations.

The U.S. Congressmen expressed appreciation for the priority given by the Japanese government to easing of trade friction and urged efforts by both sides to solve the issue.

The Americans also met Tuesday with Susumu Nikaido, secretary general of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party, to exchange views on bilateral trade issues. Nikaido told the Americans that the trade dispute was attributable to insufficient efforts on the U.S. side, and he called for U.S. efforts to raise productivity in various industrial fields.

Further Remarks by Abe

OW130611 Tokyo KYODO in English 0528 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 13 (KYODO) -- Shintaro Abe, Japanese minister of international trade and industry, Wednesday criticized U.S. congressional moves for legislation based on the principle of reciprocity and warned that free trade would collapse should the U.S. administration accept it as a policy. Abe told Sen John C. Danforth and Sen John H. Chafee that adoption of such protectionist policy would only invite mutual retaliation among trading nations and lead to a shrinkage of global trade, a MITI spokesman said.

Danforth, in a meeting with Japanese business leaders Tuesday, urged Japan to allow wider market access to American goods and said the U.S. Congress was preparing legislation calling for reciprocity in trade, under which foreign limits on U.S. products would invite similar restrictions on imports into the U.S.

Abe stressed to the senators the Japanese Government takes the stand that without economic development of industrialized Western democracies, the Japanese economy would not develop. From this viewpoint, Japan is making utmost efforts to open its market wider to imports through removing or simplifying existing rules and cutting tariffs ahead of schedule, he was quoted as telling the U.S. lawmakers.

The MITI spokesman said Danforth countered that the principle of reciprocity, when applied in an objective way, would work as an incentive to reduce import barriers. The Republican senator also asked Abe to limit Japanese car exports to the U.S. in the second year (starting next April) to the same level as the first year, or 1.68 million units, and to continue the voluntary curbs in the third year (beginning in April 1983), the spokesman said.

Abe said in reply that Japan is ready to discuss prospective U.S. car demand in 1982, but made a point that the actual 1982 volume of car exports should be fixed in keeping with the bilateral agreement last May. The accord, according to Abe, calls for setting the volume of car exports in the second year at a level equal to the first-year volume plus 16.5 percent of any additional U.S. car sales in the year.

ABE TO WARN U.S. AGAINST REVISING TRADE ACT

OW100735 Tokyo KYODO in English 0718 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 10 (KYODO) — The Japanese Government will warn the United States against any revision of the U.S. trade act to impose import surcharges against Japanese products as a measure to redress its huge trade deficits with this country. The U.S. Government is demanding every possible measure to open up the Japanese market for U.S. agricultural produce, high-technology products and services on a reciprocal basis, as it is expected to have suffered a record trade deficit with Japan last year. The deficit might reach dollar 18 billion, up from 12 billion in 1980.

According to the International Trade and Industry Ministry (MITI), the U.S. trade representative intends to revise the trade act and introduce a reciprocal trade concept so that the President can impose taxes and other restrictions on imports from countries shutting out U.S. products. Some revised bills have been already proposed to the U.S. Congress to close its communications market to import unless its trading partners open the same market to U.S. products.

MITI officials said Minister Shintaro Abe, who is scheduled to visit Washington this month, will warn Vice President George Bush and other government officials that any protective moves will be against the rules of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

ITO ON PRC, DEFENSE BUDGET, U.S. COOPERATION

OW060617 Tokyo KYODO in English 0529 GMT 6 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 6 (KYODO) — Japan's defense chief said Wednesday he hoped that cooperation with China in various aspects would be built up gradually, for example, by stepping up the exchange of personnel. Soichiro Ito, director general of the Defense Agency, made the remark in an interview with the KYODO news service.

He said Seiki Nishihiro, defense counsellor, one of his agency's policy planners, would visit China next Wednesday "to inspect the training of People's Liberation Army troops at various bases." Nishihiro reportedly plans to meet China's deputy chief of General Staff, Wu Xiuquan. Ito, however, declined comment on the report, saying only, "No details have apparently been worked out as yet."

The defense chief said Nishihiro was not a high official. He added he hoped that higher-level officials would exchange visits. Ito, however, discounted the possibilities that he himself would visit China soon, in view of the considerable political impact this would have.

On the defense budget for fiscal 1982, Ito said the yen 2,586.1 billion (about $11.76 billion) appropriation is "fairly satisfactory," although far from the agency's initial budget request. He conceded the amount represented an increase of about 7.75 percent from the fiscal 1981 level, in contrast with a minimal 2.8 percent increase in the social security appropriation to yen 9,084.8 billion (about $41.23 billion). Ito stressed, however, that defense spending is still less than one third of the social security budget.

While most social security spending was not directly productive, about half of the defense appropriations was accounted for by personnel expenses. This meant the money was being spent to provide jobs for about 300,000 personnel (the total of defense force and agency personnel), he said.

Stationing of defense troops in strategically important but poor regions also made a significant contribution to the development of such region's economies. Defense funds also created jobs in a number of defense-related industries, Ito added.

Ito said the government would strive for defense buildup with the target set in 1976 as the minimum goal while seeking the support of the people. The target:

Ground force — 12 divisions and 2 composite brigades deployed regionally in peacetime, mobile operation units (1 armored division, 1 artillery brigade, 1 airborne brigade, 1 training brigade and 1 helicopter brigade), low-altitude ground-to-air missile units (8 antiaircraft artillery groups);

Maritime force — 4 escort flotillas (antisubmarine surface ship units), 10 antisubmarine surface ship division, 6 submarine divisions, 2 flotillas (minesweeping units) and 16 land-based antisubmarine aircraft squadrons; equipment — about 60 antisubmarine surface ships, 16 submarines and about 220 operational aircraft;

Air force — 28 aircraft warning and control groups, 10 interceptor squadrons, 3 support fighter squadrons, 1 air reconnaissance squadron, 3 air transport squadrons, 1 early warning squadron and 6 high-altitude ground-to-air missile groups; equipment — about 430 operational aircraft.

Referring to reports that if the present buildup target is to be achieved by fiscal 1987, defense spending would probably be in excess of 1 percent of gross national product (GNP), Ito [illegible]ted that it may top that level. In that event the consent of the National Defense C[illegible] will naturally be sought.

The proposed yen 2,586.1 billion defense appropriation represents 0.93 percent of Japan's gross national product for fiscal 1982, estimated at yen 277 trillion (about $1.26 trillion), slightly above the fiscal 1981 level. Yet, this ratio is the lowest among the advanced countries, Ito said.

On the proposed cooperation with the United States in defense technology, Ito said this would probably be one of the biggest problems of the new year. He said this presupposes the coordination of views among the Defense Agency, the Foreign Ministry and the Ministry of International Trade and Industry on the so-called "three principles on the prohibition of arms export." Ito said these government offices would start working late this month or early next month to coordinate the views before the defense technology consultations with the U.S. The principles call for a ban on arms exports to communist bloc countries, nations to which arms exports are banned by the United Nations resolution and to countries currently involved in an international dispute or liable to get involved in such a dispute.

Ito said it is desirable that the U.S., Japan, Western Europe and other countries cooperate technologically and otherwise in the development and manufacture of weapons.

OFFICIALS VIEW PROSPECTS OF LOAN TALKS WITH ROK

Miyazawa on Talks

OW0603647 Tokyo KYODO in English 0539 GMT 6 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Jan 6, KYODO -- Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa Wednesday described as a "step forward" South Korean agreement to the Japan-proposed working-level talks in Seoul next week to discuss bilateral economic cooperation. But he quickly dismissed optimism about early settlement of South Korea's $6 billion loan request, which Japan has so far rejected because of its amount and link with the country's huge military spending. Speaking to reporters, Miyazawa said, "I don't think the coming talks will settle the (economic aid) issue. It seems there still is a long way to go."

"The talks mean only the first step of our (renewed) negotiations," he added.

Suzuki's Comments

OW121329 Tokyo KYODO in English 1250 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Jan 12 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Tuesday Japan will conduct discussions on economic cooperation with South Korea "with all possible sincerity" at a working-level conference due to open in Seoul Thursday. "I hope the meeting will get the bilateral negotiations (on the economic aid issue) on the right track," Suzuki said in a meeting with Akitane Kiuchi, chief of the Foreign Ministry's Asian Affairs Bureau. Kiuchi will represent Japan in discussions on South Korea's $6 billion loan request to finance its 1982-86 economic and social development plan.

In the meeting at Suzuki's official residence, Kiuchi said, "The situation warrants limited optimism. It's difficult." He said major topics at the meeting will include South Korea's major industrial projects in the five-year economic plan and preparations for a proposed foreign ministerial meeting. Kiuchi said he has no power or intention to spell out the amount of Japanese economic assistance South Korea can expect. During his three-day stay in the South Korean capital, Kiuchi will also hold talks with Foreign Minister No Sin-yong and other senior government officials and presidential aides.

FIRM CALLS ON GOVERNMENT TO AVOID SOVIET BOYCOTT

OW121307 Tokyo KYODO in English 1227 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 12 (KYODO) -- A Japanese company engaged in a joint Japanese-Soviet oil development project Tuesday asked the government to help it avoid being affected by American sanctions imposed against the Soviet Union in response to the Polish crisis.

Koki Imasato, president of the Sakhalin Oil Development Cooperation Co, told Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa that the oil rigs used by his company in oil and natural gas exploration off northeastern and southwestern Sakhalin employ U.S. technology. If the U.S. sanctions are applied to the rigs, exploration would have to be suspended, Imasato said.

Miyazawa replied that the matter would be dealt with by the Foreign Ministry. But he also pledged to convey Imasato's request to Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and the Ministry for International Trade and Industry.

DPRK DEMANDS CONVOCATION OF MAC MEETING 16 JAN

SK110843 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1207 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] Kaesong, January 10 (KCNA) -- Our side to the Military Armistice Commission on January 10 demanded of the enemy side the convocation of the 410th meeting of the Military Armistice Commission on January 16, 1982, in connection with the fact that the U.S. imperialists are stepping up their manoeuvres for the provocation of another war from the beginning of the year in gross violation of the armistice agreement.

U.S.-JAPAN SECURITY MEETING CALLED 'CONSPIRACY'

SK120964 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2252 GMT 11 Jan 82

[NODONG SINMUN 12 January commentary: "A Grave New Stage of U.S.-Japan Military Collusion"]

[Text] The 18th U.S.-Japan Security Consultative Committee meeting was held in Tokyo on 8 January. According to foreign news reports, the situation in northeast Asia, the international situation and the question of defense cooperation between Japan and the United States were discussed. They formally agreed to begin studying the emergency situation in the Far East.

At the meeting, the U.S. side demanded that Japan drastically increase armaments and strengthen defense cooperation with the United States. The Japanese said they will comply with the U.S. request. As is known, the U.S.-Japan Security Consultative Committee meeting discussed military collusion between the U.S. imperialists and the Japanese reactionaries.

The United States attempted to drag Japan into its Far East strategy. Japan revealed a dark intention to pursue its overseas ambition by taking advantage of the U.S. demand. In other words, the U.S.-Japan Security Consultative Committee meeting was a conference where they secretly discussed U.S.-Japan joint military strategy in Asia.

The United States and Japan agreed to begin studying the emergency situation in the Far East at the meeting. This is what attracts our attention. Formal initiation of research on an emergency in the Far East, which accords with the guidelines of U.S.-Japan defense cooperation for joint U.S.-Japan operations, shows that the U.S.-Japan military conspiracy and collusion against the Korean people are being stepped up.

An emergency in the Far East means an emergency on the Korean Peninsula. The crux of this is that when the U.S. imperialists provoke a new war in Korea, they will use Japanese territory as their launching, operational and logistic base and that Japan's Self-Defense Forces will support and guarantee the U.S. operation. The initiation of research on an emergency of a very grave and dangerous nature in the Far East means that the U.S. imperialists and the Japanese reactionaries are openly working on a joint aggressive plan against the Korean people. This is an intolerable criminal plot and a vicious challenge against the Korean people.

We view that the aim of the recent U.S.-Japan security conference as one to carry out a wicked war scheme against the Korean people. It is well known that the study on a contingency in the Far East is the product of the U.S. imperialists' Korean policy and Asian strategy to provoke a new war of aggression in Korea by making the Japanese reactionaries join in this maneuver.

The U.S. imperialists are attempting to perpetuate the division of Korea, maintain South Korea as their permanent colonial-military base and forge ahead with an antagonistic policy against our republic. To achieve this end, the U.S. imperialists have enormously increased the U.S. Armed Forces occupying South Korea and converted South Korea into a nuclear war base and hotbed for a new war. They have also massed large numbers of troops in areas around the Korean Peninsula, including Japan and kicked up war exercise rackets.

In particular, the United States, attaching great significance to the task of making Japan join maneuvers to implement the war plan, has forged ahead with these maneuvers. Through the so-called study of a contingency in the Far East, the United States is trying to achieve this end.

The Japanese reactionaries, following the U.S. Korean policy and Asian strategy, are attempting overseas military aggression and pursuing their wild desire to reinvade Korea. Moreover, they have urged the United States to expedite the study of a contingency in the Far East.

In accord with a U.S.-Japan joint operation in case of an emergency on the Korean Peninsula, Japan has deployed its self-defense forces and increased its military capabilities. To justify the U.S.-Japan joint operation and the overseas deployment of the self-defense forces, the Japanese reactionaries are trying to amend their nation's laws. This shows that Japan is emerging as a U.S. ally and a very dangerous aggressive force in Asia. This also clearly proves that the propaganda that the U.S.-Japan security treaty assumes a defensive nature is a lie and that the treaty is an aggressive military pact between the U.S. imperialists and the Japanese reactionaries to launch an invasion against the Asian people.

It is not by chance that the United States and Japan are maneuvering to establish a tripartite U.S.-Japan-South Korea military alliance and to link the U.S.-Japan military treaty with other aggressive military blocs. While the United States is making the Japanese reactionaries join in the U.S. strategy against Korea and Asia, the Japanese reactionaries are following the road of overseas expansion by openly acting like a U.S. ally.

The military conspiracy and collusion between the United States and Japan is a grave threat to peace and security in Korea and northeast Asia and a great obstacle to Korea's independent and peaceful reunification.

As the study of a contingency in the Far East has begun, the broad strata of the people in Japan are denouncing it as a maneuver to cause new tension on the Korean Peninsula and a very dangerous move to increase tension in Japan and Asia. The U.S. and Japanese maneuvers to forge ahead with a wicked war plan against the Korean people run counter to the desire of the Japanese and Asian peoples and the trend of the time and do not comply with the interests of the U.S. and Japanese peoples. The U.S. and Japanese reactionaries should reflect on the grave consequences to be brought about by this study of a contingency in the Far East and act cautiously.

U.S. MILITARY BUILDUP IN FAR EAST CONDEMNED

[NODONG SINMUN 13 January commentary: "Undisguised Sinister War Scheme"]

[Text] According to a report, Admiral Long, commander in chief of U.S. forces in the Pacific Region, explained U.S. military strategy in the Far East in Tokyo on 9 January. He said that new fighter-bombers, ground support aircraft and helicopters will be sent to South Korea.

In this connection, he revealed that the United States was planning to provide cruise missiles to the 7th U.S. Fleet and to reinforce U.S. troops in the Far East and that such plans had already begun to be carried out. This shows that the U.S. imperialists are enhancing their policy of force -- a policy of war -- against the Korean people by building up their military strength in South Korea and surrounding areas.

In line with the reinforcement of the military, the U.S. imperialists held the 18th U.S.-Japan Security Consultative Committee meeting. They mapped out a plan for aggression against the Korean people on the pretext of coping with a contingency in the Far East.

It is no accident that foreign news report claim the plan for an emergency in the Far East is a new version of the "Three Arrows Operation." The U.S. imperialists are reinforcing their military forces in the Far East and deploying sophisticated military hardware in South Korea. This is an ominous military development against us.

It is no secret that the Korean Peninsula is becoming the focus of the U.S. troops' strategy in the Far East. Saying that a contingency in the Far East refers to a contingency in the Korean Peninsula, the U.S. imperialists rave that South Korea is of strategic importance to the United States. Proceeding from this, giving top priority to the strategy toward Korea in Asia, they are strengthening the military forces in South Korea and the area.

Here are examples: Deployment of an electronic intelligence battalion in South Korea, introduction of tanks, antitank helicopters and self-propelled guns, strengthening the 2d U.S. Infantry Division in South Korea, a plan to expand the U.S. Air Force facilities in South Korea with $140 million, reinforcement of military forces at U.S. bases in South Korea and surrounding areas and the replacement and acquisition of military hardware.

Part of such a military scheme is the U.S. imperialists' equipping the 7th Fleet with cruise missiles, reinforcement of U.S. troops in the Far East, deployment of scores of sophisticated F-16 fighter-bombers and a squadron of A-10 close support aircraft, and introduction of new helicopters in South Korea.

By doing this, while threatening our republic by concentrating recently reinforced army, navy and air force components on the Korean Peninsula and surrounding areas, the U.S. imperialists are trying to coordinate the operations of the U.S. 7th Fleet, whose strategic focus has been shifted to the East Sea of Korea, the Rapid Deployment Force to be deployed in South Korea, and the U.S. bases in Japan and the Far East and to accelerate new war preparations against the Korean people.

Such a scheme to build up their military strength is aimed at militarily supporting the South Korean puppets, who have been isolated at home and abroad and now confront a crisis.

Particularly noteworthy is that the U.S. imperialists have decided to provide the 7th Fleet with cruise missiles. This is evidence that they are accelerating preparations for a nuclear war in Korea. Clearly, the U.S. imperialists' wicked ambition to occupy South Korea forever and annex all of Korea has not changed.

Clearly, the threat of aggression in Korea comes from the South. Peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea is a key to peace in Asia and the world. The U.S. imperialists' sinister war scheme and military buildup, more undisguised with each passing day, are criminal acts blocking the cause of the independent and peaceful reunification of our people and are extremely dangerous machinations aggravating the situation on the Korean Peninsula and endangering peace in Asia and the world.

Our people are keenly watching the military activities of the U.S. imperialists. The U.S. imperialists should stop the criminal machinations of trying to provoke a new war by occupying half of the other's territory and withdraw from South Korea, taking along with them all military forces wtihout delay. This is a demand according with the trend of the times. If the U.S. imperialists ignore this just demand and adhere to a sinister war scheme and their military buildup, they will be rejected by our people and the world's peoples.

XINHUA CITED ON U.S. TROOP WITHDRAWAL FROM SOUTH

SK130449 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0343 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] Beijing, January 11 (KCNA) -- The United States must change its course, withdraw its troops from South Korea and end activities that do not aid the peaceful reunification of Korea.

Chinese XINHUA NEWS AGENCY January 9 stressed this in a commentary flaying the provocative manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists to reinforce their armed forces in South Korea.

Referring to the U.S. decision to reinforce its armed forces present in South Korea, XINHUA said: "It poses a grave menace to the people in the northern half of Korea who seek a peaceful reunification of Korea. The Reagan administration has announced Carter's "plan for troop withdrawal," and by increasing U.S. forces in South Korea, it violates the Korean armistice agreement.

The Reagan administration supports the South Korean Chon Tu-hwan "regime" and has greatly strengthened its military cooperation with South Korea, it said, and continued: "President Kim Il-song of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea announced at the Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea a program to establish a Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and the confederal republic's 10-point policy. With the Democratic People's Republic of Korea's position for an independent and peaceful reunification of Korea explicitly defined, the Reagan administration's decision to increase U.S. military strength in South Korea only can lead to a fiercer confrontation on the Korean Peninsula. This shows that the United States wants to obstruct the reunification of Korea and remains obdurate in its stance against the DPRK.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique of South Korea, backed by the United States, now is even bold enough to openly declare that the "1980's is a decade for the trial of strength between the North and the South." It has shown no willingness to seek peace and a peaceful reunification of Korea.

The United States should be advised not to act as an overlord and to refrain from sliding down a dangerous road of evil-doing against the aspiration of a nation.

KIM IL-SONG RECEIVES FINE ARTS COLLEGE STUDENT

SK130454 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0414 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 13 (KCNA) -- Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of our party and our people, on January 12 received Kim Ha-kyong, a twelve-year-old student who entered a first-year class of the junior course of the Pyongyang Fine Arts College some time ago from the Soku Girl's Senior School in Wonsan.

Members of the Presidium of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea were present on the occasion.

Also present were members of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the WPK and personages concerned.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song had the goodness of seeing the handwriting of student Kim Ha-kyong who had acquired distinguished calligraphic talent by tirelessly practising writing under the guidance of the school and family from her young age and highly praised her talent.

Saying that such distinguished genius as student Kim Ha-kyong can emerge only under the socialist system of our country where everyone can develop his talent to his heart's satisfaction, he instructed her to further develop her talent at the Pyongyang Fine Arts College and become a good worker serving the party and the revolution, the fatherland and the people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song gave programmatic teachings which would serve as a guideline in rearing all the students into communist revolutionaries of chuche type with rich knowledge, good virtues and sound body, by further improving the quality of school education as required by the theses on socialist education.

UK WILLING TO OFFER MILITARY EQUIPMENT TO ROK

SK130105 Seoul YONHAP in English 0049 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 13 (YONHAP) -- British Lord Privy Seal Humphrey Atkins said here Tuesday evening that he had suggested to leaders of mainland China that South and North Korea should both be admitted into the United Nations, and that the Chinese declined comment on his suggestion.

Atkins, concurrently deputy foreign minister, deplored North Korea's rejection of South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan's offers of top-level inter-Korean dialogue last year, and said: "It (Pyongyang's rejection) demonstrates the fact that the North is apparently not interested in anything but taking over the South by conquest."

Atkins, who arrived here Monday on a three-day visit, which included a meeting with Chon, was speaking at a news conference at the British Embassy. He visited Beijing before coming to South Korea.

Atkins said, in answer to a reporter's question, that Britain could offer aircraft, missiles and a variety of other military equipment, which "could be of use to South Korea," and invited South Korea's defense officials to visit Britain for an on site observation of British defense technology.

In a prepared statement delivered at the outset of his news conference, Atkins said: "I am confident that British advanced technology and our financial institutions are well placed to cooperate in the further economic development of Korea."

ANNIVERSARY OF CHON'S N-S VISITS PROPOSAL MARKED

SK130141 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 13 Jan 82 p 4

[Editorial: "One Year After"]

[Text] A year ago yesterday President Chon Tu-hwan made a pragmatic down-to-earth approach to the Korean problem which continues to remain an unstabalizing force not only on the peninsula but also in East Asia. He proposed to North Korea that the highest authorities of the divided halves exchange visits to discuss all questions related to national unification.

This overture is realistic as well as historic in view of the nature of the issue facing the two sides, and of the results of the short-lived previous talks tried between them through a few different channels. Dialogue between the South and North remains an essential means to resolve their differences and pave the way for unification in the long run. It is imperative, therefore, that Seoul and Pyongyang resume talks with no strings attached, to seek removal of the prolonged tension and build a road to peaceful unification.

The president in his eager pursuit for talks with North Korea pushed his overtures further ahead five months later by asking Pyongyang to decide on a date, place and topics for the proposed tete-a-tete. In effect, such encounters at the summit level proved quite productive in tapering mutual confrontation and ushering in rapport in other troubled areas of the world: the present relationship between East and West Germany and between Egypt and Israel testifies to the merits of such highest-level talks.

Of course, North Korea keeps producing reasons -- subterfuges, rather -- of one kind or another in turning its back on President Chon's proposal. The bottom line, however, is that all those excuses on the part of North Korea are nothing but a poor disguise of its scheme to achieve unification on its terms instead of using the fair peaceful means proposed by President Chon. The so-called confederation plan introduced by Kim Il-song reveals its unpracticability by calling for a congress of thousands of delegates to discuss the question of unification.

What lifts the last veil from the North Korean force-leaning unification plan is Pyongyang's refusal to talk with the Seoul government headed by President Chon. With a number of twists and turns made in reasoning, North Korea insists that the present government in the South should be replaced by one representing a "people's democracy" -- one that would go along with Pyongyang's "revolutionary" scheme on the South. This is sheer nonsense.

Pyongyang will do well to note that the proposed dialogue between the top leaders of the South and North of Korea is winning increasing support in the international community of nations, particularly in the Third World consisting of many nonaligned countries. This trend underlines the rising desire on the part of those nations to see the Korean problem, one of the few potential dangers in the world today, settled in peace through direct talks at the highest level between the two divided parties.

To all appearances, North Korea is likely to gain little by refusing to face the realities as they are. The continuous sealing of its borders to outsiders, let alone the South Koreans, will only deepen North Korea's isolation, which in turn will only aggravate its economic difficulties.

Our persistence with the dialogue call to the North, of course, is to outlast Pyongyang's negative posture. What is more, we should try harder, with broader friendly understanding and backup, to bring North Korea to the conference table.

MINISTERS MEET ON ECONOMY-REVITALIZING POLICIES

[Text] Deputy Prime Minister Kim Chun-song yesterday ruled out the possibility of resorting to any artificial changes in interest rates or foreign exchange rates to support the sagging economy, saying that the government now has a "very narrow" choice of policy means.

But still, the possibility is open that the governor of the Bank of Korea may soon slash bank interest rates from the present 17 percent per annum on the lending base.

Fresh from an economic ministers' meeting, the deputy prime minister told newsmen that no major program for stimulating construction market as part of an economic revitalization package is under consideration, either.

"The housing policy," Kim, who is also minister of economic planning, clarified, "should definitely be based on how to benefit the low-income public and enhance the nation's welfare standards."

The three-hour consultative meeting was also attended by Minister of Finance No Ung-pae, Minister of Commerce and Industry So Sok-chun, Minister of Construction Kim Chong-ho and other economic members of the Cabinet. Following the Cabinet reshuffle early last week, which affected four economic posts including the minister of economic planning, the related ministers have been engaged in working out revitalization programs.

But the deputy prime minister's remarks yesterday could be interpreted as a significant blow to the high expectation. Indicating that the economic package the government works on will be presented late this week, Kim theorized that a business recovery must come of itself and that the government's role is to only lead the economy in that direction.

The newly placed deputy prime minister, denying that any concrete decision on what the government can do under the current situation has been made yet, also said economic ministers will have to meet several more times before reaching a conclusion.

He sounded somewhat pessimistic when he noted the difficulty the government is having putting together policy alternatives while leaving the budget, money supply and inflation target intact.

The point-by-point replies Kim made to questions from reporters are:

Construction: The government will not make any major changes to the present capital gains taxes. (Recent news reports had that the temporary cut in the tax rates, now in force, might be extended to 1987, instead of expiring at the end of September this year. The prohibitive tax was also reported to be relaxed to make it less expensive for one family to own two houses.) Nothing should outweigh the consideration for the general public and social welfare in formulating a housing policy. In this regard, only minor programs, such as the lowering of capital acquisition taxes and the financial support for businesses helping their employees buy homes, are within the government's reach. Such a heated speculation on real estate as in the past is utterly unthinkable."

Interest rates: As has been reiterated, the government will allow the rates to move flexibly. In this connection, the governor of the Bank of Korea will assume responsibility for the rate operations. The institutional interest rates should be left to the hands of the market mechanism rather than being used as a policy tool. As things are now, commodity prices appear headed for further stabilization in the first half of the year and the government cannot afford to disturb hard-earned price stability.

PARTY HEADS URGE EFFORTS FOR STABLE ECONOMY

SK120100 Seoul YONHAP in English 0042 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan 12 (YONHAP) -- Representatives of Korea's three major political parties agreed Monday to make concerted effort to bring the country out of the current economic recession and to run the National Assembly smoothly.

The representatives -- Chairman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party Yi Chae-hyong, President of the Democratic Korea Party Yu Chi-song, and President of the Korea National Party Kim Chong-chol -- reached the agreement when they met to discuss the political situation, following the Jan 3 Cabinet reshuffle.

Stressing that the pulling of the country out of its present economic doldrums should be given a top priority, the three also decided to urge the government to "show the will to overcome economic difficulty."

Emerging from the meeting held at the Chosen Hotel in downtown Seoul, Yi said that in this connection, the three parties would call on the government to do its utmost to economize on the budget.

GOVERNMENT PLANS TO REDUCE CRUDE OIL IMPORTS

SK110134 Seoul YONHAP in English 0112 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan 11 (YONHAP) -- The Korean Government, in a revision of its energy supply and demand policy for the next five years, is likely to substantially reduce its imports of crude oil.

Energy-Resources Minister Yi Son-ki told his ministry officials over the weekend to amend the energy requirements, earmarked under the Fifth Five-Year Economic and Social Plan, in such a way as to curb annual crude imports to below 200 million barrels by 1986.

Noting that Korea spent nearly seven billion U.S. dollars for the purchase of crude and oil derivatives last year, Yi said that oil bills costing more than six billion dollars could impose a hefty burden on the country's economy.

To help reduce oil consumption, he went on, further plans would have to be undertaken to make the state-run Korea Electric Co, the nation's main fuel consumer, less dependent on oil in developing its power resources in the future.

Under this directive, the Energy-Resources Ministry is to lower the original oil import goal for 1982, the first year of the five-year plan, set at 222 million barrels, to 189 million barrels, a decrease of 33 million barrels.

The original plan calls for the importation of 233 million barrels of crude in 1983, 236 million barrels in 1984, 238 million barrels in 1985, and 253 million barrels in 1986, on the assumption that the annual oil consumption would increase by 3.3 percent, on the average.

Oil imports totaled 185.5 million barrels in 1979, but since then, they have showed a decreasing trend, registering 182.9 million barrels in 1980, and 182 million barrels in 1981.

ICAO HEAD MEETS OFFICIALS ON TOKYO-BEIJING RUN

SK130204 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 13 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] Representatives of the International Civil Aviation Organization [ICAO] had a series of consultations with senior government officials yesterday on flight routes of the Japanese and mainland Chinese civilian airliners through Korean airspace.

Dr. Assad Kotaite, Lebanese president of the ICAO Council, accompanied by P.M. Peralta, representative of the ICAO Far East office, had talks with Transportation Minister Yun Che-chung for one and a half hour.

The Yun-Kotaite meeting was followed by working-level talks at the Foreign Ministry and discussions between Vice Foreign Minister Kim Tong-hwi and Kotaite.

Later in the day, Kotaite paid a courtesy call on President Chon Tu-hwan at Chongwadae. President Chon conferred the Order of Diplomatic Service Merit, the Kwanghwa Medal, on the ICAO president.

According to official sources, the government reaffirmed its basic position that it was not opposed to the opening of flight routes through the nation's airspace for Chinese civil aircraft to and from Beijing, Shanghai and other major cities in China.

The government expressed willingness to enter into discussion with the Chinese authorities regarding flights by the Civil Aviation Authority of China (CAAC) through the airspace of Korea, the sources disclosed.

The attitude of the government was based on its open-door foreign policy and the principles of the ICAO, the sources explained.

Kotaite was said to have explained in separate meetings with government officials the results of his visits to Pyongyang and Beijing last year to sound out the possibility of opening flight routes for civil Chinese and Japanese aircraft over the Korean Peninsula.

The ICAO has proposed a Tokyo-Seoul-Beijing route for Japan Air Lines (JAL) and a Beijing-Pyongyang-Tokyo route for CAAC, calling for an unofficial meeting of the four parties involved in March 1980. [as published]

But North Korea rejected the ICAO call for a quadripartite conference, claiming that it would perpetuate the division of the Korean Peninsula.

The ICAO is now playing a go-between role in establishing flight routes over Korea, as Seoul has no diplomatic ties with Beijing and Tokyo has none with Pyongyang, to help JAL and CAAC cut their flight time.

The talks took place in a friendly and cordial atmosphere.

FURTHER MATERIALS ON NATIONAL DAY CELEBRATION

Defense Ministry Meeting

BK100818 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Text] Together with all the people, our revolutionary armed forces throughout the country held solemn celebrations to mark the third anniversary of the National Independence Day, the day when our Kampuchean people were saved from the pits of death and began to see the glimmer of happiness. In particular, in Phnom Penh the National Defense Ministry organized a solemn meeting on the afternoon of 7 January to welcome the historic special day on which our revolutionary army and people of Kampuchea defeated the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique -- the most subservient lackey of the Beijing expansionists. Attending in the Presidium of this ceremony were Comrade Soy Keo, member of the KPRP Central Committee, vice minister of national defense and chief of the General Staff; Comrade Meas Kroch, chief of the General Political Department; and Comrade Di Phin, chief of the General Logistics Department; as well as several cadres and section chiefs of all offices and departments under the National Defense Ministry. Also present were several comrade Vietnamese experts.

Addressing the meeting, Comrade Meas Kroch, on behalf of the National Defense Ministry described in detail the immense successes of our revolution in all fields, including the military and political fields, during the past 3 years, both at home and in the international arena and in the economic, cultural and social sectors.

Regarding the military field, the comrade said: The armed forces have been built, consolidated and expanded both in size and quality. Youths throughout the country have enthusiastically volunteered to serve in the army. The three categories of forces -- regular, regional and local guerrilla forces -- have been trained in combat tactics and political matters and have achieved successes step by step. Many units have produced good results in studying combat tactics and techniques and in maintaining and preserving their weapons and helping the people in production. A number of military units took part in combat in various border provinces and obtained most encouraging results.

The comrade went on to talk about the factors that led to the historic victory of 7 January, when our KPRAF defeated the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang. He said this was possible thanks to the correct leadership of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense; to the fact that the people of all strata have a tradition of solidarity, patriotism and courageous struggle to overcome all tests and trials; and to the disinterested support and assistance of the friendly peoples and countries near and far throughout the world, particularly to the sacrifices in flesh and blood made by the heroic VPA and the generous and sincere moral and material aid of the peoples of the Soviet Union, Laos and other fraternal socialist countries.

The comrade stressed: [begin recording] During the past 3 years, through their own efforts in study as well as in actual practice, the Kampuchean Revolutionary Armed Forces throughout the country scored good successes in a number of tasks, including the building of forces and combat ability in defense of the fatherland.

In order to fulfill these great tasks, we must heighten our sense of responsibility and carry out our work well individually and in each section. We must firmly grasp the resolutions of the fourth party congress. At the same time we must go deep among the masses in order to grasp the situation and understand the wishes and aspirations of all cadres and combatants at the front so as to alleviate the burden of the National Defense Ministry in achieving success in all types of works.

Thanks to their enthusiasm and confidence in victory in all fields during the past 3 years and their firm grasp of the two major questions about patriotism and internationalist solidarity, our combatants have great confidence. All cadres and combatants of the National Defense Ministry pledge to develop their victories in order to lead our country toward progress and prosperity. [end recording]

This meeting ended in a joyous atmosphere of optimism in the victory and pride in the efforts to fulfill new tasks in the new year.

Kampot Provincial Meeting

BK110406 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] A grand meeting to mark the third anniversary of the 7 January National Day was held at the Kampot Provincial Center at 0600 on 7 January 1982 under the sponsorship of the Kampot Provincial People's Revolutionary Committee. Present in the Presidium of this meeting were Comrade Sim Ka, member of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Committee To Control State Affairs; Comrade Nu Beng, vice chairman of the PRK National Assembly; Superior Bonze Tep Vong, vice chairman of the PRK National Assembly and vice chairman of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defence [KUFNCD] National Council; and Comrade Som Chen, vice chairman of the provincial party affairs control committee and chairman of the provincial people's revolutionary committee. Also attending the meeting were over 10,000 cadres, personnel, workers, peasants, students and combatants.

Following the flag ceremony and memorial service, Comrade Som Chen announced the opening of the meeting. Subsequently, Comrade (Uk Savath), member of the provincial party affairs control committee and chief of the provincial information, press and culture service, spoke on Kampot Province's achievement and development during the past year in the fields of politics, military, economy, social affairs, public health and culture.

On the same occasion, Comrade Sim Ka, member of the KPRP Central Committee, chairman of the Committee To Control State Affairs and chairman of the delegation of the party Central Committee, delivered a speech, warmly greeting the attendees and highly appraising the development in all fields made by Kampot Province during the past 3 years. The comrade stressed: The 7 January victory was the victory of the national and international solidarity that the Kampuchean people engraved in their national history. We have passed through the dark era of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime. The revolution of our PRK is now 3 years old. We have faced all kinds of difficulties because the enemy has destroyed nearly all the social establishments of our nation. But, despite these difficulties, we struggled arduously and braved all obstacles until we achieved many victories both inside and outside the country. We could achieve all this because our KPRP has a correct and wise leading line in accordance with genuine Marxism-Leninism and because we have a firm internal unity and spirit of patriotism, firm will to fulfill all tasks for national construction and defense and the firm international solidarity with the world's socialist community, particularly with Vietnam and the Soviet Union -- the firm support of our revolution.

A representative of the cadres, personnel, workers, peasants and male and female combatants of Kampot Province pledged to make every effort to successfully fulfill the revolutionary tasks in 1982.

The meeting ended at 1130 in an enthusiastic atmosphere.

Phnom Penh Meeting

BK08C947 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Excerpts] The Phnom Penh Municipal People's Revolutionary Committee held a grand meeting at the National Sports Stadium at 0730 on 8 January to mark the third anniversary of the glorious 7 January Independence Day. Present in the Presidium of this meeting were, among others: Comrade Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee, chairman of the National Assembly and chairman of the National Council of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD]; Comrade Mat Ly, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the National Assembly and vice minister of agriculture; Comrade Khang Sarin, member of the KPRP Central Committee and minister of the interior; Comrade Lim Nai, member of the KPRP Central Committee and secretary of the Phnom Penh Municipal Party Affairs Control Committee; Comrade Chan Ven, secretary general of the Council of State and vice chairman of the front National Council; and many other comrade ministers and leaders of the capital, Phnom Penh.

Attending the meeting were the comrade ministers, vice ministers, cadres, personnel and workers from various central ministries and departments; a large number of the people of Phnom Penh, from all walks of life; and diplomatic corps members of various friendly countries designated to the PRK.

After Comrade Lim Nai spoke on the achievements realized by the people in Phnom Penh and on our Phnom Penh people's elation at the third anniversary of the 7 January Independence Day, Comrade Chea Sim, chairman of the National Assembly and of the front's National Council, made a speech highly praising our people of all strata in Phnom Penh for their valiant struggle in the defense and construction of the capital, Phnom Penh, to make it prosperous and worthy of being the heart of the PRK. [Speeches by Lim Nai and Chea Sim follow below.]

After that a representative of the people in Phnom Penh took the floor and pledged to constantly strengthen our revolutionary views and stand, to maintain revolutionary vigilance and to participate actively in all revolutionary movements.

The meeting ended at 0900 in a joyful atmosphere permeated with sentiments of gratitude toward the party and the front. Our station will present more details of this meeting to the compatriots and listeners in our third broadcast this evening.

Lim Nai Speech

BK091018 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Speech by Lim Nai, secretary of the Phnom Penh Municipal Party Committee, at an 8 January meeting organized at the National Sports Stadium by the Phnom Penh Municipal People's Revolutionary Committee to mark the third anniversary of the 7 January victory -- recorded]

[Text] The date of 7 January 1979 has been inscribed in the glorious annals of the Kampuchean people as the day on which we were all freed from a most savage massacre perpetrated by the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime. It is a day that clearly marks the rebirth of our Kampuchean people. Throughout the country our people are expressing their satisfaction and elation on this occasion. In particular, the people of Phnom Penh are attending this meeting en masse to hail the third anniversary of the great 7 January victory, which liberated the Kampuchean fatherland and people from the danger of genocide posed by the traitorous Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique -- the lackeys of the Beijing expansionists -- and enabled them to consolidate and defend their living conditions and achieve progress in all fields.

In Phnom Penh in particular, many sectors -- including farm production, handicrafts, industry, enterprises, communications and state establishments -- have developed rapidly, thereby successfully meeting the needs of the people down to the grassroots level. Despite the serious natural calamities which occurred during the last rainy season, the farm production sector of the capital was able to fulfill its plan norms by 100 percent. The educational sector has also met the needs of our people. At present, there are more than 60,000 students in various schools. Teachers graduated from [words indistinct] faculties, institutes of technology and engineering schools have also enrolled students for study [words indistinct]. Hospitals [words indistinct] hygienic and preventive programs were most successful. They effectively ensured good health for our people.

The cultural field has been revived. The mass cultural movement has grown by leaps and bounds. Many artistic troupes and mobile cinematographic teams have enthusiastically taken part in promoting culture, thereby futher improving the moral and intellectual conditions of the masses. They can greatly encourage the people to work vigorously to overcome all obstacles in the struggle against our enemies and can powerfully promote productive labor.

In the military field, the Phnom Penh Municipal People's Revolutionary Armed Forces have been steadily strengthened and developed both in size and quality. They have most commendably and effectively wiped out the enemy remnants inside the country and on the battlefields along the Kampuchean-Thai border. Political security and social order in general have been firmly maintained. We have crushed several illegal organizations. Many leaders of these organizations and various spy ring members have been arrested and sent before the municipal people's revolutionary court for trial. [Words indistinct] their armed operations have been aborted before they could begin. Therefore, almost daily, through the [word indistinct] campaign under the direct guidance of the municipal party committee, many misled persons have deserted the enemy ranks and surrendered themselves to the authorities.

All these victories have been possible thanks to the clear-sighted leadership of the KPRP and the correct political program of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD], which has rallied all the forces of union among all the people. They have also been possible thanks to the sincere support and assistance of our brothers and friends in the world, particularly friendly Vietnam.

On this occasion, on behalf of the entire population of Phnom Penh, I would like to express our most profound gratitude, through the comrade Vietnamese experts, to the fraternal Vietnamese party, government, people and heroic army. I express our most profound elation on the third anniversary of the great 7 January victory, which marks another step toward a new victory in the tasks of firmly defending our national independence and advancing the fatherland step by step to socialism.

Regarding these immense and noble tasks, the people of Phnom Penh have pledged to hold aloft the banner of independence, sovereignty and proletarian international solidarity based on a spirit of resolute determination to fight and win and vigorously and continuously attack in order to achieve more and greater victories.

At the same time, I would like to appeal to all the fraternal people of Phnom Penh, who have an excellent tradition of solidarity, to spare no effort to preserve these bonds of solidarity. All cadres, employees, workers, peasants, intellectuals, Buddhist monks and all ethnic minorities should heighten their revolutionary vigilance at all times and struggle most persistently and enthusiastically to improve the national economy, consolidate the local powers and protect our security, rights and freedom in order to fulfill the line and political program prescribed by the party and front. You must unite as a single body around the KPRP and KUFNCD, carry out all revolutionary tasks and contribute to the building of our beautiful fatherland [words indistinct] prosperity and glory. You must uphold our independence and sovereignty; remain firm and resolute in carrying out your work, duty and tasks; make every effort to erase the ugly scars left behind by the traitorous Pol Pot-Ieng Sary Regime; and compete with each other in making our capital city more beautiful.

Chea Sim Speech

BK091150 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Speech by Chea Sim, chairman of the National Assembly and of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] National Council, at an 8 January meeting organized at the National Sports Stadium by the Phnom Penh Municipal People's Revolutionary Committee to mark the 7 January victory anniversary — recorded]

[Text] The day 7 January is a most glorious event [words indistinct] our people were reborn [words indistinct] the entire Kampuchean society has undergone a complete change from a dark, ignorant society to a brilliant society [words indistinct]. In particular, the capital city of Phnom Penh, which under the traitorous Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime was a stinking deserted city and as quiet as a graveyard, is now beautiful and blossoming, worthy of being the capital city, the heart of our PRK.

Today, the people of Phnom Penh, like those in the rest of the country, are extremely happy to organize a show of force to mark the third anniversary of the 7 January National Independence Day. This shows that the political situation and prestige of the PRK — the gains of our struggle — are advancing inexorably, firmly and steadily. No reactionary force can reverse this situation.

This most solemn celebration constitutes a stinging blow to the enemies of all stripes who attempt to sabotage the Kampuchean revolution, causing them to collapse and reel backward by another important step. [Words indistinct] I am firmly confident that despite all the efforts made by the enemies to use various maneuvers, they can in no way oppose the force of patriotic conscience, the force of resolute will and the force of union of our people. Our Kampuchean revolution will always triumph.

All of us are extremely proud to see that our struggle has achieved most encouraging results in conformity with our long desire to live in a pure and just society — which is at present in our hands. We firmly grasp the destiny of our nation, and we have the right and freedom to live with dignity. Such are the precious results, the precious fruits, of 7 January.

For this reason, 7 January 1979 was inscribed in the history of our nation as the final day of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime — the most savage murderous regime ever known by mankind [words indistinct] the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists, whose ambition is to dominate and occupy Kampuchea as a springboard to carry out aggression against Indochina and to create insecurity and destabilization in other countries of Southeast Asia. The day 7 January [words indistinct] of the revolutionary movement in the three countries of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos to become more powerful, firm and unshakeable and a testing stone proving the strength of solidarity and internationalism of a nation with a long-standing tradition of struggle and undauntedness and endowed with a glorious, advanced culture and civilization.

On this most solemn occasion, I would like to express profound thanks to the heroic Vietnamese people and army for cooperating with us in toppling the antinational, antipopular genocidal regime and seizing independence for our beloved Kampuchean fatherland on 7 January. I thank the fraternal socialist countries of the world, with the Soviet Union as the strong bastion, and the national liberation movements and progressive countries in the world for helping the Kampuchean revolution to stand firm and grow and develop steadily.

In order to commemorate this most victorious 7 January day I appeal to all compatriots, particularly the people of Phnom Penh, to carry out all plans of our revolution [words indistinct] of the fourth party congress, the resolutions of the third national front congress, and to disseminate knowledge [words indistinct] in order to serve the cause of our nation and people, with the aim of advancing to prosperous socialism.

USSR Embassy Meeting

BK100638 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0335 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 10 Jan (SPK) -- The Soviet Embassy and Cultural Center in Phnom Penh held a solemn meeting on Friday, 8 January, in honor of the third anniversary of Kampuchea's liberation.

Yos Por, secretary general of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense and chairman of the Kampuchea-USSR Friendship Association, attended the meeting. Also present were Sviridov and Aleksandr Bursov, Soviet Embassy counselor and first secretary of the USSR Embassy, respectively.

Aleksandr Bursov expressed his conviction that the position and prestige of the PRK will always be heightened in the international arena even though the imperialists and expansionists are seeking to harm the Kampuchean revolution.

Heng Samrin Reception

BK090744 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0407 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 9 Jan (SPK) -- On the occasion of the third anniversary of the country's liberation, Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State, hosted a solemn reception in Phnom Penh on Friday [8 January] evening.

Present on that occasion were Chea Sim, member of the Political Bureau of the KPRP Central Committee, chairman of the National Assembly and chairman of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD]; Chan Si, member of the Political Bureau of the KPRP Central Committee, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of defense; Hun Sen, member of the Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs; Chea Soth, member of the Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning; and many ministers and vice ministers. Members of the diplomatic corps accredited to Phnom Penh accepted the invitation, and representatives of international organizations in Phnom Penh were present on that occasion.

In his speech, Chairman Heng Samrin spoke of the encouraging successes achieved in all fields by the Kampuchean people during the past 3 years under the just leadership of the KPRP and the front and due to the consistent aid of the parties, governments and peoples of Vietnam, Laos, the USSR, the fraternal socialist countries, international organizations and progressive movements in the world.

Chairman Heng Samrin continued: The success that we have achieved during these past years further heightens the personality and the prestige of the Kampuchean revolution on the international arena and undermines the enemies' forces.

We express our deep gratitude to the party, the Vietnamese Government, people, army and experts for their devoted assistance -- moral and material -- as well as their sacrifices for the Kampuchean revolution. We take the liberty of expressing our deep gratitude to the parties, governments and peoples of the USSR and other fraternal socialist countries who granted assistance and support to the revolutionary cause of the Kampuchean people, and our thanks to all international humanitarian organizations who sent humanitarian assistance to our people.

AFP: SIHANOUK TO COUNT ON PRC COALITION SUPPORT

GM071317 Hong Kong AFP in English 1251 GMT 7 Jan 82

[By Charles-Antoine de Mercint]

[Text] Beijing, 7 Jan (AFP) -- Former Cambodian head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk is ready to lead a coalition of Cambodian anti-Vietnamese groups and apparently feels that he can count on Chinese support. He told AFP that he had now renounced efforts to seek a dialogue with Hanoi for a political settlement in Cambodia, where Vietnamese troops toppled the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge regime and set up a pro-Vietnamese government three years ago.

"I am grateful to Vietnam for having liberated the Cambodians from the Khmer Rouge, but Hanoi has given me no hope that it will ever agree to negotiate with me," he said, after beginning a round of talks on Cambodia with Chinese leaders here.

"Since I no longer plan to have a dialogue with Hanoi, something that China has always opposed, I think that the Chinese and I are bound to see eye to eye," he added.

Prince Sihanouk's movement is currently pursuing difficult negotiations with two other Cambodian resistance groups — the Khmer Rouge government and followers of former Premier Son Sann — toward formation of a coalition government.

Commenting on his meeting yesterday with Vice Premier Ji Pengfei and Vice Foreign Minister Han Nianlong, Prince Sihanouk said that the two had expressed Beijing's desire to see him play a "more important role" and had praised his "patriotic activities" on behalf of the Cambodian people. He stressed that should he lead an anti-Vietnamese coalition, he could negotiate with Beijing on Chinese military assistance to his rather small group of followers.

He noted, however, that the Chinese agreement in principle to supply a 3,000-man "Sihanoukist" army with military aid — which he had announced last (7May) — had not materialized.

"But if I become president of the Presidium of Democratic Kampuchea (the Khmer Rouge administration which is still recognized by the United Nations), I am sure that China will then supply me with sufficient aid," he said. He added that if that happened, he would set up his headquarters along the Thai-Cambodian border. He said he would also seek food and medical aid from the United States.

He indicated that the Association of Southeast Asian countries (ASEAN: Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines) — had impressed upon him that he was now "ASEAN's pointsman against Vietnam."

While reaffirming that he was prepared to join an anti-Vietnamese coalition, the prince lashed out at the Khmer Rouge, accusing them of having turned Cambodia into a "huge Auschwitz" when they were in power in Phnom Penh from 1975 to 1979.

He described as a "ploy" aimed at "hoodwinking world opinion" the recent dissolution of the Khmer Rouge Communist Party. He said a Khmer Rouge return to power would mean a new "regime of terror, dictatorship, oppression, torture and genocide" for Cambodia.

He added that he hoped to meet Chinese strongman Deng Xiaoping and Premier Zhao Ziyang, as well as with Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan if the later came to Beijing.

Prince Sihanouk, who has just returned from a seven-month stay in France, clearly indicated that Paris had prodded him to reach an accomodation with Vietnam. "But France will not have the means to persuade the Vietnamese to accept such a settlement, and I see no hope of Vietnam ever extending an olive branch to me," he said in conclusion.

SITTHI REJECTS SRV ALLEGATION ON USE OF AIRBASE

BK130807 Bangkok MATICHON in Thai 9 Jan 82 pp 1, 12

[Excerpt] At the reception opening the Foreign Ministry Information Office on 8 January, the foreign minister rejected Vietnam's allegation that Thailand is trying to revive U.S. bases in Thailand. The allegation stated that P-3 aircraft of the U.S. Navy made refueling stops at the Utaphao airbase 10 days ago.

Foreign Minister Sitthi said that the U.S. aircraft in question merely made a refueling stop. There are no U.S. military bases in Thailand; Thailand has only allowed U.S. aircraft to stop to refuel. "Thailand has never made an issue of Vietnam's allowing foreign aircraft to refuel or allowing the establishment of foreign military bases," Sitthi said. Sitthi also reiterated to newsmen that Thailand can defend itself without the help of foreign bases on its territory.

KAMPUCHEAN STATEMENTS ON VIOLATIONS TERMED 'LIE'

[Text] Twelve equipped Thai fishing trawlers seized by Kampuchean soldiers in the past have been converted to pirate boats for robbery in the sea. The director of the Supreme Command Information Office has disclosed that the office has concrete evidence of such malpractices. An instance, he said, was last week's incident when Thai patrol boats sank an armed Kampuchean boat which was attacking a Thai fishing trawler in the vicinity of Kut Island in Thai territorial waters. The survivors of the sunken ship told Thai authorities that their ship was one of the Thai trawlers which was converted into an armed vessel.

Regarding yesterday's news broadcast by the mouthpiece of Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin regime accusing Thailand of widespread violation of its territory, including encroaching on its territorial waters during the first week of this month, he described the allegation as a lie, saying the Hanoi-backed Phnom Penh regime was merely a cheap ploy aiming to cover up its seizure of Thai trawlers. AFP: PRK CALL FOR RETURN OF BOAT REJECTED

[Text] Bangkok, 13 Jan (AFP) -- Thailand today rejected Phnom Penh's call for the return of a boat sunk off its coast on December 28 in an incident in which eight Indochinese were killed. Supreme Command spokesman Lt Gen Som Khattaphan said the boat would not be returned because it was "Thai property," a fishing vessel that had been seized on October 3, 1980.

On Phnom Penh's other call for the release of five Cambodian seamen captured following the incident, Gen Som claimed the Cambodians had said they would return only if they were given arms "to fight the Vietnamese" in their homeland.

Addressing a news conference, Gen Som condemned as "an act of piracy" the incident he said took place within four miles of Thai territorial waters.

Thai patrol boats were responding to a call for help from a Thai fishing boat that was being pursued by what he called a "pirate boat." The boat that was eventually sunk and towed to Thailand was initially registered as the Winit Nawa, one of a fleet owned by Winar Laksakunthai, who confirmed her ownership before the press. The dead included six Vietnamese and two Cambodians, Gen Som said. The Thai side escaped unscathed from the incident about eight miles off Thailand's southeasternmost province of Trat. Thailand observes a 12-mile water boundary.

The five Cambodians, aged between 17 and 25, would be tried in court on charges of piracy, Gen Som said.

Meanwhile, a Royal Thai Navy (RTN) spokesman said Vietnamese-backed Cambodian authorities had seized at least 121 Thai fishing boats over the past 3 years. In addition, Vietnam was holding 42 Thai fishermen, he said.

INDUSTRY MINISTRY CONDEMNS U.S. FOR TIN SALES

BKO80540 Bangkok POST in English 8 Jan 82 p 25

[Excerpt] The Industry Ministry yesterday took the unusual step of issuing a statement condemning the United States for breaching an agreement not to sell tin from its strategic stockpile on the world market. The ministry said it was preparing to join other ASEAN tin producers in making a collective protest against the U.S. action.

"The U.S. General Services Administration's intention in selling tin in the world market is considered to be contradictory to the assurance given previously by the United States to the International Tin Council, and to Thailand in particular, that the disposal will be confined within the domestic market and the United States has assured that no disruption of the world tin market will occur."

"In our view," the statement said, "such a move has caused market disruption and created economic and social hardship for Thailand and other tin-producing countries."

The one-page statement said the United States has not consulted with the ITC or tin-producing countries on disposal of this tin on the world market. The United States had only told the council in 1980 of a plan to dispose of tin from the strategic stockpile for domestic consumption only. It said the Industry Ministry has asked the Foreign Ministry to instruct the Royal Thai Embassy in Washington to join two other ASEAN tin producers, Malaysia and Indonesia, in conveying reaction to the U.S. Government.

The statement said the Industry Ministry believes that the U.S. Government would be aware of the adverse effects caused by depressed market prices of commodities, especially tin, which is vital to the economy of the producing countries in this region. These adverse implications for the national economy will also damage national security within the region, the statement said.

The U.S. Government is therefore urged to consider whether the benefits of the commercial proceeds derived from sales of the GSA's stockpile to the world market will outweigh the adverse consequences that Thailand and other tin-producing countries will face, the statement said.

JOINT BORDER PATROLS TO BE HELD WITH MALAYSIA

BK081245 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Text] Thai and Malaysian troops will hold joint military patrols on the border to repress the Malaysian communists who have been using Thai soil as the springboard for their operations against the Malaysians. The 3d Battalion commander has disclosed that Thai and Malaysian authorities had agreed to the proposal to patrol the road linking the checkpoints between the two countries. The Malaysian authorities have frequently closed their border checkpoints to crack down on the Communist Party of Malaya members, who stepped up their campaign against the Malaysian troops late last year.

The Malaysian security guards have been patrolling along the 700-meter stretch of the route on their soil following an increase in communist activities late last year. The other 100-meter stretch of the route is on the Thai side.

OFFICER REPORTS CPM ACTIVITIES ALONG BORDER

[Text] Betong -- The Communist Party of Malaya has been causing misunderstandings between Thai and Malaysian soldiers by firing on Malaysian troops from Thai territory, the commander of Special Task Force 53 told the POST yesterday.

Lt Col Thawatchai Pinprasoet said CPM guerrillas have often fired on Malaysian troops near a Thai armybase -- incidents which may make the Malaysians think that they are being attacked by Thai soldiers. CPM attacks have also led the Malaysian authorities to close the border at various points, causing dissatisfaction among Thai residents in this district who depend on cross-border trade, especially during the New Year period, for their livelihood, Lt Col Thawatchai said. Betong people were fearful that the border will be closed again during the coming Chinese New Year and they will lose lucrative trade opportunities, he added.

Lt Col Thawatchai said Thai and Malaysian forces have been cooperating in patrols of the border, especially where ambushes have taken place, and the Malaysian authorities have agreed to reopen the border after a recent meeting with Thai officials.

He disclosed that between December 21 and January 2, the CPM has carried out 11 attacks on Malaysian troops from Thai territory, and four Thai soldiers from Special Task Force 53 have been wounded in operations against the guerrillas.

Meanwhile, four communist guerrillas have been killed in a clash between rival factions of the CPM near the border, Thai Army sources said yesterday. The clash, which occurred about a week ago and involved more than 50 guerrillas, was the most serious in a number of recent skirmishes between the larger CPM and the breakaway CPM Marxist-Leninist faction, the sources said.

Thai security forces recovered the bodies of four guerrillas, one a woman, all belonging to the CPM-ML, following the clash at Chan Tai village on the border of Narathiwat and Yala Provinces, about 15 km (10 miles) from the Malaysian border. The sources said the clashes between the two groups, who have an officially estimated 3,000 guerrillas in the south Thai jungle, have arisen because the CPM-ML has been trying to extend its influence in border areas traditionally the preserve of the CPM.

The sources said, quoting intelligence reports, that the CPM-ML has been spreading propaganda and distributing leaflets in these areas.

The CPM has been fighting an underground war in south Thailand for more than 20 years following the crushing of a communist insurgency in Malaysia during the 1948-60 emergency.

POST: NEW SEPARATIST GROUP FORMED IN SOUTH

BK120155 Bangkok POST in English 12 Jan 82 p 3

[Text] Separatist bandits have formed a new group to fight the government, a source at the Special Branch Police Division told the POST yesterday.

He said the new group, which was separated from the Barisan Revolutionary National (BRN) was led by Amin Tomina. However, the source said the group, calling itself "Partip," aims to secede the Thai territory of Pattani, Yala, Narathiwat, and Satun Provinces. He added the Pho-To-Tho (Civilian-Police-Military) 43 is now keeping watch on the movement of this new group.

END OF SERIES ON SPRATLYS, PARACELS SOVEREIGNTY

OW121636 Hanoi VNA in English 1542 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 12 — Following is the sixth and last in a series of articles on the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes published recently by the Hanoi monthly VIETNAM COURIER:

Summary Chronology

17th century: In his Toan Tap Thien Nam Tu Chi Lo Do Thu (Complete Atlas of the Southern Country, Vol 1), Do Ba, a Vietnamese geographer, mentioned the Hoang Sa, which he designated Bai Cat Vang (Yellow Sand Bank). He noted that the Nguyen lords sent 18 junks each year there.

1701: A Western missionary who travelled from France to China on board the Amphitrite, mentioned in a letter that the Hoang Sa belonged to the Kingdom of Annam (now Vietnam).

1776: Le Quy Don, a Vietnamese encyclopedist, related in his Phu Bien Tap Luc (miscellaneous records on the government of the frontiers) that the Nguyen lords organised the Hoang Sa and Bac Hai workgangs to exploit the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes and other islands.

1816: Emperor Gia Long sent naval units and the Hoang Sa workgang to measure the roads on Hoang Sa Islands.

1820: Jean Baptiste Chaigneau, a French adviser to the Gia Long court, wrote in his "Memoirs of Cochinchina" that Emperor Gia Long took possession of the Hoang Sa Archipelago in 1816.

1833: Emperor Minh Mang ordered the Ministry of Public Works to prepare vessels to be sent in the following year to the Hoang Sa Archipelago to build a temple and a stele and to plant trees on the islands.

1835: Pham Van Nguyen, an officer in the navy, carried materials to Hoang Sa to build a temple and a stele there.

1836: Pham Huu Nhat, a captain in the navy, inspected the archipelago and planted a land mark there.

1838: Jean Louis Taberd, apostolic vicar of Cochinchina, published his Vietnamese-Latin dictionary. On his "map of the Annam Empire" included in the dictionary, there is a part of the Hoang Sa Archipelago with its Vietnamese name of Cat Vang (Yellow Sand) and its international name of Paracels.

1849: In his study "Geography of the Cochinchinese Empire," Gutzlaff related that the government of Annam kept its patrol boats at the Hoang Sa, levied taxes on foreign fishermen and protected local fishermen.

1899: Paul Doumer, governor general of Indochina, proposed that the French Government build a lighthouse on the Hoang Sa Island (Pattle) to assist navigation in the neighbourhood.

1910: The Dai Nam Nhat Thong Chi (Monograph of Unified Dai Nam), an official geographical book compiled from 1865 to 1910, said that the Hoang Sa Islands are part of Vietnamese territory.

1925: Rejecting Chinese claim, Than Trong Hue, war minister of the Hue court, issued a declaration affirming Vietnamese sovereignty on the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

1927: A. Krempf, director of the Indochina Oceanographic Institute, made public his report on his investigaion mission conducted on the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

1933: In a communique published in the official journal of the French Republic, the French foreign minister announced the occupation of the Truong Sa Archipelago (July 1933). Krautheimer, governor of Cochinchina, by his decree of December 21, 1933, integrated the Truong Sa Islands into the province of Ba Ria. He ordered the setting up on the Ba Binh (Itu Aba) Island of a meteorological station and a radio station. The station in the Cochinchinese group bore the international index of 48919 — Ituaba (coordinates: 10°23' latitude North, and 114°21' longitude East).

1938: By his ordinance of March 30, 1938, Emperor Bao Dai detached the Hoang Sa Archipelago from the province of Nam Ngai and integrated it into the province of Thua Thien. By his decree of June 15, 1938, Jules Brevie, governor general of Indochina, made Hoang Sa Archipelago an administrative unit belonging to Thua Thien Province. A stele formalising Vietnamese sovereignty, a light-house, a radio station and a meteorological station were built on the Hoang Sa Island (Pattle). The meteorological station bore the international index of 48860 (coordinates: 16°33' latitude North, and 111°37' longitude East).

1939: By his decree of May 5, 1939, Governor General Jules Brevie divided the Hoang Sa Archipelago into two administrative units.

1946: The French sent their ship Savorgnan de Brazza to reoccupy Hoang Sa Archipelago. (The Japanese had seized the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes during World War II).

1951: At the San Francisco conference, Tran Van Huu, prime minister of the Bao Dai Government, made a declaration affirming Vietnamese sovereignty over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes without protest from any of the representatives of the participating countries.

1956: The Saigon administration sent a company of marines to occupy the Hoang Sa Archipelago, relieving the French forces which were withdrawing from Indochina. Later it forred a mission charged with carrying out surveys on the archipelago and making meteorological observations. During the same year, it sent war vessels to patrol the Hoang Sa Archipelago and integrated the Truong Sa Archipelago into the province of Phuoc Tuy.

1961: By virtue of a decision of the Saigon administration (July 13, 1961) the Hoang Sa Archipelago which had now become Dinh Hai commune, was integrated into the district of Hoa Vang, Quang Nam Province. A stele was erected on the Truong Sa Archipelago to mark Vietnamese sovereignty.

1973: By a decision of the Saigon administration (September 6, 1973) the Truong Sa Archipelago became part of Phuoc Hai commune, Dat Do District, Phuoc Tuy Province.

1974: On January 12, 1974, the spokesman for the Foreign Ministry of the Saigon administration protested against a declaration of the Government of the People's Republic of China which claimed that the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes are part of the Chinese territory.

January 19, 1974: Chinese troops occupied Hoang Sa Archipelago.

January 20, 1974: In a cable to the president of the U.N. Security Council, the foreign minister of the Saigon administration demanded the convening of an urgent meeting of the council to discuss this act of aggression. For a number of reasons this meeting did not take place.

January 20, 1974: The provisional revolutionary government of the Republic of South Vietnam expounded its view on this question as follows: Sovereignty and territorial integrity are sacred questions for any nation. Often there exist between neighbouring countries differences left by history, concerning the national frontiers and territory. These differences are sometimes quite complex and require profound study.

The concerned countries should examine these questions in the spirit of equality, mutual respect, friendship and good neighbourhood and resolve them through negotiations.

May 1975: The Armed Forces of the Republic of South Vietnam liberated Truong Sa Islands.

On September 24, 1975, during a talk with a Vietnamese party and government delegation on a visit to China, Chinese Vice-Premier Deng Xiaoping recognized that outstanding problems remained between the two countries concerning the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, and declared that the two parties should hold talks to resolve the problem.

1978: In a declaration made public on December 30, 1978, the spokesman of the Foreign Ministry of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam rejected the allegations made in the declaration of December 29, 1978, of his Chinese counterpart concerning the Truong Sa Archipelago. He reaffirmed Vietnamese sovereignty over the two archipelagoes.

August 7, 1979: The ministry for Foreign Affairs of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam issued a statement rejecting the tendentious allegations of the Chinese side concerning some documents published by the Vietnamese side with regard to the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes.

It also published a white book reaffirming Vietnamese sovereingty over these two archipelagoes.

September 28, 1979: In a note to the Foreign Ministry of the Republic of the Philippines, the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry reaffirms Vietnamese sovereignty over the entirety of the islands in the Truong Sa Archipelago. Protesting against decree No 1596 of the Philippine Government which claimed sovereignty over the major part of the Truong Sa Islands, which it called the "Kalaysan group of islands," the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry declared that Vietnam was prepared to resolve all outstanding questions through peaceful means and in the spirit of conciliation.

1980: In a statement issued on February 8, the Foreign Ministry of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam rejected the document published by its Chinese counterpart on Xisha and Nansa Islands which it described as tendentious and without foundation. After reaffirming Vietnamese sovereignty on the two archipelagoes it declared that the Vietnamese Government and people are determined to defend their sacred territorial sovereignty.

In a note on March 10, 1980, to the Foreign Ministry of the Republic of Malaysia, the Vietnamese foreign minister affirmed Vietnam's sovereignty over the Truong Sa Archipelago and protested against the publication of a map, which included part of this archipelago in the Malaysian territory.

ENVOY TO UN DEMANDS SANCTIONS AGAINST ISRAEL

GW130749 Hanoi VNA in English 0719 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 13 — Speaking at the January 11 session of the U.N. Security Council, Vietnamese U.N. Ambassador He Van Lau condemned Israel's refusal to cancel its decision to integrate Syria's Golan Heights into Israel. He said: "With its chief responsibility for maintaining international peace and security, the Security Council must take measures to fulfil the tasks imposed by this responsibility. To elude this responsibility would not only infringe upon the council's authority and prestige, but also leave a crime unpunished and encourage the culprit to pursue its policy of aggression and expansion fraught with unforeseeable consequences to world peace and to the security of peaceful countries and peoples in the region".

Ha Van Lau pointed out that the Security Council should consider "the intolerable attitude of the Zionist regime toward its Arab neighbours and the strategic objectives of U.S. imperialism in the Middle East", and added: "The Washington government is held responsible before the Arab peoples and the world people as a whole for its complicity with and instigation and protection of the Israeli aggressors". He said: "Israel would not have acted so arrogantly in recent days if it had not been backed by the Camp David accords and the separate treaties betraying the Arab peoples' interests, and if it had not benefited from the U.S.-Israel strategic cooperation agreement". He further said that if Israel was not punished, the bad effects of the above agreements would do more harm to the territorial integrity of the Arab countries, the Palestinian people's fundamental national rights, and peace in the Middle East and the rest of the world.

Ha Van Lau reiterated Vietnam's full support for the demand of the Syrian Arab Republic that the Security Council apply necessary sanctions against Israel in furtherance of Article 41, Chapter 7, of the U.N. Charter.

300-TON GIFT OF SUGAR GIVEN TO POLISH PEOPLE

OW121946 Hanoi VNA in English 1537 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan 12 -- A token amount of sugar from a 300-ton gift sent by the Vietnamese working people to the Polish people was handed over here yesterday by Nguyen Thuyet, member of the Secretariat of the Vietnam Confederation of Trade Unions, to Jan Sliwinski, Polish ambassador in Hanoi. On this occasion Nguyen Thuyet affirmed the solidarity and support of the Vietnamese working people and trade unions for the Polish working people, who are struggling against the reactionary forces, defending the gains of socialism and overcoming present difficulties. He expressed the Vietnamese people's joy at the successes obtained by the Polish people in restoring economic and social activities in their country following the application of emergency measures.

Jan Sliwinski expressed heartfelt thanks to the Vietnamese labouring people and trade unions for their firm support to the Polish working people right from the early days of the crisis and affirmed that with the support of the Soviet Union, Vietnam and other countries in the socialist community, the Polish working class and labouring people will rapidly make the situation ever more stable.

PHAM VAN DONG INTERVIEWED BY BULGARIAN TV

AU111540 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 10 Jan 82 p 2

[Report on interview given by Pham Van Dong, Council of Ministers chairman, to the Bulgarian television -- date and place of interview not given]

[Text] Throughout its long history, Vietnam has never been as strong as it is today. Pham Van Dong, chairman of the SRV Council of Ministers, declared during an interview for Bulgarian television which was shown to our viewers last night. This is our own strength, strength stemming from the friendly solidarity among the three fraternal countries of Indochina -- Vietnam, Kampuchea, and Laos -- stemming from the solidarity and comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union, Bulgaria and the other socialist countries. This strength stems from the power of the peoples throughout the world who are supporting Vietnam.

In answer to a question about the character of the processes which are now developing in Southeast Asia and expressing the stand of his country, the SRV premier pointed out a number of facts which demonstrate the unchanged hegemonist and expansionist ambitions of China and pointed out that they are the main reason for the tension existing in the area and the main cause of the threat against peace.

Pham Van Dong stressed that another trend is now taking shape and developing in the area, a trend which is attracting an ever increasing number of supporters, namely, the trend of the struggle waged by the peoples of Southeast Asia for peace, stability and cooperation. The peoples are convinced that any conflicts whatsoever can be resolved through meetings and talks in the spirit of mutual understanding and through peaceful negotiations. If China renounces its aggressive and expansionist aspirations, the situation in the area might be stabilized.

In this interview the SRV premier dwelt on the successes achieved by his country within 6 years of peaceful life, as well as on the future prospects of the Vietnamese people. He pointed out that great efforts are being devoted to overcoming the existing difficulties -- such as poverty, backwardness and the burden inherited by the long 35 years of war, which American imperialism forced upon Vietnam. With the assistance of the Soviet Union and of the CEMA member countries, we are building socialism Pham Van Dong stated.

Comrade Pham Van Dong closed his interview by addressing cordial congratulations to the Bulgarian Communist Party [BCP] and to the entire Bulgarian people on the occasion of the Bulgarian state's 1,300th anniversary. He expressed the profound gratitude of the Vietnamese Communist Party and of all Vietnamese people for the sincere support rendered to them by the BCP and by the people of Bulgaria.

SOVIET AID IN TRAINING SCIENTISTS PRAISED

BK111548 Hanoi International Service in English 1000GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] The Soviet Union has given great and effective assistance in training Vietnamese scientists and technicians. Within the past 30 years Vietnam has sent about 19,000 people to the Soviet Union for study. Almost all of them have already graduated and have returned home to serve national construction. Among them there are about 250 students from vocational schools, 12,500 university students and more than 2,000 graduate students including 40 who won the title of doctor of science.

Vietnamese students are well trained in the Soviet Union. At present there are more than 4,000 students studying at 150 colleges in 55 cities and towns in the Soviet Union. Some 80 percent of the Vietnamese students have graduated with good marks at the last examinations and 30 percent of them got excellent marks. On the average one out of four Vietnamese graduates have passed their exams with special distinction. Many of them have won prizes at competitions for talented students held in the Soviet Union or in international competitions.

The scientific cadres and technicians trained in the Soviet Union have made considerable contributions to the development of the economy, culture, education and scientific technology in Vietnam. Many of them work alongside the Soviet experts at many important projects such as the Hoa Binh hydroelectric plant, the Pha Lai thermoelectric plant and the Bim Son cement plant.

Besides, the Soviet Union also helps Vietnam develop the university and vocational education. Thanks to the Soviet help, the Hanoi polytechnic, which was built with Soviet assistance, now has the most up-to-date equipment in Vietnam. The most popular form of cooperation between the educational services of the two countries is the pairing of colleges or universities in the Soviet Union with Vietnamese ones.

At present there are 22 such airs of Vietnam-Soviet colleges or institutes. In recent years this form of cooperation has greatly expanded. Vietnamese party leader Le Duan has said: The Soviet people have spared part of their labor to help Vietnam in the struggle for national reconstruction. For decades the Soviet people and teachers have wholeheartedly trained the Vietnamese students and technicians -- a priceless investment -- to build socialism in Vietnam.

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN REVIEWS PRODUCTION PLANS

BK0213 13 Hanoi QUAN DOI NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 9 Dec 81, pp 1, 4

[Editorial: "Build the 1982 Production Plan"]

[Text] The national defense factories and the economic-building army units are formulating their 1982 plans. Plans are the program of action for production units. They give substance to the production tasks and guidelines through a system of targets and measures to secure balances. At the same time, plans are the most important and main tool of management. By formulating and implementing plans well, we will promote the development of production significantly and directly.

Although the formulation of plans is still somewhat new to the national defense factories and units directly in charge of economic construction, some definite progress has been noted. The cadres, combatants and workers of units have actively participated in the formulation and implementation of plans, initially enabling us to tap the latent potentials and secure positive balances for the development of production. Apart from these, there are still several deficiencies in the planning task. Plan norms assigned to units are sometimes unrealistic and often too high. On the contrary, the production norms established by the grassroots-level units are too low, and their plans still reflect too much reliance on assistance from higher authorities with their suggested norms for materials and capital investments which often exceed the production requirements. As a result, plans lack a realistic and scientific basis on which to secure stable balances, thus precluding their implementation. The higher authorities have to adjust the production norms several times in the year to enable units to fulfill their plans. Even as late as November, some units still request an adjustment in their annual plans. In many units, plans are established for the mere sake of formality and have not become a real and effective tool of management.

Since 1982 is the second year of the Third 5-Year Plan, it is particularly important to qualitatively improve and implement the 1982 plan well in order to create a momentum and material conditions for implementing the 1981-85 5-Year Economic Plan. The quality of the 1982 State Plan must be manifested by the progressiveness of the system of production norms and positive and stable balances. Plan norms must first of all meet the high requirements of the national economy and, at the same time, allow the positive exploitation of latent potentials in terms of labor, land, technical facilities and capital in order to turn out more wealth every day for society. Plans should reflect the spirit of producing even more and better assets with the same or a lesser amount of materials provided by the state.

Units should survey and control the quantity and quality of all production means and facilities on hand in order to enhance the quality of the 1982 State Plan. They must revise the economic and technical norms used in formulating plans. At the same time, they must analyze and evaluate the implementation of their latest plans and draw upon their experiences in formulating their next plans. The formulation of plans must be initiated at the grassroots level through ample discussion among cadres and combatants in order to promote the sense of collective mastery and the creativity of all people in the units. The movements for technical improvements and innovations in production have developed well. The party and state have issued several new economic policies and have adopted many new organizational and managerial measures, thereby creating more factors in promoting production. In formulating the 1982 plan, we must therefore emphasize the new factors and the development and application of technical innovations to production by linking production plans to the implementation of new managerial policies and measures.

The formulation of the 1982 State Plan is one of the objectives and requirements of the emulation drive to score achievements to greet the fifth party congress. Along with accelerating the emulation drive to fulfill and overfulfill the 1981 State Plan, all cadres, combatants and workers of the factories and units in charge of economic construction must formulate the 1982 production plan well, thereby creating favorable conditions for further advancing the emulation movement for productive labor in 1982 in order to obtain even higher economic results.

TRUONG CHINH ADDRESSES WOMEN'S CONFERENCE

BK311558 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 30 Dec 81

[Report on the closing session of the conference of delegates of minority ethnic women from the northern border provinces held on 30 December in Hanoi -- portions recorded]

[Summary] In the past 2 days the conference of delegates of minority ethnic women from the northern border provinces has progressed with good results. The conference heard various statements by many individuals and collectives in the six northern border provinces. The conference also welcomed Comrades Tran Quoc Hoan, member of the Political Bureau and secretary of the party Central Committee; Tran Dong, member of the party Central Committee and vice minister of interior; and Maj Gen Dinh Van Tuy, head of the Border Defense Forces Command. On behalf of the party, the state and the army, these comrades greeted the conference and expressed their views, praising the delegates of minority ethnic women from the six northern border provinces for being typical of the movement of new women to build and defend the fatherland."

The conference ended at 1500 precisely. Afterwards, at the presidential palace, Comrade Truong Chinh, chairman of the Council of State, cordially received and addressed the delegates. He said: [begin recording] "Through the woman delegates, I, on behalf of the party Central Committee and the Council of State, convey my cordial greetings to the elders, mothers, women, youths, teenagers and children of various minority ethnic groups who are actively contributing their efforts to the cause of building socialism and defending the socialist fatherland. [applause]

"This conference was held for the purpose of promoting the movement of women of all minority ethnic groups to unite, step up production, stand combat ready, fight and support combat, maintain security and build the bases and consolidate the organization of the women's union in order to carry out satisfactorily the political tasks and positively contribute to building socialism and defending the fatherland's borders. I believe that at this conference you already discussed specific practical problems and presented them to the party and state organs. At the same time, you exchanged your experiences and selected suitable experiences for development at your localities upon your return in order to add the achievements of minority ethnic women to the entire country's book of achievements and promote the movement of new women to build and defend the fatherland. [applause]

"Present here are delegates of party and state organs from our country's six northern border provinces. I trust that you listened attentively to the views expressed at the conference so that you can practically improve your work and take better care of the life of the minority ethnic people within your given area of responsibility. [end recording]

"The chairman then called on the delegates to fulfill women's sacred function of bringing up their children. Chairman Truong Chinh said: [begin recording] "In talking about the role of women, we cannot forget their, we may say, very sacred function of bringing children into life and educating them. Women, and I am talking about women of the entire country, have this sacred function. After giving birth to their children, women must bring them up -- from their cradles to their maturity -- to become heroic citizens of the future who understand the nation's heroic tradition and its important position in the international arena. They must teach their children to respect labor, love the country, possess a spirit of proletarian internationalism, respect public property and live with an ideal -- that of Uncle Ho. Women have the great responsibility to bring up their children so they can carry on Uncle Ho's sacred cause." [applause; end recording]

On behalf of women throughout the country, Comrade Nguyen Thi Dinh, member of the party Central Committee and president of the Vietnam Women's Union, pledged with Chairman Truong Chinh to motivate women throughout the country to scrupulously carry out his instructions. She said: [begin recording] The instructions given by Chairman Truong Chinh are very valuable to us. On behalf of all women, we pledge with comrade chairman to carry out his instructions in spite of all difficulties. [applause; end recording]

The reception took place and ended in a very cordial atmosphere.

VNA Account

OW312042 Hanoi VNA in English 1531 GMT 31 Dec 81

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, December 31 -- Truong Chinh, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam and president of the Council of State, yesterday received almost 300 delegates to the conference of women of ethnic minority groups from the northern frontier provinces. The delegates are from Lang Son, Cao Bang, Ha Tuyen, Lai Chau, Quang Ninh and Hoang Lien Son.

President Truong Chinh congratulated the Vietnamese women on their active contributions to Vietnam's struggle for independence and freedom during the past half century, which made them worthy of the title of being "heroic, indomitable, loyal, capable" as conferred on them by the party and the state.

He said: "The women of various ethnic minority groups in the northern provinces have, together with the other women throughout the country, made great contributions to the victories of the August revolution, the resistance wars against French colonialism and U.S. imperialism, and the wars for national defence, against the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary clique in the southwestern frontier and against the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists in the northern frontier."

President Truong Chinh called on all women of ethnic minorities in the northern frontier to contribute more actively to strengthening the national unity, building the defence line, promoting production and fulfilling the 1982 State Plan. He laid stress on the policies of the party and the state which are aimed at improving the living conditions of the national minorities and reminded the party and state authorities in the northern border provinces to take into consideration the delegates' opinions to this effect.

TRAN QUOC HOAN ATTENDS MEETING OF ETHNIC WOMEN

OW291720 Hanoi VNA in English 1453 GMT 29 Dec 81

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, December 29 -- Women of different minority ethnic groups from Lang Son, Cao Bang, Ha Tuyen, Lai Chau, Quang Ninh, Hoang Lien Son and other northern provinces are attending a conference beginning here today.

The opening ceremony was attended by Tran Quoc Hoan, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee; Hoang Quoc Viet, president of the Presidium of the Fatherland Front Central Committee; and others.

In her opening speech, Nguyen Thi Dinh, president of the Women's Union, commended women on the northern border for their achievements in production, national defence, and in the education of their children. Addressing the participants, Tran Quoc Hoan urged them to follow up their successes and heighten vigilance against all schemes of the enemy.

SUBSIDIARY FOOD CROP PRODUCTION PROMOTED

[NHAN DAN 14 December editorial: "Determine the Grain Problem of Every Village and District"]

[Text] We will not be able to fully settle the root of the grain problem unless we can ensure that subsidiary food crops will make up a significant part of the gross production of grain. In the section dealing with grain, the resolution of the fourth party congress says: "It is necessary to vigorously develop the production of subsidiary food crops (corn, sweet potatoes, manioc, potatoes and kaoliang), to set up centralized intensive-cultivation areas of subsidiary food crops and to carry out production along with food processing." The VCP Central Committee and the government have set forth many specific policies and measures aimed at stepping up the cultivation of subsidiary food crops and the use of products processed from subsidiary food crops. The results obtained over the past few years in the production and use of subsidiary food crops have still been far below the target and capabilities.

Subsidiary food crop production has not developed evenly and steadily. Localities credited with maintaining steady production of subsidiary food crops are commonly known for having few ricefields and for habitually eating subsidiary food crops. Rice and subsidiary food crop areas have not shown any sign of increase. Mountainous and Trung Bc provinces have continued to plant and eat subsidiary food crops. Thanks to their post-flood efforts to develop the cultivation of subsidiary food crops, Thanh Hoa and Nghe Tinh Provinces have overcome a food shortage and have been able to keep their animal husbandry going. Due to the expanded cultivation of winter crops, the Red River Delta obtained more grain for use in March -- the preharvest period. Generally speaking, subsidiary food crop production has yet to be stepped up and instead has shown a decline. Never in the past years has subsidiary food crop yield accounted for 30 percent of the gross production volume of grain. This year, while paddy yield increased more than last year -- nearly 1 million metric tons -- the subsidiary food crop yield dropped by about 100,000 metric tons, with the subsidiary food crop area in the south alone dropping from 243,000 hectares in 1979 to 113,300 hectares in 1981.

In order to contribute to solving the grain problem, along with regarding the intensive cultivation of rice as a primary goal, it is necessary to step up subsidiary food crop production everywhere in both forms, concentrated and scattered, and through crop area expansion and intensive cultivation. Why did subsidiary food crops fail to develop? There are many reasons, both prevalent and specific, which we can blame for that. Every related sector and locality must properly analyze these reasons and quickly take effective steps to overcome obstacles they encounter. The pricing policy-related problem must be thoroughly examined from all sides. Things which are already rational must be confirmed and things which need correction must be corrected resolutely. The processing of subsidiary food crops is a matter known to everyone. However, there are many specific matters to be tackled correctly. These include the exorbitant production cost resulting from the excessive consumption of fuel and energy or from the under-use of machine capacity as food processing is reported to have been carried out only during the harvesting period. The general guideline for subsidiary food crop production is to increase crop output through intensive cultivation so that the people can obtain their fresh food supply locally. In food processing, it is necessary to use manual means to carry out food processing locally in order to help develop food processing industry gradually.

With a determination to have each village, district and province try to solve its food problem, we must adopt effective steps to make maximum use of labor and land; to develop all kinds of crops having seeds or edible roots, including legumes of all sorts; and to solve by ourselves all problems concerning food processing, storing and distribution. Localities with large yields of legumes can exchange them with other localities for rice. Every village and district must determine its own grain program on a yearly and long-term basis.

The winter-spring subsidiary food crop has already started. It is the largest of the year — accounting for 80-90 percent of the year's total cultivated area and total production volume of subsidiary food crops. Let us strive to step up the cultivation of both rice and subsidiary food crops in order to quickly solve the grain problem. This is a great struggle which should be fought by our entire party and people for the sake of the people's livelihood and socialist victory.

FIRST THREE CHAPTERS OF MILITARY SERVICE LAW

OW121355 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] Dear friends: As previously reported, Chairman Truong Chinh on 10 January signed an order promulgating the military service law and the law on the service of the Vietnam People's Army officers that had been passed on 30 December 1981 by the SRV National Assembly. The military service law consists of 11 chapters. We are going to introduce the first three in this newscast.

In order to promote the Vietnamese people's patriotic tradition and revolutionary heroism, to implement the people's right to collective mastery, to create conditions for Vietnamese citizens to fulfill their military service, to build up a modern and regular People's Army and to strengthen national defense, thereby insuring successful fulfillment of the tasks of defending and building the socialist Vietnam fatherland, this law, by virtue of Articles 52, 77 and 83 of the SRV Constitution, specifies the military service system for all citizens of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

Chapter 1

Generalities

Article 1. Defending the socialist fatherland is a sacred duty and noble right of all citizens. All citizens have the duty to perform military service and participate in building the all-people's national defense.

Article 2. A glorious duty of all citizens is to fulfill their military service by serving in the VPA. Performing military service includes serving on active duty in the army and serving in the reserve army. The citizen serving in the army is called an active duty soldier. The citizen serving in the reserve army is called a reserve soldier.

Article 3. All male citizens, regardless of nationality, social stratum, faith, religion, cultural level, occupation or residence, have the obligation to serve on active duty in the VPA.

Article 4. In peacetime, women with specialized skills needed by the army shall register for military service and shall be called for military training. If such women volunteer, they may be allowed to serve in the army as active duty soldiers. In wartime, by decisions of the Council of Ministers, women shall be inducted and shall be assigned suitable tasks.

Article 5. The following persons are not allowed to perform military service:

1. People who are in the period in which their right to serve in the people's armed forces is still deprived by law or by a people's court.

2. People under detention.

Article 6. Active duty and reserve soldiers include officers, career soldiers [quan nhan chuyeen nghiep], noncommissioned officers and men. The army service system for officers is regulated by the VPA officers law.

Article 7. Active duty and reserve soldiers are bestowed military ranks commensurate with their functions. The VPA military rank system is specified by the Council of State. The bestowing, promoting, demoting and depriving of military ranks of officers are specified in the VPA officers law. The bestowing, promoting, demoting and depriving of military ranks of career soldiers are specified by the Council of Ministers. The bestowing, promoting, demoting and depriving of military ranks of noncommissioned officers and men are specified by the national defense minister.

Article 8. All active duty and reserve soldiers must pledge allegiance to the fatherland, the people and the SRV state.

Article 9. During their military training all active duty and reserve soldiers enjoy the rights and duties as citizens as specified in the SRV Constitution and laws.

Article 10. State organs, the Vietnam Fatherland Front, the Vietnam Confederation of Trade Unions, the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union, the Vietnam Women's Union, the Vietnam Federation of Collective Peasants, other social organizations, schools and families, each within its own competence, have the duty to motivate, educate, organize and create conditions for citizens to fulfill their military service duty.

Article 11. Those localities, mass organizations, government agencies, units, families and individuals that score many achievements in implementing the military service system as specified in this law shall be commended and awarded by the state.

Chapter 2

Active Service of Noncommissioned Officers and Men

Article 12. All 18-year-old male youths are inducted. The draft age ranges from 18 to 27.

Article 13. Any 17-year-old male citizen who volunteers to serve for a long time in the army and who meets all the requirements specified by the national defense minister may be admitted for training to a military school and recognized as an active duty soldier.

Article 14. The active service periods for noncommissioned officers [NCO's] and men are determined as follows:

1. 3 years for NCO's and men;

2. 4 years for NCO's and men whose specialized or technical skills are acquired in the army and for NCO's and men serving aboard navy ships;

3. 2 years for NCO's and men graduated from higher schools or colleges;

4. 2 years for NCO's and men of certain ethnic minorities as specified by the Council of Ministers.

Article 15. Whenever necessary, the national defense minister has the right to retain NCO's and men in the army for some time — but not more than 6 months — after the expiration of their related military service period specified in Article 14.

Article 16. The assessment of the lengths of active service of NCO's and men is regulated by the national defense minister. A soldier's time spent for military disciplinary measures or desertion time shall not be considered part of his active service period.

Chapter 3

Preparations for Youths to Serve in the Army

Article 17. All male youths, before reaching the draft age and before their induction into the army, must be trained according to popular military training programs, which include political education, military training, training in the sense of organization and discipline and physical training. Popular military training for students of general middle schools, vocational schools, vocational middle schools, higher schools and colleges is part of the educational program. As for youths not studying at schools, popular military training shall be given through training courses at villages, wards, towns, government agencies, enterprises and other grassroots-level units. The chairmen of people's committees of villages, wards and towns, school principals and chiefs of government agencies, enterprises, and other grassroots-level units are responsible for the popular military training of the youths in their units. These popular military training programs will be decided by the national defense minister.

Article 18. Ministries, state committees, and other government agencies under the Council of Ministers, the People's National Defense Education Steering Committee [uyr ban chir dqaoj gIaos ducj quoocs phongf nhaan daan] provincial and municipal people's committees subordinate to the central government and their equivalents having vocational schools, vocational middle schools, higher schools and colleges under their control are responsible for training specialized and technical cadres and personnel for the army in accordance with the National Defense Ministry's plans approved by the Council of Ministers.

Article 19. Preparing youths to serve in the army and the serving of induction orders must be carried out by districts, precincts, towns and municipalities of the province concerned. Every January, the directors of vocational schools, vocational middle schools, higher schools and colleges and the chiefs of government agencies, enterprises and grassroots-level units must submit namelists of their units, male youths who are 17 years old that year to the military commands of districts, precincts, towns and municipalities of the province concerned.

Article 20. Every April, upon receiving callup orders from the chiefs of military commands of districts, precincts, towns, and municipalities of the province concerned, male youths who are 17 years old that year must register for military service at military organizations. Responsibility for the registrants' physical checkups falls on the public health services of districts, precincts, towns and municipalities of the province concerned. Following his registration, the registrant is called a ready-for-induction man.

PROVINCES URGED TO SOLVE PRODUCTION PROBLEMS

BK230726 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 21 Dec 81

[From the review of NHAN DAN for 22 December 1981]

[Text] NHAN DAN carries an article by Comrade (Trinh Xuan Tien) deputy minister of grain dealing with 1982 grain production and collection measures. According to the paper, the current policy is that all provinces that have a short supply of grain must strive to solve their grain problems by themselves.

Districts must consider the production capabilities of each subordinate village as a base in order to balance their grain consumption. Districts that have a surplus supply of grain must turn over the surpluses to the related provinces. Districts that have a short supply of grain must work out plans to balance their own grain consumption in a positive manner.

VARIOUS LEADERS, PARTIES OFFER NEW YEAR MESSAGES

Mahathir's Message

BK011146 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1400 GMT 31 Dec 81

[Text] Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir has called on the people to change their attitude and not to think so much of personal rewards. They should renew the determination to make Malaysia a peaceful, prosperous and a happy nation. The people must improve output and work with full interest and dedication the tasks entrusted to them. It is imperative that they should not be easily disheartened in whatever endeavors undertaken. The prime minister made this call in his New Year message broadcast over RTM tonight.

Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir chided those who claimed that people who work hard were like robots, slaves to the employers and greedy for material gains. Even those from developed countries who realize that dedication to work was the key to success had influenced the people not to work. Their motive was clear -- they do not want competition from Malaysians.

The prime minister reiterated the will to greater output would ensure the nation's independence and integrity. He said Malaysia was a land of plenty blessed with fertile soil and free from natural calamity. There were vast opportunities for everyone who was prepared and willing to sweat it out. It had a population of 14 million, but in actual fact it could accommodate between 50 to 70 million people. As such the country could become a moderately rich nation if its resources were utilized in a just and equitable manner.

He spoke of many Asian countries with a high population density giving rise to less working opportunities, inadequate food and housing. The prime minister went on to say that political and economic stability were closely related. As such the nation's political stability must be nourished and not taken for granted. The people must not at any time be complacent, as political stability could be undermined if it was not safeguarded. The country has chosen the democratic way of life as this would ensure the people were free from any form of repression. Democratic rights must be used in a careful manner but within its limits. No leader should act indiscriminately and with self-interest. The priority must be in the interests of the people and the nation.

Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir said the advent of the standard time zone at 2330 tonight marked the symbol of solidarity with the people in Sabah and Sarawak. From tomorrow, too, the nation goes metric -- another step toward national standardization. It should be regarded as a new era that would determine better achievements and prosperity.

Malay Nationalists' Message

BK061425 (Clandestine) Voice of Malayan Democracy in Malay 1215 GMT 2 Jan 82

[Chairman of Malayan Malay Nationalist Revolutionary Party Abdullah C.D.'s 1982 New Year greetings]

[Summary] "The victorious and militant year of 1981 has passed, and the bright year of 1982 has arrived. In welcoming this new year, I, in the name of the Central Committee of the Malay Nationalist Revolutionary Party of Malaya, or PKMRM, extend my warmest greeting and best wishes to all PKMRM members and supporters and brothers and sisters of all nationalities in our country in general and Malayan brothers and sisters in particular. I also do not forget to pay my highest tribute to patriotic fighters who never bow in submission though languishing in enemy jails."

In 1981 the people's democratic movement in our country had scored many significant victories — PKMRM emerged in the political arena. Its birth was an important symbol of this victory. The waves of the people's struggle against the Soviet-Vietnamese aggression and threat were further intensified. The struggle to defend the sacredness and freedom of religious activities continued to develop. Religious groups in various places launched all kinds of struggles and activities against repression and condemned the United Malay National Organization [UMNO] authorities for not adhering to Islamic teachings. They organized mass rallies to express their discontent, shunned mosques and prayer houses built by the government and boycotted meetings organized by the ruling party.

During the past year the waves of Malayan worker-peasant joint struggle against exploitation and repression and for better living conditions were carried out more intensely. The Kuala Lumpur and Singapore regimes were marked with difficulties. Within the national front, they elbowed one another. The contention for seats in UMNO Supreme Council was a concrete indication of the growing conflict in the Kuala Lumpur ruling clique. The fight for chief ministers of Pahang and Johor was a manifestation of the sharp fight between the ruling group and the sultans. Prime Minister Hussein Onn was forced to resign in the face of these events. Mahathir and Musa, who took over power, on the one hand adopted various deceitful political tactics to win over the hearts of the people, while on the other they continued to curb the people's democratic rights. "Nevertheless, the people will not be fooled and subdued by these activities. Their discontent and struggle against the antipopular and antidemocratic policy of the Mahathir-Musa government are bound to develop further.

"At the time we welcome the year 1982, the international situation is developing in favor of the people. In this conjunction the Central Committee of PKMRM calls on all its members and supporters, religious groups, nationalists, socialists and communists among the broad Malayan circles to be more united in the new year and advance together with patriots of various fraternal nationalities to score brighter results in the struggle for social justice, democratic rights and better living conditions and in the struggle to organize a patriotic united front and to establish a democratic national coalition government. Happy New Year.

Communist Party Message

BKO31430 (Clandestine) Voice of Malayan Democracy in Malay 1215 GMT 2 Jan 82

[Communist Party of Malaya Central Committee's 1982 New Year's greeting]

[Text] In conjunction with the advent of the year 1982, the party Central Committee and Comrade Chin Peng extend their warmest greetings and pay their highest tribute to all party members, commanders and fighters of the Malayan National Liberation Army; all members of various revolutionary mass organizations, revolutionary comrades and patriotic leaders who never bow in submission though languishing in jails; families of fallen heroes, revolutionary families and to the people of all nationalities.

During the past year, thanks to the guidance of the 28 April statement, our party and army and various revolutionary mass organizations scored new achievements on various fronts: Base areas and guerrilla zones were consistently expanded, the struggle against exploitation and repression waged by various strata of people of all nationalities continued to develop and the patriotic and democratic movement continued to make headway.

The national program of the Communist Party of Malaya, which was issued by its Central Committee in June of last year, is of great historic significance in destroying the reactionary policy to divide nationalities and in strengthening and developing the broadest unity among people of all nationalities. This programmatic document has totally cleared all obstacles on the road to progress for the democratic and patriotic movement in our country and the party will lead this movement toward greater activities.

In the new year the army and all revolutionary people should unite, struggle and work hard to fulfill the urgent task and the specific program set out in the 25 April statement. They should ceaselessly develop the armed struggle and mass movement, strengthen and expand the democratic and patriotic united front, struggle to defend the people's urgent interest and oppose Soviet-Vietnamese hegemonist aggression and expansion.

Advance onward heroically to score new victories!

STUDENT ACTIVITIES IN CANADA — The Ministry of Foreign Affairs is to conduct a thorough investigation into the activities of some Malaysian students in Canada, alleged to have smeared the good name of the government. A ministry spokesman in Kuala Lumpur said today that the Malaysian High Commission in Ottawa had already been directed to conduct the probe. He was commenting on reports that a group of Malaysian students there were responsible for the publication of a magazine called UTUSAN PELAJAR MALAYSIA [MALAYSIAN STUDENT MISSION]. The publication was said to have no relevance to student activities. [Text] [Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 4 Jan 82 BK]

LEE KUAN YEW'S NEW YEAR MESSAGE REPORTED

BK0111A0 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1330 GMT 31 Dec 81

[Text] In his New Year message Mr Lee Kuan Yew describes Singapore's economic performance for 1981 as good. The gross domestic products went up by 9.7 percent, productivity increased by 5.6 percent, the nominal unemployment rate was 3.9 percent but the real unemployment rate was minus 0.6 percent — which means there were more jobs chasing workers than workers chasing jobs.

The prime minister is confident that 1982 can be another prosperous year provided there are no worldwide upsets. He says the republic is aiming for 8 to 10 percent real growth with a 6 to 7 percent increase in productivity and a 4 to 6 percent inflation rate. Mr Lee, however, sounds a note of warning that 1982 is fraught with danger and uncertainties, such as whether the Soviets will intervene in Poland, what the American-West European response will be and the state of America's economy on which its foreign policy depends. He says that the American budget will have huge deficits of over $100 billion in 1982 and over $200 billion in 1984.

Mr Lee points out that Singapore's economy is so small and so open that we cannot hope to build any breakwater against the wash of the turbulence of this huge economy. We can only look out for danger signals and brace ourselves to try to ride on or to roll with the surf of these waves. He says our hopes for 1982 depend on the major industrial economies taking over as forecast by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. Any major political or economic upsets and our expectations have to be changed drastically.

The prime minister says that 1981 has turned out grimmer than he had feared on 1 January 1981 in his new year message. Fortunately Singapore was able to escape the recession and unemployment in America, Britain, France and West Germany.

Mr Lee reminds manufacturers that 1982 is the last year for them to continue operations with their full complement of nontraditional work permit holders. The recruitment of nontraditional source workers will stop in 1982. From January 1983, as their work permits expire, they will begin to leave. Thus, all workers from nontraditional countries will leave by 31 December 1984, except for construction and shipyard workers and domestics.

Mr Lee says manufacturers, therefore, must further mechanize, automate, computerize and improve management to cut down on workers, or they will have to relocate their factories. This repatriation will particularly affect those who have been using women workers from nontraditional sources. He suggests that one alternative for such employers is to employ Singaporean married women in 4-hourly shifts. Employers have 3 years -- until the 31 December 1984 -- to make new arrangements.

Mr Lee goes on to say that by 1991 our target is to not require work permit holders from nontraditional or traditional countries -- and the construction industry and shipyards will be no exception. Workers that Singapore wants to retain beyond 1990 should be those who raise its level of productivity. The government will give such workers permanent residence with a view to citizenship. Then we shall have a more homogenous work force, working together as a team because they all feel committed to Singapore. Then the principle from each his best to each his work, which has been the basis of Singapore's progress, will work under optimal conditions.

But Mr Lee warns that unless we make strenuous efforts to move up in technology with better educated and highly trained workers, we shall slip down the league and becomes yesterday's NIC, or newly industrializing country.

Mr Lee Kuan Yew wishes everyone a happy New Year.

EUROPEAN VIEW OF POLISH ISSUE REPORTED TO SUZUKI

OW111211 Tokyo KYODO in English 1158 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 11 (KYODO) -- European countries are unanimous in their recognition that the Soviet Union is responsible for the current situation in Poland, a ranking official of the Foreign Ministry said Monday.

Speaking on his recent visit to Europe, Toshiaki Muto, deputy minister for foreign affairs, told Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki that there isn't much difference in actions being contemplated by European countries against Poland and the Soviet Union. He emphatically told Suzuki that Japan should work out her own countermeasures while keeping close contacts with Western countries.

Muto visited five Western countries, including France, the United Kingdom, and West Germany, from December 28 to January 8, and met with high-ranking Foreign Office officials of those countries to sound out European countries' possible responses to the Polish affair.

Muto explained to Suzuki that the military rule in Poland will continue for some time, that there still is a possibility of direct Soviet intervention in Poland, and that it is necessary to frustrate Soviet intervention by calling for the termination of martial law in Poland. Muto said that because of georgraphical proximity and historical relations, European countries have strong interest in the developments in Poland, and that all European countries stressed the need for Western unity and solidarity.

Regarding concrete actions against the Soviet Union and Poland, Muto told Suzuki that all European countries are now studying in earnest what kind of sanctions they should take, but that they have agreed not to interfere with other countries' sanctionary measures.

In this connection, a Foreign Ministry source said Monday that Western countries' sanctions will not be rigorous ones, but most probably restraints on personnel and cultural exchanges, because if strong sanctions were to be taken at this time, they might induce intervention in Poland.

SAKURAUCHI: USSR TO BLAME FOR POLISH SITUATION

OW141011 Tokyo KYODO in English 0804 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 14 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Thursday the Soviet Union was responsible for the present situation in Poland and said Japan had conveyed this view directly to the Soviet Government. He said Japan agreed with Western countries that the Polish situation was brought about under Soviet pressure and said Japan would act in concert with Western industrialized democracies in dealing with the Polish problem.

In a statement released by the Foreign Ministry, Sakurauchi said the imposition of martial law in Poland in December was "working against the efforts of the Polish people to solve their own problems through the process of dialogue and democratic negotiations." At the same time, the Polish situation was likely to endanger the cooperation and exchanges which have been pursued between East and West, and seriously affect the international situation in general, the statement said.

Japan would do its utmost to act in concert with the Western countries in dealing with the Polish situation, Sakurauchi said. He said the government will continue to examine what measures could be taken by Japan toward the Soviet Union and Poland and pay due attention "not to undermine the measures taken by other Western countries."

A senior Foreign Ministry official, however, refused to speculate on when possible Japanese sanctions might be decided, or what form such sanctions might take.

U.S. CONGRESSMEN MEET WITH TRADE EXECUTIVES

OW131201 Tokyo KYODO in English 1138 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 13 (KYODO) -- A team of visiting U.S. Congressmen demanded Wednesday that Japan present a definite timetable for opening its market wider to foreign imports.

In a meeting with top executives of the Federation of Economic Organizations (Keidanren), the U.S. lawmakers, led by Representative Thomas S. Foley (Democrat-Washington), also said Japan should take concrete action in this direction to help reduce the swelling U.S. trade deficit with Japan. The Keidanren executives, including President Yoshihiro Inayama, admitted that the trade imbalance has reached a serious stage. Keidanren will continue its efforts to help resolve the problem, they said.

The U.S. Congressmen discussed various related matters with the Keidanren executives at the meeting, including a U.S. call for stepped-up Japanese imports of beef, oranges and other agricultural products. In this connection, Yoshizane Iwasa, chairman of the Keidanren Foreign Affairs Committee, proposed that Japan and the United States establish a joint stockpiling system for agricultural products, including grains. Foley supported the idea.

LDP, GOVERNMENT AGREE ON U.S. TRADE POLICY

OW131213 Tokyo KYODO in English 1116 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 13 (KYODO) -- The government and the ruling Liberal-Democratic party agreed Wednesday that Japan should not pursue the policy of trade "reciprocity" currently being advocated by some U.S. congressional leaders. The consensus was reached at a liaison meeting of government leaders and LDP executives.

Speaking at the meeting, Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry, said some U.S. Congress members are demanding that Japan open its domestic market to foreign imports to the same extent as the U.S. market, according to a concept of "reciprocity."

But behind the proposal is the thought that the United States should take measures to restrict Japanese imports unless Japan accepts the demand, Abe said. Therefore, he said, Japan should not pursue the principle of "reciprocity" as advocated by the U.S. congressional leaders, as this "reciprocity" has the danger of fostering protectionism, resulting in the contraction of international trade.

LDP Secretary General Susumu Nikaido supported Abe's view, stating that the idea of "reciprocity" advocated by the U.S. congressional leaders might endanger free international trade.

SUZUKI APPROVES STANCE ON TALKS WITH USSR

OW141231 Tokyo KYODO in English 1216 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Jan 14 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Thursday instructed the Foreign Ministry to clarify Japan's position on the northern territory problem at the forthcoming second Japan-Soviet administrative-level consultations in Moscow on January 20-21. The prime minister invited Deputy Foreign Minister Kensuke Yanagiya, who is scheduled to represent the Japanese side at the consultations in the Soviet capital, to his official residence to discuss Japan's stance in the consultations.

Yanagiya explained the basic policy of the Foreign Ministry, and said that he will inform the Soviet side of Japan's position that a formal peace treaty between Japan and the Soviet Union can be concluded only after the solution of the northern territorial issue. He also said that he will ask the Soviet Union to exercise self-restraint in dealing with the trouble in Poland, and ask for clarification of the Soviet position on the present situation in that country.

Besides, the deputy foreign minister revealed that he will appeal to the Soviet side for regular consultations between the foreign ministers of the two countries and the speeding up of U.S.-Soviet disarmament negotiations.

Prime Minister Suzuki approved the Foreign Ministry's policy, and urged Yanagiya to clarify Japan's position on the northern territory problem to the Soviet side, saying that friendly relations cannot be advanced between Japan and the Soviet Union without the solution of this problem.

SUZUKI HOLDS TALKS WITH WORLD BANK PRESIDENT

OW141349 Tokyo KYODO in English 1036 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 14 (KYODO) -- World Bank President A.W. Clausen had high praise for Japan's economic aid policy at a meeting with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Thursday. Japan deserves commendation for having fulfilled its public promise of a substantial boost in official development assistance (ODA), and with no strings attached into the bargain, he said.

Clausen paid a courtesy call at the prime minister's official residence Thursday afternoon. The two mainly discussed economic aid to developing nations in the Third World.

The prime minister told Clausen Japan wishes to contribute to the cause of world peace and stability through economic and industrial cooperation. This is based on a national consensus that Japan should never use its vast economic strength to become a military power, he added. He expressed Tokyo's willingness to cooperate in the World Bank's effort to raise funds for lending.

He [Clausen] arrived here Monday to visit Japan at the invitation of Finance Minister Michio Watanabe.

SAKURAUCHI MEETS VISITING BRITISH OFFICIAL

OW140451 Tokyo KYODO in English 0408 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 14 (KYODO) -- British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher hopes to visit Tokyo this fall in response to an invitation Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki extended to her during his visit to London last year. This was conveyed to Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi by visiting [illegible]sh Lord Privy Seal Humphrey Atkins Thursday morning, ministry officials said. Th[illegible] tw[illegible] greed to decide a definite schedule for the British premier's Japan visit through diplomatic channels.

Atkins arrived here Wednesday for a five-day unofficial visit to Japan and had an hour-long discussion with Sakurauchi at the Foreign Ministry on the Asian situation, bilateral relations and other international problems. Atkins also serves as deputy foreign secretary.

Speaking on the situation in Poland, Atkins said that the Polish people, after all, must reconstruct their economy with their own efforts, but that the people would not be able to heighten their will to work under the current military rule. But, however strong the military rule may be, Polish workers would never let go their hold of what they had won in their democratization efforts since August 1980, Atkins told Sakurauchi. The Polish churches and the independent trade union Solidarity should continue consultations on the basis of what the people had gotten during the democratization movement, Atkins said. The British Government thinks it should spare no efforts to prevent a direct Soviet intervention into Poland, Atkins said.

Sakurauchi told Atkins that the Western nations should act in unity in dealing with the Polish problem with a common stand that the Soviet Union is responsible for the current crisis in Poland.

Japan is closely watching how the European Community (EC) and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) will act to cope with the Polish crisis, Sakurauchi said. He said Japan would decide its actions against Poland and the Soviet Union after close coordination with other Western bloc nations.

The two also agreed to continue political dialogue between Japan and Britain, and the Western European allies through the regular Japan-British foreign ministers meeting and other opportunities.

Atkins is scheduled to leave Friday afternoon for a visit to the Kansai (western Japan) area. He will leave for home from Osaka International Airport on Sunday.

INCREASE REPORTED IN FOREIGN AID APPROPRIATIONS

OW111359 Tokyo KYODO in English 1256 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 11 (KYODO) -- Sums appropriated as various forms of official development assistance (ODA) to foreign countries in the government's budget for fiscal 1982 starting in April add up to yen 999.2 billion ($4,540 million), the Foreign Office announced Monday.

This represents an increase of 7.1 percent from the current fiscal year. However, in net terms allowing for repayment of loans by recipient nations, expected in the fiscal year, the ODA total works out at yen 941.8 billion ($4,280 million), up 6 percent.

As a result, the ministry said, the ratio of ODA to the nation's gross national product (GNP) will stand at 0.34 percent -- a slight rise from the 0.336 percent in the current fiscal year.

The total ODA budgeted for next fiscal year consists of yen 240.7 billion in bilateral grants, such as aid for economic development and increased food production, up 12 percent; yen 528.8 billion in "yen loans," up 10.9 percent; and yen 229.7 billion in contributions to international organizations, such as UN specialized agencies and the World Bank, down 4.7 percent.

The drop in contributions to international organizations stems from a delay in the planned increase in the capital resources of the World Bank and other international aid bodies, the ministry said. The delay has been caused by the ongoing view of U.S. aid policy undertaken by the Reagan administration. This could affect Tokyo's avowed policy of doubling Japan's ODA in five years' time, informed sources said.

The government's fiscal 1982 budget was prepared late last month. But as ODA was appropriated in varied forms under the jurisdiction of as many as 14 agencies, the Foreign Office has been putting them together to obtain a grand total.

ABE DISCUSSES FISCAL 1982 GROWTH RATE PROSPECTS

OW121313 Tokyo KYODO in English 1237 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Fukuoka, Jan 12 (KYODO) -- International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe Tuesday said the Japanese economy "certainly has the potential" to attain the government-projected real growth rate of 5.2 percent in fiscal 1982 starting in April this year. Economic growth of that magnitude is indispensable for the government's current efforts to reconstruct deficit-plagued national finances and maintain high employment, he told newsmen. Abe arrived in this northern Kyushu city earlier in the day for talks with local business leaders. His remarks seemed to directly refute a general prediction by private economic research bodies that Japan's inflation-adjusted growth rate in fiscal 1982 would be limited to around 3.8 percent.

In the next fiscal year, Abe said, the government will carry out business stimulus measures mainly to boost domestic demand. The measures will include promotion of housing construction and acceleration of public works, he added.

Touching on overseas economic trends that could influence growth of the Japanese economy, the minister predicted an upturn in due course. In view of the off-year congressional elections, the U.S. would not let its economy remain stagnant, he added. Abe also referred to the idea of reciprocity expressed by some U.S. Congressional leaders regarding trade relations with Japan as a "dangerous concept."

"The idea would be all right as long as efforts are directed to mutual expansion of trade. But if it leads to protectionist legislation as a means of rectifying the bilateral trade imbalance now heavily in Japan's favor, it would pose a serious problem to the cause of free trade," he warned.

JCP CHAIRMAN MIYAMOTO INTERVIEWED ON 1982 ISSUES

OW041403 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 2345 GMT 2 Jan 82

[Part 2 of series "New Year Interviews With Party Heads -- Political Department Director Masao Naito interviews Kenji Miyamoto, chairman of the Communist Party of Japan; recorded at JCP headquarters; date of recording not given]

[Excerpts] [Question] Upon ushering in the new year, what do you think are the prospects for the international political situation this year?

[Answer] This year I think that the U.S.-Soviet negotiations on limiting nuclear weapons will become an important issue. As you know, all parts of the world are being caught up in an endless nuclear arms race. Of grave importance to Japan is that last year President Reagan declared on two occasions that a limited nuclear war is conceivable. This war will not be limited only to Europe, because Japan is also presupposed in it. So, this means that the United States and the Soviet Union will not fire nuclear weapons at each other, while Europe, Asia and Japan will become nuclear battlefields. This will amount to national destruction. In this sense, the call for an end to the nuclear arms race has become the ardent desire of all the world's people who do not want to be killed in a nuclear war. Therefore, this has become a very serious issue. As you know, millions of people staged demonstrations in Europe. Thus far they believed that nuclear arms served as an umbrella to protect them, but now they sense the danger that they might become embroiled in a war because of that umbrella. The people's voices prompted the two superpowers -- the United States and the Soviet Union -- to go and sit at the negotiating table. This, I think, is of great significance.

Since Japan is a country victimized by atomic bombings, I think it should play a role in stepping up this movement in the arena of international politics. Regrettably, however, the Japanese Government, although maintaining the three nonnuclear principles, is taking actions in the United States and other forums that run counter to the principles. Therefore, I think that this is the biggest issue that affects Japan as well.

At the same time, Poland is now regrettably placed under military rule. Poland is the first case among socialist countries where that sort of military rule is enforced. Since this is a dictatorship as a matter of fact, and it goes against the principles of socialism. We made our position clearly known, that the military rule should be ended at once, and Poland should find its own way independently under peaceful and democratic conditions. Tracing this to its origin, I think that Poland's national government was swayed strongly by the military bloc headed by the Soviet Union. Constitutionally, there was no ground for the creation of the so-called Military Council of National Salvation. In the final analysis, they consulted with the Soviets with respect to security and then suddenly staged the coup. Therefore, the Polish situation bares the fact that a military bloc is restricting even the sovereign rights of its member country.

Since last year we have been calling for the elimination of military blocs as well as the prohibition of nuclear arms. This year we want to step up this campaign.

[Question] In sum, you mean to say that the international situation will become tense this year?

[Answer] Yes. Yes.

[Question] Despite these circumstances, the government finalized its draft budget toward the end of the year. Beginning late this month, the Diet is to deliberate on it. Could you please comment on the government's draft budget?

[Answer] When I met with Prime Minister Suzuki last year as part of the party leaders' talks, I stressed with particular emphasis that because of Reagan's statement, Japan's military spending this year will take on new significance. In other words, I told him that in view of the statement that Japan might be turned into a battlefield for a nuclear war, Japan's arms buildup under the system of the Japan-U.S. military alliance will, after all, result in increasing conditions for that kind of war. Although opinions might vary, the Reagan statement is a grim fact, and if you take that statement into consideration, you must realize it will be a grave mistake to increase military spending. I told him that the JCP, on the contrary, calls for a cutback in military spending by more than 1 trillion yen.

Some might think that this is a senseless call, but it is a truly patriotic course for Japan. During the Taisho Era [1912 to 1925], the Takashi Cabinet cut back the number of warships by seven and reduced the army by 90,000 men.

Last year, our party asked for a reduction of 700 billion yen, but this year the conditions have changed. In the first place, since this military spending is in violation of the Constitution, not a single yen needs to be allocated. [laughter] However, since the soldiers must eat and must be paid, we cannot say that military spending should be cut in its entirety. So I told Mr Suzuki that more than 1 trillion should be cut back.

Mr Suzuki then replied to me: I get your point; although I have a different opinion, I will consult with the LDP on your proposal. [laughter] Thus, he did not immediately reject my proposal. This notwithstanding, he drastically increased military expenditures while talking about a so-called zero ceiling to the public. This is a gross mistake that might take Japan on a mistaken political course. In this sense, I think that we must fight against it both in and out of the Diet.

SR-71 INFILTRATION TERMED 'GRAVE PROVOCATION'

[Text] Pyongyang, January 14 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialist aggressors hell bent on war preparations against the northern half of the DPRK from the outset of the new year committed the grave military provocation of infiltrating the "SR-71" spy plane into the sky above the Kangnyong Peninsula southwest of south Hwanghae Province of our country and the sky above our territorial waters east of Kosong on the east coast between 8 hours 29 minutes and 10 hours 11 minutes this morning.

These days the espionage activities of the U.S. imperialist aggressors against our country are becoming ever more frequent, synchronising with their introduction of large aggression forces including new type fighter-bombers and ground support planes into South Korea after drawing up a new "combat power buildup program." The infiltration of the spy plane deep into the airspace of our country by the U.S. imperialist aggressors for espionage numbers three today alone. This once again clearly shows how feverishly they are stepping up preparations for another war of aggression in Korea.

Our people are watching with heightened vigilance their war moves which are becoming ever more undisguised from the beginning of the year. The U.S. imperialist aggressors must look straight at reality and stop running riot. We will not provoke others first, but we will never allow anyone to provoke us. The U.S. imperialist aggressors must immediately stop all the hostile acts against our people.

KCNA: PRC PROTESTS U.S. PLANE SALES TO TAIWAN

SK140832 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0812 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] Beijing, January 13 (KCNA) -- A spokesman of the Chinese Foreign Ministry on January 12 strongly protested against the U.S. decision that it plans to sell aircraft to Taiwan.

Commenting on the U.S. announcement of the decision, the spokesman said in reply to a question of newsmen: The question of U.S. sale of arms, including airplanes, to Taiwan is being discussed between the Chinese Government and the U.S. assistant secretary of state who is now on a trip to Beijing. The U.S. Government has announced its decision to plan to sell airplanes to Taiwan at a time when bilateral talks are going on. The Chinese Government hereby lodges a strong protest against this.

The whole question of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan is a major issue affecting China's sovereignty, which must be settled through discussions between the U.S. and Chinese Governments. The Chinese Government will never accept any unilateral decision made by the U.S. Government.

SOUTH DENOUNCED FOR LINKING OLYMPICS, UN ENTRY

SK140840 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0815 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 14 (KCNA) -- M.R. Gupta, chairman of the Indian East-West Friendship Association, in his recent talk denounced the protestations of the South Korean puppets that it is natural for South Korea to become a member nation of the United Nations because it will sponsor the Olympic Games in 1988 and that they will launch into activities for a "separate entry into the United Nations," according to a report.

The insidious scheme of the South Korean puppets, he said, cannot but give rise to apprehensions as to what destiny the Olympiad might be driven to.

South Korea, truth to tell, has no economic foundation to host such big function as the Olympiad. It is a shocking place where American cannibals run wild in man-hunting and the fascists strut about.

Therefore, I oppose the holding of the Olympiad in South Korea itself and sternly condemn the political intrigues of the South Korean puppets over the Olympiad. The world peace-loving people sharply denounce the South Korean puppet's scheme to use the Olympiad for a foul political purpose.

He expressed support to the new proposal for national reunification and the ten-point policy of the unified state advanced by the great leader President Kim Il-song.

SOVIET ART EXHIBITION OPENS IN PYONGYANG

SK150836 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0816 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 15 (KCNA) -- The Soviet art exhibition "Great Patriotic War in Plastic Arts" opened at the Korean Art Gallery on January 14 to mark the 40th anniversary of the destruction of German fascist troops in the vicinity of Moscow.

The opening ceremony was attended by Chang Chiol and other personages concerned and working people in the city.

Also present were Soviet Ambassador to Korea G.A. Kriulin and his embassy officials, Lidiya Alekseyevna Lyudmilova, deputy curator of the Soviet Central Revolutionary Museum, who came for the exhibition, and cultural officials of various embassies.

Speeches were exchanged at the opening ceremony.

The attendants saw the oils, sculptures, printed paintings and other works, photographs and war-time relics on display.

ROK-JAPAN WORKING-LEVEL TALKS ON AID OPEN 14 JAN

SK150153 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 15 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] Working-level officials of Korea and Japan yesterday conferred on the early solution of the $6 billion loan requested by Korea in preliminary contacts at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

The meeting came with the arrival in Seoul earlier in the day of Akitane Kiuchi, director-general of the Japanese Foreign Ministry's Asian Affairs Bureau.

Shortly after his arrival in Seoul, Kiuchi visited Minister of Foreign Affairs No Sin-yong and delivered a personal letter from Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, a ministry official said.

In the letter, he said, the Japanese foreign minister expressed his desire for an early solution to the long-standing loan issue.

Sakurauchi was quoted as saying that he would try very hard to strengthen friendly relations between the two countries and that he wishes to meet as soon as possible.

The working-level Korean officials at the meeting were headed by Kong No-myong, first assistant minster of foreign affairs. Others were Director-General of Asian Affairs Choe Tong-chin and Director-General of Economic Cooperation Yi Ki-chu.

Japanese participants were Kiuchi, Junichi Nakamura, counselor at the Economic Cooperation Bureau of the Foreign Ministry, Kazuo Ogura, chief of the ministry's Northeast Asian Division, and two officials from the Japanese embassy in Seoul.

The participants shared the view that the issue should be solved as early as possible and exchanged views on the situations of each country, a ministry official who attended the talks said.

Prior to the opening of the talks, a Korean source said that "there is no change in our position that the amount of the loan should be set in a package under a political consideration."

He said the current meeting is supposed to seek ways and means of setting the amount in a package.

The source added that the Japanese officials seemed to be sincere in tackling the loan issue.

The Japanese officials will visit the Economic Planning Board and the Ministry of Finance today for briefings on Korea's Fifth Five-Year Economic and Social Development Plan (1982-86) for which the Japanese loan is to be spent.

This afternoon, the working-level officials are expected to resume negotiations.

If the preliminary negotiations are satisfactory, foreign ministers of the two countries are expected to hold a meeting around March to finalize the loan issue.

YONHAP Report

SK150148 Seoul YONHAP in English 0127 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Seoul, Jan. 15 (YONHAP) -- Korean and Japanese working officials will resume their preparatory talks here Friday for a bilateral foreign ministers' meeting, which is to deal with South Korea's standing request for six billion U.S. dollars in Japanese Government loans.

On Thursday, the two sides agreed to hold the foreign ministers' meeting "at the earliest possible date," and presented their basic positions on the requested loans.

According to the sources, the delegations largely reiterated their existing positions on the issue, with the South Koreans calling for a political and package deal and the Japanese reasserting the need for a scrutiny of projects to be financed by the loans.

Emerging from Thursday's talks, one Korean official, however, described the Japanese attitude as "more positive than ever," and said both sides showed a wilingness to resolve the issue during the first half of this year.

The Japanese delegation, headed by Akitane Kiuchi, director-general of the Japanese Foreign Ministry's Asian Affairs Bureau, presented Korean Foreign Minister No Sin-yong with a personal letter from his Japanese counterpart Yoshio Sakurauchi, during their call on the Korean minister Thursday.

In the letter, according to Korean sources, the Japanese foreign minister expressed his desire for an early meeting with his Korean counterpart, and reassured No that Japan is doing its utmost to resolve the issue, "despite both domestic and international limitations."

CHON ADDRESSES DJP FOUNDING ANNIVERSARY CEREMONY

SK150241 Seoul YONHAP in English 0215 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 15 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan Friday called upon all the members of Korea's ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) to get rid of "old set notions and retrogressive ways of thinking" which lie behind political failures, and to redouble their efforts to help root democracy in Korean soil to grasp what the people want, and to develop it into policies.

Defining the party's ultimate goal as nation, democracy, justice, welfare and unification, Chon said that these ideals are not only the platform of a political party but also the basic direction of the country's future.

"With a firm sense of mission that we party members are called upon by the people to assume responsibilities for the country's future, we should have definite notions of how to realize a democratic welfare state," Chon said.

The chief executive made these points at a ceremony marking the first anniversary of the founding of the Democratic Justice Party which he heads.

Pointing out that the basic reason for the failure to root democracy in Korean soil is that a small number of persons held sway over politics and power in the past, Chon said that he is convinced that the best way not to repeat "such a gloomy experience" today is for the ruling party to recover its the recovery of the normal functions. [as received]

"If we perform the political responsibilities and tasks entrusted by the people with sincerity and honesty, I am firmly convinced that our party can gain the confidence and love and respect of the people, and that the people's confidence in us is the most essential prerequisite to the realization of a democratic welfare state," Chon said.

He then called for closer cooperation between the administration and the party, saying that the two should combine their efforts to develop new effective and practical policies, and carry them out.

The ceremony, held at the party's headquarters in downtown Seoul Friday morning, was attended by some 300 of the party's cadres, including all of its 151 lawmakers, office holders and leaders of provincial chapters.

GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCES ANTIRECESSION MEASURES

SK140212 Seoul YONHAP in English 0143 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 14 (YONHAP) -- The Korean Government has decided to lower bank interest rates by an average of one percentage point, effective Thursday (Jan. 14), as part of its anti-recession measures.

The lending rate was reduced from the current 17 percent to 16 percent per annum, and the interest rate on time deposits with one-year maturity was lowered from the 16.2 percent to 15 percent.

The fourth such cut in bank interest rates since last November was contained in a package of economic pump-priming measures announced Thursday by Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister Kim Chun-song.

Meeting reporters at his first official press conference since he took office 10 days ago, the country's top economic policymaker said that the interest rates on loans to be used for farming and energy conservation would also be lowered by one percentage point, effective the same day, and that other interest rates on loans to be issued in accordance with government priorities would remain unchanged.

The interest rates on company debentures, and other loans extended from such secondary banking institutions as short-term financing and insurance firms, will also be lowered by an average of one percentage point.

The additional bank interest rate cut is expected to save enterprises 100 billion won (some 142.9 million U.S. dollars) in their loan-related financial burden.

Referring to housing business-stimulating measures, Kim said that the government measure on the flexible capital gain tax rates, which is to expire on Sept. 30 this year, would be extended until March 30, 1984, and that the exemption of capital gains taxes for families who own two houses each would also be prolonged, from the current one year to one year and six months.

The government will also release some 300 billion won (some 428.6 million U.S. dollars) in housing construction funds beginning in February, and these funds will be repayable over three years, after two years of grace at an annual interest rate of 17 percent.

The 17-percent interest rate on private housing funds is one percentage point lower than the old rate, and the interest rates on housing loans in the government sector will be lowered from the current 15 to 18 percent to 13 to 15 percent per annum.

POLL SHOWS ECONOMY IS PEOPLE'S GREATEST CONCERN

[Excerpts] The people have pointed out that the most important question confronting Korean society in the second year since the Fifth Republic set sail is that of the economy and that their greatest burden is the rise in prices.

It was revealed that the people think that the greatest emphasis should be placed on stabilizing prices and that they hope the 1988 Olympics will be carried out at minimum expense.

Such facts were made public in a public-opinion survey of 1,504 men and women above 20 years of age taken between 24 November and 17 December last year. The topics of the poll, conducted by the Korea University Statistics Research Center at the request of this newspaper, were "matters of concern in the new year."

A majority of the respondents generally expressed satisfaction over Korea-U.S. relations, which mark their centennial. They pointed out that maintaining relations of equality and friendship is necessary for an ideal relationship with the United States, thus showing a trend of independence toward the United States. They noted Japan as the nation they hate most after North Korea, expressing their skepticism over "Japan as an ally."

Answering a question on the problems Korea presently confronts, they pointed to economic difficulties (51.7 percent); the threat against security (25.1 percent); political stability (17.9 percent); and human rights (4.1 percent). The poll showed that those who have a high school education or above noted political stability as more important than the threat against security.

They stressed maintaining relations of equality and friendship with the United States for an ideal Korea-U.S. relationship (73.7 percent); a preference for following the U.S. stand (7.3 percent) and 19 percent preferred persuading the United States of Korea's stand -- thus reflecting their hope for independent diplomatic activities.

Concerning the question of Japan as an ally, they said Japan is a beneficial ally (6.5 percent); an ordinary ally (31.7 percent); not a beneficial ally (18.9 percent); cannot be said to be an ally (20.1 percent); and some showed a passive stand, saying that they are not well informed about Japan. Many respondents called the scale of economic cooperation for security amounting to $6 billion appropriate and said that Japan should respond to this without fail.

Concerning the question of improving the relations with communist China, they said "it is necessary by all means" (30.6 percent); "it is necessary to a certain degree" (53.3 percent) -- thus showing a majority of 83.9 percent recognized the necessity of improving relations with communist China. Regarding the prospect of improvement, they answered they hope the relations would be improved "in the near future" (17.5 percent); "sooner or later" (74.7 percent). Thus, 92.2 percent of respondents held the view that the relations will be improved.

Concerning the prospects for maintaining peace on the Korean Peninsula in the new year, they indicated they were optimistic (64.8 percent); uncertain (35.2 percent). A 91.7 percent share of the respondents forecast the same degree of or more domestic political stability this year.

GOVERNMENT TO FOSTER KEY STRATEGIC INDUSTRIES

[Text] The government is determined to foster six industries -- electronics, tire, machine tool, shipbuilding, textile and footwear -- as the nation's key strategic industries between now and 1986.

Ministry of Commerce and Industry sources said yesterday that Korea will emerge as the 10th largest exporter of the six industrial products in the world in terms of global market share when the ambitious projects are materialized.

To this end, the sources said, the nation's machine tool industry will get increased financial and technical support for maximum international competitive edge.

The nation's machine tool industry, now being ranked as the 22nd in the world market in terms of production capacity, will be elevated to 10th place by 1986, according to sources. Similar supporting measures will be accorded to the tire and electronics industries to boost their world market shares, they said.

If everything goes smoothly, electronics and tire industries will make Korea the fifth and ninth largest producing country in the world respectively in terms of production capacity. In fact, the country's shipbuilding, textile and footwear industries have already gained strong footholds in the world markets. In the case of shipbuilding, for instance, the government will continue to make efforts to keep Korea the world's fifth largest shipbuilding country as it is now. In this connection, the nation's shipbuilding capacity will be expanded from the current four million tons to six million tons by 1986.

The facility expansion projects for the six designated industries as worked out by the Ministry of Commerce and Industry are:

-- Color TV set production capacity will be increased to 6,200,000 sets by 1986 from the present two million sets annually while cassette production capacity will be boosted to 34 million sets from the present 18,700,000 sets.

-- Production capacity of man-made fiber will be increased to 2,240 tons a day from the current 1,560 tons while that of spinning looms from the present 4,497,000 spindles and 190,000 looms.

-- Footwear production capacity will be expanded from the current 300 million pairs a year to 340 million pairs.

-- The annual production capacity of tire plants will be increased to 35 million units from the present 15 million units a year.

KOREAN RESIDENTS IN PRC RETURN, MEET FAMILY

SK110226 Seoul YONYAP in English 0151 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] Yongin, Korea, 11 Jan (YONHAP) -- It was a stirring reunion after 37 years of forced separation when Kim Pong-sok, an 81-year old Korean expatriate in mainland China, was reunited with his eldest son who has been living in this town, just south of Seoul, last Friday.

Kim came with his second son, Kongno, 43, who is also a resident in China, for the reunion with his eldest son, Chungno, 48 and his youngest daughter, Hyanghwa, 38, which was realized through the good offices of the South Korean Red Cross.

Kim and his family were living in mainland China in August, 1945, when Korea became independent after 35 years of Japan's colonial rule. When he heard the news of Korea's independence, he sent his wife and two of his children to his hometown in north Kyongsang Province, now in South Korea. He planned to join them later with his second son. But his plans were thwarted when the Korean Peninsula was divided along the 38th parallel by the United States and the Soviet Union, shortly after the allied victory and the liberation of Korea.

It was in 1979, after the United States and mainland China established diplomatic relations, that Kim's second son wrote to one of his cousins in South Korea in the hopes of hearing from his brother after years of forced separation. The letter reached the cousin, and, through him, the eldest brother, who wrote back immediately to the kid brother whom he had not heard from since their separation in 1945.

In May of last year, the eldest brother, Chungno, invited his father and younger brother to visit him in South Korea, through the good offices of the South Korean Red Cross.

The younger brother, Kongno, is now married, and has three children.

In an interview with YONHAP, Chungno [as received] said he was surprised to find his homeland so developed, even though he occasionally read about, and saw pictures of South Korea in Chinese newspapers and television programs. He added that he would like to bring his family to live in South Korea as soon as possible.

BRIEFS

1981 STEEL PRODUCTION -- Seoul, Jan. 6 -- Korea was the world's 12th largest steel producing country last year, with its annual crude steel production capacity of 12,335,000 tons, and its annual rolled steel production capacity of 13,358,000 tons, according to a report published by the Korea Iron and Steel Association. The report showed that the nation's crude steel production capacity increased by 3,139,000 tons, as the Pohang Iron and Steel Co. completed its fourth-stage expansion work in 1981. Among last year's rolled steel production capacity, steel bars accounted for 4,069,000 tons, steel sheets for 8,476,000 tons, wire rods for 773,000 tons, and steel wheels for 35,000 tons. DiCarlo and party left Rangoon for Bangkok this evening.

GOVERNMENT ASSAILED FOR RELYING ON FOREIGN LOANS

BK111126 (Clandestine) Voice of the People of Burma in Burmese to Burma 0030 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Unattributed article: "Burma's Economy in the Era of the Military Government Is Inescapably Trapped in a Maze of Foreign Debts"]

[Summary] The old year has gone, and we have entered the new year. The world economy, or the economy of the capitalist-imperialist countries of the world, encountered hard times last year. There were reports of a tight money situation, high rates of unemployment and competition for markets throughout the year. Because of this situation, attempts were made by the capitalist countries to place the burden on the economically-backward, poor countries. The poor countries opposed these attempts and exposed the monopolization of markets, prices and technology. While poor countries were opposing the capitalist countries, "the military government acted as if Burma was not affected by the situation. While explaining the world economic situation, he [U Ne Win] said: Our country and our people are fortunate.

Is Burma fortunate as the military clique claims? Will it still be as fortunate this year? Let us look in comparison with other poor countries which also share the same fate as Burma. The saying: Thirsting for water while on a raft in midstream, is very appropriate with regard to countries like Burma, which are rich in natural resources but poor in reality."

Take Peru for instance. It exports silver, copper, tin lead and oil but is still poor. Peruvians say they live on a throne but beg for a living. Peruvians are poor and the country is up to its neck in debts. While debts and interest owed by poor countries increase year after year, the capitalist countries grow richer through their monopoly of technology and the markets, as well as by exploiting poor countries.

Although the prices of finished goods from capitalist countries remain high, prices fluctuate or remain low for goods produced by poor countries. In 1960, 25 tons of rubber from Sri Lanka was equivalent to the price of six tractors. But in 1975, the same amount of rubber could only buy two tractors. Let us compare this situation with that of Burma.

"In his speech, the top boss of the military clique said: Although we are not yet cleared of debts, we do not have to bow to the pressure of creditors. Almost everyone in Burma knows the system of borrowing money from a chittiya [Indian usurer]. To settle the debt owed to a pitiless chittiya only involves repaying the capital and the interest; there are almost no other restrictions. Moreover, the money borrowed can be used as desired. What about the loans being taken today by the military government? Are the conditions for the loans any better than those of a chittiya? It is apparent that the loans taken by the military government today are no more than buying goods on credit. From the time the loan agreement is signed, the creditor imposes restrictions and dictates what goods to buy, designates the company, specifies the price and the time to purchase as well as how to use the loan. For most of the loans, detailed plans have to be submitted on how the loan is to be used before the loan is approved. Any country which has dealt with the so-called World Bank or the development bank [as heard] or capitalist organizations knows this. How do we decide whether such conditions are friendly persuasion or simply applying pressure? If the military government claims that this is not bowing to pressure, then it must have been doing as it was told with consent.

"Today, foreign debts are rising steadily. Foreign debts in 1975 amounted to only U.S. $300 million, but in 1980-81 the debts rose to $1.7 billion. Although the top boss of the military clique may be preaching about not doing things in a big way on loans, it is an irrefutable fact that the 1982-86 Fourth 4-Year Economic Plan was drafted with a heavy reliance on foreign loans. The reason members of the military clique can boast today about the so-called upward economic trend in the country is only because economic plans are being implemented with foreign loans. Without foreign loans, the military government's economy would have crumbled. In other words, the economy survives only through foreign loans."

"Burma is one of the many small countries which are facing foreign trade deficits. Last year, of the 5.5249 billion kyat earmarked for imports, 2.846 billion kyat came from foreign loans and assistance. In other words, it amounts to borrowing money from foreign countries to buy goods. Earnings from exports were only 3.7546 billion kyat.

"Although the military government urgently calls for expansion of exports and earning foreign exchange, is it fetching good prices for exports? In 1979, a price of only $10 per barrel was fetched from exporting 8.2 million barrels of oil to Japan. Also in 1980, the price for 800,000 barrels exported to Japan was $17.5 per barrel. Where rice is concerned, Burma sold at a price of about 1,600 kyat per ton although the prevailing market price at that time was over 3,000 kyat."

It may be possible for the military government to bully the people into expanding exports, but it cannot stem the rising prices of import goods. If one could consider such a situation fortunate, then definitely Burma will continue to be blessed with such a fortune as long as the military government exists.

"One of the yardsticks in measuring the standard of living is the per capita income. This are 35 countries in the world with a per capita income of about $300. They are named as the world's poorest countries. Even among them, Burma, with a per capita income of $140 or 1,000 kyat, trails way behind.

"Burma is rich in natural resources and its people are diligent. Despite this, the country is thirsting for water while on a raft in midstream. Because of the various reactionary policies laid down by successive reactionary governments, including the military government, Burmese people have to beg for a living although they live on a throne.

"The world economic situation this year will be as bad or even worse than last year for the capitalist-imperialist countries. However, the military clique will continue to step up its reliance on the imperialists and capitalists and thereby make the Burmese people even more impoverished.

COMMUNISTS REVIEW EFFORTS FOR PEACE IN 1981

BK301212 (Clandestine) Voice of the People of Burma in Burmese to Burma 0030 GMT 30 Dec 81

[Unattributed article: "Let Us Welcome the New Year With Battles"]

[Text] As the calendar pages are turned, the international situation becomes more tense and complicated. It is natural that such developments are taking place during the age of imperialism, the age of U.S.-Soviet hegemonism, particularly the prevailing age of Soviet hegemonism. Although an individual's will and desire are incapable of changing or avoiding these situations, an individual has to adjust his or her respective role according to the situation. The only difference is that different classes will adapt differently according to their different interests.

Under this tense and unstable international situation and the internal situation in which the reactionary governments have been intensely waging a reactionary civil war for 33 years, the Burma Communist Party [BCP] -- with the people's interest as its sole objective -- took a step toward terminating the civil war and constructing internal peace. It pursued the offer after taking time to discuss, consult and educate the party, army and the local people. With the interests of the people of the whole country in mind, the party, army and the people in liberated areas, while standing firmly on principle, prepared themselves ideologically, politically, materially and militarily.

Despite the cries of war and traces of war throughout the world, however, the Ne Win-San Yu military government acts to the contrary and prepared itself to exploit the situation. At a time when the BCP was urging the whole country to struggle to end the civil war and construct internal peace, the Burma Socialist Program Party [BSPP] consistently clamored for the intensification of the civil war. On consecutive occasions, such as Independence Day, Union Day, Peasants Day and the recently-held National Day -- the time for the military government to brainwash the people -- they persistently propagated the so-called three political objectives of their party.

One outstanding call among the so-called political objectives is the call for crushing saboteurs. Doesn't such a call clearly show the stubbornness and persistency of the military clique to continue the civil war? The very speech by the top leader of the military clique on 14 May, which declared the unilateral termination of talks on internal peace, clearly shows the foolish pride of the blood-thirsty and selfish military clique. Only days after issuing the challenge, mercenary troops intruded into and conducted an offensive in (Man Tawng) township, Kutkai District. The People's Army, having no other alternative, had to teach them a lesson. Doesn't such a campaign also show the military clique's preference for war and disregard for the wish of the people?

On 27 March -- the day which the military clique has monopolized and named as its mercenary armed forces day -- when the mercenary army was on parade in the heart of Rangoon, preparations were being made to hold a second round of negotiations as the first round had ended. On that occasion, the so-called chief of staff of the military government minaly urged the intensification of the civil war in his speech.

Following this, when the military government announced its budget, nothing specific was mentioned about the police force, defense or prisons. The budget simply contained an unprecedented amount for the mercenary armed forces -- more than 1.24 billion kyat.

Everyone -- including babies and the aged -- had to pay about 38.5 kyat each for the war budget which came to one third of the total budget. The plan was to spend about 6,000 kyat for each soldier in the estimated 200,000-man mercenary army while only little more than 100 kyat was used for each student, although the number of students was 5.8 million. This does not include the school fees students were paying. Moreover, the military government had only earmarked 9 kyat for health and .45 kyat for social security per person. Given that each person had to pay 38.5 kyat each for the upkeep of the mercenary army and if the expenditures for the State Council office and the BSPP were included, it is clear that the budget was primarily for oppression and war.

Also in 1980, the military party held its so-called congress while elections were held for the "showcase" assembly. The essence of both events was to choose people to blindly continue the civil war policy of the military clique. For this reason, there were only minor changes in the BSPP Central Committee the State Council and the Council of Ministers. As usual, the majority and all key posts were monpolized by either mercenary officers or ex-mercenary officers. Although civilian names with "U's" in front are used, both the BSPP and the government still clearly demonstrate military characteristics.

When the last government was formed, a so-called national security and defense committee was instituted exclusively with former and present military officers. This clearly indicates the monstrous and militaristic plans of the military clique.

By observing the activities in the mercenary army alone, we can see that in the past year, the military clique tried to increase the number of recuitments above the daily recruitment of 15,000 mercenary soldiers while the number of new army divisions also increased one after another. The practice of giving special privileges to the mercenary army in all fields also continues.

For the BCP and the People's Army, 1981 was a year of efforts for internal peace and a year of defending ourselves against the crushing offensives of the military clique. Although it does make peace gestures and explains such efforts to the people, the people's army cannot afford to be a sitting duck with an olive branch in its beak. We are constantly aware that bullets and artillery shells from the side of the military clique, which continues to rule and prosper, still rain on us. For this reason, while the BCP and the People's Army publish books of poetry -- such as "Fly to the People" or "White Dove" -- we also continue to firmly grasp our weapons and wage a self-preservation and just war.

More than once we have said that the reason the BCP and the People's Army wants to end the civil war and build peace in the country is not because we can no longer fight the war which has been going on for more than 33 years. In practice, we have shown through battles in 1981, in which the mercenary army units were crushed, that we can continue to do so.

For us communists, we believe that, in accordance with Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought, war is an extension of politics and that the main problem of war is a political issue. That is why we have tried, and are continuing to try, to solve the problem politically while firmly grasping the three banners -- the banner of ending the civil war and building peace in the country; the banner of democracy; and the banner of national unity. We are also aware, however, that the problem can be solved through war if there is no political solution.

Communists do not want war, but neither do they fear battles. Where it concerns the interests of the people, they have decided to go through anything; either to stroll through a breeze or to rush through a tornado. As long as the military government continues to frenziedly wage a civil war, the BCP will become strongly united with all other armed forces struggling in opposition against the reactionary military government and endeavor even more to wage the self-preserving, just war.

FURTHER MATERIALS ON VISIT OF GDR MILITARY GROUP

Visit to Infantry School

BK140300 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] On 12 January at 1400, the high-ranking GDR military delegation led by Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann, member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany Central Committee Politburo and defense minister of the GDR, visited the cadres and male and female combatants who are training at the Kampuchean infantry school.

Speaking on this occasion, Comrade (Keo Koam), director of the infantry school, expressed his warm welcome to the high-ranking GDR military delegation. This visit, he said, is a source of encouragement to the Kampuchean armed forces, who are training hard in order to defend the country and advance it along the path to socialism. The comrade noted the unceasing progress made by the school under the leadership of the party, front and council, as well as through the spiritual and material assistance and support from various socialist countries, particularly the Vietnamese friends. This visit will strengthen and develop the militant ties and cooperation between the armed forces of our two countries -- the PRK and the GDR.

In reply, Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann, head of the high-ranking GDR military delegation, expressed his sincere thanks for the cordial and warm welcome accorded the delegation. All of this shows more clearly that the friendly ties, militant solidarity and cooperation between our two armed forces and peoples are becoming stronger. On behalf of the GDR armed forces and people, the comrade general pledged sincere moral and material assistance and support for the Kampuchean armed forces and people in their revolutionary cause of defending and building Kampuchea, which is advancing to socialism.

At 1600, after visiting the cadres and male and female combatants at the infantry school, the delegation and all other guests paid a visit to the KPRAF exhibition. After seeing the photographs and other aspects of the exhibition, the delegation was very impressed with the rapid achievements and development of the KPRAF under the leadership of the KPRP.

Phnom Penh Reception

BK131241 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0413 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 13 Jan (SPK) -- Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of defense, on Tuesday [12 January] evening hosted a reception in Phnom Penh in honor of the high-level military delegation of the GDR led by Heinz Hoffmann, Politburo member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany [SED] and minister of defense of the GDR.

Soy Keo, vice minister of defense; Meas Kroch, chief of the General Political Department; and Di Phin, chief of the General Logistics Department of the KPRAF, were present at the reception. GDR Ambassador Rolf Dach attended the reception. Also present were Vu Nha and Kisilev, military attaches of the Vietnamese and USSR Embassies, respectively.

Minister Chan Si expressed his elation at greeting the high-level military delegation of the GDR, whose visit, he went on to say, contributes to the deepening of the bonds of friendship and solidarity between the two parties, governments, peoples and armies of Kampuchea and the GDR. On behalf of the people and army of Kampuchea, Chan Si expressed his deep gratitude to the SED and the government, people and army of the GDR for their disinterested assistance to the Kampuchean people since the toppling of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime. Chan Si affirmed that, fortified by their traditions of struggle, guided by the party and enjoying the devoted aid of fraternal socialist countries, particularly Vietnam and the Soviet Union, the people and army of Kampuchea will triumph.

For his part, Gen Heinz Hoffmann stressed the importance of the visit of his delegation for the broadening of the bonds of friendship, solidarity and cooperation between the two countries, and said: Under the just leadership of the SED and KPRP, the GDR and Kampuchea fight shoulder to shoulder against imperialism for the construction of socialism and the consolidation of peace and stability in the world. Gen Heinz Hoffmann expressed the firm support of the GDR people for the Kampuchean people's just struggle for peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world.

Phnom Penh Meeting

BK141235 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] The Defense Ministry of our PRK organized a grand meeting at the Chattomuk Conference Hall on the afternoon of 13 January to welcome the high-ranking GDR military delegation. The hall was decorated with the flags of the two countries -- Kampuchea and the GDR -- and banners inscribed with greetings such as "Welcome to the High-Ranking GDR Military Delegation Currently on a Visit to our PRK," and "Long Live the GDR!"

At 1500 the local and foreign guests arrived at the meeting hall. Among the local guests were Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense; Comrade Soy Keo, member of the KPRP Central Committee, vice minister of national defense and chief of the KPRAF General Staff; Comrade Di Phin, chief of the KPRAF General Logistics Department; and Comrade Meas Kroch, deputy chief of the KPRAF General Political Department. Among the guests in the high-ranking GDR military delegation were Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffman, member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany [SED] Central Committee Politburo; Comrade Col Gen Heinz Kessler, deputy defense minister and head of the General Political Department; and Comrade Col Gen Horst Stechbarth, deputy defense minister and commander of the ground forces.

In the meeting hall, which was decorated with banners and national flags of the two countries, we saw a large number of cadres and combatants from the three general departments of the KPRAF and trainees from various schools under the Defense Ministry sitting in rows with smiling faces as a gesture of warm welcome to the high-ranking GDR military delegation. We also saw Comrade Rolf Dach, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the GDR to the PRK, and many members of the diplomatic corps, military attaches, cadres and personnel from various embassies in Phnom Penh.

In his opening speech to welcome the delegation, Comrade Chan Si, memeber of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense, stressed the victories of our revolution scored during the past 3 years and expressed sincere thanks for the presence of the high-ranking GDR military delegation.

The comrade said: [begin recording] On behalf of the Kampuchean party, government, people and revolutionary armed forces, and in my own name, I would like to express the warmest welcome to the high-ranking military delegation of the fraternal GDR and, through all the comrades and friends in the delegation, I extend most sincere and profound sentiments of revolutionary fraternity to the GDR people and army. [applause]

Esteemed comrades and friends, under the leadership of the SED and the GDR Government, the GDR National People's Army has rapidly matured and developed into a modern army with high combat ability and capabilities for combat readiness that can firmly defend the western borders of the socialist community. Together with the armies of the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, it has successfully ensured security in Europe and made an active contribution to the world people's cause of defending peace. The growth and development of the GDR army constitutes not only a source of pride to the German people, but a mark of confidence forthe peoples of the socialist countries and progressive peoples and nations throughout the world that are waging a revolutionary struggle for the noble goals of progress in the modern era.

In the past as well as at present, based on their lofty spirit of proletarian internationalism, the GDR party, government, people and army have always given effective support, morally and materially, to the revolutionary cause of the Kampuchean people in defending and building our beloved fatherland. Our Kampuchean people and revolutionary armed forces express profound gratitude to the party, government, people and army of the fraternal GDR for the assistance and support given us in a lofty spirit of proletarian internationalism. We will never forget this. The Kampuchean people and revolutionary armed forces fully support the correct foreign policy and unswerving stand of the GDR in opposing the policies of the U.S. imperialists, who have allied with the Beijing clique, increased armament levels and insanely provoked wars in order to threaten the socialist countries and the revolutionary forces throughout the world. [applause] [end recording]

In his speech, made amid resounding applause, Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann, head of the high-ranking GDR military delegation, stressed the sincere sentiments of affection and respect and the moral and material support of the GDR people and army for the Kampuchean people.

The comrade said: [begin recording; initial words in German, fading into translation] On behalf of the working people and armed forces of our GDR, I affirm to all the beloved Kampuchean comrades that we will always stand by your side. [applause] We extend solidarity to all the Kampuchean people who, through a protracted and difficult struggle, have seized the right to live in peace and happiness. However, to this day this right to live in peace and happiness is being threatened by the constant attacks and slanderous propaganda of the U.S. imperialists, the Beijing leaders and their satellite governments. However, all these aggressive acts and slanders have been crushed. Moreover, the PRK will enjoy its legitimate role in the international arena, like our country. [applause] After attacking and slandering our country for many years, the capitalist countries eventually were compelled to give diplomatic recognition to our country. Such guarantee can be provided by the strong forces of the socialist community and of each member country of this community. The firm guarantee for this is, primarily, the strong state power of the Soviet Union and the international workers movements. We will win because our cause is correct and just. The future is for peace, socialism, humanity and friendship of the people. [applause] [end recording]

The meeting ended in a warm atmosphere permeated with a profound spirit of intimacy and revolutionary fraternity.

Also on hand at the airport were Comrade Rolf Dach, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the GDR to the PRK; ambassadors and representatives of the diplomatic corps assigned to Kampuchea; as well as Comrade Vu Nha and Kisilev, respectively Vietnamese and Soviet military attaches accredited to the PRK.

SIHANOUK DISCUSSES COALITION, PRC ROLE

TANJUG Interview

LD082126 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1629 GMT 8 Jan 82

["Pool" item]

[Text] Beijing, 8 Jan (TANJUG) -- The former head of the state of Cambodia, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, today stated that he was ready to establish on the Kampuchean-Thai border the headquarters of a tripartite coalition government for conducting further actions against the Vietnamese forces.

In an interview to TANJUG's Beijing correspondent, Sonja Badel, Sihanouk announced the possibility of forming a bipartite coalition of his movement and the Khmer Rouge, without Son Sann's participation.

Referring to the power relationship between the forces fighting in Kampuchea against the Vietnamese interventionist forces, Sihanouk stated that his two thousand fighters were "poorly armed." If he could obtain aid in armament and medicaments, a hundred thousand people would immediately side with him, Sihanouk said.

Explaining his neutral position between the Khmer Rouge and Son Sann, Sihanouk said he would continue to urge concessions on the part of all possible coalition partners with a view to reaching agreement. He personally did not set any conditions for the forming of a coalition government.

As far as the Singapore proposal on a "loose coalition government" is concerned, Sihanouk specified that all hitherto documents were still valid and constituted a basis for the quest for solution and compromise. He stated, however, that he did not believe in Democratic Kampuchea's positive response to the Singapore proposal.

Referring to the disbanding of the Communist Party of Kampuchea, Sihanouk said that "communism is now unimportant. The most important thing is to drive the Vietnamese out and free the country."

KYODO Report

OW081145 Tokyo KYODO in English 1127 GMT 8 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Beijing, Jan 8 (KYODO) -- Former Kampuchean head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk Friday called for a summit meeting of three anti-Vietnamese forces in Kampuchea to try and break the deadlocked tripartite talks for a united front against Vietnam.

Sihanouk told a press conference in Beijing that he would propose to Demoratic Kampuchean leader Khieu Samphan that they jointly send a telegram to Son Sann, ex-premier and leader of another resistance group, inviting him to come to Beijing to discuss the situation. Khieu Samphan is expected to visit Beijing next week at the earliest for talks with Sihanouk, but Sihanouk said he had no information on Khieu's schedule.

Sihanouk said he was ready to become head of the new anti-Vietnamese coalition "without making any conditions." He said the new united front (?should have its) headquarters on the Thai-Kampuchean border once a coalition government was formed, and he would stay there through the good offices of Thailand.

Sihanouk at Friday's press conference stressed that it was time to compromise. "We must not serve the interest of the Vietnamese occupying our country," he said.

"I think that we have to create conditions in a few weeks for a new summit meeting. I would like to have it in Beijing," Sihanouk added.

Sihanouk arrived in Beijing last Monday from France and met with Chinese Deputy Premier Ji Pengfei. He said he would stay in Beijing for about two months, during which he would meet with Deputy Party Chairman Deng Xiaoping and other leaders. Then he would visit North Korea to attend the 70th birthday ceremony of North Korean leader Kim Il-song on April 7.

Sihanouk said he had a force of 2,000 supporters along the Thai-Cambodian border. If he could get enough food and arms aid, his forces would increase to 100,000, he said.

Further KYODO Report

OW140135 Tokyo KYODO in English 0112 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] Beijing, Jan 14 (KYODO) -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk, former Kampuchean head of state now staying here, Wednesday clearly ruled out the possibility that his group and the ousted Pol Pot regime may try to form an anti-Vietnam coalition government by excluding another anticommunist Kampuchean resistance group from the coalition plan. The coalition government plan has been under discussion among the prince's group, the Pol Pot group (also known as Democratic Kampuchea) and the anticommunist Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) led by ex-Premier Son Sann, but their talks are hitting a snag due to a wide gap of views, mainly that between the Pol Pot group and KPNLF.

Speaking to newsmen at his Beijing residence, the prince flatly denied speculation that his group and the Pol Pot group may part with Son Sann in the deadlocked coalition plan. Sinhanouk stressed that a coalition government against the Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin regime in Phnom Penh should be an alliance of the three resistance groups, including Son Sann's group. Prince Sihanouk also told the newsmen that the Pol Pot group appears not to hope that Sihanouk will assume the post of the head of state in the projected coalition government. The prince earlier expressed his readiness to take the post if requested.

The prince explained about his speculation on the matter: When the prince met China's party vice chairman, Deng Xiaoping, last May, Deng clearly favored the prince's assumption of the post of the head of state. But, in a recent meeting with China's Vice Premier Ji Pengfei here, Ji only said he hoped that the prince would "take an important role" in the coalition government. Commenting on the slight shift in China's attitude, Sihanouk speculated that China may take into consideration the stand of the Khmer Rouge group (the Pol Pot regime).

AFP Report

BK151214 Hong Kong AFP in English 1133 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] Beijing, 15 Jan (AFP) -- Former Cambodian chief of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk has called for a meeting of leaders of anti-Vietnamese Cambodian movements to work toward a coalition.

The proposal was made in a telegram to one of his top aides, the text of which was given to AFP. It coincided with reports from reliable sources that former Premier Son Sann, who leads one of the anti-Vietnamese groups, was expected in Beijing shortly. There was no immediate official confirmation that Son Sann would be visiting Beijing. Observers said that in any case, the visit was not likely to result in the meeting proposed by Prince Sihanouk, since there was no indication that Khmer Rouge Leader Khieu Samphan would be present at the same time.

The former chief of state has, however, proposed that the Khmer Rouge leader meet him in Beijing. Prince Sihanouk is currently in China to confer with government leaders on the Cambodian issue. Talks begun last year, aimed at putting together an alliance of the Beijing-backed Khmer Rouge and the two anti-communist movements, have so far brought no results.

In the telegram to In Tam, Prince Sihanouk's chief negotiator at the talks, the prince said he hoped for "a fresh Samphan-Son Sann-Sihanouk meeting to unblock the situation."

An earlier effort to get the talks back on the track came from the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, a grouping [of] five non-communist countries, which proposed a "loose coalition" in which each Cambodian movement could retain its individual identity. But the Khmer Rouge, while not responding officially to the ASEAN proposal, have indicated informally that they opposed a "loose coalition" on the grounds that it might bring into question the legitimacy of the Khmer Rouge, who retains the Cambodian seat in the United Nations despite their ouster from Phnom Penh by Vietnamese troops three years ago.

Meanwhile, the Vietnamese ambassador in Beijing, Nguyen Trong Vinh, today accused Prince Sihanouk of acting as China's "spokesman." In a press conference, he refused to comment directly on Prince Sihanouk's presence in China, saying, "I don't care about his activities." In a recent interview with AFP, Prince Sihanouk said he had given up hopes of a "dialogue" with Vietnam for a political settlement in Cambodia.

AFP: SIHANOUK NOTES IMPORTANCE OF SRV ROLE

OW142337 Hong Kong AFP in English 2316 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] Paris, 14 Jan (AFP) -- Former Cambodian ruler Prince Norodom Sihanouk said in an interview here that there can be no solution to the situation in his country "without the agreement of the Vietnamese."

The armed forces of the Khmer Rouge and of Son Sann, the former Cambodian premier, that oppose the Vietnamese-backed government in Phnom Penh would not survive a Vietnamese incursion into Thailand against their bases, Prince Sihanouk added. It was "these small armed skirmishes around the border that justify the presence in Cambodia of the Vietnamese," he told the French monthly magazine LATITUDE.

"The Vietnamese have the support of the Cambodians, even if with great reluctance. The Khmer Rouge are a thousand times more feared than the Vietnamese," who were "clever," he went on, "reestablishing religions when the Khmer Rouge suppressed them all, reestablishing family life, free circulation and suppressing forced labor."

He admitted he did not see how he could "recuperate Cambodia," adding, however, that should he return one day at the head of his country, he would see to its independence and neutrality, granting privileged positions only to France, China and North Korea, and "a good position" also to the Soviet Union and Vietnam.

AFP: SON SANN EXPRESSES DESPERATE ARMS NEED

OW140005 Hong Kong AFP in English 2330 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] London, 13 Jan (AFP) -- The anti-Vietnamese Cambodian resistance "lacked weapons and ammunition" to oust Soviet and Vietnamese "foreign occupation," Son Sann, president of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), said here today. The Soviet presence in Cambodia was "more and more active," he said, charging that 2,000 Cambodians were recently sent to the Soviet Union for military training. Mr Son Sann termed Poland, Afghanistan and Cambodia "three sides of the same triangle, clearly representing Soviet expansionism." Speaking at a press conference, former Premier Son Sann said the KPNLF resistance, backed by over 10,000 fighters and 100,000 civilians, desperately needed "a great deal of arms."

"It is our duty," he said, "to add to the economic, political and other pressures on the field through an intensification of guerrilla activities against foreign occupation." Arms supplied to non-communist KPNLF fighters by China last month were "far from sufficient," he said, but refused to specify whether other Asian or Western nations had agreed to supply further arms.

Referring to his meeting with Foreign Office Secretary Lord Carrington yesterday, Mr Son Sann said Lord Carrington pledged British "support," and would examine increased aid for the KPNLF during a coming tour of Southeast Asia. Former Premier Son Sann urged Amnesty International and foreign journalists to visit Cambodian jails, where the Vietnamese held thousands of political prisoners. The KPNLF aimed to broaden the anti-Vietnamese resistance coalition to as many groups as possible, including the Khmer Rouge, he said.

AFP: KHMER ROUGE RECAPTURE MAJOR LOGISTICS BASE

BK111033 Hong Kong AFP in English 1016 GMT 11 Jan 82

[By Xavier Baron]

[Excerpts] Bangkok, 11 Jan (AFP) -- Khmer Rouge forces recently recaptured a major logistics base in northern Cambodia, where they suffered heavy losses last month in a long-range Vietnamese artillery attack, non-communist Indochinese sources said here today.

Confirmed by Western sources, the attack was centered on the headquarters of General Son Sann, the Khmer Rouge deputy premier for defence. It is situated in jungle country near the point where the Thai, Laotian and Cambodian borders meet. The sources said about 10,000 guerrillas, making up a third of the Khmer Rouge resistance forces in Cambodia, were based in the area. Their number includes "Division 80," one of the main combat units of the Khmer Rouge.

The Khmer Rouge were said to have been taken by surprise under heavy artillery fire from Vietnamese forces in southern Laos. The sources said it was the first time that the well-entrenched base had come under such a powerful attack from Laos since the overthrow of the Khmer Rouge regime in January 1979. Shortly after the base came under fire, the Khmer Rouge commander decided to evacuate, taking with him large supplies of new Chinese arms and ammunition. The Vietnamese attack lasted several days and was limited mainly to artillery fire, with infantry contacts kept to a minimum, not exceeding company strength (about 120 men). The Indochinese sources said about 50 Khmer Rouge guerrillas were killed and 200 wounded. Gen Son Sann and his men were able to regroup and managed to gain the upper hand stage by stage, finally recapturing their positions by the end of last week. The Vietnamese forces pulled back to southern Laos, setting up advance positions along the Laotian border with Cambodia. So far only fragmentary details of the battle have reached Bangkok and neither Vietnam nor the Khmer Rouge have reported it.

Indochinese sources and Western diplomats here said several thousand Vietnamese soldiers were sent to the Champassak Province in southern Laos west of the Mekong River at the beginning of December prior to the attack. Western diplomatic sources here said there had been continual clashes in Cambodia's coastal Koh Kong Province on the Gulf of Siam.

U.S. 'INTERVENTION' IN POLAND CONDEMNED

SIANG PASASON Comment

BK141127 Vientiane KPL in English 0905 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 14 Jan (KPL) -- SIANG PASASON, organ of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party CC, on January 14 condemns the interventions of the U.S. administration and NATO member states in the internal affairs of the Polish People's Republic.

The recent conference of the foreign ministers of 15 NATO member states, under the pressure of the Reagan administration, on January 11 in Brussels was a clear act of intervention in the domestic affairs of the Polish people. The statement adopted by this conference specifically aimed at interfering to the just cause of Poland. The Reagan government carried out various acts of provocation against Poland, including its appeal to all of its NATO allies and other reactionary groupings for the implementation of its so-called economic sanction against Polnad and the Soviet Union, while the Polish situations are being normalized by the efforts of its party and government, the paper observes.

Due to the disagreement and opposition of some Western countries and the peace-and justice-loving humanity, these inhumane acts of the U.S. administration which aimed at intensifying East-West tensions had shamefully failed. However, the paper continues, the Washington administration further increased its base efforts by imposing upon the Brussels conferees its so-called appeal for the release of the detained counterrevolutionaries in Poland. This U.S. appeal is genuinely aimed to let the extremists in Solidarity and the Western spies in the Social Self-Defense Committee [KOR] act freely in provoking the social order, and discloses the real intention of the Brussels conference, under their pretext: human rights and freedom of citizens.

All these acts, the paper stresses, were the clear and direct interventions in the internal affairs of Poland, and seriously violated the territorial integrity of one independent state.

Together with the world peace and progressive movements, the paper emphasizes, the Lao people resolutely expressed their condemnations to all aggressive principles and acts against Poland adopted by the conference -- under the pressure of the U.S. Moreover, the entire Lao people firmly considered these criminal acts as the violations to the international laws, the UN Charter and the final documents of Helsinki conference, in which the U.S. and its Western allies has also signed, the paper concluded.

Further Commentary

BK140942 Vientiane Domestic Service in Laos 0400 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Unattributed article: "The United States Escalates Its Interference in the Internal Affairs of Poland"]

[Excerpts] In face of the suitable punishment meted out to the counterrevolutionaries whom it has mobilized, fostered and directed in Poland, the Reagan administration is very resentful. Along with its psychological warfare aimed at inciting the Polish people to resist their government, Washington has carried out vicious schemes of interference in the internal affairs of Poland.

In his television address on the night of 23 December 1981 on the occasion of Christmas, President Reagan distorted the true situation in Poland and announced measures to punish Poland, suspending the granting of loans for Poland to buy foodstuffs from the United States, canceling various privileges granted to Polish residents in the United States, prohibiting Polish trawlers from fishing in U.S. territorial waters, and calling on the Western allies to limit the sale of advanced technical equipment to Poland. He also threatened that if the situation in Poland continues as it is at present, the United States will take even harsher actions.

It is necessary to note clearly that the United States, like other countries, has no right to punish Poland. This is the most arrogant pressure ever exerted on the Polish nation by Washington. What does the Reagan administration seek in carrying out these vicious acts stubbornly violating the democratic rights and sovereignty of an independent country, rights and sovereignty clearly stipulated in the UN Charter? It is obvious that the Reagan administration merely wants to see Poland continue to sink into economic crisis so that the counterrevolutionary reactionaries in Poland can lead the nation to civil war and thereby cleave Poland from the socialist community.

Washington is also taking advantage of the situation in Poland to poison the political atmosphere in the world, destroy East-West relations, obstruct the detente which is vigorously developing and create a tense situation with a view to creating conditions for stepping up the arms race. The U.S. acts are aimed at obstructing the Polish people's use of urgent measures to return the situation in the country to peaceful normalcy and thereby save the country from the danger of war created by the counterrevolutionaries, who have sabotaged peace in Europe and the world.

Through its acts, the United States has exposed itself as a vicious troublemaker. It has always tried to turn back the wheel of history. It is, therefore, easily understandable that various U.S. allies have been wary of the U.S. calls for cooperation. On 24 December AP pointed out that all the efforts by President Reagan to formulate a combined plan on punitive measures by the West against Poland will meet with opposition from West Germany which considers that such measures will only prolong the bad situation.

In short, all U.S. acts of interference in the internal affairs of Poland are attempts by the imperialist chieftains to save the counterrevolutionary reactionaries in Poland and help them continue to pursue an anticommunist, antisocialist policy. It is certain that such acts will not achieve anything good for the United States.

The Lao army and people, together with various socialist countries and revolutionary forces in the world, hail and fully support the correct resolution of the Polish Council of State. We are firmly convinced that the fraternal Polish people will surmount their enormous tribulations and return the country to normalcy so that they can continue to advance vigorously on the path of socialist construction.

LEADERS' MESSAGES MARK BURMESE NATIONAL DAY

BK050444 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Text] On 4 January LPDR President Souphanouvong and Prime Minister Kaysone Phomvihan sent greetings messages to U San Yu and U Maung Maung Kha, respectively president and prime minister of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma, in Rangoon.

President Souphanouvong's message, addressed to U San Yu, reads: On the occasion of the Independence Day of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma, on behalf of the Lao people and the LPDR Government, and in my own name, I am very happy to express warm congratulations to you and, through you, our best wishes for happiness and prosperity to the Burmese Government and friends. I am convinced that the fraternal friendly relations, cooperation and good-neighbor coexistence between our two peoples will be developed daily and further strengthened.

Prime Minister Kaysone Phomvihan's message to U Maung Maung Kha reads: On the occasion of the Independence Day of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma, I would like to extend warm and cordial congratulations and best wishes for health and happiness to you. I wish the Burmese people a good life.

On the same occasion, Acting Foreign Minister Khamphai Boupha also sent a greetings message to U Chit Hlaing, foreign minister of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma.

LEADERS HAIL CUBAN FOUNDING ANNIVERSARY

BK311014 Vientiane KPL in English 0911 GMT 31 Dec 81

[Text] Vientiane, 31 Dec (KPL) -- Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party Central Committee, premier of the Lao People's Democratic Republic, and Souphanouvong, president of the LPDR, on the occasion of the 23rd founding anniversary of the Republic of Cuba, jointly sent greetings to Fidel Castro, first secretary of the Communist Party of Cuba Central Committee, chairman of the State Council and of the Council of Ministers. The message of the Lao leaders conveyed sincere congratulations to the Cuban leaders and the heroic fraternal people.

January 1, said the message, is the great historical day for the heroic Cuban people who liberated themselves from the Batista regime and thereupon have enjoyed national independence and social progress. During more than 20 years, under the clearsighted leadership of the CPC headed by Fidel Castro, continued the Lao leaders, the Cuban people had foiled all provocative challenges of the U.S. imperialists and have firmly stepped into the path of unshakable socialism. Along with that they have fulfilled their international duties in many countries.

The Lao leaders also commended Cuba for its international commitments in general as well as in the Non-Aligned Movement, for peace, freedom, independence and social progress. Consequently, the North American imperialists and other reactionaries will continually stir tension against Cuba, but the former will meet with fiasco as before, observed the Lao leaders.

The message wished the fraternal Cuban people new and greater successes in the implementation of the resolutions of the 2nd party congress, and wished for further blooming of the fraternal friendship and combative solidarity between the two parties, governments and peoples.

On the same occasion, Phoun Sipasout, vice premier, minister of foreign affairs, sent greetings to his Cuban counterpart Isidoro Malmierca Peoli.

SIANG PASASON REVIEWS 1981 ACHIEVEMENTS

BK111026 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Editorial: "A Good Beginning Was Created in 1981 for Our People To Triumphantly Advance" -- identified by Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao at 0430 GMT on 11 January as a SIANG PASASON 11 January editorial]

[Text] During 1981 our entire people sought to bring into full play the spirit of loving the country and socialism, united to implement the LPRP's unswerving domestic and foreign policies and joined in persistently surmounting many difficulties and tests, thus admirably fulfilling the objectives of the first year of the First 5-Year Plan.

Under the correct and resolute leadership of the LPRP, our people in the past year have waged an arduous struggle to smash all maneuvers initiated by the imperialists and the international reactionaries and, at the same time, have tirelessly struggled to fulfill the annual plan, thus firmly defending the country and scoring great achievements in the political, economic, cultural and other spheres -- achievements that serve as a solid basis for implementing the projects to build the foundations of socialism.

Rice output in 1981 was more than 100,000 tons greater than in 1980. Farmers throughout the country have vigorously sold rice to the state and paid agricultural tax. The amount of rice sold to the state by farmers was almost double that in 1980. This is the second year in which our farmers have won historic achievements, thus materializing the slogan: Self-sufficiency and self-reliance in food supplies. It was the first year in which Laos did not have to use its foreign currency reserves to purchase rice from foreign countries.

The important factors ensuring the farmers' success are that many agricultural cooperatives have effectively organized intensive farming -- a movement that has expanded to all provinces -- and the acreage for intensive farming has been extensively expanded. The efficiency of intensive farming clearly exceeds that of ordinary farming, while the movement of turning to agricultural cooperatives, which was previously beset with many difficulties, has now been gradually improve to suit the situation.

Many agricultural cooperatives have effectively organized production and have started using machinery and equipment to serve production, such as water pumps, threshing machines, tractors and so forth, thereby increasing output.

In some cooperatives in Champassak Province, cooperative members produce on average between 500 and 700 kg of paddy a year.

Another factor has been the favorable climate during the farming season. What is most important is that our farmers are bringing into full play the spirit of mastering the country and the spirit of love of country and socialism as well as their traditions of industriousness and heroism Thanks to the great achievements on the agricultural front our country will be able to rapidly resolve problems of food supply.

On the industrial and handicraft front, despite many difficulties such as the shortage of raw materials, workers at various factories and plants last year tried their utmost to fulfill or overfulfill production plans.

Regarding the communications, transportation, circulation and distribution works, great efforts were made to implement the two-way obligations, thus daily increasing the flow of goods to rural areas and gradually improving the people's living conditions. The difficulties encountered by cadres, combatants and civil servants in the urban areas are being resolved, while farmers in rural areas are enjoying a normal life.

The educational, cultural and social tasks continue to develop rapidly and fruitfully. At present, illiteracy has been completely stamped out in 7 of the 13 provinces. In the 1981-82 academic year, 620,000 pupils are attending primary schools -- an increase of 11 percent compared with the previous academic year. The number of students attending higher education institutes, intermediate vocational schools and basic vocational schools have increased respectively by 50 percent, 41 percent, and 78 percent. In addition, 110,000 [figure as heard] students are studying in various countries, mostly in the SRV, the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. This is a valuable capital serving as a basis for the development of education in the many years to come.

New achievements have been recorded in the spheres of public security and national defense. In the past year, the U.S. imperialists, the big-nation expansionists and hegemonists and other reactionaries resorted to all sorts of subversive activities, such as psywar tactics to constantly create disturbances. Nevertheless, the various public security and national defense forces, in coordination with the people, defeated all the enemy's maneuvers. Security and tranquility have been more effectively guaranteed. Order, tranquility and safety prevail in various towns, in the capital of Vientiane in particular. However, we cannot relax our vigilance for even a minute.

The LPDR's foreign policy of peace, independence, friendship and nonalignment has been approved and supported by various nations and the forces cherishing peace, justice and social progress in the world.

Regarding the front work, mass organizations have positively carried out their activities, thus creating an atmosphere of emulation movements to score achievements throughout the country.

The great achievements recorded by our people in 1981 have created a new position from where we can march forward to win new, still greater victories. At the same time, the achievements clearly show the correct and clear-sighted line of the LPRP. They also show that economic and state organizations at various levels are effectively operating.

To make the 1981 achievements further flourish and grow, let us join in vigorously advancing to gloriously fulfill the new tasks.

SRV STATEMENT ON CEASE-FIRE OFFER TO PRC

OW151047 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] A spokesman for the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry on 14 January issued the following statement:

As is publicly known, the Chinese authorities on 17 February 1979 sent 600,000 troops in a war of aggression against Vietnam. Although their war was broken and they were forced to withdraw, the Chinese authorities are still occupying a part of Vietnamese territory. Now, pursuing their hostile policy against Vietnam, the Chinese authorities are frenziedly conducting a type of sabotage war in many fields to weaken Vietnam so as to subdue and occupy it. They maintain a big military force close to the border while continuing to occupy many points in Vietnam or nibbling at others and conducting armed provocations or causing clashes along the border. As a result, the situation at the border is permanently tense and is likely to become explosive.

The Vietnamese people are resolved to exercise their right to self-defense to protect their independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, which is also the sacred right to self-defense of all peoples to defend their countries from foreign aggression. On the other hand, the people and the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam have been consistently for settling all problems with China through negotiations in order to normalize relations between the two states and restore the time-honored friendship between the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples. Vietnam has successively taken many positive steps, proposing a bilateral treaty of peaceful coexistence between the two countries and insistently demanding the resumption of the talks unilaterally interrupted by China. And for the traditional Lunar New Year, it has repeatedly called for cessation of hostile armed actions and firing at border areas so that the two peoples may safely celebrate the return of spring. However, all these constructive proposals have been stubbornly rejected by the Chinese authorities.

On 4 January, the Chinese authorities rejected another Vienamese proposal, made in a note from the SRV Foreign Ministry to the PRC Foreign Ministry of 28 December 1981, that the two sides stop hostile armed actions and cease fire along the common border on the occasion of the Year of the Dog. So it is very clear that the Chinese authorities have not given up their hostile policy toward Vietnam and do not want to ease tension along the common border.

Even so, as an expression of the good will of the people and the Government of the SRV and for the friendship between the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples, Vietnamese soldiers and guards at the border will unilaterally act upon the proposal made in the note of 28 December, 1981, i.e., cessation by both parties of hostile armed actions and firing along the common border in the period from 20 January through 29 January to enable people on both sides of the common border to safely see the new year in.

If China takes advantage of the good will of Vietnam by continuing armed provocations and other hostile actions, the Vietnamese people and their armed forces will have to react in self-defense and the Chinese authorities will have to fully account for all consequences of their acts.

NHAN DAN 15 Jan Commentary

OW150727 Hanoi VNA in English 0709 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 15 -- Vietnam's good will is reaffirmed today in a NHAN DAN commentary on Vietnam's proposal for cessation of hostile armed actions on the Sino-Vietnamese border on Tet.

The paper notes that since the defeat of 600,000 Chinese troops in their aggression against Vietnam in February 1979, the situation on the Sino-Vietnamese border has always been tense and that it is likely to become explosive as a result of China's hostile policy towards Vietnam.

"Facts show", the paper points out, "that China is conducting a type of perfidious sabotage war against Vietnam in many fields. China, together with the United States, tries to weaken Vietnam and prepares for a large-scale aggression war to annex to when the time is ripe. Its criminal actions prove that the reactionaries in the Beijing leadership prefer confrontation and war to peace, that they want to poison the atmosphere rather than improve relations with Vietnam. They have stubbornly rejected Vietnam's positive initiatives and constructive proposals. On three occasions since 1979, they have turned down Vietnam's Lunar New Year proposals to cease hostile armed actions and firing at border areas".

The paper says: "The Vietnamese people are resolved to exercise their sacred right to self-defence to protect their independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity from the aggressive expansionists in Beijing. However, we try to maintain our friendship with the Chinese people. Vietnam wishes to settle all problems with China through negotiations and to normalize relations with it but Beijing responded with slander while hiding the truth from the Chinese people".

The paper quotes a spokesman for the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry as declaring yesterday that Vietnamese soldiers and guards at the border would unilaterally act upon the proposal made in the note of December 28, 1981, i.e., cessation, by both parites, of hostile armed actions on the occasion of Tet. "This shows the just attitude of the people and Government of Vietnam", NHAN DAN stresses.

"If China takes advantage of Vietnam's good will, the Vietnamese people and their armed forces will have to react in self-defence and the Chinese authorities will have to fully account for all consequences of their acts", NHAN DAN concludes.

[Text] Although the Chinese authorities rejected Vietnam's proposal expressed in the 28 December 1981 note of the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry sent to its Chinese counterpart suggesting an end to all armed actions and a cease-fire along the border between the two countries for a 10-day period during the coming Lunar New Year, a spokesman for the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry on Thursday issued a statement saying that Vietnamese armed forces and border guards along the border will unilaterally implement this proposal so that the people of the two countries along the border may enjoy the New Year festival in peace. This decision expresses our good will and humanitarian spirit. It conforms to the fine traditions and aspirations of the people of the two countries who want to celebrate the New Year and live in peace and friendship. This decision will create favorable conditions for an end to the tension along the Sino-Vietnamese border.

Our consistent policy always advocates solving problems concerning relations between Vietnam and China through peaceful negotiations to normalize the relations between the two countries and restore the longstanding friendship between the Vietnamese and the Chinese people. For this very reason, over the past years we have made many peace initiatives. We proposed to sign a bilateral treaty of peaceful coexistence with China. We have twice sent notes and created favorable conditions for the resumption of the Vietnam-China talks, which were unilaterally suspended by China.

The Vietnamese armed forces and people along the border have shown restraint and have not done anything else besides overcoming the consequences left behind by the war waged by 600,000 Chinese troops. But, regrettably, none of the actions of the Vietnamese side has prompted any response from the Chinese authorities. They rejected all of our peace initiatives and have continued to occupy many placed inside Vietnamese territory. They have massed many military corps close to the border, consolidated fortifications, dug trenches and conducted thousands of armed provocations against Vietnam. They have also carried out psychological warfare, sending spies and scouts into Vietnamese territory for sabotage activities.

The Chinese authorities, in close collusion with Washington and other reactionary forces, foster the genocidal Pol Pot clique and other Khmer reactionaries. They even misuse the United Nations to attack Vietnam and other Indochinese countries. They have tried by all means to stop international aid to Vietnam. In short, the Chinese authorities have been and are conducting [as heard] a many-sided war of destruction to weaken Vietnam, advancing to conquer and annex Vietnam, to realize their expansionist and hegemonist policy. However, their design has been smashed by the peoples of Vietnam, Lao and Kampuchea.

The Chinese authorities should not misunderstand our good will and sincere attitude as a sign of weakness. If they capitalize on our good will to continue hostilities and commit more crimes, they will certainly sustain heavier setbacks. The Vietnamese people are determined to use their legitimate right to self-defense.

CONTINUATION OF LAW ON MILITARY SERVICE

Chapters 4-6

[Chapters 4, 5 and 6 of SRV Military Service Law -- for the first three chapters of the SRV Military Service Law, see the 13 January DAILY REPORT, p K 10]

[Text] Chapter 4

Induction Into and Discharge From the Army

Section 1: Induction Callup

Article 21. The callup of citizens to join the army will take place from once to twice a year, in February and March and in August and September. The Council of Ministers shall decide on the number of inductees. Citizens shall be called to join the army on the orders of the minister of national defense. People's committees at all levels are responsibile for supervising the callup of citizens in their localities. According to the decisions of people's committees, commanders of military forces in districts, precincts, cities and municipalities of the province concerned call each citizen to join the army. Induction orders must be delivered to citizens 15 days before the dates of induction. With regard to localities heavily affected by natural calamities, the minister of national defense has the right to change the dates of induction for citizens in these localities.

Article 22. Inductees must report in time to the places prescribed in callup orders. If they cannot show up at prescribed dates, they must have certificates accounting for their delay from people's committees. Citizens who do not comply with induction orders shall be punished according to Point 1 of Article 69 of this law. In addition to this, they shall continue to be subject to military service callups until they are 35 years old.

Article 23. People's committees of villages, wards and towns, heads of organs, industrial enterprises and other units and establishments are responsible for:

1. Organizing the sendoffs of inductees who are personnel of organs, enterprises and establishments, and creating conditions for them to be present at the dates and in the places mentioned in callup orders.

2. Scrupulously implementing regulations and policies toward soldiers' families.

Section 2: Military Service Councils

Article 24. People's committees at all levels shall set up Military Service Councils at their levels to help them carry out the military service task in localities. Military Service Councils at all levels shall include chairmen who are people's committee chairmen; vice chairmen who are military force commanders; and members who are leading cadres of such sectors as planning, manpower, public security, public health, culture, Fatherland Front Committees, trade unions, the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union, the Women's Union and the Collective Peasants Union. Military Service Councils at all levels shall operate according to the collective principle. Their resolutions must be approved by more than half the total number of their members.

Article 25. Military Service Councils of villages, wards and towns have the duty to help the people's committees:

1. Organize propaganda among and education of citizens to perform military service scrupulously;
2. Urge citizens to register for military service;
3. Draft lists of citizens who are to be called up to join the army, who are entitled to military service deferment and who are exempt from military service;
4. Urge citizens to comply with callup orders; and
5. Supervise the implementation of the army rear service policy in localities by responsible organs and organizations.

Article 26. Military Service Councils of districts, precincts, cities and municipalities of the province concerned have the duty to help people's committees:

1. Organize physical checkups for citizens who have received induction orders;
2. Establish lists of citizens who are called up to join the army, who are entitled to military service deferment and who are exempt from military service;
3. Supervise the implementation of the army rear service policy in localities by responsible organs and organizations; and
4. Direct the activities of village, ward and town Military Service Councils.

Article 27. The Military Service Councils of provinces, municipalities directly subordinate to the central government and equivalent levels are dutybound to assist the people's committees in:

1. Guiding the activities of the Military Service Councils of districts, precincts, cities and municipalities subordinate to a province.
2. Considering and settling complaints and denunciations made by citizens concerning decisions of the people's committees of districts, precincts, cities and municipalities subordinate to a province on the callup of citizens, deferment and exemption of military service. These complaints and denunciations must be settled no later than 1 month after they are received, or 2 months for cases requiring longer investigation. Decisions of the people's committees of districts, precincts, cities and municipalities subordinate to a province must be implemented while the complaints and denunciations by citizens are under consideration.

Article 28. The checkups of persons liable to be called up are performed by the medical checkup councils of districts, precincts, cities and municipalities subordinate to a province. The results of these checkups must be publicly announced.

Section 3: Draft Deferment and Military Service Exemption

Article 29. Draft deferment shall be granted to:

1. Persons pronounced by a medical checkup council as medically unfit for active military duties. These persons must be rechecked every year to be either drafted, shifted to the reserve service or exempted from military service.
2. Sole breadwinners personally in charge of feeding other family members who are no longer or not yet fit for labor and who have no other support.
3. Sole surviving son of fallen heroes' families.

4. Researchers on scientific projects of the state as certified by ministers, chairmen of the state commissions and heads of agencies of the Council of Ministers or those of equivalent positions.

5. Students of general middle schools and vocational schools and those who are attending long-term training courses in specialized middle schools, colleges and universities.

The cases of individuals mentioned in points 2-5 above must be reconsidered every year. If the individuals are no longer qualified for deferment, they must be drafted. Those who are still granted their deferment at the age of 27 will be shifted to the reserve force branch.

Article 30. Those who are infirm and suffer from mental or other incurable diseases cited in the lists stipulated by the ministers of public health and national defense, will be exempted from military service.

Article 31. Draft deferment and exemption from military service in accordance with Articles 29 and 30 of this law will be decided upon by the people's committees of districts, precincts, cities and municipalities subordinate to a province.

The lists of those who are deferred from draft and those who are exempted from military service must be announced publicly.

Section 4: Discharge From the Army

Article 32. Noncommissioned officers and soldiers who meet the lengths of military service mentioned under Article 14 of this law shall be discharged from the army. On orders from the minister of national defense, commanders of units at the regimental level and above are responsible for the demobilization of noncommissioned officers and soldiers under their command. The date of demobilization of noncommissioned officers and soldiers must be made known to the localities, basic units and the militarymen concerned 1 month prior to the expiration of their military service.

Article 33. Noncommissioned officers and soldiers in active service may be discharged from the army earlier than scheduled in the following cases:

1. They are judged by the military medical examination board to by physically incapable of continuing military service.
2. They have family circumstances as mentioned under items 2 and 3, Article 29 of this law.

Article 34. Noncommissioned officers and soldiers, upon expiration of their military service, may volunteer to continue their military service for at least 1 year. The system governing the extended military service of noncommissioned officers and soldiers shall be regulated by the minister of national defense.

Article 35. Discharged noncommissioned officers and soldiers, within 15 days after returning to their places of residence, must register for reserve duty at the military commands of villages, city wards and towns and the military commands of districts, precincts, cities and municipalities subordinate to provinces.

Article 36. The people's committees of villages, city wards and towns and the leaders of public organs, enterprises and other grassroots-level units are responsible for:

1. Organizing the reception of returning discharged militarymen.
2. Creating conditions for discharged militarymen to quickly stabilize their life.

Chapter 5

Services of Noncommissioned Officers and Soldiers on Reserve Duty

Article 37. Reserve noncommissioned officers and soldiers are classified into Category 1 reserve militarymen and Category 2 reserve militarymen. Reserve militarymen of Category 1 consist of noncommissioned officers and soldiers who have fulfilled or overfulfilled active military service, who have been discharged from the army earlier than scheduled but have completed more than 1 year of active duty, and who have performed combat duty.

Reserve militarymen of Category 2 consist of noncommissioned officers and soldiers who have had less than 1 year of active duty, male citizens who have not yet had active military duty for reasons mentioned under Article 29 of this law and have been given reserve status, and women who have registered for military obligation as provided for under Article 4 of this law. Male citizens who are reserve militarymen of Category 2 shall be upgraded to Category 1 after completing 12 months in a training center.

Article 38. The age limits for reserve duty of noncommissioned officers are regulated as follows: Up to 50 years of age for men and 40 years of age for women.

Article 39. Based on the age brackets, male reserve militarymen are divided into three groups: Group A consists of those up to 35 years of age; Group B consists of those from 36 to 45 years of age; and Group C consists of those from 46 to 50 years of age.

Article 40. The training of reserve militarymen is regulated as follows:

1. Training duration for Group A: Reserve militarymen of Category 1 shall receive training in four phases at the most, with each phase lasting from 2 to 3 months. Reserve militarymen of Category 2 shall receive training in five phases at the most, with each phase lasting from 2 to 3 months.
2. While in Group B, reserve militarymen of both Category 1 and Category 2 shall receive training in one or two phases with each phase lasting from 1 to 2 months.
3. While in Group C, reserve militarymen of both Category 1 and Category 2 shall receive training in one phase lasting for 1 month.

Article 41. In between training phases, the minister of national defense is empowered to order the assembling of reserve forces personnel for not more than 7 days in order to inspect their combat readiness.

Article 42. The assembling of reserve forces personnel for training or combat readiness inspection for the duration of the time mentioned under Article 40 and Article 41 of this law shall be decided upon by the minister of national defense. When necessary, the minister of national defense is empowered to extend the training course for reserve militarymen for not more than 2 months or to increase the training phases for reserve militarymen of Group A and Group B, providing the total amount of time spent in training does not exceed that which is provided for under Article 40 and Article 41 of this law.

Article 43. Physical checkups for reserve militarymen shall be carried out by public health organs of districts, precincts, cities and municipalities subordinate to provinces.

Article 44. Reserve noncommissioned officers and soldiers who are past service age or found to be no longer physically fit for reserve duty shall be relieved from duty upon the decision of the military commanders of districts, precincts, cities and municipalities subordinate to the provinces.

Chapter 6

Services of Specialized Militarymen

Article 45. Specialized militarymen are those who possess the necessary professional and technical skills for command, combat, combat support and army building operations and who volunteer to serve for a long time in the army.

Article 46. If they volunteer, noncommissioned officers and soldiers who have completed their active military service or who are in reserve status, and who possess professional and technical skills, may be accepted to become specialized militarymen.

Article 47. Specialized militarymen may enter into active military service either for a period of time or on a long-term basis until the age of 50. The regulations on active military service of specialized militarymen shall be established by the Council of Ministers.

Article 48. Specialized militarymen, upon their discharge from the army, shall be transferred to reserve duty in accordance with the regulations for reserve noncommissioned officers and soldiers. Those who are fully qualified shall be given officer rank and registered for reserve officer service.

Article 58. Registration of reserve soldiers and men ready for induction shall be carried out at their places of residence according to two levels:

1. Registration at villages, wards or towns shall be placed under the responsibility of villages, ward or town military commands.
2. Registration at districts, sectors, cities, or municipalities under provinces shall be placed under the responsibility of military commands of districts, sectors, cities or municipalities under provinces.

Article 59. Reserve soldiers and men ready for induction shall, before moving to another locality, report to village, ward or town military commands and those of district, sectors, cities or municipalities under provinces to have their names deleted from registration books. Upon their arrival in new localities, they must report, within 7 days, to the village, ward or town military commands, and, within 10 days, to those of districts, sectors, cities or municipalities under provinces to have their names placed on registration books.

Article 60. For reserve soldiers and men ready for induction when there are changes in the addresses of their work or study locations, in the functions of their work or in their cultural level, they must, within 10 days, report to village, ward or town military commands for supplementary registration.

Article 61. The chiefs of agencies, enterprises and other organizations of higher echelons stationed in districts, sectors, cities or municipalities under provinces must compile a list of reserve soldiers and men ready for induction in their own installations and send it to the military commands of districts, sectors, cities or municipalities under provinces in accordance with provisions of the minister of national defense.

Article 62. Within the scope of their functions, the people's court, the people's organ of control, the security organ and other agencies concerned are responsible for coordination with military agencies of equal level in implementing provisions on managing men ready for induction and reserve soldiers.

Chapter 9

Enlistment in Accordance With the General or Regional Mobilization Order; Discharge in Accordance With the Demilitarization Order

Article 63. Upon the issuance of the general or regional mobilization order, the call for induction according to such an order or subsequent calls shall be carried out in accordance with the Council of Ministers decision and the defense minister's order.

Article 64. Upon the issuance of the general or regional mobilization order:

1. Discharge shall be suspended for those soldiers whose service time has expired.
2. Reserve soldiers must report at the right time and location as stipulated in the induction order.

Article 65. Induction exemption during wartime shall be determined by the Council of Ministers.

Article 66. During wartime, soldiers' families shall enjoy favored treatment determined by the Council of Ministers.

Article 67. Upon the issuance of the order of demilitarization of troops after the war, the discharge of soldiers will be carried out in accordance with the Council of Ministers' decision and defense minister's order.

Article 68. Discharged soldiers mentioned in Article 67 shall enjoy the privileges stipulated in Articles 55 and 56 of this law.

Chapter 10

Dealing With Violations

Article 69.

1. Those of military service age who do not correctly implement the provisions on military service registration or the orders on induction or assembly and training shall be dealt with by administrative measures according to the severity of their violations. They shall be punished through nondetention reform for a period of from 3 months to 2 years or through imprisonment from 3 months to 2 years. Those who commit violations during wartime or other compounding infractions shall be sentenced to from 6 months to 5 years' imprisonment.
2. Those who take advantage of their functions or authority to violate the provisions on military service registration or the order on induction or assembly and training, depending on the severity of their violations, shall be dealt with in accordance with administrative discipline or shall be sentenced to from 6 months to 5 years' imprisonment.
3. Those who obstruct the military service registration or the implementation of the orders on induction or assembly and training, depending on the severity of their violations, shall be dealt with by administrative measures or shall be sentenced to from 3 months to 3 years' imprisonment. Those who commit crimes mentioned in Points 2 and 3 during wartime or other compounding infractions shall receive sentences of up to 10 years' imprisonment.

Article 70. Deserters shall be dealt with in accordance with the armed forces' regulations and discipline or sentenced to from 6 months to 3 years' imprisonment. Those who commit crimes during wartime or other compounding infractions shall receive sentences of up to 15 years' imprisonment.

Article 71. Those who coverup the criminals mentioned in Point 1 of Article 69 and in Article 70 of this law, depending on the severity of their violations, shall be dealt with in accordance with administrative discipline or shall be sentenced to from 3 months to 3 years' imprisonment.

(changing "career officers" to "specialized militarymen")

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Editorial

OW141301 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1200 GMT 11 Jan 82

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 11 January editorial: "Let Our Entire People Strenuously Build the Army and Consolidate National Defense"]

[Text] Our people's armed forces are extremely gladdened by this good news: our state has promulgated the law on military service and the law on VPA officers, which were passed at the Second Session of the Seventh National Assembly. These are two laws of important significance in the building of our modern and regular people's revolutionary army [words indistinct] the socialist Vietnam fatherland.

The promulgation of these two laws, which reflects the deep concern of our party, state and people for our People's Army -- a powerful instrument of the dictatorship of the proletariat, a strong key force for defending our fatherland's independence and security -- conforms to the aspirations of our entire people and army.

Over the past 37 years of fighting and development, our constantly growing Vietnam People's Army [VPA] has fought and won resounding victories and has, along with our entire people, contributed to adding glorious pages to our nation's history. It is worthy of the confidence and love of our party, our state and our people. This glory belongs, primarily, to our venerated and beloved Uncle Ho, who founded and forged our army. This glory also belongs to our party, our state and our people, who have led, organized, trained, and fostered our army and taken it to heights of glorious armed exploits and enabled it to fulfill any task, overcome any difficulty and defeat any enemy.

The momentous current historic mission of our entire party, people and army is to successfully build socialism and firmly defend the socialist Vietnam fatherland. In order to fulfill this momentous, yet very glorious task, our army must be developed into a modernized and standarized people's revolutionary army: an increasingly powerful army which always remains combat ready, resolutely fights to firmly defend the fatherland, while positively engaging in productive labor and contributing to developing the economy and the country. Ours is an army imbued with patriotism and love of socialism, with noble proletarian internationalism; an army which is absolutely loyal to the fatherland and the people; which always preserves and further develops its fine revolutionary tradition; which remains close to the people, united with and faithful to its friends; which resolutely fights and defeats any aggressor and outstandingly fulfills any task entrusted to it.

The newly promulgated military service law, which replaces the old 1960 law, is aimed at developing our people's patriotic tradition and revolutionary heroism, implementing the people's right to collective mastery, creating conditions for Vietnamese citizens to fulfill their military service, contributing to building up a modernized and standarized people's army, strengthening national defense, and ensuring success in performing the sacred task of defending the fatherland.

The following is clearly specified in the military service law: A glorious duty of all citizens is to fulfill their military service by serving in the VPA. Performing military service includes serving on active duty in the army and serving in the reserve army. All male citizens, regardless of nationality, social stratum, faith, religion, cultural level, occupation or residence have the obligation to serve on active duty in the VPA -- with the exception of those not allowed to perform military service as dictated by law.

That law also specifies that state organs, social organizations, schools and families have a duty to motivate, educate, organize and create conditions for citizens to fulfill their military service: It specifies regulations on the draft age, the active service periods for noncommissioned officers and men, preparations for youths to serve in the army, induction, discharge from the army, deferments, exemptions for military service, the military service of reserve noncommissioned officers and men, military personnel with specialized skills, registration for military service, induction on general and local mobilization orders, handling of violations against the military service law and so forth.

The promulgation of the military service law, which consists of 11 chapters and 73 articles, is prompted by national defense requirements -- a pressing, immediate task as well as a basic, permanent, long-term task. The military service law conforms to our entire people's will and aspiration of building a powerful people's armed force, which is ready to fight, and fight well, to firmly defend the socialist fatherland, the revolutionary administration, and our entire people's lives, peaceful labor and happiness.

Along with the law on military obligation, the newly promulgated law on VPA officers, which has replaced the law promulgated in 1958, determines the VPA officers' glorious obligations in the building of the army, the consolidation of national defense and the protection of the fatherland. This law is aimed at ensuring the formation of a contingent of young and healthy officers endowed with good qualities, a high standard of knowledge and commanding competency to meet the construction and combat requirements of a regular and modern army in the protection of the socialist fatherland.

As pointed out by the law, VPA officers promoted by the state to the general, field and junior grades are divided into two categories: reenlisted or reserve officers. All citizens of the SRV who are capable of serving in the armed forces can be trained to become officers. The law also determines the obligations and benefits of VPA officers. They must remain unswervingly loyal to the fatherland, the people and the state; uphold revolutionary vigilance; satisfactorily fulfill all duties and responsibilities entrusted to them and stand ready to fight and make sacrifices in defense of the socialist fatherland. They must exemplarily implement the party's line and policies, the state laws and the armed forces' regulations and orders and display a lofty sense of discipline in their armed units. They must respect the working people's right to collective mastery, resolutely protect socialist assets and the people's lives and property, promote democracy, observe military discipline and take care to the spiritual and material lives of servicemen in their units. They must study constantly to improve their political, military, cultural, scientific, technical and professional knowledge, increase their capability to organize, command and manage troops; cultivate revolutionary ethics and strengthen their physical ability in order to be able to fulfill all tasks satisfactorily. Active and reserve officers have to serve the armed forces within their age limits.

As pointed out by the resolution of our 4th VCP Congress, defending the fatherland is a sacred obligation and a noble right of the entire people. Each citizen must be a combatant. Each street, village, hamlet, construction site and enterprise must be a solid bastion to defend the fatherland. While concentrating all our efforts on building the country, we must not lose vigilance, even for a minute, but must pay constant attention to building the all-people's national defense and a regular and modern army.

The two newly promulgated laws fully institutionalize the orientation of our party concerning the building of the all-people's national defense and people's war system in the new stage. They determine a basic direction for building a regular and modern eople's Army and constitute a strong encouragement for our people and armed forces to enthusiastically advance to fulfill all heavy but glorious tasks in the new stage of the revolution.

The administration at all levels and all organs, mass organizations, enterprises, installations and schools are dutybound to widely popularize these two laws among the people and organize their scrupulous implementation in accordance with their functions.

As the cadres and combatants of the VPA, an army born out of the people and fighting for the people, we warmly acclaim the laws on military obligation and VPA officers recently promulgated by our state. Let us express our profound gratitude to our party, our state and our people for caring for the building of our armed forces and showing their profound concern for the VPA. Together with the entire people, our armed forces pledge to scrupulously implement these two important laws, build a powerful revolutionary, regular and modern People's Army and fulfill their great historic mission of successfully building socialism and firmly defending the beloved socialist Vietnamese fatherland.

DAC LAC MILITIA COUNTERING FULRO INFLUENCE

BK131547 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] Along with promoting settled farming and a settled life and developing the economy, Dac Lac Province has paid attention to motivating the people of various ethnic minority groups to actively organize and consolidate the militia and self-defense forces in an effort to firmly maintain political security and ensure their peaceful life.

Last year the provincial military command, working in coordination with the various sectors, helped the various localities launch a propaganda campaign to popularize the state line and policies among people of the E De and Hmong ethnic groups so that they would confidently carry them out. In particular, the party committee echelons in such high mountain villages frequently harassed by the reactionaries as (Ea Tieu), (Quang Son), (Dak Prong), (Nam Nung), (Dak Genh), (Chu Bua) and (Cu Xue) made the people clearly aware of the enemy's perfidious schemes. As a result of this, they assisted the administration in discovering, quickly tracking down and destroying the reactionaries and persuaded hundreds of their family members to break away from the FULRO and return to their villages. They also encouraged hundreds of young men of draft age to volunteer for military service.

TO HUU ATTENDS THANH HOA PARTY CONGRESS

OW131323 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] According to a Thanh Hoa radio station correspondent, Thanh Hoa Province opened the first round of its 11th party organization congress on 12 January, with the participation of 526 delegates representing nearly 100,000 party members in the province. The comrades recommended by the VCP Central Committee to attend this congress included To Huu and six others.

The Thanh Hoa party organization congress will meet 7 days to study and discuss the party Central Committee documents to be presented at the forthcoming Fifth VCP Congress and will elect delegates to that congress.

MSA: PLANES FIRE ON FREIGHTER OFF PHILIPPINES

OW160057 Tokyo KYODO in English 0027 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Jan 16 (KYODO) — A South Korean crewman suffered serious bullet wounds Friday evening when a Japanese freighter sailing off Mindanao Island in the Philippines was fired on by two planes of unidentified nationality, according to reports received by the Maritime Safety Agency [MSA]. The reports said the ship also was damaged and suffered seven holes on its hull.

Maritime Safety officials said the ship attacked was the 5,307-ton Hegg of Kitanihon Oi Steamship Co of Tokyo. It was manned by a crew of 22. The officials said the ship met with the accident while sailing at a point some 40 kilometers off Mindanao Island at around 4:50 p.m. Friday (Japan Time). A South Korean cook, who was standing near the stern, suffered wounds on his leg and shoulder, they said.

The Hegg, carrying a cargo of 3,400 tons of methanol, was heading for Pusan in South Korea from Singapore via Surabaja at the time.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa told newsmen Saturday morning that he was informed by the MSA on the incident and was told that the condition of Hwan Song-chol, 30, the South Korean cook of the ship who suffered bullet wounds, was not critical. He said the identity of the two planes has not been confirmed as yet.

Maritime Safety officials said the area where the incident occurred, waters some 40 kilometers east of Mindanao Island, is included in the Philippines-claimed territorial waters. He noted that the Philippines claims waters 30 to 350 miles off its coast as territorial waters. Since most countries, including Japan, have set their territorial waters at 12 miles, however, the officials said they regard the incident as occurring on the open seas.

Maritime Safety officials said 28 other Japanese ships, including fishing boats and tankers, were fired on in territorial waters or on the open sea in the five-year period since 1977. They said, however, that the chemical tanker was the first to be attacked by planes.

Captain Discusses Attack

OW160657 Tokyo KYODO in English 0648 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 16 (KYODO) — The captain of a Japanese chemical tanker, fired on by two unidentified aircraft Friday in waters off Mindanao, the Philippines, said Saturday the airplanes were propeller-driven, single-engine light fighters.

In radio communication with the ship's owner in Tokyo, Captain Hideo Takakuua said the aircraft fired more than 100 bullets at the 5,307-ton Hegg for 15 minutes starting 5:50 p.m. (Japan Time). A South Korean cook was wounded in the legs, arms and stomach, but is in stable condition, the captain said. He said the 21 other crewmen were unhurt.

The incident followed a flight over the ship and warning shots by the two fighters, according to the captain. He said the tanker was then cruising 18 kilometers off the coast. "When we moved about 3 kilometers away from the coast, the fighters disappeared. But they returned and opened fire when the ship was 38 kilometers off the island."

The ship radioed for help but the Philippine Coast Guard did not respond, the captain added.

NODONG SINMUN DENOUNCES U.S. ARMS SALE TO TAIWAN

SK170909 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0847 GMT 17 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 17 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN Sunday comes out with a commentary titled "Unwarrantable Step" denouncing the decision of the United States to sell airplanes to Taiwan.

The author of the commentary says: The United States decided of late to sell airplanes to Taiwan. The spokesman of the Chinese Foreign Ministry strongly protested against this on January 12. Noting that the arms sale of the United States to Taiwan is a major issue affecting the sovereignty of China, he declared that China would never accept the unilateral decision of the United States.

This is an expression of the determined stand of the Chinese people not to tolerate the encroachment upon the sovereignty and dignity of the country. Taiwan is part and parcel of the inviolable territory of China. The United States officially recognized this. The Chinese people alone have the right to decide on the Taiwan problem, which is a domestic issue of China.

The aforesaid unilateral decision of the United States to sell arms to Taiwan is a violation of the accord which was reached when establishing China-U.S. diplomatic relations and an untenable act ignoring China's sovereignty and interfering in her internal affairs.

It must be noted that the United States made public its decision to sell planes to Taiwan after sending a delegate to negotiate with China on the sale of arms including planes to Taiwan. This revealed the insincerity of the United States.

Now the Chinese people are struggling for a peaceful reunification of the country. It is a unanimous desire of the Chinese people to reunify the whole country in a peaceful way by having Taiwan returned to the homeland. Having set forth constructive proposals for the country's peaceful reunification, the communist party and government of China are making sincere efforts for their implementation. The sentiments for peaceful reunification are growing among the entire Chinese people including the people of Taiwan especially after the publication of a nine-point proposal in September last year.

The Taiwan authorities, however, remain opposed to the just proposals of the Chinese Government; trampling upon the desire of the people for reunification, they make free with the balderdash that the old system must be restored in the mainland.

The decision of the United States to transfer arms to Taiwan at such moment cannot be construed otherwise than an attempt to create distrust between the people of the mainland and Taiwan and obstruct reunification.

For all its talk about developing relations with China, the United States still refuses to renounce its old stand towards her. After recognizing that Taiwan is part and parcel of the Chinese territory and the government of the People's Republic of China is the only legitimate government of China, the United States faked up "Taiwan Relations Act" and has constantly supplied arms to Taiwan, treating it as "an independent political entity." There comes from the U.S. ruling circles today even the provocative outcry that the arms supply to Taiwan is in the "national interests" of the United States. How can they behave like this, if they do not seek to keep Taiwan under the control of the United States?

This reveals the double-faced tactics of the U.S. ruling circles which say one thing and do another and contradicts the trend of the times and the desire of the people. If the United States persists in its wrong attitude towards China, it will not be beneficial to it.

RENMIN RIBAO CITED ON U.S. ARMS SALES TO TAIWAN

SK160813 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0804 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Beijing, January 15 (KCNA) -- The Chinese paper "PEOPLE'S DAILY" on January 14 carried a commentary headlined "Act of Looking Down Upon the Other" by a XINHUA NEWS AGENCY reporter denouncing the U.S. Government's decision to offer weapons to Taiwan.

The commentary points out that the U.S. Government unilaterally decided on January 11 to supply weapons to Taiwan in defiance of China's stern opposition and brands this as an act of violating the sovereignty of China and interfering in her internal affairs, which would naturally give rise to the indignation of the Chinese people and public circles.

Declaring that the Chinese people cannot but lodge a strong protest with the United States against its authoritarian and high-handed act, the commentary notes: The U.S. supply of weapons to Taiwan is a question of principle violating the sovereignty of China. The United States has gravely threatened the development of the China-U.S. relations, transferring weapons to Taiwan.

The Chinese side is negotiating with the U.S. side to settle this problem, but, in the negotiation period, the United States decided to supply fighter planes, far from suspending the sale of arms accessories to Taiwan.

This is, indeed, an act of looking down upon the other. The China-U.S. relations depend on whether or not the policy-makers of Washington choose a right road on the principle of respecting China's sovereignty, rejecting the interference of the political blind.

PEACE GROUP DENOUNCES U.S. BUILDUP IN SOUTH

SK172216 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 16 Jan 82

["Text" of January statement of the Korean National Peace Committee]

[Text] From the outset of the year, ill-boding military moves threatening peace in Korea and running counter to her peaceful reunification have been apparent in South Korea. As is known, the U.S. imperialists plan to deploy an army intelligence unit, reinforce U.S. troops in South Korea and increase the firepower of military airplanes, tanks and artillery.

This arms buildup of the U.S. imperialists is their gravest scheme in recent years in South Korea. U.S. military activities against the Korean people clearly are reaching a very dangerous stage. The United States had once acted as if it were an apostle of peace, advertising the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea. But it has replaced the troop withdrawal signboard with the arms buildup signboard and is planning to deploy an electronic intelligence unit. This concerns people who desire peace in Korea and her peaceful reunification.

The Korean National Peace Committee denounces the reckless war scheme of the U.S. imperialists, seeing it as a deliberate act to disrupt the Korean armistice and fan the flames of a new war and a vicious criminal act threatening peace in Asia and the world. Korea and the United States are far from each other, separated by a wide ocean. The Korean Peninsula, in the Far East, has become the hotbed of war of the United States, located several thousand miles away; the Korean people, who want to live in peace, are concerned by the U.S. imperialists' continuous threats of war. This is an abnormality which cannot be justified.

None of our people has asked the U.S. imperialists for military occupation or an intervention policy. Shamelessly, the U.S. imperialists are trying to maintain a colonial rule in South Korea, in line with their world strategy.

While pursuing the reconstruction of a powerful United States and a policy of strength, U.S. ruling circles have followed the road of holding on to South Korea to achieve their aggressive scheme. While rapidly increasing their troops in South Korea and the surrounding area, the U.S. war maniacs have been zealously preparing this region as the largest military base in Asia for a modern war. They are unhesitatingly attempting to convert South Korea into a nuclear war base by deploying a large number of nuclear weapons, medium-range nuclear missiles and even neutron bombs.

With the beginning of 1982, the U.S. imperialists, announcing a plan for a large-scale war exercise called Team Spirit '82, have been busy preparing for this war exercise in the continental United States and South Korea. By instigating the Japanese reactionaries, they have convened a U.S.-Japan security consultative meeting -- a wicked military conference plotting a Korean war. It is clear they have not made these preparations and held this meeting to beat the drum of peace.

Every fact shows that the U.S. imperialists are ringleaders who have heightened tension in Korea and who want to ignite a war. They are not the evangelists of peace. If the imperialists increase weapons everywhere and frequently play with fire, a war will certainly erupt. If the U.S. imperialists' war maneuvers ignite the fuse of war, this will lead to the outbreak of a nuclear war because nuclear weapons are deployed in South Korea. The flames of war will easily spread from Korea to Asia and the rest of the world.

Peace in Korea is linked to peace in Asia and the world. For peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea and for peace and security in Asia and the world, the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers for aggression and war should end immediately. The U.S. imperialists should stop criminal war maneuvers which are not beneficial to the U.S. people or the Korean and Asian peoples and immediately withdraw from South Korea, taking along all their aggressive forces, including nuclear weapons.

The treacherous Chon Tu-hwan clique -- the lackey of the U.S. imperialists -- has promoted the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers for aggression and war in South Korea. The most treacherous, barbarous fascist regime has emerged in South Korea in accordance with the aggressive demand of the United States. The administration of the military hooligans is aimed at executing the policy of the U.S. masters for aggression and war.

The antipopular crimes of the Chon Tu-hwan ring, which has left South Korea as the U.S. imperialists' colonial military base and run amok to implement their policy for aggression and war, should be ended. This treacherous fascist regime, which no one wants, should be overthrown.

We believe that the peace-loving people in Asia and the world, paying attention to the commotion raised by the U.S. imperialists in South Korea to increase their military capabilities and to stage war exercises, will wage a joint struggle to deter and thwart their criminal maneuvers to provoke a new war.

CPRF SCORES U.S. BUILDUP, RECALLS DPRK RESTRAINT

SK160918 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] The Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF] published a statement denouncing the dangerous military rackets of the U.S. imperialists in South Korea in building up aggressive armed forces and intensifying war exercises.

The statement is as follows: At a time when all the Korean people unanimously aspire for the nation's peace and peaceful reunification, the U.S. imperialists are raising dangerous military rackets by building up aggressive armed forces in South Korea and intensifying war exercises, running counter to our people's aspiration.

According to reports, the U.S. imperialists are planning to organize a new army electronic intelligence unit composed of 500-600 men and deploy it in South Korea by September. Thus they intend to intensify espionage activities against our northern half by combining the method of gathering ground intelligence with their former methods of spying through reconnaissance satellites and aerial photography.

The U.S. imperialists are reinforcing their aggressive armed forces in South Korea, stressing intensification of an offensive capability and the mobility of the ground forces. They intend to deploy a new group of A-10 close support antitank aircraft, together with more than 900 men by this spring. They are also said to be increasing the antitank helicopters loaded with antitank missiles, shipping in M-60 tanks and reinforcing the firepower of the field artillery.

Foreign news reports have pointed out that this is the first full-scale reinforcement of U.S. forces in South Korea since 1977, when the withdrawal of the U.S. ground forces was announced. Simultaneous with the announcement of the program for a buildup of combat strength, the U.S. imperialists announced their plan to stage, beginning in February, a large-scale war exercise called "Team Spirit 1982" against the northern half of the republic. Such an alarming military move by the U.S. imperialists is a very dangerous racket which one sees only on the eve of war. It is arousing the deep concern of the entire Korean people and of all the world's peace-loving people.

The CPRF sternly denounces the U.S. imperialists' frantic military rackets, regarding them as a grave challenge to the entire Korean people and the world's progressive people who want the independent and peaceful reunification of our country and intolerable criminal acts menacing peace in Asia and the world. The buildup of aggressive armed forces by the U.S. imperialists and their intensified war exercises in South Korea are premeditated acts for endangering peace in our country, barring peaceful reunification and provoking a criminal war of aggression.

The U.S. imperialists, openly implementing the policy of force, are attaching importance to South Korea in order to implement their policy. They are remaining in South Korea and actively stepping up preparations for new war provocations, completely revoking their plan for the pullout of U.S. troops which they once put forward merely as a formality.

They are planning to deploy medium-range nuclear missiles and nuclear [as heard] bombs in South Korea. Furthermore, they are supporting in every way the development of South Korea's war industry by continually turning over great quantities of military equipment and weapons of mass destruction to the puppets. The U.S. imperialsts have even formed a tripartite military system by dragging in the South Korean puppets and Japan. They have dispatched the Japanese Self-Defense Forces to South Korea and have let them participate in joint training against the northern half of the republic.

The U.S. imperialists' war clamors, intensifying daily, have brought the situation in our country to the highest pitch of strain and have created a dangerous touch-and-go situation in which a war may break out at any moment.

This notwithstanding, the U.S. imperialists are raising trite outcries over a fictitious arms buildup in the North and a threat of southward invasion. But this reminds us of a thief crying "Stop thief!" It is now a publicly recognized fact that we have never reinforced arms nor have we any intention of invading the South.

Even when extreme confusion was created in South Korea due to the October incident [October 1979 assassination of Pak Chong-hui], we hoped that the South Korean situation would be settled in a way compatible with the national aspiration for peace and peaceful reunification. We made important proposals for opening the path for the nation to advance through unity, collaboration and reunification and made every sincere effort to realize these proposals. Even when the Kwangju people's uprising took place in South Korea, we hoped the situation would develop to the benefit of democracy and the nation's peaceful reunification, as desired by the South Korean people.

Even today, when the Chon Tu-hwan clique is running amok with division and war at the instigation of the U.S. imperialists while crying about a theory of reunification in the next century, confrontation and reunification by crushing communists, we are holding fast to the stand for an early achievement of the nation's peaceful reunification through the establishment of a confederal state. The U.S. imperialists cannot overturn this fact by any means.

In raising a frenzied war clamor with a hue and cry over someone's threat and military superiority, the U.S. imperialists seek to put down the anti-U.S. sentiments and desire for democracy and peaceful reunification rapidly growing among the South Korean people and buttress the military fascists by force of arms, thereby keeping a tight hold permanently on South Korea and realizing their aggressive designs on the whole of Korea. But this is an anachronistic dream. Gone are the days when they could commit aggression and rule others by strength.

The U.S. imperialists must not mistake our consistent peace-loving efforts as a sign of weakness but must know that there is a limit to our people's patience. They should act with discretion, pondering over what grave consequences might be entailed if arms buildup and confrontation are fostered in our country.

They must immediately stop the arms buildup and war exercises and pull out of South Korea without delay, taking along the weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear arms, and all combat equipment.

If, defying our repeated warnings, they continue along the adventurous road of aggression and war, sticking to the stand of strength, they will be held entirely responsible for the consequences.

CHON TU-HWAN CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT RUMORED

SK160434 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] There is a rumor that Chon Tu-hwan plans a constitutional amendment to gain long-term power. This information has been leaked from an official at Chongwadae. The main points of the constitutional amendment are that the presidential tenure would be shortened to 4 years and the restriction on another term would be lifted.

The source says that Chon Tu-hwan promised he would step down from the presidency after 7 years and that he supported a peaceful transfer of power. The informant says that Chon Tu-hwan, however, has now disavowed his promise and dreams of remaining in power forever, claiming there is no one to replace him as dictator.

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 16 (YONHAP) -- The United Nations Command in Korea proposed Friday that the 410th Military Armistice Commission be held Jan. 23 at Panmunjom.

North Korea had earlier proposed that the MAC meeting be convened Saturday without giving any reason for calling the meeting.

ROK-JAPAN PREPARATORY TALKS CONCLUDE 15 JAN

SK160137 Seoul YONHAP in English 0134 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 16 (YONHAP) -- South Korean and Japanese officials Friday concluded two days of preparatory talks for their foreign ministers' meeting, which is to deal with Korea's standing request for Japanese Government loans, without agreeing on the exact dates for the proposed ministerial conference.

They agreed, however, to hold the ministers' talks "at an early date," and have one or two more rounds of preparatory contacts to make the necessary arrangements, South Korean officials said.

Sources at the Korean Foreign Ministry said, meanwhile, that the next working-level talks were likely to be held in Tokyo in early February, and that "if things proceed smoothly," the foreign ministers of the two Asian neighbors could have their meeting in March.

Choe Tong-chin, director-general for Asian Affairs at the Korean Foreign Ministry, who served as the chief Korean delegate, told Korean reporters that this week's meeting has helped enhance understanding of each other's position, and paved the way for a possible compromise in the future.

Choe said that, in an effort to provide data for a "political solution" to the loan issue, the Korean side briefed the Japanese on those projects of South Korea's Fifth Five-Year Development Plan which are to be financed by Japanese loans.

Korean sources said that the Japanese side showed "considerable" sympathy for Seoul's position calling for a political consideration of its request for six billion U.S. dollars in Tokyo's concessional loans, and suggested that a Korean-Japanese summit meeting could be held during the first half of this year to provide a breakthrough on the issue.

KOREA HERALD Report

[Text] The government has briefed the Japanese delegation which took part in the preliminary talks for a Korea-Japan foreign ministers' conference on 12 projects contained in the 1982-1986 Economic and Social Development Plan, it was learned yesterday.

A Ministry of Foreign Affairs official said, "The government explained 12 development projects to the extent needed for a political decision by Japan on the amount of the loans requested by Korea." However, he denied it was the project-by-project examination which Japan had insisted on prior to the settlement of the $6 billion loan issue at a foreign ministers' conference.

On Friday, the second day, officials, headed by Director-General of the Asian Affairs Bureau Akitane Kiuchi, visited the Economic Planning Board and the Ministry of Finance to hear the explanation concerning the current development plan.

Another ranking official said that it is very likely to have one more round of "expanded talks" in Tokyo next month, in which officials of economic as well as foreign ministries of the two countries will attend. "The talks in Seoul were satisfactory, a stepping stone for a foreign ministers' conference," he said.

The Japanese delegates, who had two rounds of talks with their Korean counterparts Thursday and Friday, left Seoul shortly after a breakfast meeting hosted by Minister of Foreign Affairs No Sin-yong at his official residence yesterday.

TONG-A ILBO COMMENTS ON U.S.-CHINA DILEMMA

SK141514 Seoul TONG-A ILBO in Korean 14 Jan 82 p 2

[Editorial: "The United States, Communist China and Taiwan -- Maintenance Of Status Quo Should Take Precedence Over Making A Choice"]

[Text] The United States and Communist China are now in a delicate situation over the sale of weapons to Taiwan. In the face of strong opposition from Communist China, the United States has refused to sell to Taiwan the sophisticated FX fighter planes which Taiwan has long requested. Despite such a U.S. decision, Communist China is reported to be strongly determined to force the United States to promise not to sell any weapons to Taiwan in the future, including the $100 million of military hardware and parts which the Reagan administration had been expected to sell to Taiwan. Communist China has hinted it would downgrade its diplomatic relations with the United States if its demands are not met.

Judging from this, Communist China appears to be considering turning clearly to its advantage the uneasy relations with the United States: relations which began to deteriorate over the question of Taiwan when the Reagan administration took office.

With the U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam, the relative decline of U.S. national strength and with the strengthening of Soviet military forces in the Asian and Pacific regions, the first policy choice for the United States is to strengthen the defense capabilities of its allies such as Japan and South Korea in order to make up for weakened U.S. military strength in the Asian region. The second choice we deem the United States should make is to curb the Soviet Union by maintaining strategic relations with Communist China; in other words, by pursuing a U.S.-Communist China joint strategy against the Soviet Union. This was the Carter administration's chief reason for allowing Communist China into membership in the anti-Soviet joint front, regarding Communist China as a semi-ally.

In May 1978, Brzezinski, then U.S. presidential assistant, visited Beijing and explained to Communist Chinese authorities top secret documents which summed up U.S. world strategy. He even said that a strong Communist China, which is stable and modernized, is good for the United States. Following the normalization of diplomatic relations between the United States and Communist China in January 1979, the then U.S. Secretary of Defense Brown visited Beijing; simultaneously, the Soviet Union made its incursion into Afghanistan. These events spurred the United States and Communist China into accelerating military cooperation.

The United States has maintained the principle of not exporting offensive weapons such as missiles or fighter planes to Communist China. But it has already been reported that the United States has been exporting sophisticated technology and equipment which can be used for military purposes to Communist China. In particular, it has been reported that the United States has been using Communist China as a base to collect information about the Soviet Union.

Then the Reagan administration took office and the honeymoon between the two countries came to a halt. Reagan himself repeatedly said during his presidential campaign that he wanted to restore official relations with Taiwan. In addition, The Netherlands in February 1980 approved the export of two submarines to Taiwan. Communist China, figuring there must have been Reagan administration approval behind Holland's export of the submarines to Taiwan, has been suspicious about the Reagan administration's policy.

At any rate, the question of weapons sales to Taiwan has certainly placed both the Reagan administration and the current Communist Chinese regime in a troubled situation. If the Reagan administration stops all sales of weapons to Taiwan, Reagan will face a strong protest from the nation's conservative forces -- the Taiwan lobby. And if the sale of weapons to Taiwan goes unopposed, Communist China's pragmatic trio which includes Deng Xiaoping will certainly be in great difficulty.

Realistically speaking, Taiwan's purchase of weapons will pose no military threat to Communist China, nor is it likely that Communist China will invade Taiwan with military force in the near future. However, for China, Taiwan's purchase of U.S. weapons may be something it cannot tolerate -- in view of the "principles" so much emphasized among Asian countries.

Also, in view of the traditional, deep-rooted conservative forces in the United States who elected him president and who have long maintained relations with Taiwan, Reagan cannot, in fact, deal with the issue simply on the basis of opting between the two choices.

All things considered, the Reagan administration is likely to choose a China policy giving priority to Communist China in consideration of its strategy against the Soviet Union and to maintain or develop relations with Communist China. Nevertheless, the Reagan administration should get a promise from Communist China not to use military force against Taiwan; in other words, a promise to maintain the status quo -- a minimum condition for pacifying the Congress, which is strongly influenced by conservative forces.

PRESIDENT CHON TO ADDRESS NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

SK160133 Seoul YONHAP in English 0123 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 10 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan will deliver a New Year address at the National Assembly late next week to elaborate on government policy programs for 1982.

The National Assembly will be called into session Jan. 22-23 at Chon's request, during which it is also to act on a bill calling for parliamentary approval of the appointment of Yu Chang-sun as prime minister.

Chon's address will mark the first time in 15 years that the president makes an appearance before the National Assembly at the beginning of the year, to reveal a wide range of state affairs slated for that year. So far, presidents have made these disclosures via New Year press conferences.

Chief government spokesman Yi Kwang-pyo, emerging from a Cabinet meeting Friday afternoon, said that the government's request for a special assembly session reflects President Chon's determination to firmly establish a democratic system, through a cooperative relationship between the government and the National Assembly.

Yi, who is concurrently culture-information minister, noted that the government has not asked for the convening of an extraordinary assembly session to present its major policy measures since 1968.

Chon intends to normalize the relationship between the government and the assembly, in view of the "extreme confrontation and animosity" between the two branches in the past, which resulted in the suspension of the presidential policy statement to the assembly, he said.

A highly-placed government source said that the presidential move would contribute to forging a "constructive atmosphere" for the embodiment of new politics among the government, the National Assembly and the political parties.

Report on Rangoon Talks

BK160648 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 16 Jan 82 pp 1, 10

[Excerpt] Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila yesterday told his Burmese counterpart U Chit Hlaing in Rangoon that Thailand was taking steps to prevent arms and ammunition from reaching the anti-government Burmese minority groups on the Thai-Burmese border. "Sitthi explained Thailand's clear position of non-support for the Burmese minority groups during his discussions with the Burmese foreign minister," according to a report filed by the Thai delegation to Bangkok last night.

Sitthi, who is due to return from a three-day visit to Rangoon today, also told the Burmese minister that Deputy Premier Gen Prachuap Suntharangkun will visit Burma soon to discuss details of joint cooperation on the suppression of narcotics, crop substitution and drug trafficking.

Sitthi told U Chit Hlaing that Thailand continued to be concerned that Vietnam had extended its western border to Thailand and that this was unacceptable. "It is a principal reason why Thailand is so involved with the Kampuchean situation," said the official report from the Thai delegation.

The two foreign ministers discussed the regional situation, particularly the role of superpowers and their rivalry in Southeast Asia.

On economic affairs, Thailand proposed for consideration several projects for cooperation including harnessing the Salween River for power generation and irrigation, technical exchange concerning the development of oil and mining resources and exchange in the field of agriculture.

The expansion of air services between the two countries was also discussed. Thailand is ready to send a high-ranking delegation for detailed talks on the matter, Sitthi said.

Delegation's Departure

The visiting minister and his delegation visited the martyrs mausoleum at 0800 this morning and laid a wreath at the tomb of the national leader, Gen Aung San. They also visited the Shwedagon Pagoda and donated cash for the pagoda fund.

At 1000 this morning, the Thai foreign minister and his delegation met with the Burmese team led by Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing at the annex building of the Foreign Ministry and continued talks on matters of common interest and regional issues. Also present at the talks were Deputy Foreign Minister U Tin Ohn, Director General U Tin Tun of the Political Affairs Department, Director U Ohn Gyaw, Thai Undersecretary of State for Foreign Affairs Kasemsamoson Kasemsi, Thai Ambassador to Burma Phirat Itsarasena and Director General of the Political Affairs Department Asa Sarasin and party.

KAMPUCHEA URGES PROMOTION OF ORGANIZATIONAL WORK

BK101556 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1100 GMT 9 Jan 82

[KAMPUCHEA article: "Promote, Consolidate and Improve Organizational Work in Order To Fulfill the Needs of the Revolution" -- date not given]

[Text] Organization is a method of correlation, a linking of the activities of each section in the overall organism comprising the system of leadership and control of the party and state. To organize is to define and allocate manpower, position, duty and work procedure in each activity; to determine the targets and objectives of man's activities; and to rationalize the activities of man. Organization, through combination and systematization, creates a wealth of collective energy, energy that individuals acting alone can never generate.

When the party has a correct line, good or bad organizational work stands as the factor determining the success or failure of its line. When the party wields power and has to lead in all areas of social activity, organizational work becomes a most difficult and complicated endeavor because it has to be undertaken at a time when society is developing steadily. If organizational work does not conform with the party's objectives and the law governing the development of these objectives, the organizational work will become a burden that may impede or delay development. On the other hand, if organizational work conforms with the social situation, it takes on a revolutionary quality that helps to promote and enhance the party's objectives.

For these reasons, the great Lenin wrote: Once power is in its hands, the socialist revolution's most difficult and important domain is that of the organizational task.

With regard to Kampuchea, following the historic victory of 7 January 1979, our organizational work passed through a most difficult and complex period, for we had to rebuild a Marxist-Leninist party, establish a state apparatus and create a rank of cadres starting from scratch. At the same time, we had to struggle to build new ways of thinking and shed the ugly and poisonous influence of the old ideas and organization left behind by the Pol Pot regime. However, thanks to the wise leadership of the party, with particular thanks to the insights of the fourth party congress -- the accurate compass; thanks to the excellent and fruitful experience of other fraternal Marxist-Leninist parties; and thanks to the lofty stand of struggle taken by the cadres and party members at all levels, our organizational work has created fundamental conditions for the advancement of the PRK. We successfully organized the fourth party congress. We proceeded with the elections for a National Assembly. The Constitution was adopted. State institutions at all levels were established. The rank of cadres was expanded from the central to the grassroots levels. At the same time, the building of the revolutionary forces has realized most encouraging results.

In sum, regarding the twin tasks of defending and building the fatherland, we have pooled our resources to carry them out with commendable success. Meanwhile, the struggle to score new successes in these areas is becoming increasingly enthusiastic and bringing us more experiences in our revolutionary struggle. Therefore, the year 1982 can be seen as a period during which we can draw on our experiences in order to examine and improve our efforts with the aim of consolidating and deepening our organizational work so that it will be more effective and more fully able to meet all the needs of the revolution in the new stage.

The recent national meeting on organizational work, held at the end of 1981, put forward the following five-point task for organizational work in 1982:

1. Build and strengthen all organizational networks from the central to the grassroots levels in order to successfully implement the two important tasks of fighting the enemy and developing production. In this regard, we must pay special attention to rallying our forces to strengthen the districts and localities of various units, for this is the place where the masses can be directly agitated to increase their defense and construction efforts. It is imperative to discard a rigid organization which does not clearly distribute functions, does not clearly specify work procedure, does not determine responsible authorities and lacks coordination. At the same time, it is necessary to be unafraid of transferring cadres who cause harm, engage in malpractice or cannot be corrected and replacing them with well-qualified cadres. Cadres must have not only a revolutionary stand and a sense of loyalty, but the ability to grasp and creatively implement the political line and tasks prescribed by the party and state. They must be endowed with dynamism to accomplish work, be possessed of a lofty sense of responsibility, have the courage to admit their own mistakes and dare to correct them.

2. Build and develop core groups and the party, especially on the basis of quality, in order to enhance the party's leadership in all fields so that it will reach the grassroots level and spread to all sectors and echelons. Good persons are not found only in meetings or courses. Through the enthusiastic and systematic mass movement, thanks to having gone through the combat and productive movements of the masses repeatedly and through successive responsible tasks, any good, outstanding elements among the masses who set the pace and stand as good examples for the masses in all tasks of the revolution must be introduced into core groups and the party. We must always heighten the spirit of revolutionary vigilance to prevent the enemy or opportunistic elements from disguising themselves. In analyzing who is right and who is wrong, one must rely on the opinion of the collective and must use the accepted line as the yardstick to avoid self-opinionated selection based on sentiment or irregular practice. It is imperative to clearly define the rules and regulations of the party and the role of party chapters, to practice criticism and self-criticism, to eliminate all inactive phenomena and unrevolutionary views and to be determined to eliminate unhealthy culture.

3. Build a massive and strong rank of revolutionary cadres, for this is a most urgent requirement that can effectively influence the activities of all party and state organizations to ensure the success of the revolution. Without cadres, the line will be nothing but letters on paper. A good line produces good cadres, but good cadres complement and expand the line, making it brighter and stronger for the masses and guaranteeing the success of the line as desired.

It is imperative to firmly grasp the six principles concerning the judgment of cadres, particularly the principle of judgment dealing with political qualities. Good cadres must have good political qualities. This is an essential requirement that cannot be overlooked. However, in the progress of the revolution and in order to retain mastery of the situation, cadres must diligently strive to study and constantly improve their qualities. Leading cadres, more than anyone else, must be the models in study. They must know how to combine study at school with study in the mass agitation movement and in all actual work, enthusiastically and ceaselessly exhorting others to think and sum up their experiences in order to feed and raise their level of comprehension and thereby improve their qualities and overcome their shortcomings.

In work, cadres must rely on the requirements of the tasks at hand and must guarantee the principle of collective democracy. They must also uphold loyalty, objectivity and justice in order to understand their fellow cadres.

In order to correctly assess the value of cadres, it is imperative to discard the spirit of cronyism, bigotry and favoritism and to uproot the flatterers, sycophants and parasites around us. It is necessary to promote, develop and encourage the establishment of a rank of technical cadres to create conditions in which they can expand all their possibilities in the service of the socialist fatherland by organizing them in accordance with their abilities.

It should be firmly understood that scientific and technical socialism are closely linked. Not only must controlling cadres grasp Marxism-Leninism as the political line, but they must be specialists in their respective fields. They must clearly understand and grasp their work and understand the advancement of science and technology and the organizational procedure of the administration in their own fields. Only then can the tasks of the revolution be fulfilled. All cadres must be gentle and humble; have a deep sense of solidarity and collectiveness; fully respect discipline; and discard all phenomena of laziness, greed, complacency, self-importance and oppression of the masses.

4. Along with the building of the rank of cadres, efforts must be made to strengthen all organizations and establish appropriate frameworks in accordance with the spirit of respecting quality rather than quantity. It is necessary to clearly define or further improve the position and responsibility of each organization and correctly determine, in accordance with the principles and established rules, all the conditions set for the distribution of duty and cooperation among the organizations in order to achieve maximum effectiveness in the work of each organization. It is necessary to be intelligent in opposing the spirit of bigotry. It is also necessary to strictly adhere to the rules by setting up each organization in accordance with the objectives and needs of the revolutionary tasks. For the work, the organization and the organizational procedures of each sector cannot be identical. They are both related to the overall organizational principles and to the individual target of each sector. Such organizations must also be free to change in accordance with the stages of its correlations and the degree and volume of development of the given sector. Only then can development be expected to advance ceaselessly and firmly. At the same time, efforts must be made to avoid generating tasks only to please individuals or expand quantity. Instead, cadres must be formed because there is a genuine need for their role. Whatever is unnecessary or does not serve the revolution must not be set up.

5. Ceaselessly struggle to increase and strengthen internal solidarity by basing oneself on the unanimity of line and revolutionary views. On this basis, efforts must be made to generate mutual loyalty and respect in accordance with the established principles while capitalizing on the respect for collective democracy and collective leadership. We must resolutely eliminate the dangerous individualistic disease which manifests itself in the phenomena of rankism, egoism, greed, despotism, liberalism and personal hatred, all of which are sources of internal splits within the rank of cadres and can isolate the party and state from the masses. We must fight and oppose the degeneration of cadres through the consistent implementation of criticism and self-criticism in a comrade-to-comrade spirit and with the intention of helping each other improve behavior.

In sum, the organizational task is a heavy task, but it is important and decisive for the success of the revolutionary line. In order to carry out this task, one must have a clear-cut revolutionary stand, resolutely adhere to the line of the party, and be the core in analyzing, and rely on the intelligence of the collectivity to shed light on and understand, the inner life of the cadres and the development and requirements of each task as well as the potential of individuals in order to settle problems. Only then can we, step by step, consolidate the firm advance of the revolution toward building a pure socialist Kampuchean fatherland in response to the aspiration of our people.

AFP ON 'PURGE' IN PARTY, PEN SOVAN IN SRV

BK181058 Hong Kong AFP in English 1016 GMT 18 Jan 81

[By Xavier Baron]

[Excerpts] Bangkok, 18 Jan (AFP) -- The Cambodian Government in Phnom Penh has called for a purge of the already thin ranks of party cadres in order to root out the unqualified and those who followed a personality cult.

The commentary came a month after the ouster of former party boss and head of government Pen Sovan, officially for health reasons. Heng Samrin now heads both the party and the state. According to unconfirmed reports, Pen Sovan is currently in Vietnam. His departure was said to have been followed by a series of arrests of leading officials.

Cambodian Foreign Minister Hun Sen said in Phnom Penh yesterday [16 January GMT time] there had been no arrests. He added that Industry Minister Keo Chanda, who vanished from the public eye several months months ago, was resting, as was Pen Sovan. Another high official, Ros Samay, of whom there had been no news for some time, had "returned," according to Hun Sen. The two officials did, however, lose their leadership posts in the "front for the edification of the fatherland" in elections at the end of December.

AFP: HUN SEN RULES OUT TALKS WITH OPPOSITION

OW162002 Paris AFP in English 1921 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 16 Jan (AFP) -- Former Kampuchean head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk, former Premier Son Sann and the Khmer Rouge are "traitors and losers" and the pro-Vietnamese Heng Samrin regime will not negotiate with them under any circumstances, Kampuchean Deputy Premier Hun Sen said today.

"When these people were in power they repressed us, and now they want to negotiate," said Hun Sen, who also serves as foreign minister and is considered a possible future Kampuchean prime minister. He was referring to the Khmer People's National Liberation Front led by Son Sann, the Khmer Rouge, and a third anti-Vietnamese Kampuchean resistance group backing Prince Sihanouk.

"We did not spill our blood in order to compromise with traitors," he said. "Their only alternative is, first, to revert to ordinary citizens, then, to lay down their arms and either consider themselves prisoners of war or surrender." Hun Sen, himself a former Khmer Rouge, discounted any chance that the Sihanouk and Son Sann factions could deal with Phnom Penh authorities "on an equal footing."

Now a member of the policymaking arm of the People's Revolutionary Party of Kampuchea (PRPK), Hun Sen sharply criticized Thailand, accusing it of having sheltered "the Khmer Rouge murderers" who "one day may threaten the ruling power in Bangkok itself."

He denied that the recent departure of ousted Kampuchean Communist Party chief Pen Sovan represented a softening in attitude with regard to the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, saying that ASEAN "did not experience Khmer Rouge genocide and cannot understand the suffering of the Khmer people."

"But we are optimistic," he added. "We are convinced that once ASEAN understands that the situation is irreversible and that Kampuchea is stable, it will change its policy toward us."

"Certain people in ASEAN oppose us because they are forced to," he said. "But others realize that Chinese influence poses a danger to the region."

Hun Sen denied reports that 20 party members had been arrested, saying that one of them, Keo Chanda, had left "for a rest" and would return soon, and that another, Ros Samay, had left his post as economy minister in 1980, but had returned.

He said reinforcement of the PRPK was in the interests of all Kampucheans. "Experience has shown us that division is the greatest danger," he said. "The role of an individual as leader is incompatible with the leadership role of the collective and can lead to division and war."

SRV ENVOY DISCUSSES PRC CEASE-FIRE WITH HUN SEN

BK180634 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0403 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 18 Jan (SPK) -- During his meeting with Hun Sen, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs, in Phnom Penh last Saturday [16 January], Vietnamese Ambassador Ngo Dien briefed him on Vietnam's 28 December 1981 proposal to the Chinese side for implementing a cease-fire in the Sino-Vietnamese border regions from 20 to 29 January on the occasion of the Lunar New Year, and declared that Vietnam will unilaterally implement its proposal, which China has rejected.

The Vietnamese ambassador denounced the hostile policy of the Chinese Government toward Vietnam, and stressed: If the Chinese side stubbornly undertakes provocative actions and other activities on the occasion of the traditional Lunar New Year for [as received] the population in the border regions, Vietnam will exercise its right to self-defense, and China must bear full responsibility for the consequences of its action.

Minister of Foreign Affairs Hun Sen greeted and voiced support for the good will proposal of the SRV, and energetically condemned China for pursuing a hostile policy toward Vietnam. Minister Hun Sen reaffirmed the militant solidarity of the Kmapuchean people with the just struggle of the fraternal Vietnamese people.

THAILAND'S 'ACT OF AGGRESSION' CONDEMNED

BK160950 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0420 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 16 Jan (SPK) -- Do the Thai authorities want to play pirates? That is what one might ask oneself in the wake of the 28 December attack on a Kampuchean patrol boat by three Thai Navy boats in Kampuchea's territorial waters. After having attacked the Kampuchean ship, the Thais forcibly removed five members of its crew and announced that they would be prosecuted.

During the 13 January press conference, a Thai military spokesman claimed that the Kampuchean ship in question was originally a Thai fishing boat captured by Kampuchean coast guards and modified for military use! This is both a lie and a slander characteristic of the Thai authorities' attitude toward Kampuchea since the overturn of the genocidal Pol Pot clique 3 years ago.

It is Bangkok that facilitated the flight of the Kampuchean people's assassins and thousands of their Beijing advisers. Despite the fact that it repeatedly professed itself to be neutral, Bangkok has harbored and supplied all stripes of reactionary Khmers, from the Pol Pot criminals to most notorious traitors, such as Sihanouk and Son Sann. It is Bangkok that is in the forefront of those who give them political and material support to prevent the rebirth of the Kampuchean people. It is Bangkok that in an increasingly gross manner, is interfering in the internal affairs of Kampuchea, going so far as to use the vilest maneuvers in an attempt to impose the form of government on our people.

A more serious fact is that Bangkok has given direct military support to the Pol Pot assassins by providing artillery cover fire for their infiltrations into Kampuchea, and sending its aircraft to spy on our country and its boats to violate Kampuchean territorial waters.

All these acts are well-known by world opinion and only the bosses of Pol Pot, Son Sann and Sihanouk, particularly the Chinese expansionists and U.S. imperialists, continue to keep quiet about or deny them. Worse still, Bangkok has falsified facts and fabricated slanders against the Kampuchean people and their friends to feed a reactionary propaganda campaign -- such as the case of the toxic chemical substances -- launched by the U.S. imperialist circles.

To slander and commit acts of piracy is the present Thai ruling circles' Kampuchean policy. It is in line with the plan of the Beijing warmongers who want to feed the tension between the ASEAN countries and the countries of Indochina in order to further pull the former, Thailand in particular, into their orbit before extending their hegemony to the rest of the region. To act as the Bangkok authorities are presently acting is to harm, in particular, the very interests of the Thai people, who will certainly not allow themselves to be dragged into another adventure in the wake of Washington and Beijing.

The aggression against a Kampuchean patrol boat in the territorial waters of Kampuchea is an unacceptable act of piracy that may result in dangerous consequences.

On 2 January the Foreign Ministry spokesman of the PRK defined its position as follows: The PRK Government energetically condemns this premeditated act of aggression by the Thai Navy and demands that the Thai Government immediately release the kidnapped crewmembers and the boat and put a definitive end to the daily violations and acts of aggression committed by its armed forces against the PRK.

ARMY PAPER SCORES 'USELESS LOOSE ALLIANCE'

BK160905 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1100 GMT 16 Jan 82

["Commentary" from paper REVOLUTIONARY ARMY: "A Useless Loose Alliance" -- date not given]

[Text] Beijing, Washington and the ruling circles of some ASEAN countries sighed and shook their heads when, after trying to keep the Democratic Kampuchea label at the United Nations for 3 years in a row and, in fact, after making every effort -- including injecting money and channeling arms -- for months on end to bring the three reactionary Khmer groups together, they discovered that there is no possibility of their creating even a loose alliance among these three traitorous Khmer groups aimed at sabotaging the peaceful existence of the Kampuchean people.

We remember well, and we have denounced repeatedly, the gross acts of interference in the PRK's internal affairs by these reactionary circles. Singapore, Bangkok and Phatthaya are locations where efforts were made to persuade and urge the three reactionary Khmer leading apparatuses to compromise and unite in a bid to create a united organ. However, in fact, no positive, encouraging results have come out of these meetings.

In reality, between the producers -- namely, Beijing and Washington -- and the actors -- namely, the authorities of the ASEAN countries, together with Pol Pot, Sihanouk and Son Sann -- the plot is as follows: Neither the masters nor the lackeys are on very good terms with each other and usually dispute with each other on matters of personal interest. Between Beijing, Washington and the ASEAN authorities, though they all have the same intention of undermining the revolution of our country, there exist separate, perfidious and secret designs vis-a-vis Kampuchea, making it difficult for them to reach any consensus or unity. As for the three reactionary apparatuses -- on led by Son Sann, the second by bad Prince Sihanouk and the third by Pol Pot, who recently even went so far as to abolish the name of his Maoist party in an attempt to eliminate his stench -- there is even less chance for them to establish a united machinery, no matter how loose it may be, for these three traitorous groups used to be hostile to each other and fight and kill each other and, even now, are tearing at each other's throats to grab the leading positions in order to return to Kampuchea and, once again, persecute and massacre our Kampuchean people.

Therefore, our Kampuchean army and people as a whole would like to make it clear to the ringleaders in Beijing, Washington, Bangkok and Singapore that they must not entertain hopes for anything from their vain efforts. We do not need such assistance from you and we do not want any loose or tight coalition government to lead or control us. Under the correct and wise leadership of the KPRP and Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD], we have already recaptured the right to be the masters of our own country and are rebuilding our country, which was devastated and damaged by these very traitorous groups.

We are determined to pursue a pure Marxist-Leninist line. Our Kampuchean revolution is advancing briskly, without even a fleeting thought about retreat. All the successes that our Kampuchean people and their revolutionary army achieved during the 3 years since liberation constitute irrefutable proof of the irreversible advance of the Kampuchean revolution. We dare to assert that nothing can block this advance and nothing can break the bonds of friendship, solidarity and close cooperation between Kampuchean and Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries. We have on many occasions declared that the Kampuchean people want to live in peace inside their own country and at peace with all neighboring countries in order to restore their national economy, bring about happiness for all the Kampuchean working people throughout the country, build peace in Southeast Asia and contribute to strengthening peace in the world.

Therefore, not only is the dark, ugly design of the Beijing and Washington authorities and the ruling circles of a number of ASEAN countries regarding this loose coalition government question doomed to failure, but any other future efforts to this end, under whatever form, will have no effect on the happiness of our Kampuchean people.

AGRICULTURAL REPORTAGE FOR 4-10 JAN PERIOD

BK110357 [Editorial Report] Kampuchean media have reported the following agricultural developments in the reporting period 4-10 January:

Prey Veng: Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian at 0400 GMT on 4 January reported that Prey Veng District, Prey Veng Province, has planted 650 hectares of flood-receding rice thus far and the district has harvested the early and ordinary rice crops. It is making efforts to harvest late-maturing rice.

Kompong Chhnang: The radios reported at 0400 GMT on 4 January Kompong Chhnang's Province's fish catch target this year is 9,000 tons. By the end of December, the province had caught 200 tons. At 0500 GMT on 6 January the radio reported on agricultural production in Rolea Pier District, Kompong Chhnang Province, as follows: By the end of December, the district had harvested 1,500 hectares of early rice and more than 320 hectares of broadcast rice on highland areas, 1,021 hectares of ordinary rice and 727 hectares of late rice. The district is planting dry-season rice on 900 hectares.

Koh Kong: Phnom Penh radio at 0400 GMT on 5 January noted that by 20 December, Kompong Som District, Koh Kong Province, had harvested more than 6,000 hectares of rice, or 50 percent of the area planted. In the 1981 rainy season, the district planted 12,000 hectares of rice and 800 hectares of various secondary food crops. It raised over 8,000 head of cattle and buffalo, nearly 9,000 hogs and many fowl.

Kompong Cham: Phnom Penh SPK in French at 0402 GMT on 5 January reported that by the end of December, Memot District, Kompong Cham Province, had harvested 7,000 hectares of seasonal rice and another 5,380 hectares of rice on slash-and-burn areas. During the main rice season, Memot planted 11,350 hectares of rice, 5,000 hectares of corn and 2,660 hectares of beans. Phnom Penh radio at 1230 GMT on 6 January also carried a report on agricultural production in the district, giving details as follows: 8,000 tons of farm rice have been stored, and 6,000 hectares of rainy-season rice harvested. In addition, the people of Memot last year sold 4,000 tons of rice to the state, or 1,000 tons more than their plan.

Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey: AT 1423 GMT on 5 January SPK noted that Chongkal District, Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province, has harvested 750 hectares of early and slash-and-burn rice. During the main rice season the district planted 2,680 hectares of rice, or 1,400 hectares more than during last year's season, and hundreds of hectares of other crops. In addition, the district raised 2,500 oxen and buffalo, 600 hogs and thousands of fowl.

Phnom Penh Domestic Service at 0400 GMT on 9 January also reported on agricultural production in the district, giving details as follows: Up to mid-December, more than 700 hectares of rice had been harvested and more than 3,000 hectares of rainy-season rice planted. The people raised nearly 2,000 oxen, 600 buffalo, 600 pigs and thousands of chickens and ducks.

Battambang: SPK at 0415 GMT on 7 January reported that during the main rice season the province planted 260,000 hectares of rice, or 17 percent more than during the 1980 season. The province planted 5,000 hectares of corn, 5,000 hectares of potatoes, 300 hectares of jute and 500 hectares of sugarcane; it also produced 970 tons of palm sugar and 150 tons of cotton. The people have 600 motorpumps and 140 tractors available to help in agricultural production. They have built 29 barrages, 34 reservoirs and 13 water pumping stations. In addition, fishermen in the province caught 9,000 tons of fish, or double the figure for 1980.

Kandal: Phnom Penh radio at 1100 GMT on 7 January noted that by the end of December, Khsach Kandal District, Kandal Province, had harvested 200 of the 5,000 hectares of rainy-season rice and planted 108 hectares and transplated over 800 hectares of dry-season rice. SPK at 1428 GMT on 10 January added that in December, fishermen in S'ang District, Kandal Province, caught 125 tons of fish.

VODK REPORTS VISIT BY DANISH AID DELEGATION

BK071035 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Text] On 22 December 1981 Mr (Noling Michael) and Miss (Soren Sinbo Dilroust), representatives of a Danish mass organization -- called (Twin) -- for distributing aid to various peoples, visited Democratic Kampuchean areas.

When they arrived, they were warmly and cordially welcomed by cadres of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. On the morning of 23 December, Thiounn Mumm, chairman of the State Scientific and Technical Commission, and Mey Mann, vice chairman of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross, met, held talks with and organized a lunch party for the guests. During their stay, the guests visited Phum Thmei, Phum Sangke, Phum Boeng Trakuon, Phum Chamka Chek, Phum Chamka Trap, Phum Sralau Chrum, Phum Boeng, Phum Riel and a number of schools and hospitals, and attended an artistic show at Phum Thmei. In each village the chairman of the village and cadres of the PDFGNUK warmly and cordially welcomed the guests. They are very impressed with the concrete implementation of the PDFGNUK program.

On 30 December 1981 the friendly guests left Democratic Kampuchea, with the determination that when they return to their country they will exert every effort to obtain assistance and support, as well as humanitarian aid, from the Danish people for the Kampuchean people who are suffering from the aggressive war and race extermination of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy.

VODK GIVES BATTLE REPORT FOR MOUNG-KAOS KRALOR

BK280918 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 25 Dec 81

[Text] Last November our comrades in arms on the Moung Kaos Kralor battlefield killed 42 Vietnamese aggressor troops and wounded 60 others for a total of 102 enemy casualties. They destroyed a B-41 and 3 AK's and seized an AK, 600 AK rounds and a quantity of materiel. They also destroyed 33 sections of railroad track totaling 1,235 meters and 4 bridges totaling 80 meters in length. In the production of primitive weapons, our comrades in arms made and planted 180,000 new punji stakes, dug 200 punji pitfalls and set 150 automatic bows.

Long live our valiant and courageous army, guerrillas and people on the Moung-Kaos Kralor battlefield!

GDR MILITARY DELEGATION PAYS OFFICIAL VISIT

Arrival of Delegation

BK150420 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] A top-level military delegation of the GDR led by Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann, member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany Politburo and GDR minister of national defense, arrived in Vientiane on the afternoon of 14 January 1982 for an official, friendly visit to the LPDR. The visit was made at the invitation of Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon, member of the LPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, deputy prime minister of national defense and commander in chief of the LPLA.

The GDR delegation was welcomed upon its arrival at Wattai Airport by Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon; Comrade Lt Gen Saman Viyaket, member of the LPRP Central Committee, deputy minister of national defense andchief of the LPLA Political Department; Comrade Maj Gen Somsak Saisongkham, alternate member of the LPRP Central Committee, deputy minister of national defense and deputy chief of the General Staff of the LPLA; and many brigadier generals, together with a large crowd of high and intermediate-level officers attached to the National Defense Ministry. Comrade Dieter Doering, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the GDR to Laos, together with military attaches of the Soviet and the SRV Embassies in Laos, were also on hand to welcome the GDR delegation at the airport.

Later, at 1600 of the same day, Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann and his party called on Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon at the reception room in the National Defense Ministry. On this occasion, Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon conversed with Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann in an atmosphere of cordiality, close friendship and militant fraternity.

Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon made a speech welcoming, with great pleasure, the visit to Laos of the top-level military delegation of the GDR led by Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann. He hailed the delegation for bringing to the LPLA and the Lao people the close friendship and militant solidarity of the army and people of the GDR. Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon stated that this visit of a top-level GDR military delegation to Laos has strengthened the relations of friendship between the armies and peoples of Laos and the GDR. He also said this visit would serve as a great source of encouragement for the Lao cadres, combatants and people throughout the country who are struggling to defend and build socialist Laos -- the forefront of the socialist camp in the Asian region.

Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann, as head of the top-level military delegation of the GDR, made a reply speech hailing and thanking Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon as well as all other Lao officers for their warm welcome. On this occasion, Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann also conveyed to the party and government leaders and the army and people of Laos the warm greetings and best wishes of the party and government leaders and the army and people of the GDR. He reiterated that the army and people of the GDR -- which is situated at the Western outpost of the Socialist community in Europe -- have always supported the Lao army and people, and that they will forever stand shoulder to shoulder with the Lao army and people in the cause of struggling to defend and build socialist Laos.

Later, Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann led his party to lay a wreath at the war monument to express deep condolences to the Lao revolutionary combatants who sacrificed their lives for the nation and people.

Leaders' Talks, Rally

BK161057 Vientiane KPL in English 0915 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 16 Jan (KPL) -- Talks between the high-level military delegations of the Lao People's Democratic Republic and the German Democratic Republic were held in Vientiane on January 15.

The Lao military delegation is consisted with General Khamtai Siphandon, Political Bureau member of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party CC, vice premier, minister of national defence and commander in chief of the Lao People's Liberation Army; Colonel General Saman Viyaket, member of the party CC, deputy minister of national defence and head of the General Political Department of the armed forces; Lieut-General Somsak Saisongkham, alternate member of the party CC, deputy minister of national defence and deputy head of the General Political Department of the armed forces; along with other high-ranking officers.

The GDR delegation is composed with General Heinz Hoffmann, Political Bureau member of the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany [SED] and minister of national defence of GDR; Col-General Heinz Kessler, member of the party CC, deputy minister of national defence and head of the general Political Department of the GDR Armed Forces; Col-General H. Stechbarth, member of the party CC, deputy minister of national defence and commander of the army, and including the commanders of the air force and the navy. Dieter Doering, GDR ambassador to Laos, was also present on this occasion.

The talks here centered on the exchanges of views on the situation and assistance and other important issues concerning the armed forces of the two countries. Both sides also highly appreciated the support, the assistance and the cooperation between the armed forces and peoples of the two nations, in the past national liberation struggle as well as the national socialist construction at present. The two personalities, Gen K. Siphandon and Gen Hoffmann, further expressed their conviction for the firm relations between the two armed forces and for the strengthening cause of the socialist community. The talks proceeded in an atmosphere of friendship and mutual understanding.

On the afternoon of the same day, members of the party CC, of the armed forces, the Ministry of National Defence and the LPLA, held a mass rally hailing and welcoming the official visit of the high-level military delegation of the GDR. Present on this occasion were: On the Lao side, General K. Siphandon; General Sisavat Keobounphan, Secretariat member of the party CC, minister of interior and chief of the General Staff of the LPLA; Col Gen Saman Viyaket; and Lieut-General Somsak Saisongkham; on the GDR side, General H. Hoffmann, H. Kessler, H. Stechbarth, and Ambassador Dieter Doering.

In his speech, Gen K. Siphandon highly evaluated the heroic achievements of the GDR people's national armed forces — the effective vehicle of the proletarian dictatorship of the GDR and member of the Warsaw Treaty armed forces — in national socialist defence of GDR and the safeguarding of the socialist vanguard post in the western boundary of the socialist community in Europe. Under the leadership of SED led by Erich Honecker, Gen. K. Siphandon further stressed, the GDR Armed Forces have become the more effective revolutionary forces, in close cooperation with the Soviet Armed Forces and people, as well as with other socialist armed forces and people. The Lao national defence minister expressed his thanks to the party, government, people and armed forces of the GDR for their valuable support and assistance to the Lao revolutionary cause in the national socialist construction and defence against the Beijing hegemonists and expansionists in close collusion with U.S. imperialists and other reactionary groupings.

In return, Gen H. Hoffmann delivered a speech wholeheartedly hailing the significant succusses of the Lao revolutionary cause under the leadership of the LPRP led by General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan. He further reaffirmed the support and assistance to the Lao revolutionary cause. H. Hoffmann also thanked the Lao party, government, people and armed forces for their warm welcome accorded to his delegation.

The rally proceeded in a warm atmosphere of friendship and understanding.

Meeting With Souphanouvong

BK181000 Vientiane KPL in English 0924 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 18 Jan (KPL) -- Souphanouvong, member of the Political Bureau of the party CC, president of the LPDR and the People's Supreme Assembly, on January 16 received at the presidential palace the visiting military delegation of the German Democratic Republic led by General Heinz Hoffmann, Political Bureau member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany and minister of national defense.

The meeting proceeded in an atmosphere of warm friendship and cordiality. General Heinz Hoffmann briefed Souphanouvong of the present situation in the GDR and in Poland and evaluated his visit to Laos. On this occasion, he highly hailed the successes of the Lao army and people in struggling against all the aggressive schemes of the Beijing ruling circles and the imperialists.

On this occasion, Souphanouvong hailed the visit of General Heinz Hoffmann as an important factor contributing to the close relations between the two countries and serving as moral support to the Lao forces in their struggle for the safeguard of the outpost of the socialist community in this region. The LPDR and GDR share the same ideology, Souphanouvong reaffirmed; consequently, they must step up their firm relations in view to safeguard the revolutionary gains of socialism and peace.

Col General Saman Viyaket, member of the party CC, deputy minister of national defence and head of the General Political Department of the armed forces, was also present with President Souphanouvong on this occasion. GDR Ambassador Dieter Doering was also on hand.

Signing of Memorandum

BK181037 Vientiane KPL in English 0928 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 18 Jan (KPL) -- A memorandum on the official friendship visit of the GDR military delegation led by its defense minister, General Heinz Hoffmann, was signed in Vientiane on January 17. The signatories were, on the Lao side, General Khamtai Siphandon, Political Bureau member of the party CC, vice-premier, minister of national defence and commander in chief of the Lao People's Liberation Army, and, on the GDR side, General Heinz Hoffmann, Political Bureau member of the party CC and minister of national defence. Dieter Doering, GDR ambassador to Laos, was also present at the signing ceremony.

The memorandum reiterated, in particular, the firm friendship relations and spelled out mutual cooperation between the armed forces of the two countries.

In the morning of the same day, the high military delegation of the GDR left Vientiane on board a special plane. Bidding farewell to the delegation at the airport were Khamtai Siphandon; Col General Saman Viyaket, member of the party CC, deputy-minister of national defence and head of the General Political Department of the armed forces; Lieut General Somsak Saisongkham, alternate member of the party CC, deputy-minister of national defence; along with other high-ranking officers. Dieter Doering, GDR ambassador to Laos, was also present at the airport.

While staying in Laos, the GDR military delegation visited various divisions of the army in Vientiane and Luang Prabang Provinces. Thereby, the delegation could appreciate more the main tasks of the Lao Armed Forces in the struggle for the cause of peace, national independence and social progress.

Army Paper Editorial

BK150943 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 15 Jan 82

[LPLA paper 14 January editorial: "Wholeheartedly Salute and Greet the Top-Level Military Delegation of the Fraternal GDR"]

[Text] On 14 January 1982 a top-level military delegation of the GDR -- the Western outpost of the socialist community -- headed by Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann, Politburo member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany [SED] Central Committee and minister of national defense, paid an official friendship visit to the LPDR at the invitation of Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon, Political Bureau member of the LPRP Central Committee, deputy prime minister, minister of national defense and commander in chief of the LPLA. The delegation arrived in Vientiane, the capital, safely. The Lao people and the People's Liberation Armed Forces are profoundly elated and pleased to welcome the top-level GDR military delegation -- fraternal comrades, close brothers in arms and excellent delegation of the heroic German People's National Army.

This visit is made at a time when the armies and peoples of the two countries of Laos and the GDR are both continuing to march forward vigorously in the revolutionary cause to maintain the great gains of the revolution and defend and build their respective countries, both of which are outposts of the socialist system -- one in the Southeast Asian region and the other in Western Europe. It comes at a time the two armies and peoples are struggling fiercely and furiously against imperialism, fascist vengeance and Chinese big-nation expansionism and hegemonism. This friendship visit to Laos of the top-level GDR military delegation is a very significant event. It contributes to the further enhancement of the spirit of friendship, close militant solidarity and all-round, time-honored relations between our two fraternal peoples and armies.

The Lao People's Liberation Armed Forces are very proud to have the heroic German People's National Army as a close comrade in arms. The German People's National Army is a new type of army of the German working class, an army that maintains patriotic and revolutionary traditions. It is a young member of the Warsaw treaty. During the past quarter century, the German people, under the SED's leadership, have nourished and promoted the close support and assistance of the Soviet Union. Large strides have been made in strengthening and developing the German People's National Army, and it has scored many great achievements. It now stands at the forefront of the socialist community in the West and directly confronts the bellicose powers and reactionary militarist officers of the Federal Republic of Germany, an important member of the aggressive NATO military group. The German People's National Army is a sharp tool of the proletarian dictatorship system. It always raises its combat preparedness to ever higher levels while maintaining vigilance. It has smashed all the dark schemes and sabotage acts of imperialism, international reactionaries and fascist vengeance in West Germany and West Berlin, thereby maintaining the revolutionary gains and peaceful labor of the GDR people.

These fine traditions and the glorious cause of the German People's National Army are founded on the heroic spirit and wisdom of the German people and the People's National Army under the leadership of the SED. The cadres and combatants of the German People's National Army are beloved, good sons and nephews who have gained the hearty love and trust of the German people. The German People's National Army is a clear example of fighting shoulder to shoulder with the Soviet army, resolutely and indomitably, to defeat fascism and imperialism, thus vigorously contributing to economic and cultural development and to improving the living conditions of the people.

The people's armed forces of our two countries are very proud and elated at the tradition of close militant solidarity between the two nations, a tradition that originated in the struggle against common enemies and is based on Marxism-Leninism. This tradition is a firm guarantee that our two nations will march forward to new victorious heights in the revolutionary cause. Laos and the GDR have incessantly nourished their close friendship and militant solidarity.

The people and the people's armed forces of Laos pledge to do their utmost to maintain that solidarity and to develop ever more prosperously with each passing day in order to deserve the fraternal GDR People's National Army as their close comrades and brothers in arms.

This official friendship visit to Laos of the top-level GDR military delegation -- representatives of the people and the people's armed forces of Germany -- is a new, glorious event reflecting the spirit of friendship between our two peoples and armies of Laos and the GDR that has daily been promoted and expanded brilliantly. This historic visit of the top-level GDR military delegation will, of course, contribute further to strengthening ever more profoundly and firmly the frienship, solidarity and all-round relations between the two peoples and armies of Laos and the GDR.

The Lao People's Liberation Armed Forces wholeheartedly salute, welcome and hail the GDR military delegation, which is an excellent delegation of the fraternal German People's National Army. We wish the GDR military delegation glorious success in this visit.

[Text] Spokesman of the Prime Minister's Office Trairong Suwannakhiri this evening denied to newsmen the rumor about the prime minister's resignation. There have been rumors spreading to that effect, and rumors were even more rife following today's session of the parliament. According to the spokesman of the Prime Minister's Office, the rumors were groundless.

POST: EVIDENCE ON LETTER DISCOUNTS SOVIET CLAIM

[Excerpt] The government has uncovered evidence which appears to refute a claim by a Soviet diplomat that a controversial letter bearing his signature was a hoax, authoritative sources said yesterday.

The letter, dated January 5, was sent to Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong, other officials and newspaper editors, and was signed by a V.I. Pissartchik, who described himself as the "ambassador's assistant for press affairs." But the Soviet Embassy's press officer later said the letter was a "hoax" and a "fake." The officer, who said his name was Mr Vyacheslav Pisarchik, said that while "the signature in the fake letter was very much similar to mine...the spelling is wrong." Mr Pisarchik said: "Did you notice that the fake name carried (sic) Pissartchik, while my real name is Pisarchik -- one 's', not two, and no 't' there."

But according to a landing card which Mr Pisarchik presumably filled out himself on arrival in Thailand last year, his name is printed in longhand as "Vyacheslav Pissartchik." The signature on the landing card also appears to be identical to the one on the January 5 letter.

The offending paragraph in the January 5 letter stated: "We call upon Thailand to cease its collaboration with the U.S. and Chinese imperialists who seek to overthrow legally constituted governments in Indochina as well as in Afghanistan and other parts of the world. Our wish is to maintain friendly relations with all countries and to support progressive elements in all states. We petition for your supports (sic) to these ends."

Deputy Foreign Minister Mr Arun later ordered that a protest be conveyed to the Soviet ambassador, Yuriy Kuznetsov, over the "rude, undiplomatic" note. When Mr Kuznetsov was summoned to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on January 8 and the protest delivered by Mr Asa Sarasin, director-general of the Political Department, he expressed "surprise" and said he would investigate the matter. He later claimed that the letter was a "hoax."

SRV REPORTEDLY AGREES TO RELEASE TRAWLER

BK171230 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Excerpt] According to the director general of the Foreign Ministry Information Department, the owner of the fishing trawler "Charoenrat IX" has requested the Foreign Ministry's assistance in seeking the release of his trawler and its crew, which drifted into Vietnamese waters as result of a storm on 25 September. The trawler was anchored off the Ranong coast when the storm started. The Foreign Ministry has instructed the Thai Embassy in Vietnam to bring the matter up with the Vietnamese authorities. The Vietnamese authorities have agreed to release the trawler in question on the condition that the owner of the trawler comes in person to Vietnam to receive the trawler and its crew.

PRC BORDER VIOLATIONS 19 DEC-13 JAN REPORTED

OW171123 Hanoi VNA in French 0546 GMT 17 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, 16 January -- While rejecting Vietnam's proposal full of good will made in the 28 December 1981 Vietnamese Foreign Ministry note proposing that the two sides "stop hostile armed actions and cease fire along the border regions of the two countries" during the Tet days, the Chinese authorities have continued to order their troops to fire into and shell Vietnamese territory. They also sent many groups of commandos and scouts to infiltrate into Vietnamese border villages for spying and sabotage activities.

On 19, 22, 23, 27 and 28 December 1981, Chinese troops illegally stationed on Height 1800A of Vi Xuyen District (Ha Tuyen Province) fired hundreds of 82-mm mortar and 120-mm recoilless rifle shells and many rounds of 12.7-mm machineguns on the neighboring villages, destroying many dwellings, killing buffalo and oxen and burning vast stretches of forest and orchards of the local populace.

On 10 January 1982 the Chinese troops fired 65 82-mm mortar shells and 12.7-mm machineguns rounds on the area of Marker Post No 2 of (?Chuca) village, Xin Man District, Ha Tuyen Province, destroying a large quantity of the local populace's property.

On 5, 9 and 10 January the Chinese troops fired from the other side of the border many 12.7-mm machinegun rounds and 87 120-mm mortar shells on the Po Hen District town, the Soan Tinh sector, and on some villages of Binh Lieu District, Quang Ninh Province, setting many dwellings afire and destroying ricefields and orchards of the local populace.

Along with the firings and shellings, on 20 December 1981 and 12 January 1982, many groups of Chinese scouts infiltrated into Xin Cai village, Meo Vac District, and into Ham Chay village, Vi Xuyen District (Ha Tuyen Province) to sabotage production. The Chinese aggressors were intercepted by the local armed forces and people and withdrew to the other side of the border. On 1 January 1982 a group of Chinese scouts infiltrated into the Sinh Ho District (Lai Chau Province). On 8 January two groups of Chinese scouts penetrated the villages of Loc Binh District (Lang Son Province) and carried out espionage and sapper activities there.

On 4 and 13 January 1982 some 100 Chinese troops crossed the border at the area of Marker Posts 8, 9 and 10 in Muong Khuong District (Hoang Lien Son Province). They laid ambushes on Vietnamese territory, kidnapped civilians and destroyed the crops. Intercepted by the local armed forces and people, the intruders took to flight. But soon afterward they slammed more than 500 82-mm and 120-mm mortar rounds into Muong Khuong District town and its surrounding areas, burning many houses and causing other material losses to the local people.

The armed forces and people of the aforementioned localities have resolutely rebuffed the aggressors and captured a number of them.

PRISONERS EXCHANGED WITH PRC ON 15 JAN

OW151616 Hanoi VNA in English 1602 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 15 -- Authorized by the Vietnamese Government, the Hwu Nghi border station at 10 a.m. today released 11 Chinese captured while illegally intruding into Vietnamese territory. The release was made at Kilometer Marker 0 in Dong Dang township, Lang Son Province, on the occasion of the coming Lunar New Year festival.

All the 11 Chinese had intruded deep into Vietnamese territory and had been captured by the armed forces and people in the five border provinces of Quang Ninh, Ha Tuyen, Lang Son, Hoang Lien Son and Lai Chau. Among them were professional scouts such as Tan Jingming captured on June 27, 1980, in Quang Ninh and Tian Faming captured on March 5, 1979, in Ha Tuyen, and an artillery battery leader, Zhang Ming, captured on January 3, 1981, in Lao Cai, Hoang Lien Son.

All the captives had admitted that they had been sent to Vietnam by the Chinese authorities to gather intelligence about the defence works in the Vietnamese border provinces for the purpose of sabotage. Although they had committed crimes in Vietnamese border areas, the captured Chinese scouts were well treated and expressed their gratitude to the Vietnamese Government and people for the lenient and humanitarian policy.

Also this morning the Red Cross chapter of Lang Son Province received 11 Vietnamese returned by the Chinese side. All these Vietnamese had been kidnapped while working on Vietnamese territory by intruding Chinese soldiers. Among them were fishermen from the central coastal province of Phu Khanh such as Nguyen Thuc, Vu Thanh Son, 13-year-old Vu Thanh Duc, and 10-year-old Vu Thanh Hai, who had been illegally captured while on a fishing trip in Vietnamese territorial waters by an intruding Chinese warship.

ENVOY TO PRC HOLDS BEIJING NEWS CONFERENCE

OW151626 Hanoi VNA in English 1608 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 15 -- Vietnamese Ambassador in China Nguyen Trong Vinh held a press conference in Beijing this morning to make public a statement issued yesterday by the spokesman of the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry. It was attended by nearly 70 press attaches of various embassies and foreign journalists in the Chinese capital. After condemning the Chinese authorities for continuing their hostile policy against Vietnam, Nguyen Trong Vinh said that the Vietnamese are always determined to exercise their sacred right to defend themselves from foreign aggression while aspiring for the restoration of normal relations between Vietnam and China.

He stressed: "The Vietnamese people's ardent aspiration is to coexist in peace and friendship with the Chinese people and with the other neighbouring countries and to rebuild their own country. The people and the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam have no interest in provoking hostilities against a big neighbouring country with a population 20 times that of Vietnam. We don't want to provoke hostilities against any other countries, either. If the Chinese authorities stubbornly continue their scheme to subdue and annex Vietnam, they can never obtain their objective but they will only run counter to the aspiration and interests of the Chinese people themselves and face worldwide condemnation." The Vietnamese ambassador answered many questions put by the journalists.

TEXT OF WHITE BOOK ON SPRATLYS, PARACELS

OW180403 Hanoi VNA in English 0325 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 18 -- The Foreign Ministry of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam has just published a white book on the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes in the Eastern Sea. The book, entitled "The Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes: Vietnamese Territories", is in two parts. Part 1 retraces "the Vietnamese state's long-standing and uninterrupted sovereignty over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes". Part 2 demonstrates that "the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes have never been Chinese territories".

The book also includes many supplements consisting of facsimiles of maps and administrative decrees in Vietnamese, French and Chinese, and a number of photos on the above said archipelagoes. Following is the full text of the white book:

The Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, Vietnamese Territories Forword

For decades now the Chinese authorities have nurtured ambitions over the two Vietnamese archipelagoes of Hoang Sa (i.e. Paracels) and Truong Sa (i.e. Spratley or Spratly), which are called "Xisha" and "Nansha" by the Chinese.

The Chinese authorities have been searching for testimonies in ancient books to prove that their ancestors had discovered and exploited these two archipelagoes long ago. But most embarrassingly they have failed to bring out when the Chinese state began to take possession of "Xisha" and "Nansha" and how this state exercised its sovereignty over them.

In the booklet Vietnam's sovereignty over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes published in September 1979, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam has made public a number of historical documents and juridical evidence which unmistakably prove that:

— Vietnam has been in possession of the two archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa since the time when no other countries claimed sovereignty over them;

— Vietnam has been continuously exercising its sovereignty over these two archipelagoes ever since.

In the present booklet, the views of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam will be briefly presented to prove once again that the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes have for a long and uninterrupted period of time been part and parcel of Vietnamese territory, that the Chinese claim over these two archipelagoes is without juridical grounds and that the Chinese occupation of the Hoang Sa Archipelago by force is an act of aggression.

Part 1

The Vietnamese State's Longstanding and Uninterrupted Sovereignty Over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes

It is necessary, first of all, to make clear that Hoang Sa and Truong Sa are two archipelagoes lying off the Vietnamese coast in the East Sea (the Vietnamese have long since adopted this name to designate what the Western cartographers call the China Sea or the South China Sea); the nearest point of Hoang Sa is about 120 nautical miles from a coastal island called Re and about 170 nautical miles east of Danang harbor; while Truong Sa's nearest point is about 250 nautical miles east of Cam Ranh Bay.

In ancient times the knowledge primarily acquired by navigators about Hoang Sa and Truong Sa was still vague; they only knew that in this vast sea area navigation was dangerous because there were submerged rocks. In those days the Vietnamese called the area Bai Cat Vang (Golden Sandbank) or Hoang Sa, or Van Ly Hoang Sa, or Dai Truong Sa or Van Ly Truong Sa as shown in ancient Vietnamese books and maps. Almost all Western navigators' maps between the 16th and 18th centuries marked these two groups of islands under one single name: Pracel or Parcel or Paracels (maps drawn by Portuguese, Dutch and French navigators such as Lazaro Luis, Ferdanao Vaz Dourdo, Joao Tecyeira, Janysonius, Willem Janyz Bleau, Jacob Aertsz Colom, Thunis Jacobsz, Hendrick Donckec, Frederich Denwit, P. Duval, Van Langren, etc). The above-mentioned maps generally defined the Pracel area as situated in the middle of the East Sea, east of Vietnam, off the Vietnamese coastal islands.

Following the progress made in science and navigation, later on it became possible to distinguish the two archipelagoes: the Hoang Sa and the Truong Sa.

The archipelagoes specified as Paracels and Spratley, or Spratly in present day international maritime maps, are precisely the two Vietnamese archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa. The appellations of "Xisha" and "Nansha" were put forth by the Chinese expansionists some decades ago to promote their scheme of land-grabbing.

1. Vietnam's Historical Sovereignty Over the Two Archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa

Long ago the Vietnamese people discovered the archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa. The Vietnamese state has occupied them and exercised its sovereignty over them ever since.

Ancient Vietnamese geographical books and maps record clearly that Bai Cat Vang (Golden Sandbank), otherwise called Hoang Sa or Van Ly Hoang Sa, or Dai Truong Sa, or Van Ly Truong Sa, had long since been a Vietnamese territory.

Toan Tap Thien Nam Tu Chi Lo Do Thu (Route Map From the Capital to the Four Directions), a Vietnamese atlas compiled and drawn by Do Ba, alias Cong Dao, in the 17th century, in its notes attached to the map of Quang Ngai District, Quang Nam Province, described "an elongated sandbank lying in mid-sea known as the Golden Sandbank." "Every year in the last month of winter the Nguyens would send eighteen boats to Bai Cat Vang to retrieve ship-wrecked cargoes, which included jewels, coins, arms and ammuniations."

In Giap Ngo Binh Nam Do, a map of southern Vietnam, drawn in 1774 by the Duke of Doan, Bui The Dat, Bai Cat Vang was also specified as part of Vietnamese territory (in the the Hong Duc atlas). In Phu Bien Tap Luc, a book written by the scholar Le Qui Don (1726-1784) on the history, geography, and administration of Dang Trong (present-day southern Vietnam) under the Nguyen lords (1558-1775), Hoang Sa and Truong Sa islands were defined as belonging to Quang Ngai District.

"In Quang Ngai District, off the coast of An Vinh village (south of the Sa Ky harbour; the An Vinh settlement on the Re Island also belongs to this village) Binh Son sub-district, there is an island called Cu Lao Re stretching over 30 dams (dam is an ancient unit of measurement equal to half a kilometre). The Tu Chinh settlement, as it is called, has been established here and the people there grow beans. It takes half a day by boat to get there. Further off, there are Dai Truong Sa islands where sea products and ship-wrecked cargoes are available to be collected by the Hoang Sa detachment. It takes three days and nights to reach there by boat. They are near an area called Bac Hai."

Dai Nam Nhat Thong Toan Do, the atlas of Vietnam, completed circa 1838 clearly set Hoang Sa -- Van Ly Truong Sa -- as part of Vietnamese territory.

In Dai Nam Nhat Thong Chi, a geographical book on Vietnam whose compilation was completed in 1882 (the chapters on central Vietnam provinces were amended and printed in 1909) by the National Institute of History under the Nguyen Dynasty (1802-1945), Hoang Sa was defined as part of the Vietnamese territory belonging to Quang Ngai Province. In its topographical description of Quang Ngai the book describes:

"To the east (of Quang Ngai) there exist sand islands -- the Hoang Sa.... To the west a mountainous region stands like a bulwark. The province borders on Binh Dinh in the south at Ben Da Pass and on Quang Nam in the north where Sa Tho Gorge marks the provincial boundary."

Many Western navigators and missionaries in past centuries confirmed Hoang Sa as part of Vietnamese territory. A Western priest during his trip from France to China on board the Amphitrie wrote in one of his letters "Paracel is an archipelago belonging to the Kingdom of Annam" (J.Y.C.'s quotation in his article "Mystere des Atolls-Journal de Voyage aux Paracels" printed in the weekly INDOCHINE, issues of July 3, 10 and 17, 1941. The Kingdom of Annam was the name of Vietnam in those days).

In a supplementary note to his Memoire sur la Cochinchine (Cochinchine) -- French -- or Cochinchina -- English -- used in some Western documents, depending on the context indicated: A) Vietnam as a nation at the time; or B) the southern Vietnam provinces), J.B. Chaigneau, Emperor Gia Long's adviser, in about 1820 wrote:

"Cochinchina, whose king has proclaimed himself emperor, consists of Cochinchina proper and Tonkin (i.e., northern Vietnam) and a number of inhabited off-shore islands and the Archipelago of Paracel formed by several uninhabited islets, reefs and rocks . . . (A. Salles' quotation in his article "Le Memoire sur la Cochinchine de J.B. Chaigneau" printed in "Bulletin des Amis du Vieux Hue."

Bishop J.L. Taberd, in his note on geography of Cochinchina published in 1837, described Pracel or Paracels as part of Cochinchina's territory and related that the Cochinchinese called Pracel or Paracels by the name of "Cat Vang" (Bishop Jean-Louis Taberd's article "Note on Geography of Cochinchina" printed in "The Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal", 1837). In an Nam Dai Quoc Hoa Do (map of Annam) published in 1838, he delineated part of Paracels with a note that "Paracels or Cat Vang" lie in the middle of the sea beyond the coastal islands of central Vietnam, in the area presently known as the Hoang Sa Archipelago (printed in "Dictionarium Latino-Anamiticum", 1838).

In an article entitled "Geography of the Cochinchinese Empire" ("Geography of the Cochinchinese Empire" printed in "The Journal of the Royal Geographical Society of London", 1849), published in 1849, Gutzlaff defined Paracels as belonging to Vietnam and also used the Vietnamese designation "Cat Vang" in accompanying notes.

As the sovereign, the Vietnamese feudal state in past centuries had conducted many geographical and resources surveys of the two archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa. The results of those surveys have been recorded in Vietnamese literature on geography and history published since the 17th century.

This can be read in Toan Tap Thien Nam Tu Chi Lo Do Thu (17th century): "In the middle of the sea emerges an elongated sandbank called Bai Cat Vang, about 400 dams in length and 20 dams in width, facing the coastline between the harbour of Dai Chiem (Dai Chiem is presently known as the harbour of Dai, Quang Nam-Danang Province) and that of Sa Vinh (Sa Vinh is presently known as the harbour of Sa Huynh, Nghia Binh Province). During the southwest monsoon, foreign commercial ships sailing along the coast side of the sandbank would often be blown off course and run aground there. The same thing would happen to those sailing on the other side of the sandbank during the northeast monsoon. Men on board the wrecked ships often starved and wrecked cargoes amassed there" (Bai Cat Vang, the Golden Sandbank, is an area where there are dangerous submerged rocks.).

In Phu Bien Tap Luc (1776), Le Qui Don wrote: "The Village of An Vinh, Binh Son sub-district, Quang Ngai District, lies close by the sea. To the northeast of this village there is a cluster of islands composed of over 130 islets and rocks. It may take a day or just a few watches to sail from one islet to another. On some islands there is fresh water. A flat and large strip of yellow sand stretching over 30 dams distinguished itself among these islands. Here the water is crystal clear. The islands abound with swallows' nests and swarm with thousands upon thousands of birds of various species which remain indifferent to the sight of men. Strange things lie on the beach. Of the mollusks there are conches whose size is of a bed-mattress, whose pearls are opaque and whose shells can be cut into small plaques or baked into lime for house building. There are also whelks whose shells can be used as mother-of-pearl for inlaid work. Conches and whelks and other mollusks can also be salted or cooked for food... Foreign vessels hit by storms are often wrecked on these islets."

Dai Nam Thuc Luc Tien Bien, a book on the history of the Nguyen lords completed by the National Institute of History under the Nguyen dynasty in 1884, similarly wrote:

"Far out in the middle of the sea beyond the coast of An Vinh village, Binh Son sub-district, Quang Ngai District there are over 130 sandbanks separated by sea distances of a full day's voyage or just a few watches' and scattered on a length of several thousand dams, hence the popular designation of Van Ly Hoang Sa. Fresh water springs are found on many sandbanks. Sea products there include sea cucumbers, conches, tortoises, turtles, etc".

For its part, Dai Nam Nhat Thong Chi (1882) also wrote:

"The Hoang Sa Islands stretch east of Re Island, Binh Son sub-district. It takes three to four days to reach there from Sa Ky beach if the wind is favourable. The islands consist of over 130 islets. From one islet to another is a day's or a few watches' sailing. Among these islands, which are scattered over a length of several thousand dams and popularly called Van Ly Truong Sa, there are strips of yellow sand where fresh water can be found and sea birds flock in very great numbers. Marine products include sea cucumbers, conches, tortcises, turtles, etc. Cargoes of wrecked vessels amass there".

According to Dai Nam Thuc Luc Chinh Bien, a book on the history of the Nguyen Dynasty compiled in 1848, garrison commander Truong Phuc Si, upon completion of his map-drawing assignment to Hoang Sa, reported to Emperor Minh Menh that "Hoang Sa is a boundless area of sandbanks in the middle of the sea".

Other books published in the Nguyen Dynasty like Lich Trieu Hien Chuong Loai Chi (1821), Hoang Viet Dia Du Chi (1833), Viet Su Cuong Giam Khao Luoc (1876) provided similar descriptions of Hoang Sa.

Aware of the availability of valuable sea-products and cargoes of wrecked ships in Hoang Sa and Truong Sa, the Vietnamese feudal state set out long ago to exercise sovereignty over and organize the exploitation of these two archipelagoes. In many Vietnamese old books on history and geography, the organisations and operations of various Hoang Sa detachments entrusted with this task were well recorded.

In Toan Tap Thien Nam Tu Chi Lo Do Thu (17th century), it was said:

"The Nguyens every year in the last month of winter would dispatch 18 boats to Bai Cat Vang to retrieve ship-wrecked cargoes which include jewels, coins, arms and ammunition".

In Phu Bien Tap Luc (1776) it was related:

The Nguyens used to form a 70-strong Hoang Sa detachment made up of An Vinh villagers. It was sent on duty in the third month of every year, taking along enough food for six months. It sailed in five fishing boats and reached the islands after a three-days-and-nights voyage. There, the men were left free in their gleanings. They were able to catch birds and fish for additional food. At times they were able to gather from wrecked ships such things as swords, silver or gold ornaments and coins, rings, brass-ware, tin and lead ingots, guns, ivory, beeswax, chinaware, woolens, etc. They also gathered turtle shells, oysters, sea cucumbers and conch shells in large quantities. This Hoang Sa detachment would not return home until the eighth month of the year. It used to come ashore by way of Eo harbour from where it went to Phu Xuan Citadel to hand over the things it had gathered, have them weighed and classified and get a certificate with which its men could go home. They were then free to sell their share of conches, turtles and sea cucumbers... The Nguyens also formed Bac Hai teams recruited from among Tu Chinh villagers in Binh Thuan Province or the villagers of Canh Duong. The teammates were volunteers and were exempted from personal tax and travelling expenses.

They were sent in boats to Bac Hai, Con Lon Island and the isles of Ha Tien to gather shipwrecked valuables as well as turtles, oysters, abalones, sea cucumbers. These teams were placed under the control of the Hoang Sa detachment commander.

Dai Nam Thuc Luc Tien Bien (1844) wrote:

"During the early days of the dynasty, the Hoang Sa detachment was created and it was made up of 70 men recruited from among An Vinh villagers. It set out every year in the third month and used to reach the islands after a three-days-and-nights voyage. There the men collected articles from wrecked ships. Its home trips would normally begin in the eighth month of the year.

"In addition, there was a Bac Hai team whose mates were recruited from Tu Chinh commune in Binh Thuan Province or from Canh Duong village. The team was sent to Bac Hai areas and the island of Con Lon to gather articles from wrecked ships. The Bac Hai team was placed under the Hoang Sa detachment commander".

The Tay Son who succeeded the Nguyen lords also paid close attention to the sustenance and use of the Hoang Sa detachments in spite of the fact that they had to cope with continuous aggressions waged by the Qing Dynasty of China and by Siam. From among the documents available now the following order issued in 1786 by mandarin Thuong Tuong Cong is noteworthy:

"It is ordered that Commander Hoi Duc Hau of Hoang Sa detachment lead four boats to Hoang Sa and other islands to gather gold, silver and copper articles, artillery pieces, big and small, turtles, oysters and special fish, and that all these catches be submitted to the court as required by existing rules".

Thus, the Vietnamese state under the Tay Son continued the exploitation of Hoang Sa, being well aware that it was exercising sovereignty over the archipelago. The Nguyen emperors did their best to consolidate Vietnam's sovereignty over the two archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa from their coming to power in 1802 until the signing of the 1884 treaty with France.

Dai Nam Thuc Luc Chinh Bien (1848) describes some of the measures taken by the Nguyen emperors to consolidate Vietnam's sovereignty over the two archipelagoes:

-- In 1815 Emperor Gia Long ordered Pham Quang Anh to lead the Hoang Sa detachment to Hoang Sa to survey the sea routes.

-- In 1816 Emperor Gia Long ordered a naval unit and the Hoang Sa detachment to sail to Hoang Sa to make a survey of sea routes.

-- In 1833 Emperor Minh Menh instructed the Ministry of Public Works to prepare for a boat trip in the following year to Hoang Sa to build a temple, install stone markers and plant trees.

-- In 1834 Emperor Minh Menh ordered garrison Commander Truong Phuc Si with more than 20 sailors to Hoang Sa to draw maps.

-- In 1835 Emperor Minh Menh ordered navy Commander Pham Van Nguyen to recruit soldiers, workmen and boatsmen from the provinces of Quang Ngai and Binh Dinh and to transport materials to Hoang Sa to build a temple. A stele was to be installed on its left and a brick screen in front.

-- In 1836 approving a report from the Ministry of Public Works, Emperor Minh Menh ordered a navy commander named Pham Huu Nhat to head a contingent to Hoang Sa to conduct a survey for map-drawing. The requirements of the survey were recorded in detail in Dai Nam Thuc Luc Chinh Bien:

"At whatever place they reach, be it an islet or a sandbank, they will have to examine its length, width, height and perimeter and the depths of the surrounding waters, and to ascertain whether underwater rocks and reefs exist and whether the terrain is difficult or not. All these data must be included in their maps. Moreover, they will have to record the date and the point of their departure, the direction taken and the distance covered. On each arrival, they will also have to locate exactly the names and directions of the coastal provinces facing them and those which are on their right and left and to note down the estimated distance to the mainland in terms of dam. Upon completion of their tasks, they will have to submit a detailed report".

According to Dai Nam Thuc Luc Chinh Bien, each of the wooden boards brought along by Pham Huu Nhat to be planted as sovereignty markers, carries the following inscription:

"In the year Binh Than, the 17th year of the reign of Minh Menh, navy Commander Pham Huu Nhat, on orders from his majesty the king, has arrived in Hoang Sa to conduct a survey for map-drawing and has planted this marker to perpetuate the memory of the event".

The Nguyen emperors were not only concerned about the consolidation of national sovereignty and interests vis-a-vis the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, but also with the safety of foreign vessels navigating in their vicinity. In 1833 Emperor Minh Menh, in a letter to the Ministry of Public Works, wrote: "In our territorial waters off Quang Ngai Province, there lie the Hoang Sa Islands. From afar they become merged into the sky and sea. It is difficult to estimate the depths of the surrounding waters. Recently foreign merchant ships have often been caught in danger there. Preparations should be made for a team to go there next years [as received] to plant trees. The trees will grow up into a luxuriant vegetation that would allow navigators to recognize the areas and avoid shipwrecks. This will be for the benefit of many generations to come". Clearly this represents a profound sense of responsibility displayed by a sovereign state with regard to international navigation in its domain.

Thus it has been shown in ancient Vietnamese works of history and georgraphy and through testimonies of Western navigators and missionaries that the Vietnamese state from one dynasty to another, over hundreds of years, had continuously exercised its sovereignty over the two archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa. The regular presence of the state-directed Hoang Sa detachments from five to six months annually to perform state-entrusted tasks in these two archipelagoes in itself constitutes irrefutable evidence of the jurisdiction exercised by the Vietnamese state over these two archipelagoes. The occupation and exploitation of these two archipelagoes by the Vietnamese state had never encountered protests from any nations, including China -- this further proves that Hoang Sa and Truong Sa have for long been parts of Vietnamese territory.

1. France Carried on the Exercise of Sovereignty Over the Archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa on Behalf of the Vietnamese State

After the June 6th, 1884 treaty signed with the Nguyen Dynasty, France represented Vietnam's interests in foreign affairs and was bound to protect Vietnam's sovereignty and territorial integrity. In the framework of such overall commitment, France carried on the exercise of Vietnamese sovereignty over the two archipelagores. Here under are some examples:

French gunships often went on patrol trips in the East Sea and, in particular, amid the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Islands.

In 1899 the French governor general in Indochina, Paul Doumer, proposed to Paris that a lighthouse be erected on Hoang Sa proper (Pattle) to direct the navigation of foreign ships, but the project was called off due to insufficient budget allocation.

After 1920 Indochinese customs ships stepped up their patrols in the vicinity of Hoang Sa to prevent trafficking.

In 1925 the Oceanographic Institute of Nha Trang sent S/S de Lanessan to the Hoang Sa Archipelago to undertake oceanographic research. Along with A. Krempf, director of the institute, there were also Delacour, Jabouille and other well-known scientists specializing in geological and biological studies. In the same year, on March 3rd, the minister for military affairs at the court of Hue, Than Trong Hue, reasserted that Hoang Sa was part of Vietnamese territory.

In 1927 S/S de Lanessan carried out a scientific survey in the archipelago of Truong Sa.

In 1929 the Perrier-De Rouville delegation proposed the building of four lighthouses at four corners of the Hoang Sa Archipelago (on the islands of Tri Ton, Da Bac, Linh Con and the Beach of Bombay).

In 1930 Le Malicieuse, a signal ship, arrived in Hoang Sa.

In March 1931 S/S Inconstant dropped anchor in Hoang Sa. In June 1931 S/S De Lanessan arrived in Hoang Sa.

In May 1932, Alerte, a gunship, arrived in Hoang Sa.

Between April 13, 1930, and April 12, 1933. on orders from the French Government, various naval units were successively stationed on the major islands of the Truong Sa Archipelago. Truong Sa proper (Spratly), An Bang (Amboyna Cay), Itu Aba, the Song Tu cluster (the islands of Song Tu Dong and Song Tu Tay), Loai Ta and Thi Tu.

On December 21, 1933, Cochinchina's governor, M.J. Krautheimer, signed a decree by virtue of which the islands of Truong Sa, An Bang, Itu Aba, the Song Tu cluster, Loai Ta and Thi Tu were annexed to Ba Ria Province (presently part of Dong Nai Province).

in 1937 the French authorities assigned Gauthier, a civil engineer, to Hoang Sa to find places where a lighthouse and a port for amphibian planes could be built. In February 1937 the cruiser Lamotte Piquet, commanded by Vice-Admiral Estava, called at Hoang Sa.

On March 30, 1938, Emperor Bao Dai signed a decree by virtue of which the archipelago of Hoang Sa was svered from Nam Ngai Province to be annexed to Thua Thien Province (presently part of Binh Tri Thien Province). On June 15, 1938, Indochinese Governor General Jules Brevie signed an ordinance creating an administrative unit on the Hoang Sa Archipelago, Thua Thien Province. in 1938 the French installed sovereignty markers on Hoang Sa Island (Pattle) in the Hoang Sa Archipelago and completed the building of a lighthouse, a meteorological station and a radio-transmitting station there. They also built a meteorological station and a radio-transmitting station on Itu Aba Island in the Truong Sa Archipelago.

On May 5, 1939, Indochinese Governor General Jules Brevie signed an ordinance amending the one signed on June 15, 1938, and creating in Hoang Sa Island two administrative agencies named "Croissant and Dependencies" and "Amphitrite and Dependencies".

Through the years of representing Vietnam externally, the French continued to assert Vietnam's sovereignty over Hoang Sa and Truong Sa and protest against every encroachment upon Vietnam's sovereignty with regard to these archipelagoes. Following are some examples:

On December 4, 1931, and April 24, 1932, France lodged a protest with the Chinese Government over a plan of the authorities of Guangdong Province to invite tenders for the exploitation of guano in the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

On July 24, 1933, France informed Japan of the stationing of her troops on the major islands in the Truong Sa Archipelago. Hence a Japanese protest, but the French authorities rejected it.

On April 4, 1939, France protested to Japan over the latter's decision to place a number of islands in the Truong Sa Archipelago under Japanese jurisdiction.

3. The Defence and Exercise of Vietnam's Sovereignty Over the Archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Since the End of the Second World War

After the Second World War, the French, following their return to Vietnam, sent warships to the Hoang Sa Archipelago, which fell within their occupation zone, to rebuild the meteorological station on Hoang Sa Island and to resist Chinese land-grabbing attempts.

On July 7, 1951, Tran Van Huu, head of the Bao Dai government's delegation to the San Francisco conference on the peace treaty with Japan, declared that the archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truon Sa had long been part of Vietnamese territory: "...As we must frankly profit from all the opportunities offered to us to stifle the germs of discord, we affirm our rights to the Spratly and Paracel Islands, which have always belonged to Vietnam". The declaration met with no challenge or reservation from any representative of the 51 nations at the conference.

In 1953 S/S Chief Engineer Girod was commissioned by the French to conduct oceanographic, geological, geographical and ecological surveys in the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

The Saigon administration, and later on the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam also, continued the exercise of Vietnam's sovereignty over the archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa. Hereunder is some evidence of this:

In 1956 naval units of the Saigon administration took over the archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa from French troops, who were moving out. In 1956 the South Vietnam Service of Mining, Industrial and Cottage Industries conducted a survey of four islands: Hoang Sa (Pattle), Quang Anh (Money), Huu Nhat (Robert) and Duy Mong (Drummond) with the help of naval units of the Saigon administration. On October 22, 1956, the Saigon administration annexed the Truong Sa Archipelago to Phuoc Tuy Province.

On July 13, 1961, the Saigon administration severed the Hoang Sa Archipelago from Thua Thien Province and annexed it to Quang Nam Province and created an adminstrative village comprising all the archipelago, called it Dinh Hai, joined it to Hoang Vang District and placed it under the control of an administrative delegate.

Between 1961 and 1963 the Saigon administration installed sovereignty markers on the major islands of the Truong Sa Archipelago, viz, Truong Sa, An Bang, Song Tu Tay, Song Tu Dong, Thi Tu and Loai Ta.

On October 21, 1969, the Saigon administration annexed Dinh Hai village to Hoa Long village of Hoa Vang District, Quang Nam Province.

In July 1973 the Institute of Agricultural Surveys under the Ministry of Agricultural and Land Development of the Saigon administration conducted a survey on Nam Ai Island (Nam Yit) in the Truong Sa Archipelago. In August 1973, with the cooperation of a Japanese company, the Maruben corporation, the Ministry of National Planning and Development of the Saigon administration conducted a prospecting survey of phosphates in the Hoang Sa Archipelago. On September 6, 1973, the Saigon administration annexed the islands of Truong Sa, An Bang, Itu Aba, Song Tu Dong, Song Tu Tay, Loai Ta and Thi Tu, Nam Ai and Sinh Ton and other adjacent islands to Phuoc Hai village, Dat Do District, Phuoc Tuy Province.

Feeling keenly about Vietnam's age-old sovereignty over the two archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa, the successive administrations of South Vietnam never failed to defend it whenever a foreign country attempted to dispute it or occupied an island in the two archipelagoes.

On June 1, 1956, the Foreign Ministry of the Saigon administration issued a statement reaffirming Vietnam's sovereignty over the Truong Sa Archipelago, as the People's Republic of China, Taiwan and the Republic of the Philippines each claimed that the archipelago belonged to them.

On February 22, 1959, the Saigon administration arrested 82 citizens of the People's Republic of China and detained them for some time after they had infiltrated the islands of Huu Nhat, Duy Mong and Qang Hoa in the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

On April 20, 1971 the Saigon administration again reaffirmed that the Truong Sa Archipelago was part of Vietnamese territory in response to Malaysia's claim of sovereignty over some islands in that archipelago.

In connection with the statement of the Philippines president on the Truong Sa Archipelago at a press conference on July 10, 1971, the foreign minister of the Saigon administration on July 13, 1971 reaffirmed Vietnam's sovereignty over that archipelago.

In 1974 as the military forces of the People's Republic of China occupied the southwestern islands of the Hoang Sa Archipelago, the Saigon administration, in its statement of January 19, 1974, condemned the People's Republic of China for having encroached upon the territorial integrity of Vietnam. On January 20, 1974, in a statement at the First Session of the 3rd U.N. Conference on the Law of the Sea, held in Caracas, the Saigon administration restated that the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Islands were part of Vietnamese territory. In a statement issued on February 14, 1974 the Saigon administration once again reaffirmed that the two archipelagoes had always been part of Vietnam.

The Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam, for its party, announced a 3-point position concerning the settlement of the territorial disputes in a statement on January 20, 1974. On May 5 and 6, 1975, the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam announced the liberation of the islands in the Truong Sa Archipelago which had been held by the Saigon troops.

In September 1975 the delegation of the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam to the Colombo meterological conference said in a statement that the Hoang Sa Archipelago belonged to Vietnam and requested the World Meteorological Organization to continue to register in the W.M.O. list of meteorological stations the Hoang Sa meteorological station of Vietnam (which had been listed in the W.M.O. network under registration number 48,860).

After the reunification of Vietnam in 1976, the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam reaffirmed on various occasions Vietnam's sovereignty over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, e.g., in its notes to the parties concerned in the Sino-Vietnamese talks started in Beijing in October 1977 between the two deputy foreign ministers, in various statements issued by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, at the conference of the World Meteorological Organization in Geneva in June 1980, at the world geological congress in Paris in July 1980, etc.

On the basis of historical documents and the principles of international law and international practices, it is possible to draw the following conclusions:

1. The state of Vietnam took effective possession of the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes long ago when they were not under the sovereignty of any nation;

2. Throughout several centuries since then, the state of Vietnam has been effectively and continuously exercising sovereignty over these two archipelagoes;

3. The state of Vietnam has always actively defended its rights and titles against all schemes and acts of encroachment upon the sovereignty, territorial integrity and interests of Vietnam in connection with the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes.

Part 2

The Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes Have Never Been Chinese Territories

Despite the fact that the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes have long since been part of Vietnamese territory, the Beijing ruling circles are now trying to justify their expansionist ambitions over these two archipelagoes, quoting ancient books to back up their claims that China was "the first to discover, to exploit and to govern" the "Xisha" and the "Nansha" Archipelagoes.

"For thousands of years the governments of various Chinese dynasties had been continuously exercising their jurisdiction over these two archipelagoes... and the Chinese people are undenisble masters of these two archipelagoes", (document published by the Chinese Foreign Ministry on Jan 30th, 1980) they say.

On the other hand, they have brazenly made up the story that the Vietnamese Hoang Sa and Truong Sa are coastal islands and sandbanks along central Vietnam in an attempt to prove that the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes and the "Xisha" and "Nansha" islands claimed by China are not the same. But no one can deny the truth that Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes have been and shall always be parts of Vietnamese territory.

1 -- On the So-Called "Discovery" and "Exploitation" by the Chinese People

The document made public by the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs on January 30, 1980, presents excerpts from two books (Nanzhou Yiwuzhi and Funanzhuan) published in the Three Kingdoms Period (220-265 AD) to prove that long ago the Chinese "discovered" "Xisha" and "Nansha".

It also refers to six other books (Mongliangiu, Daoyi Zhilue, Dongxiyangkao, Shunfeng Xiangsong, Zhinan Zhengfa and Haiguo Winjianlu) published during the time between the Sung Dynasty and the Qing Dynasty (from the 11th to 19th century) and declares that these books write about the Chinese people's voyages to the Xisha and Nansha Archipelagoes and their engagement in production activities there over thousands of years, and "in this process they give the Xisha and Nansha Archipelagoes different names as Lozhou, Shitang, Wianli Shitaz, Wanli Changsha etc..." This was an attempt to prove that "the Chinese people had discovered and carried on exploitation work in Xihsa and Nansha".

As a matter of fact, the contents of what is quoted from the two books of the Three Kingdoms Period are quite vague. As for the six books dated from the Sung to the Qing dynasty, they are essentially writings recording contemporary Chinese cognizance of geographical positions, history and customs of foreign countries in Southeast Asia and South Asia, the sea routes from China to such foreign countries and contain nothing about "the Chinese people's voyages to these two archipelagoes" and their "engagement in production activities" there. Even if the geographical names used in these ancient books correctly refer to the two archipelagoes as Beijing claims, they are designations uded by the Chinese in the past to denote geographic features of foreign countries or to describe navigation routes in these sea areas. They are in no way of any legal value for the Chinese claim of sovereignty over these islands.

Similarily, even if it is true that the Chinese discovered these archipelagoes, that will not constitute a legal basis for the Chinese claim that they have been under Chinese jurisdiction. Even if it can be shown that some exploitation work was carried by the Chinese in "Xisha" and "Nansha", that will in no way help create sovereign rights for the Chinese state over these archipelagoes, since the work was done by private individuals.

2 -- On the So-Called "Jurisdiction" Exercised by Chinese Dynasties

Public opinion has demanded that the Chinese ruling circles prove when and how the Chinese state took possession of the two archipelagoes of "Xihsa" and "Nansha". The Chinese authorities, however, have failed to provide an answer. They had to resort to a general statement that "the governments of various Chinese dynasties had continuously exercised their jurisdiction over these two archipelagoes", and with a view to proving that they have cited a number of events taking place during the whole period from the 11th to the 19th century, of which the following three are emphasized:

The first event: In the above-mentioned document of the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs, what follows is said to be an excerpt from "Wujing Zongyao," a book written in the reign of King Renzong (1023-1063) of the Northern Sung: The court "orders that royal troops be dispatched to build and defend the bases or maritime patrol in Guangnan (i.e., present day Guangdong)" and "that combat ships be built"...."If from Tunmenshan one avails oneself of the east wind and takes the southwest route one will reach Jiuru Lozhou in seven days". The Chinese Foreign Ministry documents considers Kiuru Lozhou to be the "Xisha Archipelago" and concludes that "the court of the Northern Sungs had placed the Xisha Archipelago under its administration" and that "Chinese naval units had patrolled the area of the Xisha Archipelago".

In fact, the original "Wujing Zongyao" had this to say about the above-mentioned event:

"...Orders that royal troops be dispatched to build and defend the bases of maritime patrol in the eastern and western sea-harbours which are 280 truongs (truong: an ancient unit of measure equal to 3.51 metres) in width and which are about 200 li from Tunmenshan (Tunmenshan is a place on the mouth of Pearl River, Quangdong Province), and that warships be built"...."If from Tunmenshan one avails oneself of the east wind and takes the southwest route, one will reach Jiuru Lozhou in seven days, and if proceeding further, one will reach Pulaoshan (in the Kingdom of Huanzhou; Pulaoshan is Cham Island; Huanzhou was the Kingdom of Champa) within 3 days: and about 300 li further southwards from that point is Lingshandong Region. To the southwest of Lingshandong are the Kingdom of Dashifu, Sizi and Tianzhu (Dashifu, mentioned in many Chinese ancient books as Dashi, was a middle age nation in the Persian Gulf area; Sizi was ancient Sri Lanka and Tianzhu denoted India [according to Chinese books, Tengshu, Sungshi and Gugin Doshu Zishen where no one had any idea of how long a voyage to these kingdoms would take" (Wujing Zhongyao). [parentheses as received]

Clearly the above excerpt from "Wujing Zhongyao" mentions on the [one] hand the order of the court of the Northern Sungs on the establishment of bases for maritime patrol in Guangzhou harbour and on the other hand describes the positions of these bases and the sea routes from Guangzhou to the Indian Ocean, and not a single line of the aforesaid passage suggests that Chinese naval units made patrol tours to the vicinity of the "Xisha" Archipelago. The document of the Chinese Foreign Ministry, indeed, rearranges the words of the quoted passage (which are hereabove quoted) with no other aims than serving the expansionist design of the Chinese authorities with regard to the Hoang Sa Archipelago (Beijing not only distorts the contents of the books but also their titles in the French translation. For example, "saoyi zhilue" means "general observation of the barbarous countries on island" -- "barbarous countries" is a spiteful Chinese term for foreign countries -- but the Chinese translation is "general observation of the islands". "Haiguo winjianlu" means "what one sees and hears about foreign countries" but the Chinese translation is "what one sees and hears about coastal areas").

The second event: the document of the Chinese Foreign Ministry mentions the astronomical surveys conducted by the Yuan dynasty in the "South Sea" to conclude that "the Xisha Archipelago lies within Chinese territory under the Yuan".

"Nevertheless, in Yuanshi, the official history of the Yuan Dynasty, the astronomical surveys conducted during the early years of the Yuan Dynasty are described as follows:

"The measurements of shadows cast by the sun in the four seas were carried out at twenty-seven points including Laoli in the east, Tianchi in the West, Zhuya in the south and Tiele in the north" (Yuanshi).

In the chapter "The Measurements in the Four Seas", Yanshi clearly listed the twenty-seven points, including Kaoli, Tiele Peihai and Nanhai, where the measurements were carried out (Yuanshi). From what is written in Yuanshi, one can see clearly that the astronomical surveys at the twenty-seven points were not made on a "national level," as Beijing said in its document, but "in the four seas". That is why these twenty-seven points included such places lying outside the "Chinese domain" as Kaoli, i.e. Kores, Tiele, i.e. a place in Siberia (USSR), Peihai (Northern Sea), i.e., the sea off Siberia and Nanhai, i.e. the East Sea.

Even if the point where measurements were carried out in Nanhai lies in the "Xisha" Archipelago, that does not mean "Xisha" was part of the Chinese domain under the Yuan Dynasty. Yuanshi itself says the Chinese empire then extended only to Hainan Island in the south and not beyong the Gobi Desert in the north (after Yuanshi, the part on Geography, and Lidagangwupiao (Qing Dynasty).

The third event: The document of the Chinese Foreign Ministry mentions the patrol tour made by Vice-Admiral Wu Sheng some time between 1710 and 1712 during the Qing Dynasty. The admiral was said "to have set out from Qiongya, proceeding to Tonggu, Qizhouyang and Sigengsha, making a three-thousand li tour of patrol and observation". Making use of the above description of the tour, the publisher of the document says "Qishouyang is present-day Xisha Archipelago area, which was then patrolled by naval units of Guangdong Province".

In reality, the places mentioned in the above excerpt are in or around Hainan Island:

-- Quongya or "the military district of Qiongya" under the Qing Dynasty had its headquarters at Qiongshan near the present-day township of Haikou, in the northern part of Hainan Island (according to Zhungwen Dacidian, 1968, published in Taiwan).

-- Tonggu lies in the northeastern point of Hainan Island.

-- Qizhouyang is that par of the sea east of Hainan Island in which there are seven islets called Qizhou.

-- Sigengsha is a sandbank in the western part of Hainan Island.

It is now clear that the document of the Chinese Foreign Ministry has distorted facts, turning "Qizhouyang" into "Xisha Archipelago region" and conjuring a tour in "Xisha Archipelago region" out of Wu Sheng's patrol tour around Hainan Island to conclude that "the region was then patrolled by naval units of Guangdong Province".

The comparison between Beijing's excerpts and the original texts shows clearly that none of the three cited events had any connection with the Xisha Archipelago.

Beijing also cited some local geographical books in the Ming and Qing Dynasties which said "Wanzhou includes Qianli Changsha and Wanli Shitang" (Guandong Tongzhi, Qiongzhou Fuzhi and Wanzhou Zhi) in an attempt to prove their assertion that "the Xisha and Nansha Archipelagoes were then part of Wanshou in the District of Qiongzhou, Quangdong Province". Nevertheless, in "Daqing Yitongzhi", the official geographical book edited by the National Institute of History of the Qing Dynasty, with a foreword by Emperor Xuanzong in the 22nd year of Daoguang (1842), there was not a single mention about "Qianli Chang ha" and "Wanli Shitang" being part of Wanzhou, Qiongzhou District, Guangdong Province. That is the reason why, perhaps, Beijing failed to mention this official work published by that feudal state itself.

Beijing goes even further to say that it is in possession of three ancient maps of China, all drawn in the Qing Dynasty (Huangqing Gezhisheng Fentu (1755), Daqing Wannian Yitong Dili Quantu (1810) and Daqing Yitong Tianxia Quantu (1817), "as evidence" supporting its claim. Readers may ask why the Beijing authorities have not yet made public these maps. Such caution is not accidental because of the fact that all the maps of China drawn from that time till the early years of Zhunghua Minguo (the Chinese Republic) did not include "Xisha" and "Nansha," as is asserted by the Beijing authorities. Isn't it so that they need time to have these maps altered?

The landing of 170 Chinese sailors on some islands in "Xisha" in 1909 under the command of the (?Guangdong) Admiral Li Zhun on the order of Liangguang Governor Zhang Renjun was simply an unlawful act, since the archipelago by that time had been part of the Vietnamese territory for several hundred years, and no longer unoccupied land.

The landing of the Kuomintang troops on Phu Lam Island (Ile Boisee) in the Hoang Sa Archipelago and on Itu Aba Island in the Truong Sa Archipelago in December 1946 was an act of aggression, for these islands had belonged to Vietnam long before.

The occupations by the PRC troops of the northeastern islands in the Hoang Sa Archipelago in the early 1950's and of the southwestern islands of the same archipelago, which were being held by the troops of the Saigon administration in 1974, were also acts of armed aggression.

Be it a lightning invasion or a prolonged occupation, or any other acts undertaken by the Chinese in the Hoang Sa Archipelago and Itu Aba Island, they are all flagrant acts of encroachment upon the territorial integrity of Vietnam and brazen violation of international law. Those acts cannot create any rights or titles for the Chinese.

3 -- A New Allegation From Beijing: Vietnam's Hoang Sa and Truong Sa and China's "Xisha" and "Nansha" Are Not the Same

The above-mentioned document published by the Chinese Foreign Ministry ends with a most sensational assertion: Vietnam's Hoang Sa and China's "Xisha" are not the same; Vietnam's Truong Sa and China's "Nansha" are not the same; Vietnam's Truong Sa and Hoang Sa can only be "islands and sandbanks along the coast of central Vietnam". The Chinese authorities also say Vietnam cannot prove that the Truong Sa Archipelago is the China-claimed archipelago of "Nansha". These are new allegations from Beijing.

What arises from this Chinese allegation is the recognition that there exist in Vietnamese territory the archipelagoes of the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa and also the assertion of the existence of the claimed archipelagoes of "Xisha" and "Nansha" belonging to Chinese territory. Then whatever are these "Xisha" and "Nansha," and where do they come from? It is written in many Vietnamese ancient books that the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes have long since been Vietnamese territories, and this was confirmed in many Western maps (under the designations of Paracels and Spratley or Spratly) as well as in Vietnamese maps. However, the Chinese expansionists have chosen to baptize them "Xisha" and "Nansha" with a view to deliberately asserting claims on these two archipelagoes.

Having done all this, the Beijing authorities are now saying that Vietnam can in no way prove that Hoang Sa and Truong Sa are the same as the China-claimed archipelagoes of "Xisha" and "Nansha". This new allegation of the Chinese expansionists shows on the one hand their arrogant attitude, and on the other hand their legally-indefensible position in attempting to grab Vietnam's territory.

Vietnamese archives make distinction between the islands along the coast of central Vietnam and the Hoang Sa Archipelago. In Phy Bien Tap Luc, for example, Le Qui Don noted clearly that the Dai Truong Sa Islands stand farther out in the sea, separated from the Re Island by a voyage of three day's sailing.

They do not know of the fact, or they may have known it, but pretend not [to] know it, that a year later, in 1838, Bishop Taberd published a map called An Nam Dai Quoc Hoa Do in his Dictionarium Latino-Annamiticum in which Paracel, or Cat Vang, was defined as situated far away from major islands along the coast of central Vietnam such as Cham, Re, Xang, Tre, Thu, etc. Thus, Bishop Taberd made a distinction between the Paracel Archipelago in the middle of the sea and the islands along the coast of central Vietnam. Almost all the maps drawn by the 16th, 17th and 18th century navigators generally marked the Paracel or Parcel in the same areas of the present-day Paracels and Spratly far beyond the coastal islands of central Vietnam.

In 1959 82 fishermen of the People's Republic of China sailed in three boats and landed on three islands -- Huu Nhat, Duy Mong and Quang Hoa -- in the Hoang Sa Archipelago, and were arrested by the Saigon troops. In connection with this case, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the People's Republic of China, on February 29, 1959, issued a statement protesting against the Saigon administration. The arrest of the fishermen of the People's Republic of China mentioned in the above statement did not take place on the coastal islands of south Vietnam, but on the islands of Huu Nhat, Duy Nong and Quang Hoa in the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

On January 19, 1974, the Saigon authorities denounced the occupation of the Hoang Sa Archipelago by Beijing armed forces and on January 20, 1974, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the People's Republic of China issued a statement to defend the aggression. It is evident that the fighting between Saigon and Beijing took place in the Hoang Sa Archipelago (Paracel), which Beijing calls "Xisha" and not on the islands along the south Vietnamese coast, and that Chinese armed forces have been occupying the Hoang Sa Archipelago ever since, not the islands along the coast of south Vietnam.

The two events recalled above show all the more clearly that before January 30, 1980 -- the date on which the document of the Chinese Foreign Ministry was circulated -- Beijing always held that what they called "Xisha" and "Nansha" were also the Vietnamese archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa, i.e. the Paracels and Spratley in international maritime maps. The Vietnamese archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa can in no way alter their geographical positions by their Chinese names, nor can they become Chinese territories due to Beijing's allegations.

Despite all the noisy propaganda, all the concoction and distortion of the documents and all the arguments constructed over the past decades, Beijing has failed to bring out when the Chinese state began to take possession of the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, and how this state has exercised its sovereignty over them. This is the thing Beijing cannot prove, because of a simple fact that the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, which they call "Xisha" and "Nansha," have never been Chinese territories.

Conclusion

There exists a Hoang Sa and Truong Sa problem, but this question must be correctly understood.

On the basis of historical facts and international law it cannot be denied that the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes have long since and always been Vietnamese territories. The Vietnamese state took possession of these archipelagoes when they were not under the sovereignty of any nation, and it has been continuously and effectively exercising its sovereignty over them.

The Chinese state in the past had never taken possession of these two archipelagoes which it calls "Xisha" and "Nansha" and had never exercised its sovereignty over them. China had not even raised any claim over these two archipelagoes until the early years of the 20th century, but Beijing is now fabricating facts and distorting history to back up its claims that "Xisha" and "Nansha" have since ancient times been Chinese territories.

The real problem here is not the question of a dispute between Vietnam and China, but it is the Chinese aggression and occupation of the Hoang Sa Aochipelago, part of Vietnamese territory, and the Chinese claim of the Truong Sa Archipelago as part of China. The Chinese authorities must return to Vietnam the Hoang Sa Archipelago and renounce all claims to the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes -- this is a matter of course, in conformity with international law.

The ambition of the Beijing authorities over the two Vietnamese archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa manifests all the more clearly their policy of big-nation expansionism and hegemony which is aimed at conquering Vietnam as well as Laos and Kampuchea, gradually controlling and eventually turning the East Sea into a Chinese lake and using the Indochinese Peninsula as a springboard for their expansion into Southeast Asia.

The act of aggression of the reactionary clique in the Beijing ruling circles against the Hoang Sa Archipelago and their scheme to annex the Truong Sa Archipelago constitute not only an encroachment upon Vietnam's sovereignty and territorial integrity but also an immediate threat to the interests of the countries in the East Sea area, as well as to peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

The Vietnamese people are determined to defend the territorial integrity of their country and their sovereignty over the two archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa against all expansionist designs of the reactionary clique in the Beijing ruling circles. This just struggle enjoying the sympathy and support of the world's peace-loving and progressive forces fighting against imperialism and Beijing's expansionism and hegemonism will certainly end in total victory.

BEIJING STAND ON FRENCH AID TO SRV ASSAILED

BK161219 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] The Chinese authorities have shown their anger and wrath at the French Government's decision to resume economic aid to Vietnam. On 9 January, through their official organ, the PEOPLE'S DAILY, they claimed that this decision by the French Government is stupid and illusionary action and is mistaken. This is an arrogant and rude statement. The French Government's decision to continue economic aid to Vietnam is correct, and it is a matter concerning only the two sovereign countries. It does harm to no one. Moreover, what grounds have the Chinese authorities to criticize the internal affairs of a country which is not related to them.

The Chinese authorities' deeds do not match their words. It is not surprising to hear such arrogant statement as the French Government action does not contribute to peace in Kampuchea. This is an absurd allegation. Peace- and justice-loving people all over the world know that they themselves are the causes threatening peace and stability in Kampuchea and Souteast Asia as a whole. They have massively supplied weapons to Pol Pot's troops and other Khmer reactionary forces.

Of late Beijing, in close collusion with Washington and reactionary forces in some ASEAN countries, helped setting up a so-called coalition government by Khmer reactionaries to oppose the Kampuchean people's revival. Realities show that no plot and no slander against Vietnam and Kampuchea can cover up Beijing's criminal hands against the Kampuchean nation. Such allegations have also originated from China's hostile policy toward Vietnam. At present Beijing not only conducts repeated armed provocations against Vietnamese border areas but also prevents international aid to Vietnam. It wants Vietnam to confront one difficulty after another to weaken, then control Vietnam as a first step toward the rest of Southeast Asia.

Although there remain many difficulties to be overcome, the Vietnamese and the Indochinese revolutions continue to advance. We highly value the French Government's correct decision and sincerely thank the French Communist Party and people and other democratic and progressive forces in France for their support and assistance to our national construction and defense.

AUSTRALIA

NATO DECLARATION ON POLAND GIVEN 'FULL SUPPORT'

BK120947 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Australia has come out in full support of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's declaration on Poland. In a statement in Canberra, the minister for foreign affairs, Mr Street, said the NATO declaration gave a clear signal of Western determination to support the restoration of reforms in Poland. He also condemned Soviet interference in Poland's affairs and the violation of basic human rights and freedom through the imposition of martial law.

Mr Street said Australia regretted that despite some marginal concessions, there were still no signs of an early end to military rule in Poland. He called on the Polish regime to return to the processes of dialogue and reform in accordance with its stated undertakings. Mr Street said the Helsinki agreement -- one of the basic documents underpinning East-West relations -- had been flagrantly violated in Poland. The same fundamental principles of international conduct had been breached by the Soviet invasion and continuing occupation of Afghanistan.

The foreign minister said wide-ranging sanctions against the Soviet Union applied by the Australian Government after the invasion of Afghanistan would remain in place.

NEW ZEALAND

GOVERNMENT SUPPORTS NATO STAND ON POLAND

BK160214 Hong Kong AFP in English 0114 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Wellington, 16 Jan (AFP) -- The New Zealand Government has backed the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) stand on the military crackdown in Poland and said it will consider ways of demonstrating its abhorrence to oppression of the Polish people. Prime Minister Robert Muldoon said New Zealand "welcomes the firm and united stand taken by Western governments. We wholeheartedly endorse their condemnation of the imposition of martial law in Poland and of the arrests, internments and deaths of Polish workers, constituting a massive violation of human rights."

Mr Muldoon said the authorities in Poland and the Soviet Union had now been given the clearest warning that their actions were quite unacceptable. "Our sympathy goes out to the Polish people in their privations and sufferings," he said. "We support the NATO governments in their efforts to ensure that humanitarian aid reaches those for whom it is intended.

"Since the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan two years ago, a flagrant act of aggression of which we have by no means lost sight, New Zealand has maintained a range of restrictions in relations with the Soviet Union. The government will, in the weeks ahead, be giving further consideration to what other steps New Zealand might take to demonstrate our abhorrence of the oppression of the Polish people and our solidarity with all efforts to restore to them their basic human rights," Mr Muldoon said.

GOVERNMENT RESPONDS ON JAPANESE SHIP INCIDENT

Defense Official's Comments

OW180653 Tokyo KYODO in English 0635 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Manila, Jan 18 (KYODO) -- A high-ranking Philippine Defense Ministry official said Monday he ordered two warplanes to fire on a Japanese ship last Friday. Brigadier-General Delfin Castro, a deputy vice minister of defense, told KYODO NEWS SERVICE he had believed the ship was carrying supplies for antigovernment elements. Two propeller-driven planes strafed the 5,307-ton chemical tanker Hegg off Mindanao Island last Friday, seriously wounding a South Korean crewman. Earlier Monday, Japanese Ambassador Hideho Tanaka had asked the Philippine Government to investigate the shooting incident.

Gen Castro said he would assume full responsibility for his order. The general said a Philippine reconnaissance plane spotted a tanker of unknown nationality moving toward Davao, southern Mindanao, on Thursday, one day before the incident. The tanker showed no flag at that time, he said. Philippine warships fired on the ship the following day, but the ship still hoisted no flag. The warships continued to give warnings for about an hour, but the tanker increased speed and fled, he said.

Two air force T-28 fighters took off after a reconnaissance plane spotted the same tanker shortly before noon Friday, he said. The fighters fired warnings shots in front of the tanker, but it continued moving north, apparently to escape from Philippine territorial waters, Castro said.

The Hegg was sailing some 40 kilometers off Mindanao Island when it was strafed by the fighters. The Philippines claims territorial waters up to 350 miles (some 430 kilometers) off its coast. The Hegg, owned by Kitanihon Oi Steamship Co of Tokyo, was carrying a load of methanol from Libya to Kobe. The chemical tanker hoisted a rising sun flag when it was attacked, according to Japanese press reports.

In Tokyo, Kitanihon Oil Steamship Co told KYODO that the Hegg had flown a rising sun flag in the stern before it was attacked by the planes. A company spokesman said the Hegg also hoisted a rising sun flag on the mast after the fighters fired the first warning shots. The spokesman also said the shipping company received no reports from the tanker that it had received any warnings or been chased by Philippine warships last Thursday as claimed by Gen Castro.

Romulo's Statement

OW181034 Tokyo KYODO in English 1030 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Manila, Jan 18 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Carlos Romulo Monday acknowledged that Philippine Air Force planes strafed a Japanese chemical tanker because it was suspected of carrying arms to antigovernment guerrillas. In a press statement Romulo said the attack was carried out as a "legitimate exercise of our right to protect our national security and territorial integrity." He said the 5,307-ton tanker Hegg, owned by Kitanihon Oi Steamship Co of Tokyo, was suspected of carrying arms worth $10 million (about yen 2.25 billion). Two planes strafed the tanker off Mindanao Island last Friday, seriously wounding a South Korean cook.

Romulo said the incident could have been avoided if the skipper of the ship had stopped his vessel when told to do so by Philippine Navy units at first, then by Philippine Air Force elements.

Meanwhile, Deputy Foreign Minister Manuel Collantes told Japanese Ambassador Hideho Tanaka that the Philippines had very reliable information about a ship heading either for Davao Island or Samar Island with weapons aboard.

ASEAN ECONOMIC MINISTERS ISSUE COMMUNIQUE

BK161612 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1530 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] ASEAN has agreed to intensify cooperation on all commodities which are of interest to member countries. It will pursue vigorously a joint approach in order to strengthen these commodities and to seek solutions at international level to problems facing ASEAN producers. This was stated in a joint communique issued at the end of the 3-day meeting of ASEAN economic ministers in Kuala Lumpur this evening.

ASEAN will seek representation on the executive bodies of the various commodity arrangements in order to present its views more effectively to consumer nations. In this regard, the meeting urged the international community, especially the developed countries, to ensure the success of international commodity agreements.

On tin, the economic ministers urged all producing and consuming countries to sign and ratify the Sixth International Tin Agreement before the deadline on the 30th of April this year. The ministers expressed deep regret over the U.S. move to sell tin from its stockpiles in the world markets. They urged Washington to immediately stop GSA sales of tin in the world markets.

On rubber, the ministers agreed that ASEAN, together with other producers, would press for an upward revision of the buffer stock price range to a more realistic level in the coming meeting of the International Natural Rubber Council. This was to help stabilise the export earnings of producing countries.

The meeting also resolved to urge the EEC to participate in the international sugar agreement.

In trade, the meeting approved another 1,948 items for tariff preferences under the Preferential Trading Arrangement [PTA]. This brings the total number of items under the PTA to 8,529.

The meeting also approved the ASEAN copper fabrication plant to be set up in the Philippines as the fourth ASEAN industrial project. The economic ministers also initialed the supplementary agreement of the ASEAN rock salt soda ash project to be sited in Thailand.

The ministers set June 1 this year as the effective date of the initial 50 percent across the board tariff cut for products in the first package of automotive complementation.

On shipping, the meeting agreed that a feasibility study for the setting up of an ASEAN liner service be speeded up.

As for the restructuring of the ASEAN machinery for economic cooperation, the ministers decided that the present five committees should remain as they are.

The minister of trade and industry, Tengku Ahmad Rithauddeen, who chaired the meeting, told newsmen that chairmanship of the committees would, however, be reviewed at the next ASEAN economic ministers meeting in Manila in May.

FURTHER ON SHIP INCIDENT INVOLVING PHILIPPINES

Strafing Location Revised

OW190033 Tokyo KYODO in English 0011 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 19 (KYODO) -- The Foreign Ministry said late Monday night that the strafing of the Japanese chemical tanker Hegg by Philippine planes last week occurred outside the territorial waters of the Philippines.

The ministry had announced earlier Monday evening that the Hegg received the order to stop and the initial warning shots in an area around 9 to 10 nautical miles from shore, or within the 12 miles regarded by Japan as constituting the territorial waters of a country. It also had announced it could not be said definitely whether the second warning shots were fired in the open sea or within the territorial waters. The ministry, however, revised its earlier announcement late Monday night and said the strafing did not occur inside the Philippine territorial waters.

The correction was made on the basis of checks conducted by the Martime Safety Agency [MSA] after a reply on the incident was received from the Philippine Government. The MSA check revealed that the initial warning shots were fired at a point some 16.5 miles from shore after the order to stop was issued at a point 14.5 miles offshore. The Philippines, however, is claiming waters west of 127 degrees east longitude as a "treaty zone," or its "territorial waters."

In respect to the Philippine claim that the Hegg ignored the order to stop and continued to sail at a speed of 20 knots, the ministry believed the speed of the tanker actually was 12 knots.

Sakurauchi Comments

OW190237 Tokyo KYODO in English 0227 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Jan 19 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi indicated Tuesday Japan may make formal inquires with the Philippines again on last week's strafing of the chemical tanker Hegg after a further probe on facts is concluded. He was referring to divergencies in explanations made by the Philippines and Japan on the incident.

Sakurauchi told newsmen that facts should be confirmed first before inquiries are made with the Philippines through diplomatic channels. The foreign minister also said officials of the Maritime Safety Agency may board the Hegg before the tanker calls at Naha in Okinawa on Wednesday in order to question Hideo Takakuwa, captain of the ship.

SAKURAUCHI COMMENTS ON POLAND, USSR RELATIONS

OW181131 Tokyo KYODO in English 1126 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Jan 18 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Monday said that the Polish affair should be resolved by the people of Poland on their own initiative.

Sakurauchi made the statement when he met the ambassadors to Japan of nine European Community (EC) nations excluding Luxembourg and the representative of the EC Commission in Japan. Sakurauchi told them that Japan shares the same view as Western countries as regards Soviet pressure on Poland and responsibility for the developments in that country, Japanese officials said.

Admitting the importance of Japan's relations with the Soviet Union, Sakurauchi said that relations with the Soviet Union are not necessarily progressing smoothly because of the Soviet Union's refusal to recognize Japan's claims to the northern territories long occupied by the Soviets. He said Japan would convey its views regarding Poland to the Soviets at working-level consultations which will start in Moscow from Wednesday.

VRPR SCORES SOUTH'S PLAN FOR 1988 OLYMPICS

SK190215 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Dialogue from feature program "Focus on Topics"]

[Text] [First speaker] Since the outset of the new year, the Chon Tu-hwan clique has raised a commotion on hosting the 1988 Olympics in Seoul. Overseas compatriots as well as people at home have raised their voices to denounce this commotion. I will now discuss this issue with Madame Yun.

I understand that overseas compatriots are denouncing the plan for hosting the 1988 Olympics in Seoul.

[Second speaker] It is natural they are denouncing the attempt to host the Olympics in Seoul because Chon Tu-hwan's hidden intention to take political advantage of the 1988 Seoul Olympics has been exposed and because the world's people denounce and deride this attempt. The Chon Tu-hwan ring is eager to propagandize that the hosting of the 1988 Olympics in Seoul will contribute to heightening the people's awareness, to achieving a second economic leap and to easing tension on the Korean Peninsula. However, the people do not believe this. Overseas compatriots unanimously say the hosting of the 1988 Olympics in Seoul will contribute to extending the term of the dictatorial military Chon Tu-hwan regime, to further consolidating its system, to worsening economic depression and the people's hardship, to perpetuating national division and to heightening tension on the Korean Peninsula.

[First speaker] In other words, the Chon Tu-hwan ring's attempt to host the Olympics in Seoul is an impure political scheme to manipulate the Olympics, running counter to the principles of the games. I would like to hear about the reaction of overseas compatriots to this scheme.

[Second speaker] Our compatriots in Canada say that the Chon Tu-hwan ring is seeking an impure political goal by trying t[illegible] the 1988 Olympics in Seoul. They further say the 1988 Seoul Olympics will bring re[illegible]rdship and misfortune to our people. In its editorial, a recent edition of the [illegible] KOREA TIMES, published by compatriots in Canada, says: There are various interpretations of the hidden motives of the Chon Tu-hwan regime in its attempt to host the Olympics. The primary aid of this attempt is to extend the term of the Chon Tu-hwan regime. If Chon Tu-hwan is faithful to the constitution — that is, if he adheres to a single 7-year term — he should quit the presidency in March 1988. The Olympics will be held in the summer of 1988. Will Chon Tu-hwan resign from his presidential post and remain as president of the Olympics? This is preposterous.

The second aim is to accelerate the maneuvers to fabricate two Koreas. The Chon Tu-hwan regime is accelerating the movement to unilaterally enter the United Nations. In light of the South Korean Government's hostile attitude, the babbling about formation of a single national sports team for the Olympics is, no doubt, an empty promise. Taking advantage of the Olympics, Chon Tu-hwan will, no doubt, more cruelly suppress democratic movements and hinder the democratic reunification movement. Such being the case, foreign loans will increase and the people will suffer more.

[First speaker] The principle of the Olympics is to help the world's people promote mutual friendship and understanding through sports and to contribute to peace. We therefore call the Olympics a festival of peace. We also call these sports games an international sports festival because of the goal of these games to promote sports. Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan ring, violating this principle, wants to host the Olympics in Seoul to use them for political purposes.

[Second speaker] Because of this, not only our compatriots in Canada but also compatriots in other foreign countries are exposing and bitterly denouncing the aim of the Chon Tu-hwan ring to host the 1988 Olympics in Seoul.

A recent edition of MINJOK SIBO, a newspaper published by compatriots in Japan, disclosed the aim of the Chon Tu-hwan regime in hosting the Olympics: Compatriots here oppose the hosting of the Olympics in Seoul because it is unsuitable as the site of the Olympics in light of the fact that the Chon Tu-hwan ring -- a group of murderers and war maniacs -- has continuously and indiscreetly kicked up war exercise rackets and has frantically run amok to make preparations for a new war, thus heightening tension on the Korean Peninsula.

The newspaper then explained the aim of the Chon Tu-hwan ring in hosting the Olympics: the Chon Tu-hwan ring tries to employ the Seoul Olympics in its scheme to make the division of the country permanent. Soon after the adoption of the decision on hosting the Olympics, the Chon Tu-hwan regime maneuvered to enter the United Nations by taking advantage of the Olympics which are scheduled to be held in Seoul. This is a criminal act of trampling underfoot the principle of the Olympics and the desire of our people for reunification by trying to provoke a war instead of peace on the Korean Peninsula through the perpetuation of national division.

Third, the Chon Tu-hwan regime attempts to exploit the Olympics to avoid international isolation. The Chon Tu-hwan regime is being isolated by all but a few countries, such as Japan and the United States. It is running amok to win international recognition by hosting the Seoul Olympics.

Fourth, it is scheming to overcome its political crisis by exploiting the Seoul Olympics. The Chon Tu-hwan regime, which gained power by murdering the people in Kwangju and democratic forces, has been rejected by all the people since it seized power.

The Olympics are being attended by many countries. The site of the Olympics is a good place to show off national prestige and spirit. The Chon Tu-hwan regime is attempting to escape its political crisis by exploiting the Olympics and making the people a part of this event. The people, having endured three dictatorships, will not be deceived by this plot. They are struggling against the Chon Tu-hwan regime, recognizing its motive for hosting the Olympics.

Fifth, the Chon Tu-hwan regime intends to help the economy by hosting the Olympics. The people will suffer heavy taxes. They are greatly concerned over the decision to host the Olympics, which will require $4 to 5 billion and many foreign loans. Thus, MINJOK SIBO exposed and denounced the Chon Tu-hwan regime's motive in hosting the 1988 Olympics.

[First speaker] I understand that the compatriots in the United States and West Germany are denouncing and rejecting the Chon Tu-hwan regime's hosting of the 1988 Olympics in Seoul.

[Second speaker] Correct. Papers published overseas by our compatriots, including SINHAN MINBO in the United States and MINJU HANGUK in West Germany, and the overseas compatriots are unanimously denouncing the hosting of the Seoul Olympics, noting impure political motives. Saying the Chon Tu-hwan clique is pursuing political aims by hosting the Seoul Olympics, they say that it is maneuvering to conceal its crimes: such as usurping power, massacring the citizens of Kwangju and repressing democratic figures including Kim Tae-chung, and to divert the people's attention.

Overseas compatriots said that traitor Chon Tu-hwan is also attempting to exploit the Olympics to lay a base for maintaining power. They claim that Chon Tu-hwan's gambling with the Olympics in an economic crisis is to ensure long-term power.

The overseas compatriots pointed out that the Chon-Tu-hwan clique is attempting to win international recognition by hosting the Olympics. They say the Chon Tu-hwan clique is trying to produce a deceitful drama designed to improve its image, which has been tainted by the Kwangju massacre, to escape its isolation and to give the impression that economic growth is progressing.

[First speaker] I think the voices of the overseas compatriots echo the voice of the people at home. Chon Tu-hwan's hosting of the Seoul Olympics reminds me of the tactics of Germany's Hitler, who strengthened his dictatorship by bringing the Olympics to Berlin and provoked World War II.

[Second speaker] The hosting of the 1988 Seoul Olympics is aimed at legalizing and strengthening repressive measures and realizing its ambition for long-term power. As is demonstrated by history, it is a hackneyed tactic of fascist dictators to fabricate public opinion to legalize their repressive systems and measures. Hitler's hosting of the Berlin Olympic Games in 1936 is a good example. Usurping power through agitation and conspiracy, massacre and repression in 1933, Hitler induced the Olympics to Berlin in 1936 and exploited them. The 1988 Seoul Olympics is a plot pursuing the same purpose. Chon Tu-hwan, after usurping power at the point of guns and bayonets and by suppressing the aspiration for democracy and reunification, is trying to host the 1988 Seoul Olympics to improve the image of his treacherous regime.

[First speaker] Chon Tu-hwan, however, is raving that the hosting of the 1988 Seoul Olympics is a result of Korea's stability and national strength.

[Second speaker] In a word, his remarks are but a foolish trick to conceal the evil nature of the Chon Tu-hwan clique's behind-the-scenes dealings in bringing the 1988 Olympics to Seoul. To host the Olympics, the Chon Tu-hwan clique dispatched Foreign Minister No Sin-yong to the United States just before the convocation of the International Olympics Committee and directed him to carry on diplomatic negotiations for 3 weeks at the United Nations. It dispatched the chairman of the Korean Olympics Committee; the Korean ambassador to West Germany; the chairman of the Hyondae group, Chong Chu-yong; the chairman of the Hanjin group, Cho Chung-hun and other leading figures from political and economic circles, as well as over 100 beautiful women graduates of Ehwa Women's University and the University of Foreign Studies of Korea, to Baden-Baden and had them commit all forms of filthy acts.

Despite the fact that the 1988 Seoul Olympics were decided in such a way, the Chon Tu-hwan clique raved as if Seoul's Olympics reflect Korea's stability and strength. Thus, it is trying to improve its image as a murderous fascist regime branded by the nations of the world.

[First speaker] In summing up, the Chon Tu-hwan clique's hosting of the 1988 Seoul Olympics is aimed at overcoming difficulties and an economic crisis, escaping isolation at home and abroad and perpetuating the nation's division.

[Second speaker] You are correct. This is why our masses and overseas compatriots, as well as the world's public opinion, strongly oppose making Seoul the site of the 1988 Olympics.

[First speaker] The Chon Tu-hwan clique should heed public opinion at home and abroad and stop exploiting the Olympics for impure political purposes. The Chon Tu-hwan clique should not try to realize its ambition for long-term power and perpetuate the nation's division by hosting the Seoul Olympics. It should immediately step down from power in accord with the unanimous demand of the masses at home and abroad. Our masses will never tolerate the Chon Tu-hwan clique's antinational, antipopular criminal acts. We should more persistently wage the sacred struggle to overthrow the military dictatorship and achieve the democratization of society and national reunification.

VRPR: REAGAN ADMINISTRATION POLICIES FAIL

SK182317 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Article from feature program "Trend of World"]

[Text] In this hour we will review Reagan's domestic and foreign policy which has suffered failure and frustration.

It has been a year since Reagan entered the White House as the 40th President of the United States. In his speech at the White House on 20 January 1981, Reagan, calling for the reconstruction of a strong United States, pledged that he would achieve an economic boom, increase military capabilities and maintain close ties with U.S. allies.

At present, when we recall the past year, however, we see that these prodigious promises from the White House have been broken due to repeated failure and frustration. (Rico Chorindo), chairman of the General Federation of [words indistinct], criticized Reagan's economic policy. He said that although the Reagan administration has promised an economic boom, this promise has not been fulfilled. He added that Reagan has emptied the people's pockets, deprived the poor of [words indistinct] and increased the unemployment rate.

During the past year of the Reagan administration the U.S. economic crisis worsened. Economic stagnation and lower production continued, inflation and unemployment increased and the balance of payments worsened. Despite repeated measures to vitalize the economy, such as reduction of domestic expenditure, the economic depression has continued. As a result, the GNP in the fourth quarter of 1981 (? dropped three points). The unemployment rate continued to increase, rising to 8.5 percent at the end of 1981 from 7.4 percent at the time of Reagan's inauguration. At present, the number of those unemployed is over 9 million. People predict that this figure will increase to 9.3 million, or an 8.7 percent unemployment rate. Foreign news reports say this rate is the highest since 1939.

The past year since Reagan's inauguration was marked by repeated failures and frustrations. Reagan's foreign policy for reconstructing a strong United States and strengthening ties with its allies has faced fiasco due to the failure of the Camp David accords, aggravation of the situation in El Salvador, the increase in anti-U.S. sentiment in Latin America, the expansion of the anti-U.S. and antiwar movements in Europe, the trend in developing countries to break away from the United States and U.S. isolation from its NATO allies. In particular, Reagan's speech in October 1981 hinting deployment of U.S. nuclear weapons in NATO nations in West Europe and the possibility of a nuclear war there created a fierce whirlwind of antinuclear and antiwar demonstrations throughout Europe and further accelerated the anti-U.S. struggle.

Referring to Reagan's foreign policy, Brzezinski, former U.S. presidential adviser for national security affairs, in an interview with the New York TIMES last December, warned that if things do not change Reagan's foreign policy will go bankrupt by this spring.

While suffering failure in his economic and foreign policies, Reagan is annoyed by strife between his Cabinet members and advisers at the White House and by troubles caused by them. Due to the strife last November between U.S. Secretary of State Haig and Allen, presidential adviser for national security affairs, and the criticism of Reagan's economic policy by Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, political circles in Washington were buzzing like a beehive. Stockman said Reagan's economic policy has not been implemented smoothly. Officials in the administration fear Stockman's criticism of the economic policy has greatly marred Reagan's dignity and leadership. The U.S. Republican Party said that this criticism was a most serious political blow to Reagan.

Supporting Stockman's remarks, the U.S. Democratic Party, which had opposed Reagan's policy from the beginning, attacked the Republican administration. As shown by this, strife and discord caused by Reagan's policy have frequently occurred. Though Reagan has tried to pretend that he is stable, this has only revealed his incompetency.

The scandal involving Allen, assistant to the president for national security affairs, which was linked to his receipt of a gratuity from a Japanese magazine, has plunged Reagan into a predicament. As for this bribery case, Allen excused himself by saying that he had not used his influence in arranging an interview between a Japanese magazine, HOUSEWIVES' FRIEND, and Nancy Reagan. He denied he had done anything wrong. However, judging from the fact that he has maintained close relations with the Japanese magazine for a long time, we are suspicious. Reagan tried to protect him and keep him on as national security adviser. Reagan, however, was compelled to accept his resignation on 4 January because of continued calls for his resignation.

Reagan is suffering more from strife and discord among his staff at the White House than from his domestic and foreign policies. When he took over at the White House, Reagan promised the American people an economic boom and the construction of a strong United States. However, his achievements are disappointing.

For this reason, in commenting on Reagan's domestic and foreign policies, foreign media deride the Reagan administration and say it is surrounded by enemies. They predict that the dark cloud hanging over the White House will grow darker and heavier this year.

TEXT OF 18 DEC TANJUG INTERVIEW OF KIM IL-SONG

SK150424 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0331 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 15 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN and all other papers in Pyongyang January 15 carried the full text of the answers given by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to the questions raised by the delegation of the Yugoslav news agency TANJUG on December 18, 1981, which reads:

I received your questionnaire. You raised a series of problems in a comprehensive way. Now I am going to make answers to some cardinal points.

I would like first to mention the achievements made by our people this year in socialist construction and the prospective tasks to be carried out in the future. The current year is a year of great importance in the building of socialism in our country. The success in the general forward movement for implementing the decision of the historic sixth congress of our party depends largely on how to wage the battle for this year, the first year of the movement.

This year we have a brilliant victory in socialist construction by conducting the first operation well in this onward movement and thus made full preparations for achieving ahead of schedule the magnificent objectives of socialist construction set forth by the sixth party congress. This year our people have registered great successes in all spheres of politics, economy and culture by carrying out vigorously the three revolutons, ideological, technical and cultural, holding aloft the banner of the chuche idea.

In accordance with the party's policy of giving precedence to the ideological revolution, this revolution has been pushed forward energetically, with the result that the mental and moral qualities of our working people have become still better. Today, all of our working people, firmly armed with our party's revolutionary idea, the chuche idea, are working hard with a high degree of revolutionary enthusiasm and creative initiative to carry through the lines and policies laid down by the party. The entire people are rallied closely around the party with one mind and one will, and the whole society is firmly united politically and ideologically. No force on earth can break the political and ideological unity of our society based on the chuche idea.

Big progress has also been made this year in socialist economic construction. Thanks to the heightened revolutionary zeal and vigorous labour endeavours of our working people, a large number of giant monumental structures have sprung up and a great productive upswing has been brought about in all fields of the national economy, thereby further consolidating the economic foundations of the country and rapidly increasing the industrial and agricultural production.

This year, in the domain of socialist cultural construction, public education has developed further, the general cultural and technical standards of the working people have risen markedly and excellent literary and art works have been produced in plenty. Specifically, our scientists and technicians have energetically conducted scientific researches from the steadfast standpoint of chuche and thus succeeded in many scientific and technical inventions which acquire an important significance in the development of the national economy.

All these successes scored by our people in socialist construction this year constitute a sure guarantee for a faster advance and for a yet greater victory.

On the basis of these achievements our people will add spurs to the general forward movement for fulfilling the grand tasks of socialist construction set forth by the sixth party contress.

The sixth congress of our party presented the historic task of modeling the whole of society on the chuche idea. Patterning the whole society after the chuche idea means making all its members communist men of a chuche type and transforming all aspects of social life as required by the chuche idea and thereby completely realizing the independence of the working masses. It calls for revolutionizing, working-classizing and intellectualizing all members of society. Only when we train them to be communist men developed in an all-round way with revolutionary ideological consciousness and high cultural standard through a powerful struggle for the revolutionization, working-classization and intellectualization of the whole society, can we capture the ideological fortress of communism and realize the complete social equality of the working people.

It also presupposes making the national economy chuche-oriented, modernized and scientifically-based. Only when we guarantee the independent character of the national economy firmly, improve its technical equipment steadily and place production and management on a new scientific basis through the promotion of chuche-orientation, modernization and scientization of the national economy, can we lay solid material and technical foundations of socialism and communism and provide the working people adequately with an independent material and cultural life.

The sixth congress of our party put forward the ten long-term objectives of socialist economic construction in the 1980's in order to accelerate the modeling of the whole society on the chuche idea. The goals are to produce annually in the near future 100,000 kilowatt hours of electricity, 120 million tons of coal, 15 million tons of steel, 1.5 million tons of nonferrous metals, 20 million tons of cement, 7 million tons of chemical fertilizers, 1,500 million metres of fabrics, 5 million tons of sea foods, and 15 million tons of grain and reclaim 300,000 chongbo of tideland within the next ten years. If they are attained, our country will rank among the nations leading the world in economic progress and lay solid material and technical foundations to guarantee firmly the complete triumph of socialism, and the material and cultural standards of our people will rise very high.

At present, all our working people, with a great hope of the future and firm confidence in victory, are striving to carry out these magnificant long-term tasks. Judging from the high revolutionary enthusiasm and soaring fighting spirit of our people, I believe that these tasks will be fulfilled ahead of the set time.

Now, I would like to dwell on the immediate tasks for the reunification of our country. At the Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea last year, we made a new proposal to reunify the country on the three principles of independence, peaceful reunification and great national unity. Our party's new reunification proposal holds that the country should be reunified by founding a confederal republic through the establishment of a unified national government on condition that the North and the South recognize and tolerate each other's ideas and social systems, a government in which the two sides are represented on an equal footing and under which they exercise regional autonomy respectively with equal rights and duties.

It is envisaged that the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo to be established by the coalition of the North and the South in accordance with our party's new national reunification proposal will be a unified state representing the whole of the Korean nation and as such pursue an independent, democratic, neutral, nonaligned and peace-loving policy. The programme for reunifying the country through the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo is winning full support and warm approval from all people in the North and South of our country and all overseas Koreans and evoking great sympathy among the people the world over.

If the country is to be reunified through the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo, the military fascist ruling system should first be liquidated and society made democratic in South Korea.

In South Korea today the most harsh and shameless military fascist rule unprecedented in history is in force. The present South Korean military fascist clique who seized power in a conspiratorial manner under the manipulation of the U.S. imperialists are trampling upon even the people's elementary democratic freedoms and rights and openly slaughtering people by rigging up various fascist laws and mobilizing the colossal repressive machinery.

As long as the military fascist ruling system is kept intact, which brutally suppresses and murders the patriotic-minded people who demand democracy and national reunification in South Korea, it is impossible to bring about national reconciliation and unity and realize any proposals for the peaceful reunification of the country.

All fascist laws and repressive setups should be abolished in South Korea, free political activities guaranteed for political parties, social organizations and individual personages, the military fascists forced out of power, and a democratic government set up.

One of the important tasks for achieving national reunification through the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo is to ease the tension of dispel the danger of war in our country. In our country huge armed forces of the North and the South now stand opposed to each other, with the military demarcation line in between. Under the pretext of fictitious "threat of southward invasion", the South Korean military fascists are bringing in a large amount of up-to-date lethal weapons and modern military equipment from the United States and are staging boisterous war exercises with the American troops almost every day. Because of the manoeuvres carried on for a new war by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean military fascists, the situation in our country is now strained to the extreme, and there is the danger of war breaking out any minute. In these circumstances where the tension has been keyed up and the danger of war is hovering, the country cannot be reunified peacefully.

In order to relax the tension and remove the danger of war in our country, the Korean military armistice agreement must be replaced with a peace agreement.

Since a long time ago we have time and again proposed to the United States, a signatory to the Korean military armistice agreement, to replace the armistice agreement with a peace agreement. But the U.S. authorities have not yet accepted our reasonable proposal. Keeping South Korea under their occupation, they are further increasing their military support to the South Korean military fascists.

If the U.S. authorities have the least interest in peace in Korea and the peaceful solution of the Korean question, they should accept our just proposal on concluding a peace agreement and withdraw their troops from South Korea as early as possible.

For the independent and peaceful reunification of our country it is necessary to check the "two Koreas" plot of the U.S. imperialists and their machinations to interfere in our internal affairs. The U.S. imperialists have put it forward as the basic strategy of their policy towards Korea to create "two Koreas" and are resorting to every possible means to realize it. They are instigating the South Korean puppet clique to national division and North-South confrontation and actively patronizing them. This is the main obstacle to our country's independent and peaceful reunification.

The United States should no longer pursue its "two Koreas" policy which runs counter to the desire of the entire Korean people and the trend of the times; it should refrain from backing the South Korean military fascist clique who stifle democracy and savagely repress the people and should give up all its interference in the domestic affairs of Korea. If the United States takes its hands off South Korea and desists from obstructing Korea's reunification, our nation will set up the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and reunify the country peacefully with concrete efforts.

In order to reunify the country through the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo, it is essential to achieve a great unity of the entire nation. The proposal on the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo is designed to attain national reunification. Accordingly, it presupposes a great unity of the entire nation. National reunification is inconceivable apart from the cooperation and unity of the nation, and the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo cannot be set up without great national unity. All the Koreans in the North, the South and abroad should firmly unite under the banner of national reunification transcending the differences in ideology and social system, party affiliation and political views, and should actively come out in the formation of a great national united front.

With a view to realizing the proposal on setting up the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo as early as possible, the political parties and social organizations in the northern half of the republic jointly proposed last August to convene a conference for the promotion of the national reunification with the participation of representatives of various parties and groups and personages of all strata in the North, the South and abroad, who aspire after the country's reunification. The publication of this proposal was warmly supported by broad segments of our compatriots at home and abroad. The conference for the promotion of the national reunification, when convened, will sincerely discuss and solve various problems related to national reunification including the question of establishing the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo.

There are still various hurdles in the way of national reunification owing to the obstructionist moves of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges. However, our country will surely be reunified thanks to the vigorous struggle of the entire Korean people and the positive support and encouragement of the progressive people the world over.

Availing myself of this opportunity, I express my deep gratitude to the Yugoslav League of Communists and the government and people of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia for their active support and encouragement to our people's cause of national reunification.

Now let me speak on the need to strengthen and develop the Nonaligned Movement. The Nonaligned Movement is a progressive one that opposes all manner of domination and subjugation and strives for independence; it is a powerful revolutionary force of our times that stands in confrontation with imperialism. As the Nonaligned Movement appeared on the arena of history as an independent political force and developed to be an extensive international movement, the anti-imperialist independent forces have been strengthened decisively and the imperialist reactionary forces extremely weakened.

Today the Nonaligned Movement is playing a great role in the development of the world situation and in the solution of international problems. Thanks to the united struggle of the nonaligned countries, various international issues are being settled fairly in conformity with the demand and interests of the peoples of the new-emerging forces, and the old orders whereby great powers indulged in arbitrariness and controlled everything are gradually crumbling in the international arena. The Nonaligned Movement is greatly countributing to defending the sovereignty of the peoples of the new-emerging forces against all sorts of domination and interference, subjugation and inequality and to safeguarding world peace and security against the aggression and war policy of the imperialists.

Now that the Nonaligned Movement has been expanded and developed into a worldwide movement and its influence is growing as the days go by, the imperialists persist in their manoeuvres to divide and wreck the movement and to draw its member states under their domination.

The imperialist moves to disrupt, alienate and win over new-emerging countries have caused many complex problems within this movement, so that it undergoes some trying ordeals.

At present, the nonaligned countries are confronted with a weighty task of smashing the crafty attempts of the imperialists for division, alienation and scramble and of further strengthening the Nonaligned Movement. The strengthening and development of the Nonaligned Movement require the unity of its member nations. Unity is the life of its member nations. Unity is the life and soul of the Nonaligned Movement and the source of its strength. Unity is inseparable from the Nonaligned Movement, and without achieving unity it cannot be strenghtened and developed. Only through the unity of its member states can it become a powerful force vigorously advancing the history of mankind and put into effect its lofty aim and ideal.

What is most important in bringing about the unity of the Nonaligned Movement is that all its member states maintain independence firmly. Maintenance of independence is the fundamental ideal and the basis of unity for the Nonaligned Movement. Only when all its member nations hold fast to independence, can this movement achieve unity, and unity based on independence alone can be a solid, genuine unity.

The nonaligned countries should adhere firmly to an independent stand and resolutely reject all sorts of foreign interference, and they should not follow other countries blindly or act as their agents. They should respect the independence of other countries. They should neither meddle in others' internal affairs nor take issue with them over their matters.

The nonaligned countries should strictly observe the fundamental principles of the Nonaligned Movement and preserve their peculiarities properly. They should not follow any bloc or be dragged into it. And they should refrain from drawing outside forces into the Nonaligned Movement or leading it to a bloc.

All the nonaligned countries should place unity above anything else and make active efforts to consolidate the unity of the movement. They should under no circumstances do anything detrimental to the unity of this movement but should do what is helpful to the unity.

Nonaligned nations should settle differences and disputes between individual countries on the principle of unity. They should not be at feud with each other, fooled by the imperialist tricks to play off one nation against another; differences and disputes between individual countries should be settled by means of negotiations between the parties concerned in the national interests of both sides and to the benefit of the nonalignment as a whole. This is the way to strike at the imperialists who try to create bad blood among the new-emerging nations and fish in troubled waters, the way to overcome successfully various obstacles lying ahead of the nonalignment, and to strengthen the unity of this movement.

Nonaligned countries should not only firmly unite with each other politically, but closely cooperate economically and technically. Among the nonaligned nations, the developing countries are those with valuable experience and advanced technology achieved in the course of creating a new life, and those with a wealth of resources and funds. If they strengthen economic and technical cooperation and exchange on the principle of mutual accommodation, the new-emerging nations will be able to resolve successfully the food problem and other difficult and complex questions cropping up in building a new society, without asking for help from big powers. Firmly maintaining the principle of self-reliance, the nonaligned nations should actively engage in interchanges and closely cooperate with each other, those with technology contributing technology, those with resources contributing resources, and those with funds contributing funds.

At present, the nonaligned nations, the developing countries, have set up many organizations for economic and technical cooperation and are enhancing their roles. They hold international meetings to develop science, education, culture and technology and take practical measures. We consider this excellent. If they take joint steps in solid political unity and close economic and technical cooperation under the banner of independence against imperialism, the nonaligned countries will be able to consolidate and advance the nonalignment quickly and fulfil with credit their noble mission entrusted by human history and the new-emerging peoples.

Yugoslavia is a long-standing member nation of the nonalignment. Twenty years ago, when the world was divided into blocs and the spheres of influence and when the danger of another world war was growing, heads of state from many countries including Yugoslavia met in Belgrade with noble ideas of freedom and equality, peace and progress, and put up the banner of nonalignment.

I would like to appraise highly the great contribution made by Comrade Tito, the outstanding leader of the Yugoslav people, in the foundation, consolidation and development of the nonalignment. It is not long since our country became a member of the nonalignment. But ever since we joined the ranks of this movement, we have made every possible effort to strengthen and develop this movement. As it has done in the past, so in the future, too, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea will adhere to the principles and idea of the nonalignment and strive to strengthen and develop this movement.

Next, I am going to talk about the general international situation and the questions of defending world peace and security at present.

Today, the international situation on the whole is very complex and tense. A fierce struggle is now going on between the anti-imperialist forces of independence and the forces of domination on the international scene. The people's revolutionary struggle for independence against imperialism is growing stronger day by day, whereas the great powers' moves for aggression and scramble to keep and expand their domination are becoming more undisguised.

Alarmed at the intensifying revolutionary struggle of the progressive people of the world, the imperialists are making desperate efforts to maintain and expand their domination. The imperialists are resorting to ceaseless armed intervention, subversion and destructive moves to stamp out the people's struggle for national independence and a new society. They are intensifying the scramble to put newly-independent countries under their domination. In particular, they are beefing up armed forces of aggression on a large scale and continuously increasing military bases for aggression in major zones of resources and strategic areas and slyly manoeuvring to establish political, economic and military control over the countries in these regions.

On account of the imperialist moves for aggression and war, the interntional situation is extremely tense, and the danger of a new world war is growing with every passing day. At present, the danger of another world war is hovering over Korea, the Middle East, and also Europe.

All the peace-loving people of the world should launch an active struggle to frustrate the daily stepped-up imperialist policy of aggression and war and to defend world peace and security. Today, no task is more urgent for the peace-loving, progressive people of the world than to prevent a new world war. Prevention of a new world war and defence of world peace and security demand that all anti-imperialist, independent forces conduct an energetic peace movement in firm unity.

The progressive people of the world who love peace should resolutely protest against and denounce the imperialists' machinations for aggression and war and deal a heavy blow to imperialism everywhere it stretches out its tentacles of aggression. Further, the progressive countries of the world should not follow the imperialist policy of aggression and war but should firmly maintain independence. This will decisively weaken the imperialist forces of aggression and further isolate them internationally, thus making them impotent and rendering it impossible for them to unleash a new world war at will.

In order to safeguard world peace and security, military buildup and arms drive should be discontinued and complete disarmament achieved. The imperialists' military buildup and armament expansion that become more undisguised with each passing day strain the international situation still more and cause deep apprehensions to the peace-loving people of the world. All the progressive people should strive to check and frustrate the imperialists' military buildup and armament expansion and to bring about complete disarmament.

To dissolve all military blocs is important in defending world peace and security. Military blocs are a permanent factor threatening world peace and security. The peace-loving people of the world should strive to dissolve all military blocs including the aggressive ones of the imperialists. While military blocs are dissolved, the aggressive military bases in other countries should be dismantled and foreign troops withdrawn. We strongly demand that all foreign military bases in South Korea and in many other parts of the world be removed and that all aggressive troops be withdrawn unconditionally.

In order to defend world peace and security, a stout struggle should be waged to create nuclear-free, peace zones in various areas of the world. Nuclear weapons that could spell disasters for mankind are now being stockpiled in many parts of the world, and they are gradually propagated to wider areas. To prevent a new world war and save mankind from the horrors of nuclear war, the testing, manufacture, stockpiling and use of nuclear weapons should be banned throughout the world and they should all be scrapped. A vigorous struggle is going on in many European countries and many other parts of the world to check the manufacture of neutron weapons and to create nuclear-free, peace zones. This is very gratifying.

We will strive to turn the Korean Peninsula into a nuclear-free, peace zone and actively support the struggle of the peace-loving people of the world to create such zones in Asia, the Middle East, Africa, Latin America and Europe.

The Korean people ardently love peace. It is the consistent policy of our party and the government of the republic to fight for a lasting peace and security of the world. As in the past, so in the future, our party and the government of the republic will closely unite with the peoples of all progressive countries of the world including the socialist and non-aligned countries and strive to check and frustrate the imperialist policy of aggression and war and safeguard world peace and security.

KWP SUPPORTS JSP CALL FOR NUCLEAR-FREE ZONE

SK160416 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0359 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 16 (KCNA) -- The Workers Party of Korea fully supported the proposal made by Chairman of the Japan Socialist Party Asukata at a news conference on December 13 to call a meeting of political parties and scholars of the Asian region for expanding the nuclear-free peace zone to the whole areas of Asia and the Pacific.

This stand was manifested in a letter sent by the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea to the Central Executive Committee of the Japan Socialist Party in connection with the question of convening an Asian regional meeting for the establishment of a nuclear-free peace zone.

The letter pointed out that the friendly and cooperative relations between the two parties were favorably developing day by day in the common struggle for defending peace and democracy against the imperialist aggression and war policy.

Recalling that a delegation of the Japan Socialist Party headed by Chairman Ichio Asukata visited our country in March last year and adopted with our party a joint declaration on the establishment of a nuclear-free peace zone in the northeast Asian region, the letter said: This was an event of great significance in the common struggle of the two parties for guaranteeing peace and security in Asia.

It continued: We highly appreciate the broad activities conducted by your party at home and abroad for the implementation of the joint declaration.

We approached with deep interest particularly the proposal for convening a meeting of political parties and scholars of the Asian region to expand the nuclear-free peace zone to the whole areas of Asia and the Pacific, which was made by Mr. Asukata, chairman of your party, at a news conference in Sapporo, Hokkaido, on December 13.

Our party expresses full support to this proposal of Mr. Chairman Asukata, considering it to be an important and timely proposal for guaranteeing world peace and security against the ever more wanton machinations of the imperialists, a proposal fully according with the spirit of the joint declaration on the establishment of a nuclear-free peace zone in northeast Asia on which an agreement has already been reached between our two parties.

Proposing to call such meeting as early as possible in Tokyo, Japan, or another country thought suitable, the letter expressed the hope to meet a delegate of the Japan Socialist Party at any place to have a concrete discussion on this question.

Our party will in the future, too, as in the past, extend active support and firm solidarity with you in your just struggle for peace and democracy, disarmament and neutrality, and make energetic efforts to further consolidate and develop the friendly and cooperative relations established between us, declared the letter in conclusion.

VRPR CITES KIM CHONG-IL AS 'GREAT LEADER'

SK180446 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Helsinki -- On 9 January, the branch of the Finnish-Korea Friendship Association in Turku held a lecture meeting on the birthday of dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il.

Displayed at the front of the lecture meeting hall was a portrait of dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il. At the lecture meeting, lawmaker (Arne Risayoken), chairman of the Turku branch of the Finnish-Korea Friendship Association, said that Secretary Comrade dear leader of the Korean people Kim Chong-il is the true leader of people who leads revolution and construction to victory with boundless noble virtue and outstanding and tested leadership. At the lecture meeting, he noted that the North is achieving splendid development and miracles which astound the people of the world, and can construct large structures which take other countries many years to contruct in only a few months or 1 or 2 years. He continued that Comrade Kim Chong-il, great leader [widaehan yongdoja] of the Korean people and secretary of the KWP Central Committee, is leading this rewarding struggle of the Korean people and that the birthday of Secretary Comrade dear leader Kim Chong-il will come soon. He said that when he visited the DPRK as a member of the Finnish Solidarity Group With the Korean Reunification last September, he was able to discern that Secretary Comrade Kim Chong-il, with the nature of the great leader, is organizing and leading the struggle for revolution and construction and is devoting himself to the people.

He continued to introduce materials about the greatness and the wise leadership of dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il.

In conclusion, he said that he extends warm congratulations and greetings to him on the occasion of the birthday of dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il and wishes him a long life.

ACHIEVEMENTS NOTED ON OCCASION OF NATIONAL DAY

BK170628 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Station editorial: "To Be Determined To Successfully Fulfill the Duties of This Year for the Glorious Future of Our Country"]

[Text] The recent solemn third anniversary of the 7 January National Independence Day gave our people cause for great elation due to the enormous revolutionary gains obtained from the bloody sacrifices, intelligence and spirit of our brothers and sisters during the past 3 years.

Our people always have firm confidence in the advancement of their country and nation to prosperity due to their industrious tradition combined with the national and international solidarity forces. It has been only 3 short years since our nation's liberation. The Kampuchean people, who only had bare hands and faced all kinds of shortages, built their country and nation from piles of skeletons and ashes unprecedented in this world. Although the period of construction of the nation and the fatherland is short, we note that our country is rapidly developing in all fields.

We have scored great, satisfactory victories in the fields of agriculture, industry, handicrafts, communications and transportation, culture, education, health, the armed forces and foreign affairs. Despite the development of our national society, these revolutionary gains and the resulting world acclamation, we must not be completely satisfied because the wishes of our nation and society oblige our revolution to fulfill many more tasks. We always remember the many complicated difficulties that our people met after the 7 January 1979 liberation. At that time, our country was full of piles of ashes and bones, and our people suffered from persistent disease. These disastrous and tragic occurrences are heinous legacies of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime -- lackeys of the Beijing Chinese expansionists. No one believed that our people could overcome these grave consequences. Our people not only survive, but score glorious successes in all fields in the defense and the construction of the nation and the fatherland. Because of these achievements, the PRK's prestige is well known and highly regarded on the international scene.

We are very proud of the enormous revolutionary gains of the past 3 years. The standard of living of our people, from the towns to isolated mountainous areas, has improved with every passing day. The agricultural base was developed by increasing the cultivated areas in conjunction with the strengthening of the production solidarity groups throughout the country. We have also achieved great successes in the field of education. Schools have now been established everywhere. Kindergartens and universities are open to 1.5 million pupils and students. Illiteracy was successfully abolished step by step. The health service has been strengthened and developed satisfactorily. There are hospitals in towns, provinces, districts and communes to serve the people. These revolutionary gains are evidence that the solidarity forces of our entire people and nation are firmly determined to struggle against all difficulties and suffering until they are successful.

On the other hand, although we have had shortages during the past 3 years, our enemies cannot do anything to us. In fact, last year the Beijing Chinese expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists tried to engage in all types of poisonous maneuvers in creating the so-called Kampuchean issue. They pushed the Thai reactionary powerholders to bring pressure on three Khmer reactionary and traitorous groups -- Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan -- for the formation of a coalition government. They waged all types of psychological warfare aimed at misleading the world public opinion into believing that there are two state powers and two controlled regions in Kampuchea. With firm confidence in the correct and clear-sighted leadership of the KPRP, our people have raised the banners of patriotism and international solidarity, particularly the solidarity with Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union and various fraternal socialist countries. Our people have smashed all poisonous tricks of the enemies, who suffered from bitter defeat. Therefore, the victory scored by our people also belongs to different fraternal socialist countries because these achievements are closely related to the sincere assistance and support of the socialist community. All peace- and justice-loving public opinion throughout the world is elated and acclaims these brilliant victories. In fact, on the occasion of the third anniversary of the 7 January National Independence Day, we received many greetings messages from friendly countries near and far. These messages highly praised the great revolutionary gains that are brilliant achievements of our people under the correct leadership of the KPRP during the past 3 years. In conjunction with the unceasing development of our country, our people have a stable standard of living. Our country and nation are independent. Our people live in peace. Our enemies are very angry, and are trying to find all types of poisonous maneuvers to obstruct the advance of our people. Therefore, the path that we have to follow is a long one and there are many complicated difficulties along it. But we are confident that victory is always at our side. All our people should fulfill obligations for our nation and fatherland. First of all, they must unite with each other and actively participate in the production movement. The cultivated land area should be increased. Animal husbandry, the planting of subsidiary crops and rice production should be intensified and increased to the maximum. In particular, the mountain of international solidarity should be strengthened and developed, particularly the union with Vietnam, in order to defend our national independence and our territorial integrity and to smash all our enemies' poisonous tricks, which are aimed at destroying our revolutionary gains. We must repair and restore industry, handicrafts, various factories and enterprises in order to make them more efficient, guaranteeing the quality and quantity of production. We must do everything possible to provide clothing for our children, grandchildren and people. All of them must go to schools and illiteracy must be abolished forever from the territory of the PRK.

Although these are heavy obligations, we hope and are firmly confident that we can definitely fulfill them because we had many significant and good experiences during the past 3 years. We have the national and international solidarity forces, particularly the solidarity with fraternal Vietnam and Laos. In particular, there is the correct and clear-sighted leadership guidance of the KPRP. We are determined to successfully fulfill the resolutions of the fourth party congress and the third front congress. We are resolute in heightening our spirit in increasing production in conformity with the slogan: Increasing production is loving the nation, saving is loving the people, in order to raise our people's standard of living toward prosperity. We must do everything for the brilliant victory of the PRK history, to make it flourish and spread, as pleasant as blooming flowers.

PHNOM PENH ARMED FORCES REVIEW 1981 ACHIEVEMENTS

BK160340 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] The Phnom Penh armed forces recently held a meeting to sum up the achievements scored in implementing the directives adopted by the party in 1981 and to establish new guidelines for 1982 to be applied by units and soldiers in 11 wards.

Opening the meeting, Comrade (Phon Saroeun), Phnom Penh armed forces commander, summed up all achievements by noting that the armed forces had successfully maintained security for the people in Phnom Penh municipality. Many reactionaries, whose networks had opposed the revolution, had been arrested. The comrade praised the armed forces for these victories, which, he said, were due to the efforts of all cadres and combatants, who firmly fulfilled their duties in serving the revolution and the people. They also removed all those who did not serve the revolution. The armed forces are united and have maintained good solidarity with our Vietnamese friends in order to fulfill their responsibilities by transforming their struggle activities into good competitive performance.

Afterward, representatives of all units and individuals who performed well briefed the meeting on their good experiences in carrying out their duties. Representatives of all units expressed their determination to develop their groups in all fields and increase their close solidarity with our Vietnamese friends in order to defeat all maneuvers of the imperialists, expansionists and reactionaries.

Later, Comrade Khim Pon, deputy secretary of the Phnom Penh Municipal Party Committee, spoke to the meeting. He told all cadres and combatants that they must unite with each other to oppose all enemy acts of psychological warfare aimed at creating insecurity in the capital in order to destroy the revolution. The comrade stressed that the armed forces must know their revolutionary duties, understand the masses and make the people like them in order to struggle against the enemies' tricks.

To close the meeting, Comrade Khim Pon and Comrade (Phon Saroeun) presented honor banners, congratulatory certificates and letters to 266 units and individuals who showed good performances.

DK RED CROSS CONFERENCE ADOPTS RESOLUTIONS

BK121300 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] On 17 December 1981 the third annual conference for 1981 of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society was solemnly held in the Phnum Malai region of Democratic Kampuchea. After examining and discussing the report on the society's activities in 1981 and setting targets for activities in 1982, the conference unanimously adopted a number of important resolutions, including the three following resolutions:

Resolution of the Third Annual Conference of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society Appealing for the Direct Distribution of Humanitarian Aid to the Suffering Kampuchean People

For nearly 3 years the governments, Red Cross societies, mass organizations, personalities at all levels and peoples of all peace- and justice-loving countries in the world have made efforts to provide all types of assistance and support and to accord all types of humanitarian aid to the suffering Kampuchean people. As a humanitarian organization of the Democratic Kampuchean state sharing weal and woe with the people, the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society has spared no effort in transporting foodstuffs and humanitarian aid and distributing them to the Kampuchean people both near and far, deep inside the country, with a high sense of responsibility.

However, in the past, the humanitarian aid that the Red Cross and Government of Democratic Kampuchea have received has been extremely minimal compared with that given to the Phnom Penh puppets. In fact, as the international community well knows, the humanitarian aid transmitted through the Phnom Penh puppets has been looted and diverted by the Le Duan authorities to feed their aggressor troops and to be sent to Vietnam. Moreover, in their attempt to starve the Kampuchean people in general, the Le Duan authorities, on the one hand, have detained the people in strategic hamlets and prevented them from taking part in production and, on the other hand, they have looted, destroyed and burned the small amount of rice and other crops surreptitiously and painstakingly planted by the Kampuchean people. As a result, millions of Kampuchean people continue to be hungry and many of them die from starvation every day.

Though the aid donor countries have deep feelings of generosity and sympathy for the victimized Kampuchean people, none of the humanitarian aid distributed through the Phnom Penh puppets has ever reached the hands of the Kampuchean people. On the contrary, this aid has instead benefited the Vietnamese aggressor troops which were writhing in their death throes on the Kampuchean battlefield, enabling them to restore their force and continue massacring the Kampuchean people. Therefore, not only do the intentions and wishes of the aid donor countries that want to help restore the lives of the victimized Kampuchean people remain unfulfilled, but they are grossly and insolently trampled on and sneezed at by the Le Duan Vietnamese.

The Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society firmly believes that the aid donor countries certainly do not agree to the Le Duan authorities' use of their generous aid for massacring the Kampuchean people. For this reason, in order to ensure that all the humanitarian aid really reaches the hands of the victimized Kampuchean people, the third annual conference of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society would like to appeal to the governments, Red Cross societies, mass organizations, personalities at all levels and peoples of all peace- and justice-loving countries in the world to give more plentiful humanitarian aid to the suffering Kampuchean people through the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society and refrain from giving aid through the Phnom Penh puppets.

The Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society would like to take this opportunity to express deep thanks to the governments, Red Cross societies, mass organizations, personalities at all levels and peoples of all countries in the world that have supported and accorded international humanitarian aid to the Kampuchean people with the pure and commendable intention of helping the Kampuchean people survive and develop in the future.

The Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society is firmly convinced that all aid donor countries will take necessary measures to ensure that humanitarian aid will be distributed in sufficient quantities to the suffering Kampuchean people through the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society. In this way, it is not only a humanitarian act, but an act of justice contributing to bringing pressure to bear on the Hanoi authorities to withdraw their more than 250,000 aggressor troops from Kampuchea, thus restoring peace and happiness to the Kampuchean people and freeing them from hunger -- a heavy burden on the shoulders of the international community at present.

Resolution of the Third Annual Conference for 1981 of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society Denouncing and Condemning the Use of Toxic Chemical Weapons by the Le Duan Authorities in Kampuchea

For more than 3 years, as part of their policy to exterminate the Kampuchean race, the Le Duan authorities have massacred more than 2.5 million Kampucheans in a most terrifying and tragic manner. At present, along with the more than 250,000 Vietnamese aggressor troops' use of conventional arms to kill the Kampuchean people and the detention of the Kampuchean people in strategic hamlets to prevent them from engaging in production and, subsequently, to starve them to death, the Le Duan authorities have intensified the use of toxic chemical weapons against the Kampuchean people in a most cruel and savage manner.

In 1979-80, they waged toxic chemical warfare throughout Kampuchea, in the jungles and rural areas as well as in the townships and cities, to kill off both the military men and the innocent Kampuchean civilians. Thousands of Kampucheans were killed and thousands of others were seriously incapacitated. They fired poisonous gas shells from artillery, scattered fuming, poisonous gas canisters and spread toxic chemical substances from aircraft or helicopters over water sources used daily by the people. In 1981 they further intensified the use of toxic chemical weapons in a premeditated and systematic manner by assigning their agents trained in the use of poison to mingle with the people in villages and communes. These agents surreptitiously mixed poison by all means, pouring it on food, sweets, fish, meat, vegetables, rice, tobacco, medicines and so on. They even injected poison into fruits on trees.

Because they are seriously bogged down on the military and diplomatic fronts, their ultimate and most perfidious maneuver is to massacre the Kampuchean people with toxic chemical weapons in order to intimidate and frighten the Kampuchean people and the army and guerrillas of Democratic Kampuchea, and prevent them from waging a protracted resistance against them.

In face of this most ferocious genocidal crime of the Le Duan authorities, the third annual conference for 1981 of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society would like to vehemently denounce and condemn and categorically oppose this use of toxic chemical weapons already rejected by the international community, for it is a most inhuman act violating the Geneva Convention and trampling on the UN resolution resolutely calling for an end to the use of toxic chemicals. At the same time, the Demoncratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society would like to appeal to the governments, Red Cross societies, mass organizations, personalities at all levels and peoples of all countries in the world to join hands in launching all kinds of movements to timely force the Le Duan Vietnamese authorities to stop using toxic chemical weapons in Kampuchea.

The Kampuchean people are a peaceful people, who want to live in peace within the present borders of their country. However, they have fallen victim to the savage aggression and massacre of the Le Duan Vietnamese authorities. Therefore, the checking of the criminal hands of the Le Duan authorities and the prevention of continued use of toxic chemical weapons in Kampuchea constitute a just and humanitarian act that enables the Kampuchean people to survive and exist like the peoples of other countries in the world.

For this reason, the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society is firmly convinced that the governments, Red Cross societies, mass organizations, personalities at all levels and peoples of all countries in the world will certainly join hands in seeking by all means to force the Le Duan authorities to stop using toxic chemical weapons in Kampuchea, thus effectively contributing to the rapid restoration of peace in Kampuchea.

[Signed] Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society, 17 December 1981

Resolution of the Third Annual Conference for 1981 of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society on the Application for Membership in the Federation of Red Cross Societies

Since its founding on 17 July 1979, in its capacity as the sole humanitarian organization of the Democratic Kampuchean state -- a full member of the United Nations -- the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society has braved and overcome all kinds of obstacles, contributing to the efforts of the Democratic Kampuchean Government in carrying out its mission both at home and abroad. At home, the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society has joined with various competent state organizations in transporting and distributing supplies to the people, providing assistance and medical treatment to those suffering from diseases or war and disseminating knowledge about sanitation and preventive measures against contagious diseases as well as helping the disabled, widows and orphans to manage their daily lives. The Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society has also promoted hygienic and antiepidemic preventive activities among the school children, and has made efforts to intensify other activities as well.

Abroad, the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society has solicited and collected all types of humanitarian aid for the suffering Kampuchean people; has welcomed guests representing the Chinese and Japanese Red Cross Societies and other representatives of humanitatian organizations visiting Democratic Kampuchea; and has met with the International Red Cross in Geneva and Japan and various mass organizations in Europe. At the same time, the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society has exposed, denounced and condemned all kinds of crimes committed by the Vietnamese aggressors, including the use of toxic chemical weapons, against the innocent Kampuchean people. In 1981 the contacts between the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross and the Red Cross societies of other countries made another step forward through the sending of letters to other Red Cross societies in the world, including the Red Cross societies of ASEAN countries, China and Japan, in which it was requested that the Phnom Penh puppet Red Cross be barred from attending the 24th conference of the International Red Cross in Manila.

Also, in 1981, for the first time, the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society directly received humanitarian aid from the Red Cross societies of China and Japan.

With other Red Cross societies, and particularly with the International Red Cross, the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society has always wished to strengthen and expand bonds of friendship and to cooperate closely in all future humanitarian enterprises on the international scene. For this reason, in 1979 the chairman of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society personally called on the chairman of the International Red Cross in Geneva and applied for membership in the Federation of Red Cross Societies, for the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society is recognized by the legitimate Democratic Kampuchean Government and the Kampuchean people throughout the country as the sole humanitarian organization in Kampuchea that resolutely serves the people, shares weal and woe and life and death with the Kampuchean people, and assists them at all times. As for the group that the Phnom Penh puppets call their Kampuchean Red Cross, it is in no way a humanitarian organization. It is made up of two, three or, at most, four persons forced by the Le Duan authorities to go around deceiving world opinion in an attempt to divert humanitarian aid intended for the Kampuchean people to feed the Vietnamese aggressor troops in Kampuchea and to be sent to Vietnam. As for the Phnom Penh administration, it is a power installed by the bayonets of the Le Duan authorities and is merely a shadow of the more than 250,000 Vietnamese aggressor troops. Therefore, their so-called Kampuchean Red Cross is nothing more than a sham humanitarian organization of an illegitimate state. Not only does it not represent the Kampuchean people, but it is a tool for the Le Duan authorities to massacre the Kampuchean people.

For this reason, the conference of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross would like to express most profound thanks and full support for the decision of the Red Cross representatives of the overwhelming majority of countries in the world who categorically opposed the participation, even as an observer, of the Phnom Penh puppet Red Cross in the 24th conference of the International Red Cross in Manila last November.

With the intention of salvaging the victimized Kampuchean people from the war of genocide of the Le Duan authorities and effectively cooperating with the Red Cross societies of other countries in the future, the annual conference of the Kampuchean Red Cross requests that the International Committee of the Red Cross accept the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society as a full member of the Federation of Red Cross Societies in Geneva. At the same time, the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross would like to appeal to the Red Cross societies of other countries that voted against the presence of the Phnom Penh puppet Red Cross at the 24th international conference of Red Cross Societies in Manila to continue to intervene so that the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross becomes a full member of the Federation of Red Cross Societies.

The Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society firmly believes that other Red Cross societies will ensure that the above-mentioned proposal of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross Society is fulfilled.

VODK CONDEMNS SRV 'GENOCIDE' IN RATANAKIRI

BK150400 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary: "The Vietnamese Enemies Are Barbarously Committing Genocide Against Our Ethnic Minorities in Ratanakiri Province"]

[Text] On 28 December the Vietnamese enemy aggressors gathered our ethnic minorities of all ages -- young and old, male and female -- in the regions they temporarily control in Ratanakiri Province and confined them in their strategic hamlets in Bor Kev, Ban Lung and Lomphat.

Many of our ethnic minority people were sent by the Vietnamese enemy to their country. The Vietnamese forced young men to enlist as soldiers to fight and die in their place. Males were forced to perform heavy tasks, such as building barracks, cutting wood and constructing roads. The Vietnamese enemy aggressors forced our people to leave their villages, houses and ricefields without taking anything with them, and gathered them in their strategic hamlets. The paddy, rice and personal belongings of our brothers and sisters were stolen by the Vietnamese enemy. The enemy burned our people's houses and villages and destroyed the crops stored in their villages and in the ricefields.

During the past 3 years of their aggression and occupation of Kampuchea, the Vietnamese enemy aggressors have oppressed and killed our people of all nationalities in Ratanakiri Province as well as throughout the entire northeastern region. They have done this because this region is an isolated area, far removed from national and international scrutiny. On the other hand, the Vietnamese aggressors are racists and consider themselves to be a great race, which they use as a justification for committing acts of oppression and genocide against the ethnic minorities in Vietnam and Kampuchea. Because of their genocidal policy against the entire Kampuchean race, the Vietnamese enemy aggressors dare to oppress and commit acts of genocide against our people of all nationalities in Ratanakiri Province.

Despite their sufferings from the oppression and suppression of the barbarous Vietnamese expansionists for more than 3 years, our people of all nationalities in Ratanakiri Province as well as throughout the northeastern region have never feared them and never bowed to the Vietnamese enemy aggressors, expansionists, swallowers of territory and race exterminators.

Our brothers and sisters have raised the banners of the great national union and the great union of all nationalities by closely cooperating with the Democratic Kampuchean Army and guerrillas under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government. They have resolutely and bravely struggled against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors, expansionists, swallowers of territory and race exterminators until Ratanakiri Province and a major portion of the northeastern region was completely liberated from the most barbarous and fascist grip of the Vietnamese enemy aggressors. The barbarous Vietnamese enemy aggressors have become bogged down in this struggle. They have encountered many difficulties in all fields and have gathered in defensive positions in centers and along Route 19.

Faced with the most criminal acts of genocide committed by the Vietnamese enemy aggressors, our people of all nationalities in Ratanakiri Province and throughout the northeastern region are determined to transform their sufferings, anger and hatred against the Vietnamese murderers and aggressors into a concrete struggle to be waged in all forms against the enemies from inside and outside the country until they are all driven from Kampuchean territory.

VODK: RUSSIAN KILLED IN CHHEP-THALABARIVAT

BK191019 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Last December our comrades in arms on the Chhep-Thalabarivat battlefield killed 103 Vietnamese enemy troops and wounded 140 others for a total of 243 enemy casualties. Among those killed were a Soviet adviser and a policeman of Preah Vihear Province. They destroyed seven trucks, a motorcycle, three stretches of road totaling 400 meters in length and a quantity of war materiel. They seized a B-40, and RPG, an AK, three handgrenades and a quantity of materiel. Our comrades in arms also routed two Vietnamese intervention units -- a battalion-sized unit and a brigade-sized unit. In the production of primitive weapons, our comrades in arms made and planted 113,000 new punji stakes, dug 320 punji pitfalls and set 210 automatic bows.

Long live our valiant and courageous army, guerrillas and people on the Chhep-Thalabarivat battlefield!

VODK REPORTS SRV RAILROAD IN BAKAN-PURSAT CUT

BK280908 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 26 Dec 81

[Text] Last November our comrades in arms on the Bakan-Pursat battlefield killed 27 Vietnamese aggressor troops and wounded 25 others for a total of 52 enemy casualties. They destroyed a military barracks and seized an M-79, two AK's, an AR-15 and a quantity of military materiel. Our comrades in arms also destroyed 18 sections of railroad track totaling 210 meters and a 10-meter water pipe. In the production of primitive weapons, our comrades in arms made and planted 170,000 new punji stakes, dug 150 punji pitfalls and set 100 automatic bows.

Long live our valiant and courageous army, guerrillas and people on the Bakan-Pursat battlefield!

ARUN: SOVIET LETTER HOAX CONTROVERSY CLOSED

[Text] The Foreign Affairs Ministry wanted the "hoax" letter issue closed to avoid straining the Thai-Soviet relations, Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong said yesterday.

Dr Arun said that his ministry had no plan to further question the Soviet ambassador concerning the latest evidence that the letter which told Thailand not to cooperate with the U.S. and China to overthrow the Heng Samrin government in Kampuchea, was not a hoax, as claimed otherwise by Ambassador Yuriy Kuznetsov.

The signature in the letter, allegedly belonging to the Soviet Embassy's press officer, Mr Vyacheslav Pisarchik, and claimed to be fake, was similar to the one in the landing card filled out by him when he arrived in Bangkok last year.

"I regard the matter as closed. I summoned the ambassador to take the letter back and I delivered a protest over the rude diplomatic note," Dr Arun said. He said Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila also received the letter, which said: "We call upon Thailand to cease its collaboration with the U.S. and Chinese imperialists who seek to overthrow legally constituted governments in Indochina, as well as in Afghanistan and other parts of the world."

SRV CRITICISM OF ASEAN STAND ON AID VIEWED

[Unattributed commentary: "Zero on the Scale of One to Ten"]

[Text] Radio Hanoi has done it again. It has tried once more to twist the facts to suit its own publicist. On 12 January Radio Hanoi criticized ASEAN for making representation to the French Government concerning the latter's decision to extend aid to Hanoi. Radio Hanoi went on to say such action is contrary to what ASEAN claims, namely, that ASEAN does not follow China in opposing and weakening Vietnam.

We must state once again that the ASEAN countries oppose Vietnam because on 25 December 1978 Vietnam invaded Kampuchea with massive military forces, overthrew the Government of Kampuchea and established the Heng Samrin regime in its place. Vietnam continues to occupy Kampuchea with 170,000 to 200,000 troops. Vietnam's act of aggression wrecks all the rules of international conduct and the principles of the United Nations Charter, of which Vietnam is a member.

The United Nations General Assembly has criticized Vietnam each year during its annual sessions and has called on Vietnam to withdraw its troops. Vietnam has completely ignored these calls. Because of this, the ASEAN countries and other likeminded nations totaling over 100 sovereign nations have continuously campaigned for Vietnam to withdraw its troops from Kampuchea, including urging all nations to stop giving aid and assistance to Vietnam, as this would condone and perpetuate the Vietnamese aggression and occupation of Kampuchea.

Vietnam's economic difficulties are not the result of natural calamities, but due to garrisoning 200,000 of its troops in a sovereign country. These are the reasons behind ASEAN's representation to the French Government. ASEAN cannot accept Vietnam's action in using military force to overthrow the legitimate government of another country. Therefore, ASEAN opposes Vietnam, as Radio Hanoi states. As for weakening Vietnam, it is Vietnam itself which is doing that, for nobody else but the Vietnamese leaders can be responsible for the consequences of invading another country and maintaining a massive garrison there.

On the scale of zero to ten for Radio Hanoi's latest attempt to twist the facts, Radio Hanoi can only be given zero.

[Editorial: "Diplomacy Can Sometimes Be Quite Funny"]

[Text] If Hanoi tried to rap ASEAN knuckles, the question will be: "What else is new?" The operative word is, of course, "tried," and Hanoi has been trying that again and again, not only in broadcasts and press release -- few listen or read them -- but in such talk-fests as in the UN General Assembly. Let us try to conjure up a scene in the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry in Hanoi. The ASEAN ambassadors have been called on the carpet -- we are sure all of them kept their diplomatic poise and suppressed their levity -- and a representative of the Foreign Ministry walks in. It could not be handled by Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach because suppressed levity may bubble into overt sniggering.

With this charade all set up, the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry representative starts reading from a sheet of paper -- he has to read it from a prepared text, since if he falters on one word, he would be sent to fight in the Kampuchean front -- and tells the ambassadors that they were all inhuman in their Association of Southeast Asian Nations making a representation to French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson not to give any aid to Vietnam. The text of what this 'representative' read has not been made public, but we can swear that it did not [word printed in italics] contain a sentence like: "It is no business of ASEAN how much aid our former imperial masters give us."

We are also sure that during this process of reading the 'protest' or 'demarche' or whatever else one calls it in diplomatic lingo, the ASEAN diplomats kept their diplomatic cool. These ambassadors and their assistants are, of course, in what are called 'hardship posts' and their sense of humour must have been faltering, if not altogether lost. On such occasions, our lack of knowledge of diplomatic protocol tells us, the ASEAN diplomats do not have a right to reply. They could, we presume, later submit a 'note.'

When all this diplomatic rubbish is out of the way, let us talk about dollars and cents -- sorry, about rubles and francs. Actually, it does not matter what currency it is so far as Vietnam is concerned, so long as it is foreign and it is not Kampuchean riels. The logic of the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry's protest to ASEAN that the members should not attempt to back French aid [as published] is quite clear. Politically, if the present masters dump rubles to keep the occupation of Kampuchea going, then the former masters should dump francs to keep the home fires burning. The logic is irrefutable.

But can they do it? The Soviet Union has just signed an aid-and-trade deal of U.S. $4,000 million with Poland. In France, even before the banks were nationalized, money has been flowing -- no, flying -- out of the country. Whether Poland will get the assistance from Moscow according to the agreement signed will have to be seen. The same goes for French aid to Vietnam. Countries never renege on aid-and-trade agreements, they just go on postponing the actual grants and, even then, they give machineries or surplus food which benefits the donors more than the recipients. But that is not the case with the Soviet Union. She has to keep her various wars going -- Kampuchea, Afghanistan, Ethiopia, El Salvador, etc -- but her own economy is not in great trouble, since Third World countries are only too eager to sell her raw materials and foodstuffs even under long-range payment terms. But so far as France is concerned, the diplomatic manoeuvre by Hanoi against ASEAN was necessary least Paris forgets that she did sign an accord to help out Veitnam.

CAPTURE OF BOAT, KAMPUCHEAN SAILORS DISCUSSED

Supreme Command Statement

BK140100 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] The Supreme Command headquarters stated yesterday that the shooting incident involving Thai and Kampuchean armed vessels in the Gulf of Thailand over 2 weeks ago evolved from an attempted act of piracy by Kampuchean fishermen. It said that the five Kampucheans captured by the Thai Navy during the incident have been interrogated for security purposes.

According to Supreme Command spokesman Lt Gen Som Khattaphan, two coast guard vessels last month came to the aid of two Thai fishing boats under attack by an armed Kampuchean vessel. The Kampuchean vessel was sunk after an exchange of fire. The incident took place 4 miles inside Thailand's 12-mile nautical boundary.

The Supreme Command yesterday also rejected Phnom Penh's call for the return of the sunken boat. Lt Gen Som said the boat will not be returned because it was Thai property -- the fishing vessel that had been seized on 3 October 1980. On Phnom Penh's other call for the release of five Kampuchean seamen captured following the incident, Lt Gen Som claimed the Kampucheans said they would return only if they were given arms to fight the Vietnamese in their homeland.

Commentary on Incident

BK131511 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary: "Armed Trawler Incident"]

[Excerpts] On 28 December 1981, while a Thai fishing trawler, the Netsuwan 8, was fishing in Thai territorial waters in the vicinity of Kut Island, it was fired upon by an armed trawler.

The armed trawler proved to be a Thai fishing boat -- which had been attacked and seized by Vietnamese patrol boats, and then armed with cannons and machineguns -- used to trick Thai fishing boats to get near them in order to attack them.

In this case, the trick did not fully work, as it so happened that the two Thai patrol boats were in the area and could come to the rescue of the Thai fishing trawler. It was learned from the 7 crewmen of the sunken armed trawler that the boat had a crew of 13, 6 of whom were Vietnamese -- all killed when the trawler was hit. The seven survivors, two of whom later died of their wounds, said under interrogation that they were Kampuchean nationals who had been pressed-gang into serving on board the trawler. They had never been trained as sailors and had the responsibility of looking after the trawler's engine.

Even though the chase clearly took place in Thai territorial waters and well away from any disputed areas, the two Royal Thai Navy ships still fired warning shots in the air to give the armed trawler a chance to cease and desist. This despite the fact that a Thai fishing trawler was in distress and the armed trawler had been seen to fire upon the Thai boat. Only when the two patrol boats were fired upon did they then shoot to kill, and their aim was accurate.

This incident, which has received a great deal of publicity, is not the first of its kind. Several Thai fishing trawlers had been attacked and seized in Thai waters by Vietnam and the Heng Samrin regime, which Vietnam established in Kampuchea. It is part of the Vietnamese Government's policy of creating hostile acts against Thailand in order to maintain a state of tension along the Thai-Kampuchean border, both on land and the sea.

It is to pressure Thailand -- as the so-called frontline state -- to stop recognizing the Government of Democratic Kampuchea, which the United Nations also recognizes as the legal government, and to accept instead the Heng Smarin regime which Vietnam has set up by force of arms and maintained with a continued presence of 170,000 to 200,000 Vietnamese soldiers in Kampuchea.

Thailand has made it clearly known that it cannot accept any regime which has been established by the use of arms and soldiers of a foreign power. It will resist all pressures to do so and by force, if necessary, to protect its independence and sovereignty. The Vietnamese should have learned of this firm determination from the 23 June 1980 incident, when Thailand repelled a large number of Vietnamese and Heng Samrin troops when they intentionally intruded into Thai territory, and from the many other incidents, instigated by Vietnam and the Heng Samrin regime established by Vietnam, which have occurred along the border, but have received little publicity. They should now learn again from the incident of Kut Island.

It is imperative that Vietnam and the Vietnamese-established Heng Samrin regime stop immediately their hostile acts against Thailand. Thailand is a peace-loving nation, but Vietnam should bear in mind that Thailand stands ready to defend its sovereignty if it is violated.

ARMED FORCES COMMANDERS VIEW BORDER SITUATION

BK130946 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 12 Jan 82

The meeting considered the possibility of external threat and agreed that the general situation has not posed any military threat to a great degree, except the intrusion into Thai territorial waters by the pirate boats of the Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin regime, which resulted in the recent clash with Thai naval forces.

The Thai Armed Forces are closely watching the preparations by the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin side for a new suppression drive against Kampuchean resistance factions, construction of strategic roads and the use of aircraft in the battles near the Thai border.

The Thai Armed Forces have assigned the Army Survey Department to survey and plant demarcation posts along the Thai-Kampuchean border to prevent an unintentional border intrusion by foreign troops, assist the efforts to ward off illegal immigrants and suppress the black market activities along the border.

SUPREME COMMAND ON BORDER CLASH, REFUGEES

BK160736 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Excerpts] The Supreme Command Information Office has reported that on 12 January at 0750, Vietnamese-Heng Samrin troops clashed for about 15 minutes with Khmer Serei soldiers in Kampuchea, near the Thai border. During the clash, two mortar rounds landed in Thai territory at Ban Sangae, Ta Phraya District, Prachin Buri Province.

The Supreme Command Information Office also noted that there are now 83,403 illegal Kampuchean immigrants under the responsibility of the Thai military. These illegal immigrants are detained in the following locations: 26,143 at the Sa Kaeo center, 41,853 at the Khao Idang center, 15,229 at the Phraya Kamphut center and 178 at the Khao Lan center. There are 17,658 illegal Kampuchean immigrants in various processing centers awaiting resettlement in third countries. Of this number, 13,113 are in the Phanat Nikhom center and 4,545 are in the transit center.

AFP: MILITARY REPORTS SRV-KHMER ROUGE CLASH

BK190710 Hong Kong AFP in English 0415 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Bangkok, 19 Jan (AFP) -- Vietnamese troops in western Cambodia yesterday launched an attack on Khmer Rouge guerrilla positions close to the Thai-Cambodian border, withdrawing after a counterattack that led to several hours of heavy skirmishing.

Thai military sources today said it was the first major fighting this year between Vietnamese troops and the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge units, strongly ensconced in the hilly Cardamom Range in southwestern Cambodia.

Thai border troops were placed briefly on the alert late last night, but a Supreme Command spokesman in Bangkok said this morning that the fighting had died down.

Several mortar and artillery shells fell into Thai territory during the battle, wounding a nine-year-old village girl and killing four buffalo.

The fighting broke out about 20 km (12.4 miles) south of the key Thai border town of Aranyaprathet and lasted for several hours. Vietnamese troops attacked the Khmer Rouge positions in the Cardamoms, but were driven back by a fierce counterattack. Sources said that a Thai military reconnaissance plane had spotted Vietnamese troops moving from the Cambodian border town of Poipet early yesterday morning.

Western observers here said this morning that a further Vietnamese dry season push to crush the resistance along the border was likely.

[Text] Some 641 Burmese Mon illegal immigrants were repatriated on Sunday [10 January] as immigration officials continued to search for more illegal immigrants working in gem mines in Trat and Kanchanaburi Provinces.

Trat Governor Sompong Pansuwan said that there are an estimated 3,000 Burmese illegal immigrants in Trat -- most of them working at the gem mines in Bo Rai District. He added that immigration officials are currently scouring gem mines in Trat and Kanchanaburi following an Interior Ministry order that all the Burmese illegal workers must be repatriated.

80 BOAT PEOPLE RESCUED, SHELTERED IN PHETCHABURI

[Text] Phetchaburi — Eighty boat people were brought ashore at Chao Samran beach in Muang District here yesterday, police reported. The large group of refugees reportedly comprises 18 men, 24 women, 24 boys and 14 girls.

Police said that the boat people were initially rescued from the sea and brought to a gas drilling platform run by Great Republic Company in the sea off Muang District of Phetchaburi. The provincial authorities were then contacted by the oil company and asked to take charge of the refugees. The authorities relented, and four boats were sent to the platform to carry the refugees ashore. They are now being housed in a temporary shelter in Muang District.

GEN SAIYUT DISCUSSES COMMUNIST INSURGENCY

BK130815 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 13 Jan 82

["News in Perspective" feature]

[Excerpt] Speaking about Thailand's communist insurgency, Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon says that the outlawed Communist Party of Thailand has failed in waging guerrilla struggle in the countryside according to Maoist principles and will probably try to concentrate on urban warfare in the future. He says that the number of armed insurgents is declining, but they will not go away.

General Saiyut is a counterinsurgency expert who stresses rural development rather than armed suppression. He estimates insurgent strength at roughly 7,000, compared with the frequently-cited figure of between 10,000 and 12,000 a few years ago. The pro-Beijing party has been weakened in recent years by internal squabbles, the loss of its support bases in pro-Moscow Indochina, decreased support from Beijing and disillusion among some of its young recruits.

MILITARY REPORTS ON CLASHES WITH COMMUNISTS

BK111243 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Excerpt] The Supreme Command Information Office has announced that during the period 27 December to 2 January government forces clashed with communist terrorists seven times, attacked a communist terrorist camp once, hit landmines and were sniped at by communist terrorists twice. Government operational bases were harassed twice.

During the period under review, armed Khmer forces intruded into Thai territory and clashed with Thai soldiers twice -- at Thap Siam village in Aranyaprathet District and an area northeast of Non Mak Mun village in Ta Phraya District, Prachin Buri Province.

In the area under the 2d Army Region's responsibility, the movement of communist terrorists was more frequent than in the previous week. Three clashes broke out at Nong Chanuan village in Kraset Sombun District of Chaiyaphum Province, Dong Yen village in Mukdahan District of Nakhon Phanom and Pla Dao village in Loeng Nok Tha District of Yasothon Province. Government forces attacked the terrorists in the vicinity of Phu Sung in Khon Buri District of Nakhon Ratchasim and captured large quantities of weapons and documents.

In the area under the 3d Army Region's responsibility, one clash took place at Pa Ma Krut in Nakhon Thai District of Phitsanulok Province. Communist terrorists harassed government operational bases in the area southwest of Buak Ya village in Pua District of Nan and at Khao Kho in Phetchabun Province.

In the area under the 4th Army Region's responsibility, three clashes took place at Wang Hin village in Krapoe District of Ranong and the southeastern area of Kanchanadit District of Surat Thai province.

During a suppression drive, two clashes took place at Bang Lang village in Bannangsata District of Yala and Palian village in Tak Bai District of Narathiwat Province, during which government forces captured large quantities of weapons and killed 11 terrorists.

NATION: CPT RADIO BROADCASTS MAY BE REVIVED

BK031333 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 3 Jan 82 pp 1, 2

[Text] The outlawed Communist Party of Thailand (CPT) is believed to be making preparations for the revival of its anti-government radio broadcasts in the northern province of Nan, senior military intelligence officers told the NATION yesterday. The clandestine radio station, known as the Voice of the People of Thailand (VOPT), has been beaming messages on a "trial run," according to Director of the Security Centre Maj Gen Ap Bunkraphue.

The VOPT went off the air in July, 1979, then believed to be based in Kunming, southern China, after government relations between Thailand and China improved remarkably during the Kriangsak government.

Chief intelligence officer of the Nan's Internal Security Operations Command (ISOC), Squadron Leader Phaithun Siriphanit, said military officials had recently detected voice transmissions from the clandestine radio station.

The messages being beamed from the radio station on a "test run" could be monitored over shortwave frequencies within 2 kilometres from its location, according to the military officer. He added: "After the trial run period, the clandestine radio station may just resume on a full-scale nationwide basis." He quoted recent communist defectors as testifying that the CPT was making preparations to resume the nationwide broadcast of the VOPT, last suspended on July 11, 1979.

Maj Gen Ap said that although officials had obtained information that the clandestine radio station was based in the northern province, they still could not pinpoint the exact location. Experts from Bangkok have been sent to Nan to work with the provincial authorities in locating the radio broadcasting station. "But the progress of their work has been rather slow due to lack of detection equipment," Maj Gen Ap said. He said that the contents of the voice transmission so far were mostly news programmes. No commentaries against the government had been detected, he said.

Squadron Leader Phaithun said as far as officials could detect them, the transmission hours and the frequencies over which messages were beamed had shifted from the previous ones. But he declined to disclose the new transmission hours and frequencies. VOPT was known to have beamed its message over 31 and 49 megahertz frequencies, and its transmission hours began at 6 am, 10 am, midday, 5 pm and 8:30 pm daily.

The closure in 1979 of the VOPT was believed to have been caused by pressure from the Chinese leaders then trying to foster ties with Thailand during the Kriangsak government, to counter the Vietnamese influence in Kampuchea. Soon after the closure of VOPT, CPT began transmission in morse codes for internal communications in August the same year. On December 14, 1980, the outlawed party resorted to voice transmission believed to be from Kunming in southern China, but the voice transmission was designed for internal communications between its leadership and operatives, according to official intelligence sources.

WHITE BOOK ON SPRATLYS, PARACELS PRAISED

NHAN DAN Commentary

BK190428 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 18 Jan 82

[From the review of NHAN DAN for 19 January]

[Text] Under the title "The Irreversible Truth: The Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes Belong to Vietnam," a commentary by (Linh Phuong) published on page 4 of today's NHAN DAN says:

The recently publicized white book shows that we have adequate historical evidence proving that the Vietnamese state actually occupied the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes at a time when they had not yet fallen under the sovereignty of any country. Since then Vietnam has actually and continuously exercised its sovereignty and has always defended its rights and name against all designs and acts infringing upon its sovereignty, territorial integrity and interests with regard to these two archipelagoes. This means that we have full legal basis and adequate evidence that will properly meet the legal requirements widely recognized in the world for claiming our territorial sovereignty over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes.

For many years no country voiced a protest while we exercised this sovereignty. This obvious and simple fact has suddenly been made complicated by the Chinese authorities, for the powerholders of our northern neighbor are forces that pursue expansionism against many countries and nurture the maniacal ambition to win sole control over the Eastern Sea and annex the whole of Southeast Asia. They covetously eye the Indochinese Peninsula, considering it an ideal springboard.

Hanoi Radio Commentary

BK181319 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] The white book on "The Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes: Vietnamese Territories" made public by the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry on Monday shows the Beijing authorities' true nature and their claim over the Vietnamese Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes. With concrete and convincing documents, the white book provides the juridical and historical basis and facts proving Vietnam's sovereignty over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes.

The fact is that China has invaded and occupied the Hoang Sa Archipelago -- part of Vietnamese territory -- and intended to take over Vietnam's Truong Sa Archipelago. For this reason, the Chinese authorities' territorial claims over these two archipelagoes are arrogant and unreasonable. Their familiar trick is to distort history and produce groundless evidence to claim territories over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes, which they have given the names Xisha -- Western Bank -- and Nansha -- Southern Bank.

If, according to Beijing's logic that any place having a Chinese feudalist dynasty's vestiges belongs to Chinese territory, many places in Vietnam bearing vestiges of Chinese feudal aggression in the previous century will also be considered Chinese territory. Moreover, in Mexico and many other places in Latin America, Chinese porcelain and other objects have also been dug. Will China claim territories from these countries? Naturally not. So why have they obstinately made territorial claims over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes? In its plan to realize its hegemonistic ambition Beijing's first objective is to annex Southeast Asia.

The traditional direction of Beijing's hegemonism is southward. To expand southward Beijing has to have a firm foothold in a place which can control the whole region.

Lying on the sea transport line between Europe and Asia and among Asian countries, the two archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa have a position of strategic importance. That is why Beijing has, in fact, been stepping up its military activities to cause tension so as to step by step control the Eastern Sea and expand southward to Southeast Asia on both land and sea. The Chinese authorities' expansionist plot does not only violate Vietnam's sovereignty and territorial integrity but also threatens peace, security and the interests of the countries in this region.

Over the past several decades China has repeatedly produced vague evidences to claim territories over not only Vietnam's Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes but also territories of other countries in Asia and the Pacific. In a commentary on October (?4) last year, Indonesian news agency PAI [as heard] said: In Asian countries everyone knows that Beijing continues to consider part of their territories as China's lost land and the Eastern Sea as China's own pond.

The two archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa will forever be Vietnam's sacred territories. The Vietnamese people are determined to struggle against all Chinese expansionist plots to defend their sovereignty and territorial integrity, thus contributing to defending peace and security in this region and the rest of the world.

IRAQI VICE PRESIDENT MA'RUF ARRIVES IN HANOI

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 19 -- Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and his party arrived here this morning for an official friendship visit to Vietnam at the invitation of the Council of State of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam. His party includes Hasan 'Ali, member of the Revolutionary Command Council and minister of trade; Natiq A.H. al-Wadi, Iraqi ambassador to Vietnam; and others.

The welcome ceremony was held in the government's guesthouse in the presence of Nguyen Huu Tho, vice president of the Council of State; Do Muoi, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers; Education Minister Nguyen Thi Binh; Labour Minister Dao Thien Thi; and others. Staff members of the Iraqi Embassy in Hanoi were present. Earlier, the distinguished Iraqi guests were welcomed at the international airport by Foreign Trade Minister Le Khac and Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son.

THAI REQUEST FOR U.S. MILITARY AID ASSAILED

OW180510 Hanoi VNA in English 0716 GMT 17 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 17 --QUAN DOI NHAN DAN today says that the call made on January 12 by the Thai Army commander for a sharp increase in U.S. military aid allegedly to cope with the "threat" from Vietnam was designed to cover up the use of Thai military bases by the U.S. armed forces. Allowing the United States the lease of Utaphao and other military bases, QUAN DOI NHAN DAN says, the Bangkok authorities have revealed their dirty collusion with the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing hegemonists against the three countries in Indochina.

This, the army paper continues, has given the lie to Bangkok's oft-repeated claim that they, too, want neighbourly relations with Vietnam and peace and stability for Southeast Asia. The United States, by returning to Thailand, is running against the course of things, and Bangkok, in dancing to the tune of Washington, is courting disaster, the paper points out.

INTERIM MEKONG COMMITTEE SESSION OPENS IN HANOI

OW141742 Hanoi VNA in English 1541 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 14 — The Interim Mekong Committee opened its 13th expanded session here this morning under the sponsorship of the secretariat of the committee. The Vietnamese delegation is headed by Dinh Gia Khanh, president of the National Mekong Committee; the Lao delegation by Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, president of the National Mekong Committee; the Thai delegation by Pravit Ruyabhorn, Thai representative to the Interim Mekong Committee; and the delegation of the I.M.C. Secretariat by its managing secretary, Bernt Bernander.

Also attending are the delegations of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP), the United Nations Ecology Programme (UNEP), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO), the World Food Programme (WFP), the International Labour Organisation (ILO), the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD), the Asian Development Bank (ADB), the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (CMEA), the European Economic Community (EEC) and the (?UNCTAD); and representatives from Australia, Belgium, Britain, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Finland, France, the German Democratic Republic, the Federal Republic of Germany, Holland, Hungary, India, Italy, Japan, Mongolia, the Philippines, Poland, Romania, the (?Soviet Union), Switzerland and Yugoslavia.

In his opening speech, Laos' head delegate, Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, who is also president of the I.M.C. for 1982, said that this session will review the I.M.C.'s work in 1981 and work out its plan for 1982. He called upon governments and friendly countries and international and regional organizations to provide capital for the various projects of exploiting the lower reaches of the Mekong River.

Speaking at the opening ceremony Vietnamese Vice Chairman of the Council of Ministers Huynh Tan Phat commended the I.M.C.'s efforts in cooperation to study the exploitation of the water resources of the lower reaches of the Mekong River, thus contributing to mutual understanding, friendship and cooperation between the member countries.

He said: "These efforts would have brought about greater results if they had the participation of all the four countries lying in the lower reaches of the Mekong River. The prolonged absence of the People's Republic of Kampuchea in the I.M.C's activities not only is incompatible with reality but also constitutes a principal obstacle to the cooperative effort and thus creates factitious tensions in the region and elsewhere. It is necessary to do everything possible to have at an early date the participation of all riparian countries of the Mekong in the International Mekong Committee in order to promote cooperation and mutual assistance in the interest of peace and stability in this region.

Speaking in their turns, K. Nakagawa, deputy executive secretary of the E.S.C.A.P.; Oroth Chounlamountri, vice president of the Lao National Mekong Committee; Thai head delegate Pravit Ruyabhorn; Vietnamese head delegate Dinh Gia Khanh; and Bernt Bernander, managing secretary of the I.M.C; reviewed the fruitful activities of I.M.C. in 1981 and called for more funds for the projects (?of) exploiting the potentials of the lower reaches of the Mekong for the good of all riparian countries.

[Text] THE SRV SEVENTH NATIONAL ASSEMBLY SECOND SESSION

By virtue of the SRV Constitution and the law on organization of the National Assembly and the Council of State; after hearing a report made by the Council of Ministers on the implementation of the 1981 State Plan and Budget, and on tasks of the 1982 State Plan and budget; and after hearing the investigative report by the National Assembly's Economic, Planning and Budget Committee and briefings by the Nationalities Council, the Culture and Education Committee, the Public Health and Social Welfare Committee, and the Science and Technology Committee of the National Assembly, and ideas expressed by the National Assembly's deputies:

DECREED

1. Adoption of the Council of Ministers report on the implementation of the 1981 State Plan and the tasks of the 1982 State Plan.

In 1981 our people, in carrying out new economic positions and policies of the VCP Central Committee and the government, and in emulating to score achievements to greet the Fifth National VCP Congress, scored great achievements in agricultural production and in collecting and purchasing grain and other agricultural products. They also scored achievements in various industrial branches, especially small artisan industry and handicrafts. Many valuable experiences were gained by the economic management task. The product-based contractual system has been applied in agricultural production cooperatives and industrial enterprises. The right to initiative in production and business operation of various grassroot units and localities has been developed.

However, the national economy is faced with numerous difficulties. Plan norms for industrial production, export and transportation have not been fulfilled completely. Supervision for the improvement of circulation and distribution has not been carried out comprehensively. Tasks on pricing and market management are fraught with shortcomings, thus badly affecting production and the people's daily life, especially the workers and civilians. Negative phenomena in the economic and social life have been eliminated slowly. Supervisory and operational tasks carried out by the Council of Ministers and various echelons and sectors have created some changes, yet it is not concentrated, uniform and prompt.

In 1982 the state and the people must develop their experiences, study new factors, strengthen their sense of initiative and creativity, strive to overcome difficulties and shortcomings and make great efforts to improve the national economy.

2. The tasks of the 1982 State Plan: To uphold the spirit of self-reliance; make good use of the international aid and cooperation; concentrate forces on developing agriculture vigorously; expand the production of consumer goods; increase exports; reorganize capital construction; develop the existing capabilities of heavy industry and build, in a selective way, a number of new establishments; strengthen transportation and communication; take an initial step in redistributing the work force in each locality and between the different regions in the country; improve distribution and circulation; and strictly observe economy in all fields. The whole country is determined to strive to attain self-sufficiency in food for the whole society and to ensure the people's clothing, study, medical care, housing and transportation; to develop education, culture, science, technique, health and social work rationally; to take a step in changing the method of economic management by carrying out the three basic steps of formulating plans and linking plans to socialist economic and business accounts; to apply technical progress; to increase labor productivity; to improve the quality of products and reduce production costs; to increase efficiency in production and business; to continue socialist transformation in the south; to consolidate the socialist relations of production throughout the country; to strengthen national defense, maintain political security and social order firmly; and to discharge well our international obligations.

In carrying out the managerial and operational tasks, it is necessary to understand and concretize the mottoes "The central and local governments work together," "The state and the people work together," and to exploit all potentials of the country in order to build and defend the fatherland.

3. Adoption of the following main targets of the 1982 State Plan (percentage increase over 1981):

-- Gross national product, by 4 percent;
-- National income, by 5 percent;
-- Gross output value of agriculture, by 8 percent;
-- Gross output value of industry, including small industries and handicrafts, by 5 percent;
-- Total investment in capital construction, by 6.7 percent;
-- Value of exports, by 45 percent;
-- Work productivity in state-run industries, by 5 percent.

Following are the absolute figures for the main targets:

-- Total food output: 16 million tonnes;
-- Area of industrial crops: 714,000 hectares;
-- Number of pigs: 11 million;
-- Electricity: 4,035 billion kilowatt hours;
-- Coal: 6,300,000 tonnes;
-- Cement: 962,000 tonnes;
-- Textile: 260 million meters;
-- Paper: 55,000 tonnes;
-- Cane sugar: 200,000 tonnes;
-- Fish output: 600,000, including 420,000 tonnes of sea fish;
-- Enrollments in universal schools: 12,310,000;
-- Number of students of higher education: 35,000;
-- Number of students of secondary vocational schools: 47,200;
-- Technical workers: 53,800;
-- Number of hospital beds: 199,000.

4. Adoption of the Council of Ministers' report on the 1982 state budget. The Council of Ministers is assigned to restudy the 1982 state budgetary estimate and submit it to the National Assembly for consideration and approval at its forthcoming session. Pending the approval, the Council of Ministers operates the state finance using the estimated revenues and expenses -- as reported to the National Assembly -- and in the spirit of collecting all sources of revenues fully and of reducing expenses strictly.

5. The National Assembly appeals to the people and combatants throughout the country to heighten their love for the socialist fatherland, strengthen solidarity and comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union, Laos, Kampuchea and other fraternal socialist countries, develop all achievements and progress and strive to fulfill triumphantly the 1982 State Plan in order to move forward to fulfill the Third 5-Year Plan for 1981-85.

NINTH HANOI MUNICIPAL PARTY CONGRESS HELD

Leaders at Opening Session

OW131313 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] The first round of the ninth congress of the Hanoi municipal party organization opened on the morning of 11 January, with the participation of 695 delegates, representing nearly 150,000 party members of 1,930 grassroots-level units of the Hanoi party organization. The participants are meeting to debate and contribute views to improving the central-level draft documents to be presented at the fifth national party congress and to elect delegates to that congress.

At the Hanoi party organization's grassroots-level congresses more than 100,000 party members, accounting for more than 90 percent of the party members of the Hanoi party organization, displaying their sense of responsibility toward the party and their eagerness to make positive contributions to decisions on issues affecting the party in general, heatedly debated and contributed 150,000 suggestions for improving the central-level draft documents.

Amid a solemn and enthusiastic atmosphere, Comrade Le Van Luong, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and secretary of the Hanoi Municipal Party Committee, made the opening speech. He formally introduced to the participants Comrades Le Duan, general secretary of the party Central Committee; Truong Chinh, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State; Pham Van Dong, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and chairman of the Council of Ministers; Hoang Quoc Viet, member of the party Central Committee and chairman of the Presidium of the Vietnam Fatherland Front Central Committee; and five other comrades sent by the central-level to attend the congress and to run in the election of delegates to the fifth national party congress.

Comrade Le Van Luong reported that as the grassroots-level party congresses were held, the movement to emulate in scoring achievements to greet the fifth national party congress was intensively carried out in Hanoi. According to initial reports, at 287 units, workers volunteered to build 1,390 projects to greet the party congress. So far, the construction of 900 projects has been completed, many of them typical ones producing typical products.

After achieving a good 10th-month rice crop, peasants in Hanoi's suburbs have been emulating one another in preparing for the spring crop. Progress has also been noted in other types of activities of the municipality, including sanitation work, maintenance of public order and security, and beautification of the municipality.

On behalf of the participants, Comrade Le Van Luong warmly praised cadres, workers, civil servants, people of all strata and the capital's armed forces for their confidence in the party's leadership and their fervor to greet the party congress with realistic revolutionary actions in production, organization of the people's lives, and the building and defense of the capital. He expressed the hope that the current emulation movement will be further developed so that better results will be scored in developing production, fulfilling the 1982 state plan, and discharging the tasks of national defense, maintenance of public order and security, improving sanitation conditions and caring for the people's lives. He called on the congress delegates to enhance their sense of responsibility toward the party and the people, eagerly contribute views -- mainly on major issues -- properly assess achievements and shortcomings, draw experience, devote much time to discussing guidelines and tasks for the coming period and set forth policies and measures so as to ensure successful fulfillment of the tasks entrusted.

Comrade Tran Vy, alternate member of the party Central Committee and chairman of the Hanoi Municipal Party Committee, then presented to the participants the resolution of the 11th plenum of the party Central Committee and the resolution of the Hanoi Municipal Party Committee on assessment of the implementation of the 1981 plan and on the municipality's guidelines and tasks for 1982 to enable the participants carry out realistic discussions and contribute views to improving the central-level draft documents.

The congress session is underway.

Pham Van Dong Speech

OW171357 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Dear friends: On the morning of 13 January, Comrade Pham Van Dong, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee, had a talk with the delegates attending the congress of the Hanoi party organization. On behalf of the party Central Committee, he expressed his joy over the party organization delegates' display of their sense of responsibility in their discussion and over the many helpful suggestions they made to improving the documents to be presented at the fifth national party congress.

Comrade Pham Van Dong said: Since we now face many complex difficulties, all of us, from the grassroots level to the central level, must seek ways to overcome them, stabilize the situation and advance gradually. We must keep thinking, not only now but in the coming years as well. Over the past years, we have scored important successes and achievements in many fields. All of us must fully realize that. Meanwhile, we must also clearly perceive our mistakes and shortcomings — the price we must pay while seeking to increase our knowledge, our experience, our status and our capabilities, in order to better develop our advantages and abilities and to avoid new mistakes and shortcomings. While reviewing the situation, we must draw this important lesson: We must assess the situation correctly and properly harmonize our requirements with our capabilities so as to resolve well policy problems of strategic importance as well as problems concerning implementation measures.

At present, we are building socialism and defending our socialist fatherland under our country's multifarious difficulties and the complex situation resulting from the process we are undergoing in advancing from a small-scale, poor and backward production directly to socialism, bypassing the stage of capitalist development, from the consequences of more than 30 years of war and from the all-out war of destruction waged by our enemies in the past as well as at present. We must always keep in mind that we must also carry out our internationalist obligations toward our two fraternal neighboring countries and remain combat ready to defeat the aggressive maneuvers of the Chinese expansionists.

In view of such a situation, the draft document to be presented at the fifth party congress clearly outlines the tasks to be carried out in the first part of the 1980's. It charts a comprehensive strategy to cope with any eventuality. It should be pointed out that we must direct our economic strategy toward simultaneously achieving comprehensive agricultural development, developing the consumer and export goods industries, and striving to develop heavy industries such as those related to electricity, coal, oil, gas, machinery, chemicals, construction materials, communications and transportation in order to serve the agricultural sector and the consumer and export goods industries ever more effectively. All these are aimed at helping meet the people's needs for food, clothing, housing, education, transportation and health care.

By building and developing an agroindustrial structure in this way, we will be able to create premises and conditions for building material and technical bases and for vigorously promoting our country's socialist industrialization in the 1980's.

In order to perform the above tasks well, we must strive to bring into full play our existing and potential capabilities — the very great capabilities that we are still unable to fully assess and, especially, make good use of. These consist of the abundant work force of our people; our country's rich and varied natural resources; our available equipment and materials that we still do not use rationally and effectively; the laboring people of all strata — workers, peasants, intellectual workers who are imbued with patriotism and love of socialism, who are courageous, intelligent and full of creativity — mainly the body of technical and managerial cadres and the body of skilled workers. These existing and potential capabilities include, particularly, the impact of our party's leadership — the party that has led and organized all successes of our people; the superiority of the socialist system, the system under which the people are masters of their destiny as specified in the Constitution; the all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union, Laos and Kampuchea and with other fraternal socialist countries; the SRV's overall strength and development; our people's international prestige.

Economically, we should stress our country's great, enduring capabilities to cooperate with the Soviet Union and other CEMA countries. These are the capabilities we must strive to tap in the most effective manner in developing our national economy and in carrying out our country's socialist industrialization undertaking.

Comrade Pham Van Dong stressed: This situation demands that we initiate large-scale and thorough revolutionary changes -- changes in ideology and actions, changes in the echelons, sectors and grassroots level, changes in all cadres and party members. These changes will then expand and affect our people as a whole. We must, primarily, bring about changes on the economic, production, distribution and circulation fronts in order to yield realistic results in the people's lives.

Regarding measures for implementation, Comrade Pham Van Dong stressed: We must attach importance to this issue because it is our weak point that we must strive to overcome step by step, mainly in management. With regard to the management mechanism, we must first attach importance to formulating plans and carrying them out from the grassroots level upward in order to develop the creativity of the laboring people at the grassroots-level production units and in the localities. While formulating plans and seeking to carry them out evenly, we must strive to harmonize economic accounting with business activities, link production plans with financial plans, link planning with technological advances, link planning with domestic and foreign markets, primarily those of the Soviet Union and other socialist countries.

We must strive to perfect our organizations and train and further train the body of cadres, especially managerial and young cadres. We must formulate work systems and work attitudes with emphasis on responsibility, discipline and realistic efficiency.

Comrade Pham Van Dong then talked about a hot subject, the subject of production, distribution and circulation. What really matters, he said, is that we must improve production, put all goods under state control, organize distribution and circulation well, and strive to improve market management and price control. In addition, we must severely punish speculators, smugglers, and market disrupters while seeking to stabilize step by step the financial and monetary situation. By performing these tasks well we will stabilize the lives of the people of all strata, especially the lives of armymen, workers, and cadres in large municipalities and concentrated industrial centers.

Comrade Pham Van Dong stressed: We must think well and carry out step by step the principle of party leadership, people's mastery, and state management. In view of our country's current situation, a correct implementation of this principle will lead to a revolutionary movement, which will involve the broad masses and will help us gradually overcome difficulties, fulfill all tasks and defeat all enemies, advance our country steadily to socialism and build an increasingly civilized and happy material and cultural life for our people.

In the socialist revolutionary undertaking and under the party's leadership, mass organizations, trade unions, youths and women must clearly perceive their meaningful responsibilities.

Finally, Comrade Pham Van Dong expressed the hope that all the delegates will make better contributions to the building up of Hanoi, the capital city of the SRV, to make it worthy of its glorious tradition as the pride of our entire people. All central-level agencies in Hanoi, especially the industrial factories, should do their best to contribute to boosting the economy and the industry, mainly small and handicraft industries, in order to produce increasingly better goods which are valued both for domestic consumption and for export. Colleges and higher schools should make studies on what they can do to contribute to enhancing Hanoi's economic, cultural, educational, scientific and technical levels. All of us, he said, should pledge to strive to contribute to the building up of an increasingly prosperous and prettier capital city and to making its people's lives more decent and happier.

On behalf of the delegates and the Hanoi party organization, Comrade Le Van Luong promised that Comrade Pham Van Dong's instructions will be scrupulously carried out.

Closing of Congress

OW090303 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Friends: the first round of the ninth congress of delegates of the Hanoi party organization, which opened on 11 January, ended this afternoon, 16 January, after 6 days of intensive work. Fully displaying their sense of responsibility as party members towards the revolutionary undertaking of the party and the people, the delegates conducted democratic discussions and contributed many suggestions to the draft document of the party Central Committee to be presented at the fifth national party congress.

Supporting their views with the realities in their own sectors, circles and localities, many delegates proved the correct assessment by the central level, in the draft political report, of achievements as well as mistakes and shortcomings. The delegates unanimously agreed with the central level on its assessment of the great achievements our people have scored, under the party's leadership, on the military, political and diplomatic fronts.

Over the past 5 years, despite the numerous difficulties caused us by our enemies, our people have achieved national reunification, advanced the whole country to socialism, adopted a new SRV Constitution, and defeated two wars of aggression waged by the Beijing expansionists and their lackeys on our country's southwestern and northern borders. Our people have also gloriously fulfilled their internationalist obligations toward the fraternal Kampuchean and Lao peoples, strengthened the strategic alliance between the three Indochinese countries and the Soviet Union and other socialist community nations, and further enhanced their international prestige.

The delegates also unanimously agreed with the central level on its correct assessment of our people's significant achievements on the economic front and of the situation in light of realistic Marxist-Leninist viewpoints. Over the past 5 years, despite numerous difficulties, mistakes and shortcomings, our people have further increased their material and technical bases of socialism. Many more large enterprises of the major industrial sectors, such as those having to do with cement, electricity, metallurgy, heavy machinery, and chemicals production, have been built. Particularly in agriculture, despite repeated natural calamities and decreases in agriculture material supplies, we have, for the first time, thanks to the newly applied product contract system and the impact of new policies, succeeded in achieving an annual grain production of over 15 million tons in 1981. The total value of industrial output increased by 0.4 percent and that of local industry by 7.5 percent. Hanoi's 1981 grain production was 326,000 tons, an increase of 41,000 tons over 1980; its industrial output increased by 1.3 percent, with local industry increasing by 7 percent. This is a very significant success, given the situation in which our available material supplies, raw materials and fuel were only half the previous year's. This proves our people's great potential.

On mistakes and shortcomings on the economic front, the delegates unanimously agreed with the central level's criticism that they were due to subjectivism, rashness, resistance to change, sluggishness, the bad administrative supply system in management, bureaucratism, lack of altertness, and an inadequate display of the sense of responsibility. These manifestations were also clearly perceived in the capital's economic and social activities. Many delegates praised the central level for its candid self-criticism, for setting an example to the entire party -- particularly grassroots-level party organizations, including the Hanoi party organization -- on the communists' bold admission of mistakes and shortcomings. All the delegates agreed that it is everyone's responsibility to join the entire party and people in correcting mistakes and remedying shortcomings in order to quickly seek a way out for our national economic troubles.

On the guidelines and tasks for the next 5 years and the remainder of the 1980's, the delegates unanimously agreed with the central level's draft political report, which advocates the need to devote the entire people's efforts to improving agricultural production, stabilizing and further improving the people's lives and then ensuring basic needs in their material and cultural life are met. We must first seek to properly meet the people's needs in grain, foodstuffs, clothing, education, medical care, housing, transportation, child care and other consumer needs.

Through realities in their own sectors and localities, the delegates proved that we are fully capable of achieving the set targets if we have a new, suitable management mechanism. Many delegates from central-level and local enterprises, such as the Giai Phong machine plant, tool factory No. 1, the Dong Suan knitting mill, institutes and colleges proved that Hanoi is fully capable of greatly increasing its production of many types of consumer goods to better serve the people's lives and export needs if we know how to organize production in line with the capital's characteristics, with the current situation of available raw materials and material supplies and if we know how to better tap and utilize the capital's abundant scientific and technical forces in order to maximally utilize its available work force, material supplies, and capital.

The delegates also presented resolutions to the central level on many issues relating to various fields from agriculture to industry, handicrafts, culture, education, maintenance of public order and security, education of teenagers and children and so forth, in an effort to contribute, along with the entire party, to removing the obstacles that are hampering our activities and to further boost production.

On 13 January, Comrade Pham Van Dong, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and chairman of the Council of Ministers, had a talk with the delegates attending the congress. His address helped them have a clear understanding of the assessment of the strengths and weaknesses, of the strategic policies and major measures to be applied for the next 5 years and the remainder of the 1980's, mainly concerning planning, management mechanism and the question of party leadership, people's mastery and state management. He reminded the Hanoi party organization and the Hanoi people in the general of their mementous, yet glorious responsibilities toward the party organization, themselves and the people countrywide.

In his speech closing the congress, Comrade Le Van Luong, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and secretary of the Hanoi Municipal Party Committee, set forth pressing tasks of the Hanoi party organization for the immediate future aimed at bringing about notable improvement, in all fields, of the Hanoi people's economic, cultural and social life and at devoting their efforts to successfully fulfilling the 1982 state plan. The congress elected a 74-member delegation to represent the Hanoi party organization at the fifth national congress. Comrades Le Duan, Truong Chinh, Pham Van Dong, Le Van Luong and Hoang Quoc Viet were elected with the highest numbers of votes.

LE VAN LUONG ADDRESSES HANOI DISTRICTS CONGRESS

BK290937 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 29 Dec 81

[Text] Various party organizations of Hoan Kiem, Hai Ba Trung and Dong Anh Districts of Hanoi have held congresses of delegates to discuss the documents of the central government and to elect representatives to the municipal party organization congress.

Le Van Luong, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and candidate for Hoan Kiem District, attended and talked to the congress of delegates of the district. He praised party members at the grassroots levels for their contributions to various draft reports of the central government through their heated debates, their spirit of developing democracy and upholding their responsibilities as party members.

Addressing the congress, he conveyed the views of the central government and their scrupulous sense of criticism and self-criticism in evaluating the implementation of the Fourth VCP Congress resolution and in formulating tasks and guidelines for the years ahead. Dealing with the contents and methods to conduct discussions at the party congress, he stressed that it is necessary to study profoundly various problems that are raised in order to understand clearly all the basic points of the central documents. It is important that experiences are drawn to advance further the formulation of correct positions and policies and appropriate measures for their implementation.

XUAN THUY ADDRESSES HA SON BINH PARTY CONGRESS

OW060947 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Text] According to a report from the correspondent of Ha Son Binh journal and radio station, Ha Son Binh Province held the first round of its third party organization congress on 5 January. Attending the congress were Comrade Xuan Thuy, party Central Committee secretary, Comrades Nguyen Co Thach, Nguyen Huu Thu and Ha Ke Tan and many others who have been introduced by the party Central Committee as candidates for election to the Ha Son Binh delegation to the forthcoming Fifth VCP Congress.

After hearing a recapitulative report on the views expressed at the grassroots party organization congresses on the party Central Committee's documents to be presented to the Fifth VCP Congress, Comrade Xuan Thuy addressed the congress explaining the fundamental points of the documents and commending the party organization and people of Ha Son Binh Province for concentrating their efforts on increasing grain production over the past 5 years. Ha Son Binh has promptly applied the new contract system in the Son Cong model cooperative and has rapidly expanded similar models throughout the province thus effecting an obvious change in agricultural production. Ha Son Binh reaped some 420,000 tons of grain in 1981, an increase of 71,000 tons over 1980 and the largest amount of grain harvested since 1975.

Comrade Xuan Thuy urged the Ha Son Binh provincial party organization and people to exert greater efforts to exploit local potentials in land, manpower and the various trades and occupations and to rapidly turn Ha Son Binh into a province that has a prosperous economy and a stable national defense.

He also commended the party organizations and the people of various ethnic nationalities in Lang Son District for making great efforts in stepping up the production of cotton and jute in the mountainous areas in order to partially solve the clothing problem of the local population.

BK071015 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 6 Jan 82

[Text] Amid the seething impetus of the new year days, the Hai Hung provincial party organization on 6 January held its fourth congress in Hai Hung City. The congress warmly welcomed Le Thanh Nghi, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and other party and state high-ranking officials who are candidates for delegates to the Fifth National VCP Congress.

The congress spent a lot of time discussing documents of the central government to be presented at the national VCP congress. It studied the resolutions of the 10th and 11th party Central Committee plenums and speeches by the VCP general secretary at various party Central Committee conferences. The congress also reviewed supervisory tasks of the province's party organization and appointed delegates to the national VCP congress.

In line with the working impetus of the congress, Hai Hung Province is launching a 60-day emulation movement to score achievements in various fields to greet the VCP congress.

HA NAM NINH PARTY ORGANIZATION HOLDS CONGRESS

OW110823 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] According to our Voice of Vietnam correspondent, the Ha Nam Ninh provincial party organization's third congress opened on 8 January. Five hundred delegates of 24 party organizations from various districts, cities and the provincial capital attended the congress. The comrades recommended by the VCP Central Committee to attend this congress included Nguyen Lam, Song Hao, Hoang Tung, Vu Thi Hong, Tran Xuan Bach and Ngo Duc Hanh. Comrade Ta Hong Thanh, alternate [as heard] member of the Central Committee and provincial party secretary, delivered the opening speech and the draft political report of the Central Committee. Next Comrade Pham Van Bong, provincial deputy party secretary, delivered a recapitulatory report on the results of grassroots congresses.

In the recent past, in order to register achievements to greet the party organization congress and the fifth party national congress, the Ha Nam Ninh people have stepped up productive labor, conservation, security and national defense activities. The province has promptly fulfilled its 1981 food obligations ahead of schedule. Its food production in 1981 increased over 1980 by 300,000 tons. Its artisan industry and handicrafts exceeded plan norms. Many innovations were applied in various production sectors. Many new export goods were manufactured. At present, the people in the province are concentrating their efforts on successfully cultivating the 1981-82 winter-spring crop and developing artisan industry and handicrafts to create more goods for export.

HANOI'S DIFFICULTIES IN KAMPUCHEA NOTED

BK111450 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] Three years after Vietnam's military occupation of Kampuchea, Hanoi appears to be no closer to its goals than it would like to be. Instead, Vietnam is today isolated internationally as it never has been before. Its forces are bogged down in an unwinable war in Kampuchea, its economy is in shreds and unable to feed even its own people, and finally, a future that is so bleak that it should provoke a major reexamination of the direction taken by that nation. [sentence as heard]

Historians are generally agreed on the fact that it was the fratricidal Khmer Rouge regime in Phnom Penh that provoked Vietnam with its atrocities that were committed on the Vietnamese during the Khmer Rouge border intrusions. Vietnam had every reason to exercise the right of self-defense. But this right does not include the toppling of an internationally accepted and UN-recognized government. The subsequent military invasion and occupation of Kampuchea, the toppling of the Khmer Rouge and installation of the puppet Heng Samrin clique, the Vietnamization and domination of Kampuchea, cannot be accepted or justified. Vietnam's claim that it wanted to oust a murderous and hated regime and remove China's influence in Kampuchea also has not been accepted.

Vietnam has had to pay a tremendous cost for its adventure in Indochina. Vietnam's 200,000 army of occupation had failed to secure peace in Kampuchea. If anything, the fighting can be expected to increase during the forthcoming dry season.

The Heng Samrin government has failed to get the recognition of even the Kampuchean people. Their attitude has been encapsuled in the proverb that if your house is on fire then you will welcome even the flood. Nearly 100 nations continued to reject the fiction of the Heng Samrin regime and recognized the ousted Khmer Rouge as the legitimate and rightful government of Kampuchea.

For Vietnam, Kampuchea would continue to mean a drain on its resources -- both in terms of men and its meager resources. The Vietnamese population would have to tighten their belts and remain in poverty longer so that the dream of Ho Chi Minh for an Indochina federation would be recognized. What is worse is that Vietnam has had to abandon its traditional equidistant role between Beijing and Moscow and is now firmly in the Russian camp.

The Russians have exacted a very heavy price from Vietnam and have (?forced) it to give base facilities at the Danang air base and the port of Cam Ranh Bay. Once again Indochina has become the cockpit of a power struggle -- this time between China and the Soviet Union. The tragedy is that the people and nations involved appeared to be so ready and willing to carry out the wishes of their masters in the Kremlin. In the process, Indochina has once again become the main source of tension and fear in this region. Once again a long and protracted war to serve the interest of nations outside this area will continue to create instability.

Vietnam should withdraw from Kampuchea and allow the Kampuchean people, under UN supervision, to choose a government that they want and that would serve their own interest.

TEN MEMBERS OF 'CLANDESTINE GROUP' ARRESTED

BK101206 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1100 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] The government has arrested 10 people, all members of a clandestine group for destructive and subversive intentions and activities, The Ministry of Home Affairs, in a statement, said the group, which styled itself the Singapore Liberation Organization, wanted to overthrow the government through the use of arms. The leader of the group, Zainal Abiddin bin Mohamed Shah, a self-employed journalist, was among those arrested.

The group planned to overthrow the government by creating communal unrest. This was to be achieved through acts of arson, planting of bombs in the shopping and community centers, cinemas and Port of Singapore Authority warehouses. The group also intended to solicit support, including manpower and finance, from foreign powers and individuals to carry out their plan.

Two members of the clandestine group were arrested yesterday while trying to distribute pamphlets at the national stadium, where about 24,000 people were attending the Prophet Muhammad's birthday celebration. Similar pamphlets were later seized from Zainal Abiddin's house. The pamphlets contained many highly seditious statements designed to create communal resentment. They alleged that the government was oppressing the Malays and suppressing the Malay language and culture.

They also accused the Muslim Religious Council of altering the true course of Muslim thinking and the government of using Islam to deceive the Muslims and to achieve its political aims.

The clandestine group comprised a handful of disgruntled Malays and Indian Muslims. The statement says they demonstrated through their actions and practices that they were racialists and extremists who would not hesitate to use violence to achieve their objectives.

The leader of the group, 49-year-old Zainal Abiddin, contested as a Workers Party candidate in the 1972, 1976 and 1980 general elections. He was responsible for the publicity and finance of the group. Three others were also members of the opposition party. Forty-seven-year-old Hasim bin Mukayat, a taxi driver, was in charge of recruitment and finance. He is a member of the Workers Party. Until last October, he represented the United People's Front in Sembawang and was a candidate in the 1976 general election. Forty-two-year-old Abdul Rahim bin Abdul Rahman, a cinema projector operator, was in charge of sabotage and finance. He is vice chairman of Barisan Sosialis Singapore [Socialist Front of Singapore] [BSS] and was the BSS candidate in the 1972 and 1976 general elections. Forty-seven-year-old (Sulaiman bin Mohamed Sharif), who is currently unemployed, has been active in politics and is a cadre member of the united front.

Opposition To 'Investigate'

BK111254 Hong Kong AFP in English 1029 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Singapore, 11 Jan (AFP) — Two Singapore opposition parties said today they would conduct their own investigations into the alleged involvement of their party members in a Muslim extremist organisation.

The comments came from the Workers Party and the Barisan Sosialis (Socialist Front) after yesterday's announcement by the Singapore Government that 10 members of a clandestine Muslim group had been arrested for trying to overthrow the government through use of arms.

Workers Party Secretary general, Mr J.B. Jeyaratnam said: "We will be making our own inquiries and will be seeing the families of the party members." Mr Jeyaratnam, who recently became the only opposition MP in Singapore's Parliament when he won a by-election, said a statement might be issued on the affair in a day or two.

Dr Lee Siew Choh, chairman of Barisan, said as far as he knew, Mr Rahim has never been of a violent frame of mind. "It is difficult to believe he could be dedicated to sabotage and violence," Dr Lee added.

Suspects Plead Guilty

BK141351 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1100 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Five members of an illegal organization arrested recently for subversive activities pleaded guilty in a Magistrates Court this afternoon. The men, who are members of a group styled the Singapore People's Liberation Organization, were charged under the Internal Security Act. The leaders of organization, 49-year old Zainal Abiddin Mohamad Shah, and 46-year old Hashim bin Mukayat, were jointly charged with possession of 1,500 copies of subversive pamphlets on the 9th of this month at the national stadium. The pamphlets, which were written in Malay, were alleged to have a tendency to excite organized violence against members of the Government of Singapore. All the five accused have been remanded. The case has been postponed to the 21st of this month pending further investigation.

FURTHER REPORTS ON JAPANESE SHIP INCIDENT

Air Force Response

OW160531 Tokyo KYODO in English 0520 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Manila, Jan 16 (KYODO) -- Philippine Air Force authorities said Saturday they will do whatever they can to rescue a South Korean crewman of a Japanese freighter, who was wounded Friday afternoon when the vessel was fired on by two airplanes of unidentified nationality in waters off eastern Mindanao.

The authorities responded to a Japanese Embassy request for an investigation into the incident and rescue of the wounded crewman. An air force official said the aircraft were most likely either Filipino or American. If so, they must have fired "mistakenly," the official said.

He said the 5,307-ton Japanese chemical tanker Hegg may have been mistaken for a supply ship for the Moro Nationalist Liberation Front (MNLF), the outlawed Muslim secessionist group based in the major southern island. But other officials dismissed such a possibility as "remote" because the incident took place in waters off eastern Mindanao, not western Mindanao, where MNLF guerrillas are most active.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the U.S. Clark Air Base north of here ruled out any American involvement in the firing incident.

Romulo Statement

OW181241 Quezon City RPN Television Network in English 1100 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] [Program intercepted in progress] of a Japanese tanker by naval and air force units off eastern Mindanao. Foreign Minister Carlos Romulo said the interception of the Japanese vessel, believed carying 10 million pesos worth of arms and explosives for rebels in the south, was a legitimate exercise of RP's [Republic of Philippines] right to national security and territorial integrity. Romulo said the incident could have been avoided had the skipper of the 5,000-ton tanker Hegg stopped the vessel when told to do so by naval units and later by PAF [Philippine Air Force] elements.

In a statement released by the Foreign Ministry to the Japanese Embassy, Romulo said military authorities had received reports that an unidentified cargo vessel would attempt to land both rebels and assorted war materials at (Sarangani) Bay or Island, and were clearly monitoring sea traffic in the area. [Begin recording] This boat came in the same area that the intelligence suspected. So, they ordered it to stop. Instead of [making] a stop, (?it started) accelerating its speed. So then our patrol boat, in accordance with international law, fired across the bow. In spite of that, the boat refused to stop and continued to accelerate its speed. So then the patrol boat got into communication with our air force, explaining the circumstances. And since the air force also (?knew of) intelligence reports that some boat, more or less in that area, was suspected of carrying ammunition and terrorists, the air force immediately followed the order of the patrol boat and located the ship. The (?air force) issued a warning to the ship to stop. The ship refused to stop according to the international law in territorial waters. Thus, the boat was strictly within our territorial waters. WORKING-LEVEL TALKS WITH USSR OPEN 20 JAN

[Excerpts] Moscow, Jan 20 KYODO -- Japan and the Soviet Union opened working-level talks here Wednesday to discuss the international situation and bilateral relations.

Four rounds of talks will take place during the two-day meeting, Japanese sources said. The Japanese delegation was led by Deputy Foreign Minister Kensuke Yanagiya and the Soviet (?side) by Deputy Foreign Minister Nikolay Firyubin.

TALKS ON FOR ECONOMIC AID REQUEST VIEWED

Akitane Kiuchi's Comments

OW161319 Tokyo KYODO in English 1234 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Jan 16 (KYODO) -- Akitane Kiuchi, chief Japanese negotiator in the Japan-South Korea working-level talks on Japan's economic assistance to the Seoul government, has praised the talks held in Seoul Thursday and Friday as "a step forward," Foreign Ministry officials said Saturday evening. Kiuchi, director general of the ministry's Asian Affairs Bureau, made the comment to South Korean Foreign Minister No Sin-yong at a meeting earlier in the day, the officials said. No was quoted as saying that he shared Kiuchi's perception of the talks.

Kiuchi asked the South Korean foreign minister to reply to a Japanese proposal to hold the second round of the working-level talks as early as possible after the middle of next month, they said.

Suzuki on Talks' Progress

OW160359 Tokyo KYODO in English 0321 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Osaka, Jan 16 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said here Saturday there are some indications of "progress" in Japan-South Korean negotiations on the latter's dollar 6 billion loan request for its 1982-86 economic development plan. Commenting on the negotiations held in Seoul Thursday and Friday, Suzuki said, "I've heard the talks are going on in a friendly atmosphere."

In the two-day working-level talks, the South Koreans gave details of the major industrial projects covered by the five-year plan. "In that sense, I recognize some progress is being made (in the talks)," Suzuki said at a news conference at a hotel here. He was in Osaka to attend a fund raising party for his Liberal-Democratic Party. Earlier this week Suzuki told Akitane Kiuchi, Japanese chief delegate to the Seoul talks, to try his best to put the bilateral negotiations "into orbit."

Although no specific figure of Japan's capital aid was mentioned in Seoul, the Japanese and South Korean delegates agreed to resume the talks in Tokyo next month.

Sakurauchi on Further Talks

OW180417 Tokyo KYODO in English 0351 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Jan 18 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Monday proposed a second round of Japan-South Korea negotiations in Tokyo in mid-February to discuss Seoul's $6 billion loan request. The proposal was made in a meeting with South Korean Ambassador to Japan Choe Kyong-nok at the latter's request. Choe who is temporarily returning to Seoul, said he will relay the proposal to the Seoul government. In the meeting, Sakurauchi also said he wants to meet with his South Korean counterpart, No Sin-yong, "in due course."

VOICE ON REVOLUTIONARY CAUSE, SUCCESSOR ISSUE

SK200154 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Commentary from feature program "Today's Feature"]

[Text] On the basis of a scientific analysis of the experience of our revolution and the history of the international communist movement, the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, an ideological and theoretical master, has clearly pointed out for the first time in history the importance of the work of inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause. The dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il has said: Protecting and completing the leader's cause is an important question related to the destiny of the revolution.

As the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il has taught, correctly inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause is a very important question related to the destiny of the cause of socialism and communism: the revolutionary cause of the working class. Why does the work of inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause pose an important question concerning the destiny of the revolution? Because the revolutionary cause of the working class is primarily the leader's revolutionary cause. The revolutionary cause of the working class is pioneered by the leader. Under the leadership of the leader, this cause victoriously advances and is completed. Correctly reflecting the trend of the time and the desire of the people, the leader of the working class invents the guiding ideology and theory of the revolution, spiritually arms the masses of the people with this ideology and theory and organizes and mobilizes the people to struggle to implement this ideology and theory, thus pioneering the revolutionary road.

By setting forth correct struggle slogans, strategy and tactics and policies at every developing stage of the revolution, the leader of the working class leads the revolutionary struggle on a single victorious road. The leader of the working class provides a basic guarantee for the completion of the revolutionary cause of the working class on such matters as the question of a successor -- which is of basic importance in completing the revolutionary cause -- the revolutionary traditions and the dictatorship of the proletariat, thus leading the cause of communism to ultimate victory.

Thus, the revolutionary cause of the working class is developed by the leader and traverses a victorious road. Accordingly, the revolutionary cause of the working class is the revolutionary cause of the leader. How successfully we resolve the question of inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause is a very important question related to whether or not the working class can complete its noble revolutionary cause.

Since the revolutionary cause of the working class is of a protracted nature, the work of inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause poses an important question concerning the future of the revolution. The revolutionary cause of the working class is a great task to achieve the sovereignty of the working people. In other words, the aim of this task is to liberate the working people from subjugation and provide them with an independent and creative life. To achieve this, we should reform the social system in a revolutionary manner and eliminate the legacies of the old society from all sectors of social life. This is a difficult task. The course of liberating the working people from all forms of natural and social subjugation and gaining their sovereignty requires a more prolonged struggle than the struggle to overthrow the bourgeois class or to seize power.

The revolutionary cause of the working class does not end when a nation achieves victory in accomplishing this cause. When we overthrow imperialism throughout the world and the working classes in all countries achieve their revolutionary cause, we can attain victory. Thus, the revolutionary cause of the working class is not a single revolutionary stage but a protracted revolutionary cause which should go through various stages, including the stage of liberating the people, the class and man, and should be carried out not at a national level but on a global level.

Accordingly, the revolutionary cause of our working class is an unprecedentedly arduous and complex one; it is accompanied by a fierce class struggle. Thus, the revolutionary cause of the working class cannot be achieved in a short span of time. New generations are inevitable in the course of carrying out the revolutionary cause of the working class, and the question of inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause naturally arises. The experience of the international communist movement clearly proves that the matter of inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause is a very important question related to the destiny of the revolution. It has been over 100 years since the revolutionary cause of the working class began to develop. It has been over half a century since the founding of the first regime of the working class in the history of mankind. However, the revolutionary cause of the working class has not yet been completed. When we review the 100-year history of the revolutionary struggle of the working class, there have been a few instances of inheriting and advancing the revolutionary cause of the leader. The revolutionary cause of Marx, the first leader of the working class, was inherited by Engels. Lenin's cause in Russia was inherited and developed by Stalin. Thus, the revolutionary cause of the working class developed by Marx and Lenin has advanced, and the international communist movement has followed a smooth course. Due to the anti-revolutionary maneuvers by revisionists in the international communist movement of the 1950's, however, the revolutionary cause of the working class and the international communist movement experienced trials.

This phenomenon shows that when we fail to correctly resolve the question of inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause, we will immeasurably hinder the revolution. The status of the international communist movement makes the matter of inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause a very serious and important problem. In many countries today, new generations have arisen among the revolutionary masses. At the same time, new leaders have emerged. Whenever new leaders appear, a grave situation arises — that is, ambitious men conspire to usurp the leadership of the party and state and hinder the revolutionary cause developed by the leader. This situation makes the matter of inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause a very important task in the struggle to achieve the revolutionary cause of the working class.

Thus, the work of inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause poses a very important question not only in individual countries but also throughout the world and is related to the destiny of the working class: to the question of whether the revolutionary cause of the working class can be protected. By providing a scientific solution to the question of inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause — an urgent question in our era — the dear leader Comrade Kim Jong-il has provided the working class a key to successfully inheriting and completing the leader's revolutionary cause.

The leader's revolutionary cause is substantially inherited by the successor to the leader. The question of the successor to the leader is this: who inherits the revolutionary cause, and how is this cause inherited? Holding in high esteem the outstanding successor — the reproduction of the leader's idea, achievements, work method and style and personality — is a vital question for the victorious advance and completion of the revolutionary cause. Solving the question of inheriting the leader's cause and that of the successor is an important task assigned the working class and its revolutionary party in order to complete their cause.

VRPR CALLS KIM JONG-IL SUCCESSOR TO KIM IL-SONG

SK200218 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Dialogue from feature program "Today's Feature"]

[Text] [First speaker] I think the role of the successor is very important in inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause. I would like to discuss this issue.

[Second speaker] We have oftendiscussed this issue. The revolutionary cause of the working class developed by the leader is inherited and completed by his successor. The dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il has delineated this issue. He has taught: As the leader assumes a decisive role in the revolutionary struggle of the working class, the successor to the leader plays a decisive role in carrying out the revolutionary cause of the working class to the end and generation after generation. Just as the dear leader comrade has made this point clear, the successor to the leader plays a decisive role in inheriting and completing the leader's revolutionary cause.

[First speaker] What is the decisive role of the successor to the leader?

[Second speaker] We can view this role from various standpoints. By wisely leading the people to show endless loyalty to the leader of the working class, the successor to the leader plays a decisive role in completing the leader's revolutionary cause generation after generation. Leading the people to show endless loyalty to the leader is the most important question in the struggle to inherit and complete the revolutionary cause developed by the leader. As you know, many difficult and complicated tasks will emerge in the struggle to inherit and complete the leader's revolutionary cause. Only when we show loyalty to the leader can we successfully accomplish these tasks. Only when we profoundly show loyalty to the leader can we correctly resolve questions concerning the protection and materialization of the leader's revolutionary idea, the development of the immortal revolutionary achievements of the leader and his precious struggle experiences and the continuous strengthening of the unity of the revolutionary ranks around the leader.

[First speaker] Showing loyalty to the leader is a decisive factor guaranteeing the successful solution of all questions arising from brilliantly inheriting and completing the leader's revolutionary cause.

[Second speaker] Correct. By brilliantly resolving these questions, the successor plays a decisive role in inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause. By setting an example, the successor to the leader leads the people to show loyalty to the leader. We can find an example of this from the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, a sole successor to the great leader General Kim Il-sung. Defining endless loyalty to the great leader as a basic trait of the Kimilsongists — true revolutionaries — the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il has helpad conduct indoctrination on loyalty. By setting an example, he has guided the people to show loyalty to the great leader. Guiding the people to show loyalty to the leader is the most important question in inheriting and completing the leader's revolutionary cause. By brilliantly resolving this question, the successor plays a decisive role in inheritting the leader's revolutionary cause.

[First speaker] You have referred to a very important question. What other questions do you have with regard to the decisive role of the successor to the leader?

[Second speaker] By victoriously leading the revolution and construction in accordance with the leader's plan and intent, the successor to the leader plays a decisive role in inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause. Victoriously advancing the revolution and construction in accordance wiht the leader's plan and intent is a basic question in the struggle to inherit and complete the revolutionary cause. This is because the course of materializing the leader's plan and intent is the course of brilliantly inheriting the leader's revolutionary cause. Thus, the important question of completing the leader's revolutionary cause is solved by the role of the successor to the leader. In this respect, we can cite several tasks. One of these tasks includes the work of the successors to the leader's revolutionary idea. As you know, the revolutionary ideology of Marx was standardized into Marxism by his successor, Engels. Lenin's revolutionary ideology was standardized into Leninism by his successor, Stalin. The dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il has standardized the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary idea into Kimilsongism and declared it to the world.

By scientifically standardizing and declaring the leader's revolutionary idea, the successor to the leader lays an ideological and theoretical foundation to victoriously advance and complete the revolutionary cause of the working class.

[First speaker] The successor to the leader not only standardizes and declares the leader's revolutionary ideology to victoriously advance and complete the revolution and construction in accordance with the leader's plan and intent but also wisely leads the struggle for its realization. I think this is also an important question.

[Second speaker] That is right. The successor to the leader not only standardizes and declares the leader's revolutionary ideology but also sets forth and presents a struggle program, correct line and correct struggle slogan to carry out this revolutionary ideology at every stage of the development of the revolution, thus victoriously advancing the revolution and construction. We can discern this question by looking at today's reality in the North. In the North, the immortal chuche idea created by Gen Kim Il-song is brilliantly blooming in all sectors of the revolution and construction. This is attributed to the fact that the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, the sole successor to the great leader, has set forth and presented a program to infuse society with the great leader's revolutionary idea, the chuche idea, and has wisely led the struggle to achieve this program.

Thus, the question of advancing the revolution and construction in accordance with the leader's ideology and intent is a basic question in inheriting and completing the revolutionary cause pioneered by the leader. The successor to the leader plays a decisive role in inheriting the revolutionary cause by wisely resolving this question.

[First speaker] When we cite the decisive role of the successor to the leader, I think we should also refer to the question of strengthening and developing the party into the leader's party.

[Second speaker] Yes, you have pointed out a very important question. The successor to the leader plays a decisive role in completing the leader's revolutionary cause generation after generation by strengthening and developing the party of the working class founded and led by the leader into the leader's party.

As you know, the party of the working class is the political weapon to carry out the leader's revolutionary ideology. It is also the headquarters of the revolution. Only by the leading role of the party can the leader's ideology be safeguarded as the sole guiding ideology of the revolution. The struggle to embody the leader's ideology and leadership can be victoriously advanced. The question of strengthening and developing such a party into the leader's party forever can be brilliantly solved precisely by the role of the successor to the leader.

[First speaker] What tasks should be solved to strengthen and develop the party into the leader's party?

[Second speaker] Many tasks should be solved. The successor to the leader solves problems to infuse the party with the leader's revolutionary ideology and to establish the leader's ideological system in the party so the part can be strengthened and developed into the leader's party.

The dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il has set forth policies to reform the party with Kimilsongism and to establish the leader's ideological system in the party and organized and mobilized the party in achieving these policies. Thus, he has strengthened and developed the party into the invincible party of Kimilsongism. All of this eloquently proves what we have discussed.

Thus, the important problems arising in completing the leader's revolutionary cause generation after generation are brilliantly solved by the successor to the leader. Proceeding from this, the successor to the leader plays a decisive role in inheriting and completing the revolutionary cause pioneered by the leader.

[First speaker] Thank you.

VRPR SCORES PLAN FOR SIMULTANEOUS UN ENTRY

SK200122 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Before leaving to assume his new post, Kim Kyong-won, new South Korean ambassador to the United Nations, held a press conference on the afternoon of 18 January and said that North Korea's refusal of a simultaneous North-South entry into the United Nations is an act to perpetuate the division of the North and South. He also babbled that he will work for a diplomatic atmosphere to expedite UN entry. Now we will hear Madame Yun's comments on this.

[Begin recording] Charging that North Korea's refusal to go along with simultaneous North-South entry into the United Nations is an act to perpetuate the division of the North and South, Kim Kyong-won, South Korean ambassador to the United Nations, babbled that he will make efforts to create a diplomatic atmosphere to expedite UN entry. This shows that the Chon Tu-hwan ring's maneuvers to perpetuate national division have become brazen.

The proposal for simultaneous entry into the United Nations is a product of the aggressive U.S. policy against the Korean Peninsula and one fabricated by policy makers in the U.S. State Department to perpetuate division on the Korean Peninsula. To dominate South Korea, the United States has made a two Koreas policy its basic strategy toward the Korean Peninsula. To justify this, the United States had advanced a proposal for simultaneous North-South UN entry. It conducted propaganda on the proposal by using former dictator Pak Chong-hui. However, this proposal -- an invention by the splittist -- was thrown into a wastebasket a long time ago, rejected by international society.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring's talk about this issue evinces the heinous nature of the splittist, making a mockery of our people and global public opinion. The Chon Tu-hwan ring's act of charging North Korea with refusal of simultaneous North-South UN entry is an absurd act perpetuating the division of the North and South.

If the North and South simultaneously enter the United Nations, the division of the Korean Peninsula will become a fait accompli and a great obstacle will be placed on the road of the nation's reunification. This is the aim of the Chon Tu-hwan ring. Through this, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is attempting to achieve its wild desire for long-term power.

If the Chon Tu-hwan ring is truly interested in the future of the country and the people, it should not babble about simultaneous North-South UN entry but forge ahead with the plan to found a Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo which will make a breakthrough for the people. When the confederal state is established, we will join international bodies, including the United Nations, on behalf of our nation and show our dignity.

If the Chon Tu-hwan ring continues to seek the line of division and confrontation and to follow the course of betraying the nation, it will be denounced by our people and international society and will be destroyed. [end recording]

NODONG SINMUN ON ROLE OF CLASS CONSCIOUSNESS

SK131125 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2225 GMT 12 Jan 82

[NODONG SINMUN 13 January special article [nonsol]: "Working Class Class Consciousness Is Nucleus of Communist Ideology"]

[Excerpts] Our people are vigorously struggling to implement the militant tasks put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his report at the sixth party congress and his New Year's address for 1982. The current situation and our vast revolutionary duties demand the party members and working people firmly arm themselves with political ideas and display the communist revolutionary spirit and enthusiasm for battle.

To summon the party members and working people to devote themselves to the historic cause of modelling society on the chuche idea with a sense of mastery and political enthusiasm, it is mandatory to strengthen the work of arming them with a communist revolutionary ideology.

Ingreining in the people a high degree of class consciousness is very important in arming them with a communist ideology. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The principle of education on communism is education on class. Without the revolutionary ideology of the working class, communist ideology is inconceivable. Without education on class, education on communism is also inconceivable. The class consciousness of the working class is the nucleus of communist ideology. Therefore, only when the working people are firmly armed with the class consciousness of the working class can we make them true communists.

Communist ideology, which reflects the class position and basic interests of the working class, is essentially a revolutionary ideology of the working class. Socialist and communist society should be built according to the demands and interests of the working class. The course of building a socialist and communist society should be a course which remodels society in the interests of the working class, while eliminating all non-working class elements conflicting with communist ideology.

Communist ideology, which makes people believe in the triumph of the socialist and communist cause and strenuously struggle for its realization, can be guaranteed only when the people have a high degree of class consciousness. With the education work to enhance class consciousness strengthened under the wise leadership of our party, all party members and working people in our country are consolidating their socialist fatherland like a fortress and accelerating the revolution and socialist construction with political enthusiasm while vigilantly watching the enemy's schemes for aggression and war, which are becoming more blatant each day.

Only when the party members and working people have a firm class consciousness can they grasp the wily character of the imperialists and the class enemy in a timely manner and tenaciously safeguard the working class' interests: the fundamental interests of the revolution.

The revolutionary road is not smooth, and it has many arduous trials. The revolution always is accompanied by bitter class struggle against counterrevolutionary and reactionary forces which trample on the independence of the masses. The imperialists and class enemies are persistent in their attempt to destroy the socialist system from within and paralyze the people's revolutionary consciousness and class awakening. The aggressive nature of the imperialists will never change until they vanish. It becomes more wicked as they near their end. Under such conditions, to carry out the revolution without any illusion about imperialism, we must maintain a firm class position and viewpoint.

Our people are building socialism in the face of direct confrontation with the U.S. imperialists and are carrying out their revolutionary duties for the accomplishment of the historic cause of national reunification. While persistently clinging to maneuvers for two Koreas under U.S. protection, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is more wickedly manuevering to provoke a war against us. While the U.S. imperialists and their stooge Chon Tu-hwan, the traitor, are waiting for a chance to pounce on us while honing the sword of aggression, party members and working people, if they heighten their revolutionary vigilance and are determined to struggle against the imperialists and class enemies, will consolidate the revolutionary forces and defend their socialist fatherland under any circumstances.

The key problem in heightening class consciousness among party members and the working people is to correctly lead them to understand the nature of the imperialists and exploiting classes. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: the most important thing in educating the soldiers and the working people on ideology in hating imperialism is to lead them to understand the aggressive nature of imperialism.

war and plunder are the inherent nature of imperialism. The imperialist methods of aggression can be changed. Its aggressive nature, however, will never change. Unless the capitalist system -- dominated by monopoly capital -- disappears, the aggressive nature of imperialism cannot be changed.

If we fail to grasp the deceptive slogans which the imperialists employ to cover up their aggressive designs and are deceived by them, illusions about imperialism can be created among the people. Serious consequences would result. National sovereignty would be threatened. All party members and working people, firmly maintaining a revolutionary stand that they will not make concessions to the imperialists and that they will confront and struggle against them, should defend and safeguard the interests of the revolution by grasping the crafty and wicked duplicity of the U.S. imperialists.

Also important in heightening class consciousness among the working people is to make them remember the barbarous acts committed by the U.S. and Japanese imperialists against our people and the bitter and unhappy past. The colonial servitude forced upon our people during the rule of the Japanese imperialists and the indescribable disasters which befell our people in the fatherland liberation war were the most tragic and harshest. No other people have ever experienced anything like them.

In South Korea, geographically linked to us, our brothers are deprived of their political freedom and rights as a result of reactionary rule by the U.S. imperialists and their stooges. They are forced to suffer a subhuman living standard. Our party members and working people should never forget this and stage a ruthless struggle against the class enemies, cherishing hated of the imperialists and the exploiting class.

Our people's class awakening and revolutionary consciousness are high. All party members and all the people are strongly united politicially and ideologically and are determined to politically and ideologically defend the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and our party center with their lives. By implementing our party's policy to arm the working class with class consciousness, all party members and working people should prepare themselves as chuche-type communist revolutionaries, hastening the victory of socialism and the cause of national reunification.

NODONG SINMUN RAPS JAPAN'S ECONOMIC AID TO SOUTH

SK160443 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0429 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 16 (KCNA) -- Commenting on the talks between the Japanese authorities and the South Korean puppet clique about the "problem of economic cooperation" now going on in Seoul, NODONG SINMUN today in a signed commentary says:

The Japanese authorities' aid amounting to thousands of millions of dollars to the traitor Chon Tu-hwan will only whip up the war fever of the South Korean puppets and help them in the armament expansion and will inevitably heighten the tension in the Korean Peninsula and increase the danger of the northward invasion.

Japan must be aware that no matter in what name it gives loans to the South Korean puppets, it will become guns and tanks at any moment once it is included in the financial budget of the puppets, remarks the commentary.

It goes on: The huge "aid" of Japan to the South Korean puppets cannot be construed otherwise than an open expression of its hostile policy towards our republic and the entire Korean people. It is also a criminal act jeopardizing peace in Asia and detrimental to the national interests and sovereignty of the Japanese people. It is an aggressive policy required by the Far Eastern strategy of the United States to make Japan help the South Korean military fascist clique in the arms buildup.

In an attempt to dominate Asia by "strength" the U.S. imperialists try to seize Japan as their junior "ally" and step up its militarisation for overseas expansion and, at the same time, keep hold on South Korea as their colony and military base and beef up the armed forces of the puppet clique to use them as an executor in another war of aggression.

Noting that today Japan is being tightly shackled to the U.S. imperialists' war chariot and even a plan has been worked out to use Japan as a U.S. base and dispatch its "self-defence forces" to the front in case the U.S. imperialists unleash a war of aggression in Korea, the commentary goes on: We appeal to the Japanese people to heighten vigilance against the moves of the reactionary ruling circles to give huge "aid" of military nature to the puppet clique, increase the tension in the Korean Peninsula and create the danger of northward invasion.

Japan tries to realise its wild ambition for overseas expansion by availing itself of the Asian strategy of the U.S. imperialists, but it is a daydream and will only endanger Japan's peace and independence. Japan should maintain independence and stop following the U.S. policy of increasing the tension in the Korean Peninsula. It should stop encouraging the South Korean puppet clique's scheme for division and war, strive for creating a favourable circumstance for the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea, discontinue giving "security" assistance to the puppet clique and work for the development of good neighbour relations with our republic.

ANNIVERSARY OF DPRK-JAPAN TRADE BODY MARKED

SK161625 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1520 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 16 (KCNA) -- Papers here today print signed articles warmly greeting the tenth anniversary of the founding of the Korea-Japan Import and Export Corporation, a reliable enterprise of the General Association of Korean Residents in Japan (Chongnyon).

A NODONG SINMUN article extends fervent congratulations and warm compatriotic greetings to the staff members of the corporation and the compatriots in Japan who have performed great achievements for the country and the people through the strengthening and development of trade relations between Korea and Japan, upholding the chuche-based foreign trade policy of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The article says: Above all, the corporation has conducted brisk trade activities, adhering to the independent foreign trade policy of our republic, and thus rendered great services to the socialist construction in the homeland.

Through the trade activities it has also heightened the external prestige of the DPRK and expanded among the Japanese people the ranks of supporters to and sympathizers with the cause of national reunification and greatly contributed to the development of friendly and cooperative relations with the Japanese people.

It has also made big achievements in the patriotic work of Chongnyon for defending the democratic national rights of compatriots in Japan, ensuring their business and vital rights in defiance of persecution and suppression by the reactionaries within and without.

All these successes and achievements made by the Korea-Japan Import and Export Corporation are unthinkable apart from the wise guidance and deep care of the great leader.

We are firmly convinced that the staff members of the corporation will expand trade between trade corporations of Korea and Japan, upholding the independent foreign trade policy of the DPRK, and serve better the socialist construction in the homeland, develop the friendly relations with the Japanese people and achieve shining success in the sacred cause of realizing the reunification of the country through the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Korea.

DAILY HITS CHON REMARKS ON DJP ANNIVERSARY

SK170919 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0858 GMT 17 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 17 (KCNA) — Traitor Chon Tu-hwan showed up at the "celebration of the first anniversary of the founding of the Democratic Justice Party" [DJP] and made an "address" lavishing praises on the "exploits of the party." This comes under fire in a NODONG SINMUN commentary today titled "Crimes of a Terrorist Party."

The author of the commentary says: The Democratic Justice Party is a private political party Chon Tu-hwan composed of gangsters employed at the "National Security Planning Agency" and the puppet Army Security Command, the dens of special agents, and an offspring of truculent military dictatorship which sprouted like a poisonous mushroom by holding down the opposition political forces with the bayonet in a turmoil under the sway of terrorism.

No sooner had it been knocked into shape than it begged for the presence of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces for an indefinite period and entreated its master, above all, for a greater supply of equipment and material support for the reinforcement of the armed forces and expansion of the repressive networks. It has been steeped in fostering division, crying for the "expansion of the party strength" and "training of special operatives" for North-South confrontation and spreading the "argument for unification in the 2000's" and in consolidating the foothold of military dictatorship after binding the people hand and foot through the fabrication of evil laws.

Willfully ignoring all this, traitor Chon Tu-hwan advertised non-existent "exploits," waxing quite eloquent about "democracy," "justice," "welfare," and what not? This is an act of one utterly lost to shame.

Over the last one year, Chon Tu-hwan and the Democratic Justice Party, his marionette, have suppressed and exploited the people and kicked up a row of anti-communism and war internally and rendered the situation strained and incited national split, selling the country and the nation in league with outside forces, externally, thus only bringing disasters and sufferings to the South Korean people.

He went to great pains to conceal his crimes by reversing black and white and claimed that the Democratic Justice Party, as "the leading party," "should go ahead with reforms on a broader and deeper scale in close cooperation with the government," revealing his intention to draw this group into the puppet government to be used as a tool of fascism and anti-communism, treachery and division.

The Chon Tu-hwan group must not play jugglery, but step down, apologizing for its crimes to the people.

ECONOMIC PROTOCOL WITH ROMANIA SIGNED 16 JAN

SK200438 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2215 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 20 (KCNA) -- A 1982 protocol on commodity delivery and payments between the governments of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Romanian Socialist Republic was signed in Bucharest on January 16, according to a report.

It was signed by head of the government trade delegation of our country Yi Se-ung and head of the Romanian Government trade delegation Ion Stoian, deputy minister of foreign trade and international economic cooperation.

Present at the signing ceremony were Cornel Burtica, deputy prime minister of the Government of Romania and minister of foreign trade and international economic cooperation, and Constantin Oancea, deputy minister of foreign affairs, the members of the government trade delegations of the two countries and DPRK Ambassador to Romania Sin In-ha.

ROK-JAPAN LOAN ISSUE TO BE RESOLVED BY JUNE

SK200118 Seoul YONHAP in English 0101 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 20 (YONHAP) — Japan and South Korea have agreed in principle to clinch their negotiations on the latter's standing request for Japanese Government loans, by holding Seoul-Tokyo foreign ministers' and summit meetings during the first half of the year, the CHOSUN ILBO, a mass-circulation Korean language daily published here, reported Wednesday.

In a story attributed to an unidentified Foreign Ministry source, the daily also said that preparations were under way for the second round of preparatory talks (in Tokyo) to arrange a meeting in March between Korean Foreign Minister No Sin-yong and his Japanese counterpart Yoshio Sakurauchi.

There were no comments from the Foreign Ministry, but there is widespread speculation that the two governments plan to resolve the issue by June (?30).

Officials from both sides met in Seoul last week for the first round of preparatory talks for the foreign ministers' meeting, which is to deal with South Korea's request for six billion U.S. dollars in concessional loans from Tokyo. Negotiations on the request had been stalled since last September, when a bilateral ministerial meeting in Seoul hit a snag because of divergence between two sides over the size and nature of the Seoul-requested loans.

CHON 'HIMSELF' CONCEIVED JAPANESE LOAN FIGURE

SK200830 Seoul YONHAP in English 0752 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 20 (YONHAP) — Foreign Minister No Sin-Yong said Wednesday that South Korea envisages a system of coexistence with Japan such as the one that exists among the nations of the European Community.

In an address on the opening day of an annual conference here of Korean ambassadors, No disclosed that President Chon Tu-hwan himself conceived the idea of requesting government and commercial loans totaling 10 billion U.S. dollars from Japan, and that his ministry, acting on the president's initiative, plans to clinch the ongoing negotiations on the issue, and introduce a new dimension into Korean-Japanese relations.

No called on ambassadors posted in Western Europe to exert all-out efforts to stem the infiltration of communist North Korea into those nations under socialist leadership.

The foreign minister said that South Korea will strengthen bilateral cooperative relations with nonaligned nations with a view to discouraging a possible North Korean attempt to exploit the nonaligned summit conference in Baghdad in September as a forum of invectives directed at South Korea.

ROK, JAPAN DISCUSS CONTINENTAL SHELF EXPLORATION

SK190329 Seoul YONHAP in English 0316 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 19 (YONHAP) — Korea and Japan held the fourth annual meeting of the Joint Continental Shelf Development Council in Seoul Tuesday to discuss the smooth implementation of the 1974 bilateral agreement on the joint development of the continental shelf lying between them.

Government sources said that major items in the agenda of the two-day session included the successful implementation of bilateral continental shelf development projects, the prevention of sea contamination and maritime accidents in development areas and the establishment of communications channels between the two countries via development areas.

The Korean delegation will request that joint development projects be implemented throughout the year, irrespective of fishing seasons, and that the number of sub-mining zones along the joint development areas be reduced, from the current nine, to three or four.

The two countries earlier reached a tentative agreement to suspend fishing operations in the fifth and seventh mining zones during fishing seasons from January through April.

Discussions will also center on the establishment of a standing consultative body, in connection with jurisdiction over possible crimes in the joint development areas, the sources said.

The 30-man Korean delegation is led jointly by Chang Man-sun, deputy director general of the Foreign Ministry's Bureau of International Organizations and Treaty Affairs, and Yun Su-kil, oil coordinator of the Energy-Resources Ministry; while the 23-member Japanese delegation is headed by Hiroaki Fujii, councillor at the Japanese Foreign Ministry's Asian Bureau, and Takashi Nonouchi, director of the Oil Bureau of the Resources-Energy Ministry.

EMERGENCY NUCLEAR POWER HOTLINE ESTABLISHED

SK170025 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 17 Jan 82 p 8

[Text] Korea and the United States yesterday agreed to establish an emergency communication channel to prevent possible outbreak of a significant nuclear power incident or accident in Korea.

The agreement was made at the fifth meeting of the Korea-U.S. Joint Standing Committee for Nuclear and Other Energy Technology which ended yesterday after winding up a four-day session.

Korea and the United States established a master plan to cope with possible nuclear accidents in Korea, especially if it should involve a U.S.-supplied nuclear powerplant, in accordance with the arrangement between the two governments concluded on Nov. 10 last year, officials said.

Under a detailed plan for cooperation, they said, the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) will render assistance such as giving technical advice and dispatching experts to Korea at the request of the Korean Science and Technology Ministry. Joint incident response exercises will be conducted under the master plan, officials said.

Korea also agreed to conduct nine research projects for safe and efficient reactor operation in collaboration with the United States, they said.

The nine projects include heavy section steel technology, analytical model development, probabilistic studies, man-machine interface studies, radiation, health and environment studies and seismic studies, officials explained.

On the reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel, officials said, the U.S. delegations agreed to offer relevant technology and invite trainees to the country. Under the agreement, they said, a total of 109 Korean trainees will be sent to the U.S. NRC for the study of advanced technology of nuclear safety control during the coming five years. All expenses will be paid by the U.S. Government, they said.

ROK SEEKS FRENCH SUPPORT ON UNIFICATION ISSUE

SK190118 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 19 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] Foreign Minister No Sin-yong has sought the continued support of the French Socialist Government for the Seoul-initiated peaceful unification formula based on the increased economic cooperation and the traditionally existing amity between Seoul and Paris.

The government's call was renewed when he discussed with Socialist Senator Philippe Machefer a wide range of matters, including the Korean question in his capitol office yesterday morning. Sen. Machefer, who had already visited Pyongyang last month, arrived in Seoul Sunday as a special envoy of the French Government. In a meeting with Sen. Machefer which lasted for one and a half hours, Minister No briefed him on the basic direction of the nation's peaceful unification policies, characterized by the twin overtures made by President Chon Tu-hwan for direct talks between the top leaders of Seoul and Pyongyang.

The French envoy was also briefed on the Seoul government's overtures for the simultaneous entry of Seoul and Pyongyang into the United Nations.

Minister Ro was quoted as saying that North Korea's unification scheme was still far from that pursued by the Seoul government, according to sources present at the talks. Ro was said to have reminded him that North Korea was still intent upon increasing its military buildup, pointing out that it already had submarines for attack use, the sources revealed. Minister Ro went on that North Korea was doubling its diplomatic propaganda activities against the Republic of Korea in the international community including the nonaligned bloc.

Prior to his meeting with Minister Ro, Sen. Machefer talked with Acting Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun on a wide range of matters concerning Seoul-Paris relations, especially in the economic field. Acting Premier Yu was learned to have expressed his desire for a Seoul visit by French Premier Pierre Mauroy. He met with National Assembly Speaker Rep. Chung Nae-hyuk at the latter's assembly office in the afternoon to discuss the promotion of relations between the two countries.

VIOLENCE BY REPATRIATED NORTH KOREANS REPORTED

[Report of Seoul SINMUN Tokyo correspondent Pak Hae-chin]

[Text] Quoting a Chongnyon-affiliated compatriot who visited North Korea in late 1981 and returned early this year, the TONGIL ILBO, a paper published by Korean residents in Japan, reported on 20 January about shocking incidents of murder and attempted murder of high-ranking North Korean officials in Pyongyang and Nampo by compatriots who, having been repatriated to the North, are unable to endure the contempt and repression of the North Korean authorities. They have thus waged a desperate resistance struggle.

Concerning the case in Nampo city, several repatriated compatriots, unable to bear the contempt and discrimination of North Korean authorities, beat to death the secretary of the municipal party in October last year.

In Pyongyang early last November repatriated compatriots riding their motorbikes attempted a death-defying crash into a black car with unnumbered plates carrying individuals in positions of power. Similar cases have occurred one after another. However, their attempts have ended in failure.

The paper noted that those involved in the incidents were all arrested and their whereabouts are unknown. Their families were taken to investigation authorities and cruelly punished.

The paper said that such incidents were disclosed by a Chongnyon-affiliated Korean resident who visited North Korea late last year to meet his family residing in Nampo and heard about the truth of the incidents from a high-ranking North Korean official who revealed them on the promise that he hold his tongue.

The paper also reported that in the wake of such incidents, the North Korean authorities have branded all repatriated compatriots in Nampo as dangerous elements and removed some of them to secluded places in the mountains after investigating them ideologically.

PRC REJECTION OF SRV CEASE-FIRE PROPOSAL SCORED

BK201003 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1434 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 18 Jan (SPK) -- The Chinese authorities confirmed their warmongering policy by giving a negative response to the Vietnamese proposal to cease border hostilities for 10 days on the occasion of the Lunar New Year -- the traditional festival of the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples.

This is the third time that the Beijing authorities have rejected this good-will proposal made every year by the Vietnamese party on the occasion of Tet. They have also rejected other Vietnamese proposals aimed at renewing negotiations between the two countries to solve unsettled problems. This attitude is as negative as Beijing's attitude concerning proposals of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos for the signing of bilateral treaties of peaceful coexistence. It is part of China's policy to put permanent pressure on the Indochinese countries and to create tension in the relations between these countries and the ASEAN countries in order to facilitate their hegemony in the region.

One recalls that after defeat in a war waged by their Pol Pot-Ieng Sary lackeys against the southwestern border of the SRV in 1979, the Chinese leaders engaged themselves directly in a war of aggression and barbarous destruction against northern provinces of the SRV. Since their shameful defeat, they have pursued a hostile policy against this country and Chinese troops continue to occupy certain Vietnamese localities and undertake daily armed provocations along the border of the two countries.

According to the communique of the Vietnamese commission for inquiry on crimes of aggression of the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, during the last quarter of 1981 China increased its manpower and the firepower of its units along the Vietnamese border. Its armed vessels entered Vietnamese territorial waters more than 1,700 times and its planes overflew the border zone 1,300 times. At the same time, it sent hundreds of spies into Vietnamese territory. The Vietnamese people, who suffered from tough trials for 30 years after independence in order to expel the French colonialists and, in turn, the U.S. imperialists, are peace- and justice-loving people. Their proposals to China are reasonable and marked with good will. They benefit from approbation of progressive opinion in the world.

The Kampuchean people support this Vietnamese initiative without reserve. During a meeting that he granted to the Vietnamese ambassador to Kampuchea on the 15th, the vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs of the PRK supported the good will proposal of the SRV and energically condemned China for pursuing its hostile policy toward Vietnam.

The Kampuchean people will never forget crimes committed by Beijing's lackeys -- Pol Pot-Ieng Sary and company -- in the country after usurping the revolutionary gains of the 17 April 1975 victory -- fruits of the Indochinese militant solidarity. They are vigilant against the maneuvers of the Chinese expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists in their attempt to restore the genocidal Pol Pot regime. They join together with the Vietnamese and Lao peoples to upset the hegemonist plan of the Chinese reactionaries.

THAI TERRITORIAL VIOLATIONS TO 14 JAN REPORTED

BK191452 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1445 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 18 Jan (SPK) -- According to military sources, during the week ending 14 January Thai aircraft overflew Kampuchean territory 5 times and heavy artillery barrages fired from Thailand hit 88 times, including 17 times to provide cover fire for Pol Pot infiltrations. On 7 January Thai 105-mm cannons pounded the vicinity of Kampuchea's Ter Island.

Koh Kong-Pursat: Two Thai L-19's overflew Hills 336 and 322 and Smat Deng. This region came under barrages of Thai-based 105-mm artillery pieces 31 times. On 7 January some 500 shells of 120- and 82-mm mortars and recoilless rifles landed in the Smat Deng area.

Battambang: Thai reconnaissance planes made several flights over Yeang District and Phnom Malai. The region was pounded 30 times by 105-mm cannons, 120- and 82-mm mortars and H-12 rockets, with the targets pinpointed by reconnaissance planes. On 6 January several Thai-based 105-mm cannon barrages were reported southwest of Romlit and southeast of Poipet. On 7 January, some 400 102-mm mortar shells landed west and southwest of Pailin.

Siem Reap-Preah Vihear: The region came under the fire of Thai recoilless cannons and 120- and 82-mm mortars 27 times.

Thailand's armed boats and ships intruded into Kampuchea's territorial waters 307 times in the vicinity of Koh Kong and Koh Tang.

CHEA SIM RECEIVES OUTSTANDING YOUNG PIONEERS

BK190706 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] At the office of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD], on the afternoon of 16 January, Comrade Chea Sim, chairman of the KUFNCD and of the PRK National Assembly, granted an audience to two Young Pioneers from Pursat Province who scored outstanding feats in crushing the enemy in order to ask them about their activities and victories in contributing to our national defense tasks.

On that occasion, Comrade Chea Sim commended the two heroic nephews, who have high revolutionary consciousness and whose outstanding achievements have contributed to our national defense efforts. The comrade also spoke on our revolutionary victories scored during the past 3 years. The comrade stressed: Although we have achieved victories in all fields, the Beijing expansionists, U.S. imperialists and other international reactionary forces, together with the traitorous and reactionary Khmers, who are their unbridled running dogs, have persistently and insanely carried on their activities and maneuvers to sabotage and undermine our national unity, and in particular the international solidarity between the fraternal countries of Kampuchea and Vietnam, so that they can easily subvert the Kampuchean revolution and return to oppress and massacre the Kampuchean people.

In a joyous atmosphere, Comrade Chea Sim exhorted the two Young Pioneers to carry on the party's noble tasks so as to achieve greater victories for the independence, peace, freedom and happiness of our nation and people. In addition to this significant advice from Comrade Chea Sim, the two Young Pioneers also received gifts, consisting of clothing, shoes and milk, as a reward.

YOS POR VISITS PREY VENG PROVINCE 14-17 JAN

[Text] On 14 January a delegation of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] National Council led by Comrade Yos Por, secretary general of the KUFNCD, paid a visit to Prey Veng Province to celebrate the 7 January National Independence Day.

At all localities in each district visited, the delegation met and had cordial conversations permeated with a spirit of revolutionary fraternity with cadres, personnel, Buddhist monks and inhabitants.

After successfully concluding its visit, the delegation returned safely to Phnom Penh at 1900 on 17 January.

7TH REGION STUDIES KOMPONG THOM 'MODEL'

BK110932 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] Under the correct and wise leadership of the KPRP, since the liberation of 7 January 1979 Baray District, Kompong Thom Province, has developed on all fields, particularly in the field of defense.

Adhering firmly to the spirit of perseverance and determination in labor, our people in Baray District united closely with the state authorities of all levels and jointly built strategic fences that have enabled them to firmly defend their district, communes and villages. Our people are determined not to allow the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan bandits to loot their property. This heroic model of our people in Baray District was highly praised by the delegation of the 7th Region, including representatives of the armed forces and people from Kompong Cham, Prey Veng, Svay Rieng, Kratie, Stung Treng and Kompong Thom Provinces, which visited Baray District on 5 January 1982. The visit was aimed at studying and drawing experiences on defense systems from people in Baray District.

During their stay in Baray District, members of the delegation visited the strategic fences around villages and communes. They drew experiences from the people in this district, appraised the spirit of active and persistent struggle of the people in Baray District and pledged to publicize and implement this model upon return to their respective localities. During the visit, the delegation also attended a grand meeting organized by the district authorities and 5,000 inhabitants to mark the third anniversary of Independence Day.

The visit to study and drew experiences from the heroic model of the people in Baray District ended successfully after members of the delegation of the 7th Region visited an ancient temple, the Singhanagara Pagoda, and a model literacy school in Pongro commune.

EFFORTS IN INDUSTRY -- Phnom Penh, 11 Jan (SPK) -- Three years after liberation of the country, 57 firms and factories have resumed operations, among 71 other restored plants throughout the country. Mechanics plants have thus far produced 601,850 plowshares and a big quantity of agricultural tools, in addition to 131 beaters and 13 machines to process animal feed. Employees at tire factories made more than 17,600 tires and 22,250 inner tubes for bicycles. Paper factories responded to an important part of the students' needs: They provided them with more than 1 million copybooks and nearly 300 tons of paper for printing. Approximately 256,000 glasses, 44,160 of [as received] fiber cement and metal sheets were produced; 1 million of [as received] stoneware floor tiles were also made. The food industry provided 2,830 tons of flour up to the end of 1981. Handicrafts and home industry are developing. [Text] [Phnom Penh SPK in French 1430 GMT 11 Jan 82 BK]

FURTHER MATERIALS ON GDR DELEGATION'S VISIT

Khamtai Siphandon Reception

BK190627 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0400 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Text] On the evening of 14 January Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon, member of the LPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, deputy prime minister of national defense and commander in chief of the LPLA, held a reception at the National Defense Ministry Club in honor of Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann, member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany Central Committee Politburo and GDR minister of national defense, and his delegation.

Attending the reception were Comrade Gen Sisavat Keobounphan, member of the LPRP Central Committee Secretariat, interior minister and chief of the General Staff of the LPLA; Comrade Khamphai Boupha, acting foreign minister; Comrade Phao Phimphachan, deputy secretary of the Party Committee of Vientiane Municipality and chairman of the Administrative Committee of Vientiane Municipality; Dieter Doering, GDR ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Laos; Comrade Col (Le Minh Tuan), SRV military attache; and Comrade Col Stanislav Anisimov, USSR military attache in Laos.

At this reception, Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon and Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann made speeches. They pointed to the spirit of friendship and cordial militant solidarity between the peoples and armies of Laos and the GDR. The parties, governments, armies and peoples of the two countries have always safeguarded and nurtured the time-honored friendship and solidarity. The two sides resolutely pledged to safeguard their spirit of friendship and militant solidarity and to expand and develop their splendid relations. They invited the distinguished guests to toast the friendship between the party Central Committees and governments of the two countries, the friendship and militant solidarity between the two countries and the health of Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon, Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann and the distinguished guests. The banquet proceeded in a joyous atmosphere.

Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon then escorted Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann and his party and other guests to view a show performed by the LPLA art troupe.

Khamtai Siphandon Rally Speech

BK181625 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0400 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Speech by Gen Khamtai Siphandon, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee, deputy prime minister, national defense minister and commander in chief of the LPLA, delivered at 15 January grand rally held in Vientiane to welcome the visiting top-level GDR military delegation — recorded]

[Text] Respected Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann, member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany [SED] Central Committee Politburo and minister of national defense of the GDR; beloved comrade members of the top-level GDR military delegation; beloved comrades: On behalf of the Central Party Military Commission, the National Defense Ministry and the Armed Forces of the LPDR, we are very happy to welcome the GDR military delegation led by beloved and respected Comrade Heinz Hoffmann, member of the SED Central Committee Politburo and minister of national defense, in paying a visit to our LPDR. From the land of the great Marx and Engels, you, comrades, have brought with you the intimate friendship and affection of the heroic people and army of the GDR to our Lao army and people. [applause] We regard your visit as a positive display of the spirit of your proletarian solidarity toward and a great encouragement to the Lao army and people in the struggle to fulfill the tasks of defending our country and building socialism.

Beloved comrades, the National People's Army of the GDR, which is the sharp tool of the dictatorship of the proletariat of the GDR — a member of the Warsaw Pact armed forces, has, since its founding, shouldered the historic role of safeguarding socialist Germany and the western outpost of the socialist family in the most critical area of the world.

For over a quarter of a century of national construction, and in the midst of a complex struggle, under the leadership of the SED led by Comrade Wilhelm Pieck in the past and Comrade Erich Honecker at present, the GDR National People's Army has developed continuously and matured. The GDR National People's Army has now become a model modern revolutionary army composed of all armed services, which are highly aware of the classes, are profoundly patriotic and possess a high sense of combat readiness.

Adhering strictly to the teaching of Lenin stating that a revolution is worthy only when it is safeguarded, the GDR National People's Army has studied tirelessly to gain more experiences and engaged endlessly in training, and has enhanced a sense of patriotism and socialism as well as proletarian internationalism. It has studied modern military science constantly and has come to know how to handle all weapons and mechanical equipment skillfully, thus managing to safeguard victoriously all revolutionary fruits and socialist construction in their own country, defending securely the sovereignty, territorial integrity and security foundations of the GDR, and smashing all dark schemes and sabotage acts of imperialism and fascism.

Fulfilling their internationalist obligations in close coordination with the armed forces of the great Soviet Union, as well as the armed forces of the Warsaw treaty member countries, the GDR National People's Army contributed to smashing all schemes of intervention of the international reactionary forces in attempts to topple the socialist regime in the CSSR. Currently, they are coordinating closely with the armed forces and peoples of other socialist countries in making preparations to thwart all schemes of the enemies aimed at sabotaging the revolutionary gains in the Polish People's Republic.

While carrying out their military duties resolutely, the GDR National People's Army has made significant contributions to the growth and strength of the GDR -- the native land of Marx, Engels and [words indistinct] a clear model for all countries struggling for national independence, freedom and a better life for their peoples. From the ruins of the war left behind by fascism, under the leadership of the SED, and with a great sense of studiousness, discipline and creativity, the GDR people and national army have overcome rapidly the aftermath of the war and have scored outstanding achievements in all spheres of socialist construction, thereby completely changing the face of the country and taking the GDR to the summit of civilization and progress, with modern industrial and agricultural foundations, progressive technical and scientific foundations and an increasingly happy and plentiful life enjoyed by the German people.

The 10th SED Congress held in April 1981 marked the beginning of a new period for building a highly developed socialist society in the GDR. It has launched an era for striving to create all fundamental, favorable conditions as a foundation for taking the GDR toward communism. [applause]

The important decisive factors contributing to all the glorious successes of the GDR people and national army in the struggle to defend and build their country are the correct and creative leadership of the SED as well as the patriotism and love of socialism of the GDR people and national army. The growth and development of the GDR and the GDR National People's Army are also linked closely to the all-round cooperation of the Soviet army and people as well as the armies and peoples of other fraternal countries in the socialist family. This solidarity and militant alliance, based on proletarian internationalism, constituted a firm foundation for guaranteeing the fulfillment of all national defense tasks and socialist construction in the GDR in the past, and continues as a firm foundation at present.

Beloved comrades, the LPLA, under the correct leadership of the LPRP headed by General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan, is fulfilling the tasks of defending the country and building socialism energetically, and is cooperating with the fraternal Vietnamese and Kampuchean armies and peoples in defending an outpost of the socialist family in Southeast Asia. All cadres and combatants in the LPLA are very proud of all the great achievements scored by the GDR people and national army.

All of your victories on the peace defense front as well as all successes in the economic and cultural fields and the world-reknown successes in international athletic events scored by GDR athletes have become a great encouragement to the Lao army and people because such achievements clearly display the effectiveness of socialism -- the path we have selected to follow and have endeavored to attain.

Throughout our protracted struggle for national liberation against the French colonialists and the U.S. imperialists in the past, as well the present struggle to defend and build our country and to resist the Chinese great-nation expansionists and hegemonists who have colluded with the U.S. imperialists and reactionary forces, the Lao Army and people have always received effective support and assistance from the party, government, people and People's Army of the GDR. All acts of support by the GDR masses; your just and resolute support of our cause in the international arena; your material aid, including weapons, medical supplies and construction materials; and your technical assistance and support given our country in other fields in the spirit of proletarian internationalism have contributed greatly to the victories of our revolutionary struggle in the past as well as at present.

On the occasion of your visit to our country, we would like to take this opportunity to represent all cadres and combatants in the LPLA in expressing our sincere and profound gratitude to the party, government, people and national army of the GDR. [applause]

We pledge to do everything possible to consolidate and strengthen further the friendship relations and militant solidarity between the armies and peoples of our two countries on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism. At the same time, we reiterate the resolute and total support of our party, government, army and people for your national construction and national defense and for all policies and initiatives of the GDR aimed at contributing to checking the danger of war, preserving peace in Europe and the world and ensuring all international conditions in favor of the tasks of building socialism and communism in the socialist family. [applause]

To strengthen further the militant solidarity between our two fraternal armies, and as a token for the first visit to our country by the top-level GDR military delegation led by respected and beloved Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann, we would like to present the victory banner of the LPLA to the GDR National People's Army. This banner is the symbol of victories and achievements of our revolutionary armed forces scored in the arduous days of resistance in the past prior to our complete victory at present. [applause]

May the militant solidarity, friendship relations and cooperation between the armies and peoples of our two countries last forever! May the GDR score yet greater, glorious victories in national construction and national defense! May the GDR National People's Army become stronger and attain all successes in carrying out its duties! May the visit to our country by the top-level GDR military delegation be crowned with glorious success! [applause]

Hoffmann Rally Speech

BK191615 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0400 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Speech by Gen Heinz Hoffmann, member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany [SED] Central Committee Politburo and GDR national defense minister, delivered at 15 January Vientiane grand rally to welcome the top-level GDR military delegation -- recorded initial words in German, fading into translation]

[Text] Respected comrade national defense minister of the LPDR; beloved Lao combatants and friends: On behalf of our delegation, I would like to express our overwhelming thanks to you, comrades, for the warm welcome and accommodations you have given us since we set foot in the land of the LPDR.

The LPDR and our country are several thousand kilometers apart. Nevertheless, we have had a opportunity to meet with our sincere friends and gallant and determined combatants in Southeast Asia, which is an outpost of socialism in this part of the world. You, comrades, are carrying out your duties in defense of freedom, in the interest of the working people. This is similar to what our officers and men are doing by manning their positions in an important combat theater. The officers and men of the national army, people, workers, farmers, party members and members of the SED Central Committee headed by Comrade Erich Honecker have conveyed their warm salutations and greetings to all Lao comrades.

During the past several years the officers and men of the GDR National People's Army have closely followed the heroic struggle of the Lao people under the wise and clear-sighted leadership of the LPRP. You, comrades, have coordinated with the Vietnamese and Kampuchean people in driving out the colonialists and neocolonialists, have suppressed the internal reactionaries and have, at the same time, compelled the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists to cease their frenzied acts.

During the official friendship visit to the GDR by the Lao party-government delegation in May of 1977, Comrade Erich Honecker, general secretary of the SED Central Committee, said: The Laos of today is different from the Laos of the past, which had neither influence nor prestige in the international arena and which was target for oppression and exploition by the imperialists. However, Laos has now become a country with influence and prestige in the international arena. Laos acts as an important representative in the struggle for peace and solidarity within the socialist camp.

Six years ago, the victory of the Lao people was clearly displayed. The Marxist-Leninist party of your country resolutely led the Lao people to total victory in the struggle for national liberation and democracy, and has further enhanced the fine tradition of the Lao people. Relying on the principles of Karl Marx, Engels and Lenin, and learning from the experiences of the Soviet Union and other socialist countries, the Lao party has transformed the backward and semi-feudalist Laos into a country building a socialist foundation by bypassing the stage of capitalist development. Your people have attained great successes in this transformation. The GDR laboring people would like to express their profound faith in and wholehearted support for the implementation of the First 5-Year National Plan. The officers and men of the GDR National People's Army hope to render special assistance to you in the struggle against the enemies of the Lao revolution.

Our official friendship visit to your country is aimed at consolidating and developing the solidarity and fraternal cooperation between the parties, governments, peoples and armies of the two countries. We regard this development as a signifiant issue, especially at a time when the imperialists -- with the U.S. imperialists as leaders -- are trying to create tension and confusion in the world. They have rapidly intensified the arms race. Because of this danger, it is necessary for our officers and men to cooperate with the Soviet army to defend peace and the socialist fruits of the laboring people in the GDR. It is the policy of the GDR as well as of the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries who are members of the Warsaw treaty to strive to achieve the reduction of forces in Central Europe. We have scored great achievements in the implementation of a political policy of peaceful coexistence with other countries with different social systems and in attaining a reduction of forces to the lowest level. That is why we are able to preserve peace and to prevent a third world war from taking place. We have done everything within our power to solve all problems relating to our country in order to implement the resolution adopted at the 10th SED Congress, particularly those problems regarding our relations with the peoples in the countries struggling for independence, freedom and social and economic development, in accordance with our international policy.

Visit to Northern Region

[Text] The top-level GDR military delegation led by Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann, member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany [SED] Central Committee Politburo and minister of national defense of the GDR, left Vientiane at noon on 15 January for a visit to the northern region. It was accompanied by Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon, member of the Political Bureau of the LPRP, deputy prime minister, minister of national defense and commander in chief of the LPLA.

On hand to greet the delegation at Luang Prabang airport were Comrade Brig Gen Khampha Phommisai, secretary of the regional party committee of the Northern Region Command; Comrade Col Bounthon Sitvilaphon, deputy secretary of the regional party committee; Comrade Maj Vanlai, member of the provincial military command; Comrade Vongphet Saikeu, secretary of the party Committee of Luang Prabang Province and vice chairman of the administrative committee of the province; Mrs Bouakha, vice chairman of the Mobilizing Committee of the regional women's association; Mrs (Kham), vice chairman of the Mobilizing Committee of the provincial women's association; and a large number of cadres and combatants.

On the evening of the same day, Comrade Brig Gen Khampha Phommisai hosted a banquet to welcome the delegation. At the banquet, Comrade Brig Gen Khampha and Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann spoke. They stressed the fraternal relations and solidarity between the two countries and armies. They expressed the hope that these time-honored relations and solidarity would intensify and grow forever. The banquet proceeded in a warm and joyous atmosphere.

During its visit, at 0800 on 16 January, the delegation met and chatted cordially with officers and men of the regional command. On this occasion, the delegation presented various orders and medals to representatives of outstanding cadres and combatants and of some northern units for their achievements and victories in the cause of national liberation, and particularly in the cause of defending and building socialism in Laos during the past 6 years. The delegation affirmed the fraternal relations and solidarity between the two countries and armies. The delegation then visited the national museum and some ancient ruins in Luang Prabang township.

At 0730 on 16 January, the delegation safely returned to Vientiane. On hand to see the delegation off at the airport were Comrade Brig Gen Khampha Phommisai, Comrade Col Bounthon, some officers of the regional command, a large number of cadres and combatants and members of the party committee and the Administrative Committee of Luang Prabang Province.

[Text] On the morning of 17 January at 0900, the top-level military delegation of the GDR led by Comrade Gen Heinz Hoffmann returned to their country after ending a 3-day friendly visit to Laos. A joyous farewell ceremony was held in Wattai Airport.

On hand to see the delegation off at the airport were Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon, member of the Political Buresu of the LPRP Central Committee, deputy prime minister, minister of national defense and commander in chief of the LPLA; Comrade Lt Gen Saman Viyakat, member of the LPRP Central Committee, deputy minister of national defense and chief of the army General Political Department; Comrade Maj Gen Sousak Saisongkham, alternate member of the party Central Committee, deputy minister of national defense and deputy chief of staff of the LPLA; departmental chiefs; and high-ranking and intermediate officers from various corps. Also present at the airport were Comrade Dieter Doering, GDR ambassador to Laos; the GDR military attache; Comrade Anisimov, USSR military attache; and Comrade Col Le Xuan, SRV military attache.

During its visit, on the afternoon of 16 January, the delegation bade farewell to Souphanouvong, president of the LPDR and chairman of the Supreme People's Council. It visited the air force command, where it was received by Comrade Col Phao Bounnaphon, deputy commander in chief of the air force. The friendly visit helps to strengthen the solidarity between the two countries and armies.

KAYSONE ATTENDS OUDOMSAI PARTY CONGRESS

BK191315 Vientiane KPL in English 0928 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 19 Jan (KPL) -- Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party CC, on January 15 took part in the inauguration of the second party meeting for Oudomsai Province.

124 members of the provincial party members from eight districts in Oudomsai Province and party delegates from Phong Saly, Luang Namtha and Luang Prabang Provinces attended the conference.

Sompheng Keobounhuan, secretary of Oudomsai Party Committee, in his inaugural speech thanked General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan for the honour the latter had done to the meeting. This, the Oudomsai party secretary said, served as an important stimulating factor for the conference's successes. S. Keobounhuan went on to hail the heroic achievements of Oudomsai's people in the struggles against all undermining acts carried out by the Beijing hegemonists and expansionists.

In his address, General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan wholeheartedly and highly acknowledged the deeds of the people in their devotion for the national liberation and for the defense and construction of Oudomsai Province. Issues on economic, cultural and social development as well as the national defense were discussed by the general secretary. Outside the conference, the general secretary also had intimate conversations with delegates at the conference.

The conference, crowned with [success], was closed on January 18 after having elected its new party committee.

BORDER CLASH BETWEEN SKV, KHMER ROUGE CONTINUES

HK200520 Bangkok POST in English 20 Jan 82 pp 1, 3

[Text] Aranyaprathet — Fighting at the Thai-Kampuchean border intensified last night with Khmer Rouge guerrillas encircling six battalions of Vietnamese-led Heng Samrin forces, raising fears that the besieged units might cross into Thailand if they were unable to break through the cordon. Thai border troops were put on full alert and more artillery pieces were moved up as fighting extended along almost the entire frontier southward of this township. Last night the sound of gunfire was clearly audible in this border town.

Thai military sources said a large number of Kampuchean civilians who are families of the guerrillas had already crossed the Thai border. The exact number was not known, as they are now hiding along the Pronhod canal. More refugees were poised to flee across the natural frontier once fighting intensified. There are about 30,000 Khmer civilians living in the jungles and mountains opposite Thap Phrik.

Sources said the strength of the besieged units was estimated at more than 1,000 soldiers. The Khmer Rouge surrounded the Vietnamese-led force in the jungle about 12 kilometres from the Thai village of Thap Phrik 40 kilometres south of here. Fighting was fierce and Thai troops were concerned that the encircled Vietnamese forces might try to escape across the Thai border if they were unable to break through the Khmer Rouge siege.

Elsewhere, Thai military sources said Khmer Rouge guerrillas were engaged in fierce fighting with the Vietnamese at Ban Sakae Yo near Phnum Mak Hoeun, opposite Tan Saen Suk, about 17 kilometres south of here. The fighting began when two battalions of Vietnamese forces numbering 600 soldiers attacked a stronghold of the Khmer Rouge guerrillas led by Mitr Thiap with artillery pieces, mortars and rockets. Sources said the Khmer Rouge retaliated with mortar barrages and both sides were expected to suffer heavy casualties.

Fighting also broke out near Kilometre Six of Highway 5, but details of the fighting were not available.

A Khmer Rouge source told the Bangkok POST yesterday that Mitr Phol, a deputy commander of a Khmer Rouge battalion, was killed two weeks ago during a battle near Phnum Mak Hoeun. The source said Mitr Phol stepped on a landmine on January 8 and died the next morning.

A military source said that as fighting continued yesterday Thai reconnaissance aircraft took off to observe the situation. Eleven mortar shells believed fired by the Vietnamese troops landed in Thai territory, one close to an army base, at Khok Sabang at noon yesterday. Thai 105-mm howitzers returned fire with smoke shells to warn the Vietnamese that they were firing across the border. The Vietnamese ceased fire after the warning shots, the source said.

Thai authorities ordered two schools at Ban Kok Sabang and Ban Saen Suk to shut for fear that pupils might be hurt by stray shells. On Monday about 60 mortar shells landed on the Thai side, one of them wounding a girl.

Supreme Command Comments

HK200445 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 20 Jan 82 pp 1, 8

[Text] Aranyaprathet — Thai troops have fired about 100 artillery shots to warn troops fighting on the other side of the border since the Vietnamese incursion here last Saturday, military sources said yesterday.

Supreme Command spokesman Lt Gen Som Kattaphan said about 110 rounds of shells and rocket-propelled grenades had been fired by the Vietnamese troops since last Saturday.

Field military officers said the Vietnamese troops and the Khmer Rouge guerrillas yesterday exchanged artillery fire near the Thai-Kampuchean border on Phnum Malai and Phnum Mak Moeun Hills, about 20 km from this district town. "About 100 rounds of artillery shots were heard by the Thais and several rounds of artillery shells landed in the Thai side yesterday," a military source said.

The military sources said about 3,000 Vietnamese troops yesterday morning launched an attack on guerrillas of the Khmer Rouge and other resistance groups along the border. The fighting was reportedly over at about 7:00 pm last night. He said that the military troops were instructed to be on full alert for possible spillover of fighting yesterday, and aircraft had been sent to patrol the border areas.

Lt Gen Som said a group of Vietnamese troops last Saturday chased thousands of Khmer villagers into the Thai territory from the Kampuchean District of Samlot of Pailin Province. "The Vietnamese troops retreated to the Kampuchean territory after we fired a number of warning shots," he said. He said that the Khmer villagers were now still taking refuge on the Thai hill of Khao Lui.

However, the military spokesman dismissed as untrue reports that Thai security forces killed some 20 intruding Vietnamese troops during the incident. A Thai girl was seriously wounded in Kok Sabaeng village by shrapnel of artillery shells fired from the Vietnamese forces on Monday, he added.

SITTHI DISCUSSES SIHANOUK, KHMER COALITION

BK140141 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 14 Jan 82 pp 1, 10

[By Suthichai Yun]

[Text] Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila has told Kampuchea's Prince Norodom Sihanouk that he would be welcome to visit Khmer camps on the Thai-Kampuchean border when the anti-Vietnamese Khmer resistance coalition movement is formed with him as president. In an exclusive interview with the NATION earlier this week, Sitthi said he had received no formal note from Sihanouk to visit Thailand. But informed sources said that Sitthi had verbally told Sihanouk that Thailand would have no objection to his visiting Thailand. Sitthi and Sihanouk met in Paris for private talks late last year.

Asked about Sihanouk's recent statement in Yugoslavia that he would visit Thailand after Beijing and Pyongyang, Foreign Minister Sitthi said: "I have received no formal note from him on this matter. But I see no objection to his visit to the Kampuchean camps along the Thai-Kampuchean border when he is the head of a coalition government being discussed now." Informed sources, however, said Sitthi was more specific when he met Sihanouk, who asked him whether he could visit Thailand. "The answer was positive from Sitthi," the sources said.

Sitthi, asked about the report, would not confirm or deny it, adding: "Sihanouk certainly has a positive role to play in the Khmer problem. That is a fact. And if some Thai people still mark back to the Khao Phra Wihan issue, then I would tell them to be more realistic, taking into account the current situation and the Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea." Sitthi added: "Sihanouk has lately been making some very logical statements."

The Thai foreign minister said: "Whatever the outcome of the Kampuchean problem, Sihanouk certainly will play a role. Vietnam also appears to accept that fact. At least, it has been said that among all the prominent Khmer figures now, Hanoi seems to see Sihanouk as the most acceptable man -- apart from Heng Samrin at the moment, that is."

Minister Sitthi said that the Khmer Rouge, who are due to give an official response to the ASEAN-proposed "loose coalition" formula by Jan 31, would not give a categorical negative answer. "The Khmer Rouge, I believe, won't give a flat 'no' -- and I think they would come up with a counter-proposal, maintaining that there must be some basic principles to the coalition. They would continue to insist on tripartite consensus on major issues, I think," Sitthi added.

The foreign minister said his deputy, Arun Phanuphong, had clarified the ASEAN's "loose coalition" proposal to Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua during his visit to Beijing late last month. "China understands our position very well. Arun told Huang Hua why we had to come up with a new formula. The old one simply couldn't go on," Sitthi said. "Arun also told Huang Hua that the new formula did not mean that ASEAN was scheming up something against China. Huang Hua told Arun, in return, that while China looks at things in the global sense, we might be only looking at it in the regional context," Sitthi said.

Asked about possible steps to be taken by ASEAN if the proposed "loose coalition" did not materialize, Sitthi replied: "We would just sit tight. The ball is in their court. We can't just be doing things all the time. We have to wait and see some things as well." But he added that the proposed Khmer coalition proposal was "only part of an overall comprehensive political package."

He said from now on ASEAN's moves would be strictly confined to the resolutions at the international conference on Kampuchea held in New York in July last year. "But on the political front, it is clear that we have victory sealed in favour of ASEAN and its supporters. The situation, may I say, is irreversible against Vietnam," Sitthi said.

The foreign minister added: "I have asked several people to convey the message to Nguyen Co Thach (Vietnamese foreign minister) that I am willing to meet him again anytime. But I also let it be known that there is no point in meeting again just for him to repeat the old lines."

SITTHI ON SRV DIALOGUE, FOREIGN POLICY ISSUES

BK140215 Bangkok POST in English 14 Jan 82 pp 1, 3

[By the Chongkhodikit]

[Excerpts] Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila is willing to resume dialogue with Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach if Hanoi shows signs of readiness to discuss a peaceful political settlement in Kampuchea, ACM Sitthi told the Bangkok POST yesterday.

Under increasing economic and political pressures, Vietnam may soon come around to the idea of positive talks with ASEAN. The Vietnamese leadership may feel that reaching agreement with the non-communist regional community may help it overcome the threat to the Indochina states posed by Soviet attempts to dominate Kampuchea and Laos at the expense of Vietnamese influence.

Another point of hope is that Prince Norodom Sihanouk, onetime monarch, may be acceptable to Hanoi because there have not been real hostilities between him and the Vietnamese rulers.

While an apparent stalemate appears over the Kampuchean situation and Thailand lets the matter be handled by ASEAN as a whole, Air Chief Marshal Sitthi is launching moves to improve relations with Burma and Laos.

He leaves today for Rangoon for three days of talks in which he will reaffirm Thailand's commitments to cooperation with the Burmese Government, its refusal to have anything to do with the minorities fighting the government and its desire for quick, mutually satisfactory solutions to border problems. One of the major cooperative efforts will concern combating the narcotics trade from the "Golden Triangle."

Thailand also feels that it should let the Lao Government and people know that it considers them as racial and cultural brethren, and will base cooperation on that.

The government will firm up ties with Europe, Pakistan, the Middle East and Africa. Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon will visit Europe later this year and ACM Sitthi himself will call upon Middle Eastern governments. Meanwhile, British Foreign Minister Lord Carrington is scheduled to visit Thailand, February 3 to 6 as part of a tour of ASEAN countries. A top Iraqi delegation is due here next week.

The Foreign Ministry is instructing its embassies to promote, in close cooperation with the Commerce Ministry, markets for Thai agricultural commodities.

PRESS EXAMINES SIHANOUK STATEMENTS, PRC TRIP

NATION REVIEW Editorial

BK110240 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 11 Jan 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Slim Hopes That Sihanouk Can Convince China"]

[Text] Prince Norodom Sihanouk has been called "a man for all seasons." Without question he is the best known Cambodian -- Pol Pot may be better known for his atrocities -- and one who is most respected in international circles. That he is a dyed-in-the-wool patriot has never been questioned, and it is accepted, quite rightly in our view, that he is the man most respected in his own country, whether it was Lon Nol or Heng Samrin or Pol Pot who, during one time or another, held the life and death mandate over the Khmer people.

We are writing neither a panegyric nor an ode, but trying to listen to Sihanouk with both ears, hoping against hope that he will come up with something that would help his tortured country and people. Unfortunately, despite all the adulation that has been heapted upon him from almost every respectable quarter, he is his own enemy. Time and again, he has been called "mercurial," which is a very polite way of saying that he cannot make up his mind and contradicts himself all too frequently.

What he is doing in Beijing right now is perhaps his last and most desperate gamble -- but if what he has told the Yugoslav news agency is correct, he has finally made his patriotism overcome his personal delusions. He is trying -- or rather he has suggested to the Chinese leaders -- a meeting in Beijing between the leaders of the three patriotic factions -- himself, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan, something like the meeting that occurred in Singapore last year. He has also said that the ideal situation will be for these three anti-Vietnamese factions to unite and get international support for ousting the invaders and the occupiers. Obviously Sihanouk is not short on idealism.

Second, he has proposed that if the Khmer Rouge [as published] will not join the coalition -- the ideal -- then his faction is prepared to work with the Khmer Rouge bilaterally to fight the Vietnamese forces now occupying his country. The Khmer Rouge has given a January 23 deadline to give the answer to the ASEAN solution of the "loose coalition" between the three factions, and almost everybody has guessed that the answer will be in the negative, and it will be because of China's total control over the Khmer Rouge.

Two important considerations come into this reckoning. First, we cannot visualize Son Sann going to Beijing and trying to sit down, as he did in Singapore, with Sihanouk and Khieu Samphan to thrash out what we only visualize as non-problems. Second, Sihanouk has said that if Son Sann will not cooperate, he is prepared to go along with the Khmer Rouge to get international support -- arms and other supplies -- to fight against the Vietnamese troops now occupying Kampuchea. Perhaps it is patriotism, perhaps it is his basic characteristic of wanting to be a prima donna, but it is really strange that he would try to work with the Khieu Samphan-Pol Pot clique, which had kept him under ignominious house arrest for three years.

China has been taking a very tough tone in her foreign policy and she has come up, in recent weeks, flexing her muscles against the United States. China obviously observes what is going on around the world and is seeing her archenemy, the Soviet Union, coming out on top — what's happening in Poland is the final proof. It may be the decision of the powers-that-be in China to take a tough independent role in world affairs — we do not know, but all indications of her recent statements and actions point to that. Sihanouk is a cog that China will use in her best interests where Kampuchea is concerned, but we only hope that the leaders in Beijing listen more to ASEAN and consult this organization before making any final decisions.

SIAM RAT Editorial

[Editorial: "As You Like It"]

[Text] Eventually, Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila said, Thailand will be willing to receive Prince Norodom Sihanouk, former head of state of Kampuchea, if he wished to visit this country. However, the foreign minister added that it would be excellent if the visit was made after the prince is elected to head the tripartite coalition government of Kampuchea. Air Chief Marshal Sitthi also noted that "Prince Norodom Sihanouk has demonstrated his clearly positive role in connection with the Kampuchean problem."

This is the first time that Air Chief Marshal Sitthi ever mentioned the significance of Prince Norodom Sihanouk in dealing with the Kampuchean problem. As a matter of fact, no person should overlook the Kampuchean prince's position if that person dares to face reality without being emotional and obstinate.

There is no use in reminding oneself of the bitter past, such as the conflict between Thailand and Kampuchea over the Preah Vihear temple or Prince Sihanouk's strong criticism of Thailand and his capriciousness, which at times has made him look like a hyprocrite. In order to safeguard Thailand's national interests, particularly in the Kampuchean issue, the Thai side must be sincere and deal with the three Kampuchean factions equally. Possibly, direct contact with Prince Sihanouk can help widen the path toward the solution.

It is ASEAN's aspiration to enable the three Kampuchean factions to form a united front to prove to the world that they truly represent the majority of the Kampuchean people who oppose the Vietnamese occupation of their country and the Vietnamese-backed government. We believe that this is a correct principle for ASEAN and should not be changed, regardless of criticism from any party. Therefore, Prince Sihanouk's proposal for the setting up of a coalition of two factions instead of the tripartite one is unacceptable. ASEAN must be resolute and follow its correct principle in forming the tripartite coalition government of Kampuchea.

Air Chief Marshal Sitthi has disclosed that Thailand, the representative of ASEAN in dealing with the Kampuchean issue, is trying to contact Vietnam to seek a solution to the Kampuchean problem. This is another correct move because Thailand has not talked with Vietnam directly since the outbreak of the border incident at Non Mak Mun village. Direct contact with Vietnam might help the efforts to find a solution to the Kampuchean problem because Vietnam itself cannot unilaterally settle the Kampuchean problem.

SAIYUT ON U.S. AID, ASEAN MILITARY CONSULTATIONS

BK121206 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon has disclosed that Vietnam, as a proxy of the Soviet Union, presented a greatest security threat to Thailand, and urged the United States to be more flexible in providing military aid to the Thai forces.

Vietnam, as a proxy of the Soviets, is still a threat to Thailand. He has noted that Thailand is too weak to do anything about the growing Soviet naval presence in Southeast Asia, calling the buildup a part of the superpower conflict. He has further said the United States should step up its military grants to the Thais and follow one of the principles of war — flexibility — in supporting Thailand. He suggested that the United States might provide certain weapon systems like antitank and antiaircraft weaponry on loan to the Thais for training purposes. This would serve notice to Vietnam and Moscow that the United States and others were willing to come to its aid in emergencies and also allow Thailand to divert its limited resources from defense to strengthening the nation's development work.

The immediate threat over Vietnamese incursion, such as the one which occurred in June 1980, has now lessened. General Saiyut reiterated that ASEAN would not forge a military alliance, but he called for a unity of ideas about security among its members — Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, Singapore and the Philippines. He urged frequent consultations among ASEAN military leaders about the military apparatus in their own countries, more compatibility in logistic systems and cooperation in military training.

UN UNDER SECRETARY GENERAL ARRIVES ON VISIT

IRAQI VICE PRESIDENT PAYS FRIENDSHIP VISIT

Truong Chinh Receives Ma'ruf

OW192046 Hanoi VNA in English 1520 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan, 19 — Truong Chinh, president of the Council of State, this afternoon received Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and his delegation on an official friendship visit to Vietnam. Also present were Do Muoi, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers; Nguyen Viet Dung, director of the office of the National Assembly and of the Council of State; and Hoang Bich Son, vice minister for foreign affairs.

On behalf of the Vietnamese people and government, president Truong Chinh warmly welcomed the Iraqi vice president and his party and expressed his pleasure at the further consolidation and development of the friendship and cooperation between Vietnam and Iraq in the interests of the two countries, of peace, national independence, and social progress in the world. The Vietnamese president praised the role of Iraq in the struggle of the Arab and Palestinian peoples against imperialism and Zionism, for the recovery of the whole of the territory illegally occupied by the Israeli aggressors.

He sincerely thanked the Iraqi people and state for their support to the Vietnamese people in the past anti-U.S. resistance war for national salvation as well as in the present national construction and defence. He asked the Iraqi vice president to convey his New Year greetings to President Saddam Husayn and other Iraqi leaders.

After conveying President Saddam Husayn's regards to President Truong Chinh, vice-president Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf expressed his admiration for the Vietnamese people's anti-U.S. resistance and his belief that the Vietnamese people would overcome all immediate difficulties and win in their national construction as they have won in the fight against U.S. aggression. The vice president said the firm relation between Iraq and Vietnam is based on the common struggle against imperialism. He affirmed that his visit to Vietnam this time would further strengthen the friendship and cooperation between the two countries. The reception took place in a very cordial and friendly atmosphere.

INA Account of Meeting

JN191740 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1615 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, 19 Jan (INA) — Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf met here today with Truong Chinh, chairman of the SRV State Council, and conveyed to him President Saddam Husayn's greetings and wishes to the Vietnamese people for continued success. Touching on the aggressive war against Iraq, Ma'ruf said that the Iranian regime's objectives behind the war are meant to halt the process of development in Iraq. He added: We are not warmongers and we have ceaselessly worked to establish good relations with our neighbors and have responded to all endeavors which sought to halt the war, but the Iranian regime has insisted on proceeding with the war.

Ma'ruf added that the Iranian regime's objective behind the continuation of the war is identical to that of imperialism and Zionism because the continuation of the war has paved the way for an imperialist military presence in the Middle East. This presence will eventually lead to confrontation with other states and will bring back colonialism to the area. Continuing, Ma'ruf said: That is why we believe it is necessary to brief our friends in Vietnam on the real situation and urge them to condemn Iran for continuing the war and refusing to respond to international mediation. Ma'ruf reviewed the Iranian regime's relations with imperialism and Zionism, pinpointing the arms cooperation between the two racist regimes in Iran and the Zionist entity.

For his part, the Vietnamese chairman asked Ma'ruf to convey his greetings to President Saddam Husayn and the Iraqi people and his wishes for further gains in all ways of life. He also expressed his high appreciation for Iraq. Chairman Truong Chinh asserted that the continuation of war between Iraq and Iran would obstruct the Nonaligned Movement's struggle against colonialism, imperialism and Zionism.

The INA team accompanying Ma'ruf has reported that the two sides stressed the importance of consolidating the relations of friendship and cooperation between the two countries in the service of their peoples and the Nonaligned Movement.

Nguyen Huu Tho With Ma'ruf

OW200755 Hanoi VNA in English 0714 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 20 -- Iraqi Vice-President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and his party paid a floral tribute at the Ho Chi Minh Mausoleum here this morning. The distinguished Iraqi guests visited the house and office of the late president.

Vice-President T.M. Ma'ruf wrote in the visitors' book at the Ho Chi Minh Museum: "President Ho Chi Minh is the pride the Vietnamese people and an example for all peoples struggling for freedom and independence. We, from an Arab nation struggling for freedom and unification, find in him a source of encouragement for our struggle to build the future. President Ho Chi Minh will live forever as a noble symbol in our minds and in the minds of all nations struggling for freedom and independence."

Also this morning Vietnamese Vice-President of the Council of State Nguyen Huu Tho held talks with Vice-President T.M. Ma'ruf at the presidential palace. Present on the Vietnamese side were Vice-Chairman of the Council of Ministers Do Muoi; Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach; Foreign Trade Minister Le Khac; Nguyen Viet Dung, director of the office of the National Assembly and the Council of State; Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son; Nguyen Xuan Truc, department head at the office of the Council of Ministers; and Nguyen Chi Quang, deputy head of the Foreign Ministry's First Department for West Asian and African Affairs.

On the Iraqi side were Hasan 'Ali al-Amiri, member of the Revolutionary Command Council and minister of trade; Natiq A.H. al-Wadi, ambassador to Vietnam; Ambassador Abil Majim, chief of protocol of the Foreign Ministry; Dr Muhammad Sadiq al-Mahdi, adviser in the economic relations commission of the Council of Ministers; Faruq Dawud Salman, general director of foreign economic relations of the Trade Ministry; Muhammad Bahjat Izzat, assistant general director of the Second International Directorate of the Foreign Ministry; and Muhammad 'Ali Muhammad Salih, director of the vice-president's office.

The talks took place in an atmosphere of cordiality, friendship and mutual understanding.

19 Jan NHAN DAN Editorial

BK191250 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 18 Jan 82

[NHAN DAN 19 January editorial: "Warmly Welcome the Friendship Envoys of the Republic of Iraq"]

[Text] Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf, vice president of the Republic of Iraq, arrived in the capital, Hanoi, today to begin his official friendship visit to our country at the invitation of the SRV Council of State. Our people warmly welcome Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and his party with the belief that this visit will actively help to develop further the longstanding relations of solidarity and friendship between Vietnam and Iraq, two Asian countries that have arduously struggled against imperialism and colonialism for independence and freedom.

Situated to the north of the Arabian Peninsula, Iraq, with an area of 438,446 square kilometers and a population of more than 12 million, is an Arab country with a history which dates back a millenium, and it used to be the seat of a glorious ancient civilization. A victim of Roman, Persian, Ottoman and British imperialist invasions and domination, the Iraqi people have waged long and valiant struggles for national liberation. The July 1958 revolution overthrew the feudal regimes — an agent of colonialism — and founded the Republic of Iraq. In March 1959 the nascent republic withdrew from the Baghdad military bloc, thus dealing a heavy blow to the U.S.-led military alliance in a strategic region of the world. Ever since the Iraqi people have ceaselessly striven to consolidate national independence and sovereignty and to build a prosperous country.

An outstanding achievement, which had a decisive impact and helped promote the development of the Iraqi national economy, was the nationalization of the entire petroleum industry, which began on 1 June 1972 with the promulgation of the order nationalizing the Iraq petroleum company and many enterprises of capitalism by British and other Western countries.

Thanks to its successful mobilization of the people to contribute their energy and material resources and owing to the Soviet technical cooperation, Iraq was able to overcome major difficulties and obstacles caused by the imperialists and rapidly developed its strategic industry. With its crude oil output increasing sharply from 76 million tons in 1970 to 175 million tons in 1979, Iraq now ranks fifth in the world in terms of oil production and second in terms of oil exports. The value of the gross national product has increased rapidly and the ratio of the public and collective sector to the private sector in the national economy has also been augmented appreciably. Iraq is now striving to fulfill the Third 5-Year Plan, 1981-85, which provides an appropriation of 3 billion dinars in 1981 alone for various economic, cultural, educational and other development programs.

In foreign affairs the Republic of Iraq is pursuing a policy of nonalignment against imperialism and colonialism. It supports national liberation movements and promotes friendly cooperation with socialist countries. Dedicated to the independence and progress of the Arab community and resolutely supporting the Palestinian people's resistance under the leadership of the PLO, Iraq, like other countries of the steadfastness front, has firmly rejected the separate Camp David accord imposed on the Middle East by the United States. A participant in the sixth nonaligned summit held in Havana in September 1979, the Republic of Iraq was entrusted with the honor and weighty responsibility of organizing the seventh nonaligned summit in Baghdad in 1982.

Vietnam and Iraq have long supported each other in the common struggle against colonialism and imperialism, as well as in the cause of national development and building prosperous economy. Our people rejoice at the constant development of the relations of friendship and cooperation between the two countries in recent years, especially since Premier Pham Van Dong's visit to Iraq in September 1979.

We sincerely thank the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party, the Revolution Command Council, the Republic of Iraq Government, headed by President Saddam Husayn, and the Iraqi people for their valuable support and assistance during our past anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation, as well as during our current national construction and national defense. We fully support the people of the Republic of Iraq in their just struggle against imperialism and aggressive and expansionist Zionism as well as in their economic development and national construction efforts, which will contribute to the common struggle for peace, national independence and social progress. We wish Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf of the Republic of Iraq splendid success in his friendship visit to Vietnam.

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan 19 -- A reception was given here today by Vice President of the Council of State Nguyen Huu Tho for Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and his party. Present were Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers; Do Muoi, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers; Nguyen Co Thach, minister for foreign affairs; Le Khac, minister of foreign trade; Nguyen Thi Binh, minister of education; Dao Thien Thi, minister of labour; Nguyen Viet Dung, director of the office of the National Assembly and of the Council of State; Nguyen Van Tien, general secretary of the Fatherland Front Central Committee; Hoang Bich Son, vice foreign minister; and others.

Nguyen Huu Tho, Pham Van Dong and Taha Muyi ad-Din Ma'ruf proposed toasts to the further consolidation and development of the friendship and cooperation between Vietnam and Iraq and to the success of the visit of the Iraqi vice president and his party.

INTERIM MEKONG COMMITTEE SESSION ENDS IN HANOI

OW192325 Hanoi VNA in English 1632 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan 19 -- The 13th session of the Interim Mekong Committee closed here today. Singkapo Sikhotchoumlamani, president of the Interim Mekong Committee for 1982, head of the Lao delegation, and the other members of the committee agreed that the meeting had recorded good results thanks to the spirit of cooperation and mutual understanding between the member countries. A number of draft projects have been adopted for the exploitation of the Mekong River for the benefits of the riparian countries.

The president of the committee thanked the governments of various countries, international and regional organizations for participating in and giving technical and financial support to the draft projects of the Mekong River, thus contributing to increasing the understanding, friendship and cooperation among nations. He particularly thanked the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam for its hospitality.

Also today the delegates paid tribute at the Ho Chi Minh Mausoleum and visited the late president's home and office. Yesterday afternoon the representatives of the Government of the Kingdom of Holland and representatives of the member countries signed the drafts of the Mekong projects financed by the Government of the Kingdom of Holland, including the Huong My irrigation project in the Ben Tre Province of Vietnam. While here the delegates visited the construction site of the Hoa Binh hydro-electric power plant on the Da River.

Meeting With Pham Van Dong

OW192327 Hanoi VNA in English 1611 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan 19 -- Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong this afternoon received at the presidential palace the head delegates to the Interim Mekong Committee and the representatives of national, regional and international organizations to the 13th session here of the committee. Chairman Pham Van Dong said that the fine results of the session were a vivid expression of the cooperation and mutual understanding between the member countries of the committee. He stressed that the Vietnamese people desire to live in peace, friendship and cooperation. The programmes and projects of the Interim Mekong Committee would contribute to peace and stability in Southeast Asia and elsewhere in the world, he said. The government and the people of Vietnam would do their utmost to perform their duty in the committee, the chairman added.

Chairman Pham Van Dong welcomed the presence of the representatives of the governments and regional and international organizations to the meeting. He thanked the governments of various countries and the international and regional organizations for their active participation in the Mekong projects as well as in the projects for Vietnam.

VAN TIEN DUNG MESSAGE MARKS LAO ARMY DAY

OW192319 Hanoi VNA in English 1512 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan 19 -- Vietnamese Defence Minister General Van Tien Dung has sent a message to Khamtai Siphandon, deputy prime minister, defence minister and commander-in-chief of the Lao People's Liberation Army, greeting the latter's 33rd anniversary (Jan 20). The message exalts the victories recorded by the L.P.L.A. in the fight against the French colonialists, the U.S. imperialists and their henchmen, thus opening to a very glorious era -- that of complete and definitive reunification, independence and freedom for Laos.

"In the six years since the historic victory of December 2, 1975", the message says, "under the glorious banner of the People's Revolutionary Party of Laos, headed by esteemed Comrade General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan, the Lao people and their armed forces have courageously overcome numerous difficulties and trials and smashed all the schemes of annexation and perfidious acts of sabotage of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces, thus firmly defending and developing the gains of their revolution".

The message says that the great, steady and comprehensive achievements of the Lao people and their army are substantial contributions to reinforcing the traditional militant alliance between the peoples and the armed forces of the three fraternal countries of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea.

After pledging that the Vietnamese people and their armed forces will do their best to promote the great friendship, militant solidarity and comprehensive cooperation between the two countries, the message goes on: "Now as in the past, we will together with the Lao people and their liberation army closely unite and cooperate with the Kampuchean people and their revolutionary army in the struggle against our common enemies for the victory of the construction and defence of socialism in each country, for a peaceful and stable Southeast Asia and for world peace".

AMERICAN USE OF THAI MILITARY BASES ASSAILED

BK200922 Hanoi International Service in Thai 1130 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary: "Bangkok Authorities Are Inviting the Devil Into Their Home"]

[Text] On 12 January Thai Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon again asked Washington to urgently give more military assistance to Thailand, allegedly to cope with the big threat from Vietnam. On 13 January Gen Som Khattaphan, spokesman of the Thai Supreme Command headquarters, carried out a farce by holding a press conference to cover up the act of piracy in the Kampuchean territorial waters of the Thai side. Everyone knows that they were trying to conceal the fact that they are allowing the United States to return to use military bases in Thailand. It is no secret that the United States is now using military bases in Thailand to undermine the Southeast Asian people's struggle for independence, democracy and peace and particularly to oppose the Indochinese countries. The number of U.S. military personnel at Ta Khli, Korat, Don Muang and Sattahip military bases is increasing. Both Washington and Bangkok admitted in late December that since November of last year, the P-3 Orion aircraft of the U.S. 7th Fleet have been using Utaphao military base for refueling. This military base has been used for U.S.-Thai air exercises.

The U.S. ploy of returning to its lost battlefield, which has been supported by Beijing and the reactionary forces in this region, including Thailand as the leader, has become obvious since 1977, when then U.S. President Jimmy Carter told the Thai ambassador to the United States that Thailand's position is very important in the hearts of the Americans. He also said that Thailand, an old friend of the United States in Asia, will share with the United States the historic burden that has tightly linked the peoples of the two countries.

Thailand has received hundreds of thousand tons of U.S. military materials worth hundreds of million dollars. In June 1980 Thailand asked the United States to allow regular flights between the two countries and requested more military aid. The two countries jointly conducted several large-scale military exercises in the Gulf of Thailand near Kampuchea. The U.S.-Thai military collusion reached its peak when Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon visited Washington last October. During this visit the Thai premier agreed with President Reagan's proposal to send U.S. troops to be stationed in Thailand. In return, the Reagan administration promised to double the military aid -- including modern war weapons -- to Thailand.

Washington officially regards Thailand as the U.S. fortress against communism in Southeast Asia. In allowing the United States to use Utaphao and other military bases in Thailand, the Bangkok authorities exposed their own diabolical nature in colluding with the U.S. imperialists and Beijing expansionists against the Indochinese countries. What they are doing now is no different from bringing a fierce tiger into their homes. They are helping the imperialists and the Beijing expansionists destroy peace and order in Southeast Asia.

The violation of Thailand's independence constitutes a direct threat to the independence and peace of other countries in this region. The Bangkok authorities' behavior has discredited their own utterances that they want good-neighbor relations with Vietnam and other Indochinese countries and that they want this region to have peace and stability. It is undeniable that Bangkok is still riding on the aggressive war chariots of the United States and China. They are going against the interest of the Southeast Asian peoples and the Thais themselves.

Public opinion has correctly assessed the U.S. policy of returning to Southeast Asia as an absolute one. Bangkok authorities have proved that they are shortsighted in trailing after the United States. The Thai people have several times opposed the U.S. interference in Thailand. Now Bangkok authorities are inviting the United States to return to Thailand. This will definitely cause strong indignation among the Thai people, who want to defend their national independence and sovereignty.

[Article by Le Quang Thanh: "On the Security Front"]

[Text] Following the setbacks experienced by the U.S. imperialists in their war of aggression against Vietnam and in other areas throughout the world and the failure of the Chinese reactionaries and expansionists in Kampuchea and in the border areas of our country early in 1979, their leaders in Washington and Beijing have colluded with each other in frantically seeking to counterattack the world revolutionary movement and the countries in Indochina -- one of the important areas in Southeast Asia.

Supported by and in coordination with the U.S. imperialists, the Beijing reactionaries have launched a multifaceted war of sabotage against Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. Along with exerting pressures and regularly carrying out armed provocations and land-grabbing operations in the northern border areas, the Chinese reactionaries are intensifying their war of economic sabotage against our people.

They have sought to impose an economic blockade on our country by obstructing and sabotaging our economic relations with other countries. At the same time, they have sent their henchmen to sabotage our production and material and technical bases, distort the economic policies adopted by our party and state and disrupt our markets. This they have done in the hope of destabilizing our economy and making life even more difficult for our people, cadres and armed forces and thereby create feelings of pessimism, skepticism and dissatisfaction toward the economic policies of our party and state.

In their war of espionage, the Chinese reactionaries have established contacts with their henchmen already planted in our country or sent in additional spies and commandos, using all types of reactionaries among the Hoa and other ethnic minority people and religious groups as well as dissatisfied elements in certain organs and units to set up reactionary dens and groups or form an underground force to oppose and sabotage our country on a long-term basis.

Meanwhile, Chinese and American intelligence agents have also stepped up their activities. They are seeking to collect information on our national defense secrets and the development and activities of our army as well as about other secrets concerning our political and economic activities to support their sabotage plans.

The psychological warfare — in other words, the political war, the war of nerves, the ideological war and the war of ideological sabotage — conducted by the enemy is extremely cunning. They have tried to spread rumors "by word of mouth" under the form of "modern funny stories and dirty jokes" to attack our party's line and criticize our leading party and state cadres in the hope of creating confusion, suspicion and dissatisfaction toward our party leadership and regime. This trick is aimed at paralyzing our revolutionary will and sowing division among our people of various nationalities and between our people and our party, people's armed forces and people's security forces, as well as between our people and the fraternal peoples of Laos and Kampuchea and between our state and the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. They have also tried to entice people to flee abroad. They slander our regime while collecting intelligence from these people or training and sending them home as intelligence agents to carry out sabotage activities against our people. They have plotted to create not only new reactionary organizations and reactionary tendencies hostile to our revolution but also a generation of depraved and degenerate persons who run after a life of "materialistic enjoyment" so that they can gradually turn these persons into their henchmen.

All frantic and insidious acts of sabotage by the enemy are aimed at creating an unstable political, economic and social situation and weakening our people so that they can foment rebellion easily and wage a war of aggression against our country whenever the opportunity arises.

Over the past 5 years, in addition to the two wars for national defense, we have had to cope with the most insidious schemes, villainous tricks and frantic acts of the enemy and great and serious difficulties in our economic and social life. However, we have been able to maintain political security and social order firmly.

During this period, the struggle to maintain political security and social order and safety has become a fierce and complex class struggle for national independence and socialism. In this struggle, our people have been compelled to attack the enemy face to face and silently, using both force and wits against daring, subtle and perfidious enemy activities and fighting with decisiveness, speed, perseverance and sharp minds in order to win victories at all costs.

The struggle against counterrevolutionaries and other criminals for the sake of security and order is also a science and an art. This struggle requires not only an effort to correctly identify the offenders in each specific circumstance but also demands that we look for and discover the national laws applicable to it and, on that basis, set forth and adopt guiding principles with specific forms, methods and measures and then carry these out in a creative manner in order to achieve the best results.

For more than a third of a century, and especially during the past 5 years, the struggle to maintain political security and social order and safety in our country has proven that the following principles are correct: The party must assume absolute, direct and overall leadership while efforts must be made to promote the laboring people's right to collective mastery, improve the state's management efficiency and combine the positive strength of the masses closely with the professional work of various specialized organs (the people's security service, the people's organ of control and the people's court). This is aimed at developing the combined strength of the system of proletarian dictatorship into a comprehensively militant front that will resolutely smash all schemes and acts of sabotage by the intelligence agents and spies of the imperialists and international reactionaries, thereby firmly maintaining political security and social order. It is necessary to combine the process of production closely with the protection of production; the effort to build socialism with the defense of the socialist regime and country; the struggle to maintain political security with the need to ensure social safety; and the function of organization and construction with the function of using violent means by the dictatorship of the proletariat for suppression purposes, with the first as the main task. Efforts must be made to develop the combined strength of all forces — especially to promote close coordination among the public security forces, the people's armed forces and the self-defense militia forces — as well as to employ uniformly all necessary measures in order to enable these forces to participate actively in tasks related to national construction, defense and progress in addition to destroying and smashing all counterrevolutionaries and other criminals. It is necessary to know how to perform work in a decisive, careful, objective and comprehensive manner and to heighten vigilance so as not to let evildoers slip away. It is necessary to safeguard against deviation and the unjust punishment of innocent people. It is also necessary to closely combine punishment with leniency and suppression with education and reeducation. Efforts must be made to ensure that the suppression and punishment of counterrevolutionaries and other criminals is carried out strictly, justly and promptly and in accordance with their offenses and with policy and law, and that education and reeducation for these elements be conducted in an active, persistent and profound manner. Meanwhile, in important areas, leadership and forces must be intensified to a high degree so that the struggle and suppression can be spearheaded vigorously against all major crimes.

By thoroughly understanding and following these principles, our entire party, army and people will certainly be able firmly to maintain political security, social order and safety, thus making worthy contributions to building socialism and successfully defending our beloved socialist Vietnamese fatherland.

XUAN THUY APPOINTED DELEGATE TO VCP CONGRESS

OW140421 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] According to our Voice of Vietnam correspondent, Ha Son Binh Province successfully ended the first round of its party organization congress on 13 January 1982.

During 9 days of work, the delegates held heated debates, contributed constructive views on the VCP Central Committee's documents to be presented to the Fifth VCP Congress and appointed a delegation to the congress. The delegates unanimously endorsed the achievements scored under the VCP Central Committee's honorable and clear leadership, and the strategic tasks, objectives and major tasks set forth by the VCP Central Committee for the coming year.

The congress analyzed the reasons for the achievements as well as past shortcomings and mistakes and advanced measures to overcome these weaknesses.

The delegates voiced the determination of the Ha Son Binh party organization and peoples of various nationalities to effect a new change in the province, implement the resolution of the 11th plenum of the 4th VCP Central Committee on the tasks in the 1982 State Plan and fulfill the tasks to be set forth by the Fifth VCP Congress.

Comrade Xuan Thuy, secretary of the VCP Central Committee, and a number of other comrades recommended by the VCP Central Committee were appointed delegates of the Ha Son Binh party organization to the Fifth VCP Congress with a majority of the votes.

The congress addressed a letter of determination to the VCP Central Committee and worked out a program of action for the first trimester of 1982 with a view to scoring achievements to greet the Fifth VCP Congress.

At these congresses the documents of the VCP Central Committee were discussed and delegates were elected to attend the Fifth VCP Congress.

The Hanoi city party organization elected a delegation of 74 comrades. Comrades Le Duan, Truong Chinh, Pham Van Dong, Le Van Luong, Le Quang Dao and Hoang Quoc Viet were elected by a high percentage of votes.

NHAN DAN LAUDS GRASSROOTS-LEVEL PARTY CONGRESSES

[Text] More than 35,000 grassroots-level party organizations and more than 250 party organizations at the ward, district and city level throughout the country have ended their congresses in which they discussed the draft documents of the VCP Central Committee to be presented at the Fifth National VCP Congress. Among these localities, Haiphong Municipality and the provinces of Ha Tuyen, Cao Bang, Quang Ninh, Ha Son Binh, Hai Hung, Thai Binh, Quang Nam-Danang, Nghia Binh, Phu Khanh, Dong Thap, An Giang, Tien Giang and Cuu Long have basically completed their congresses of delegates at the ward, district, city and equivalent levels. These localities are summarizing the ideas expressed during the congresses in preparation for the congresses at the provincial and municipal levels.

The congresses of grassroots-level party organizations have been held in accordance with the relevant principles and procedures and have achieved good results. Some 90-100 percent of party members attended these congresses. The majority of them showed a high sense of responsibility. They heatedly debated and contributed many ideas to the documents to be presented at the Fifth VCP Congress.

Party committees of various wards, districts and cities have satisfactorily condensed the ideas collected from the grassroots-level party organization congresses. In doing so, they have identified the principal problems to be discussed at the ward district and city party organization congresses. These congresses will set forth working programs and positive measures aimed at accelerating the emulation drive to create new changes in each locality.

GIAP SPEAKS AT HANOI EDUCATION CONFERENCE

BK150928 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] According to VNA, the Office of the Council of Ministers, the VCP Central Committee Science and Education Department, the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union Central Committee Secretariat and the Ministry of Education jointly held a conference in Hanoi on 6 and 7 January to guide the implementation of Council of Ministers decision No 126-CP on providing vocational orientation and rationally using graduated elementary and high school students.

Those attending the conference were very elated over the presence of Comrade Vo Nguyen Giap, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers. Minister of Education Nguyen Thi Binh briefed the conference on the implementation of the vocational orientation task and the use of graduated general education students in the past. She said: In recent years many elementary and high schools in the country, especially those in the northern provinces, have tried to organize vocational orientation and rationally use student graduates. They have regarded this task as an important aspect of the general education system aimed at guiding students in choosing a career suitable to the current requirements for social development as well as their own physical capabilities and aptitudes. In general, however, the organization of vocational orientation for general education students has not been good enough. It is true that every year following the entrance exams held by various general high schools, universities and colleges, there are still tens of thousands of graduates unable to further their schooling. They have not been prepared in any field to be used rationally as new working people.

Experience obtained from good models shows that in order to satisfactorily organize vocational orientation and the rational use of graduates various general schools must first of all keep themselves fully informed of the party's concepts regarding education and the requirements for educational reform and the essence of the various decisions and circulars of the Council of Ministers and must devise practical plans to carry out this task step by step in a creative and steady manner.

In his informal address to the conference, Vice Chairman Vo Nguyen Giap said: It is necessary to undertake the vocational orientation task at various general schools intensively and realistically. In particular, we must cultivate the work attitude and a correct sense of career for students. We must organize on-the-job training for students so that they can become familiar with certain professions in society as well as with various traditional professions in the localities. We must test their vocational aptitude in order to provide them with the most suitable vocational training. In addition, we must motivate and guide students in choosing those professions and in working in those areas where the country needs them in each stage of national construction and defense.

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 19 -- Jan Sliwinski, Polish ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Vietnam, today paid a farewell visit to President of the Council of State Truong Chinh before returning home for a new assignment. President Truong Chinh had a cordial talk with the Polish diplomat.

AUSTRALIA

DECISION ON POLISH AID DEFERRED; USSR CRITICIZED

BK191305 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 1230 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Australia is to continue to defer a decision on Poland's request for further economic aid worth about A$100 million or more than U.S. $110 million. Federal Cabinet has also warned that the government might cancel or suspend a government guaranteed credit facility of $40 million [currency not given] already granted to Poland.

Following today's Cabinet meeting, the Polish and Soviet ambassadors to Australia were summoned to the office of the foreign minister, Mr Street, for a briefing on Australia's attitude to the Polish situation. The ambassadors later left Parliament House without commenting.

In its review of the Polish crisis, Cabinet called for the lifting of martial law, the release of detainees and an early return to a situation in which the Polish people could freely find their own solutions to their economic and political difficulties. In a statement released after the Cabinet meeting, Mr Street accused the Soviet Union of consistently trying to coerce and threaten Poland in an attempt to stifle the development of basic human and political freedoms. Mr Street said the events in Poland had reinforced the need for Australia to retain the sanctions imposed on the Soviet Union in response to its military intervention in Afghanistan.

AGREEMENT REACHED WITH JAPAN ON NUCLEAR SAFETY

BK190923 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Australian and Japanese officials have agreed on the text of an agreement for cooperation in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy. An Australian Foreign Affairs Department spokesman said the text had been negotiated in Canberra and Tokyo over the past 3 years. He said if incorporated, the Australian Government's nonproliferation requirements on the use of Australian uranium and was similar to the 9 nuclear safeguards agreements covering 16 importing countries that Australia had already signed [sentence as heard].

The text must be approved by the Japanese and Australian Governments before Australian uranium can be exported to Japan. The Foreign Affairs Department spokesman said that under a long-term contract already finalized, the first shipment of more than 13,000 tons of uranium oxide from the Ranger Mine in the northern territory was due to be exported to Japan in about March. The rest was due to be delivered over the next 14 years.

Last month, Australian and Swiss officials agreed on the text of a nuclear safeguards agreement that also must be approved by the governments of both countries before shipments of Australian uranium can go ahead.

MOSCOW RADIO'S CITING OF PKI MESSAGE ASSAILED

BK090914 Jakarta OANA in English 0849 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Text] Jakarta, 9 January (ANTARA/OANA) -- Chairman of DPR's [parliament] Commission on Defence and Foreign Affairs Chalid Mawardi Thursday [7 January] strongly criticized Moscow radio for its broadcast of December 19, 1981, in which it was said that PKI (Indonesian Communist Party) had sent a congratulatory message to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev on the occasion of his 75th birthday. Speaking to ANTARA, Chalid said Indonesia could not approve of the broadcast. The PKI had been banned in Indonesia since its failure in staging a coup d'etat in 1965.

Chalid said the Moscow radio broadcast was purposely made. He said it had the purpose of the influencing not only people in Indonesia, but also listeners in other parts of the world. The incident of the broadcast demonstrated to the whole people of Indonesia, which adopt Pancasila, that communism with its PKI was still a latent (?threat), he said. It is this fact which makes it necessary for the government and the people of Indonesia to heighten alertness, to enhance national resilience in all fields and to strengthen unity as well as to foster unity between the armed forces and the people, according to Chalid Mawardi.

In connection with subversive activities in Indonesia, the DPR chairman questioned the number of personnel at the Soviet Embassy in Jakarta, which he considered too big.

Parliament's Discussion

BK120837 Jakarta OANA in English 0735 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Jakarta, 12 Jan (OANA/ANTARA) -- The case of Moscow radio, which had recently published what it called the congratulatory message of the PKI (Indonesian Communist Party) in connection with the 75th [birthday] anniversary of Russian President Leonid Brezhnev, was discussed by member of House Commission I (dealing with defence, foreign affairs and information) Amin Iskandar, with Director General for Political Affairs of the Foreign Affairs Ministry Munawir at the Pejambon office [Foreign Ministry] here Monday [11 January].

The member of parliament on the occasion called on government authorities to take necessary measures dealing with the Moscow radio broadcast which was described as "more than merely interference in Indonesian internal affairs" through such a broadcast. According to Amin Iskandar, such a case should not be taken lightly unless, he said, there will be followups as those already exemplified by the cases of Afghanistan and Kampuchea.

A protest, signed by Chalid Mawardi and Amin Iskandar himself, of the House Commission I, has been made against the interference of the Moscow radio. Amin Iskandar pointed out here Tuesday that the Foreign Office had paid proper attention to the Moscow radio case and would shortly take necessary measures against the radio in line with the existing diplomatic code of conduct.

SUHARTO ISSUES DECREE ON ELECTION CAMPAIGN

BK181407 Hong Kong AFP in English 0346 GMT 18 Jan 81

[Text] Jakarta, 18 Jan (AFP) -- President Suharto has issued a decree strictly regulating the general election campaign to 45 days with a 5-day "cooling off period" until polling day on May 4, ANTARA news agency reported today.

Under the decree those wishing to campaign must show the text of speeches, instruments to be used and other concepts to the local authorities by 2 weeks before the campaign starts. The decree also restricts the holding of mass rallies and processions for which special permits should be obtained if they are to be held in other areas or districts.

The decree says no campaign activities will be allowed during the 5-day cooling off period. Violation of the decree will lead to the dissolution of campaign meetings.

According to ANTARA, the decree does not apply to the former Portuguese colony of East Timor, which was incorporated into Indonesia 6 years ago and has become its 27th province.

Meanwhile the government is stepping up to issue land certificates to peasants and the common people in an apparent bid to attract their sympathy pending the election. Director General for Agrarian Affairs Brig Gen Darjono said the government would give priorities in the current secoud stage land certificate drive (Pronas) to mass organisations and political associations.

Home Minister Amir Makhmud told a rally in Yogyakarta, Central Java, yesterday that the distribution of land certificates showed the government's great attention to give land to the poor. "Unlike the previous government (of the late President Sukarno), the present government distributes land freely to the people," he said. The Pronas project was seen here as a government's attempt to encourage the people to back President Suharto's re-election next year.

Parties' Criticism of Decree

BK191027 Hong Kong AFP in English 0428 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Jakarta, 19 Jan (AFP) — Both the Muslim United Development Party (PPP) and the Indonesian Democratic Party (PDI) today criticised a presidential election campaign decree saying that it was too difficult and too tight.

PPP Executive Muddin Lubis said the decree constituted a setback because it required that those wishing to campaign should show the text of speeches and instruments to be used to the authorities 2 weeks before the campaign starts on March 14. "Under the previous law they needed only three days time," he said. The new decree would only give too many difficulties, Mr Lubis said. "We hope the government will simplify it."

PDI Secretary General Saban Sirait said the decree is too tight and would restrict the freedom of those campaigning for their party.

Mr Sirait said the government should not be prejudiced against those wishing to campaign. "I am sure that they generally already know how to maintain peace and order during campaigning," he added.

Under the new decree the campaign will last 45 days after which campaign activities will be banned for five days of a "cooling off" period until polling day on May 4.

Meanwhile the ruling Golkar (functional groups) refused to comment on the decree which strictly regulates campaigners.

The influential newspaper KOMPAS today called on the government to make sure that the election would proceed smoothly and in an orderly manner. "The Indonesian people are becoming more mature, so that they can easily catch up anything which is unjust and unfair. On the other hand they will respect and praise anything that deserves praise. "The people can be quiet if hit by injustice, but their quietness can eventually bring about consequences which will not benefit all of us," KOMPAS said in an editorial.

ABE DISCUSSES VARIOUS ISSUES WITH U.S. OFFICIALS

Talks With Reagan, Haig

OW190323 Tokyo KYODO in English 0234 GMT 19 Jan 82

[By Ryuichi Kawakami]

[Excerpts] Washington, Jan 18 (KYODO) -- Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Monday gave U.S. President Ronald Reagan his assurances to try to resolve bilateral trade friction, calling it as a "top political task" facing his Cabinet. The pledge was contained in his personal message conveyed to the President by International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe in a meeting, also attended by Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

The prime minister told the President in the message Japan held the Soviet Union responsible for the latest situation in Poland and that it would act in concert with its Western allies in imposing sanctions against the Soviets, Abe said after the meeting. Suzuki also pledged the United States of Japan's continued defense buildup efforts, noting that his government had given special consideration to next fiscal year's defense budget despite the great financial difficulties it faced.

Abe told newsmen later the President appreciated the Suzuki Cabinet's policies on these three issues. Reagan told him the United States put great expectation on efforts being made by Japan in opening its market wider to foreign goods, Abe said. He quoted the President as saying that all the problems lying between the two countries "must be and could be resolved one by one."

Abe said he stressed to the Americans that Japan was firmly committed to the principle of free trade and was opposed to any protectionist actions. He assured them that the Japanese Government would take a decision by the end of this month on some improvement to be made in the area of nontariff trade barriers and called for greater U.S. efforts to step up its exports to Japan. "I gained the impression that the future of overall Japan-U.S. relations depends on how Japan can deal with the bilateral trade issue," Abe told newsmen.

Abe said he suggested the United States lift the embargo on Alaskan crude oil exports to Japan as a means of correcting the bilateral trade imbalance. But he said the President was noncommittal. Reagan said he would study the proposal, while noting that whether to lift the ban was a matter addressed by U.S. Congress, the Japanese minister added.

Earlier, Abe met separately with Haig, Trade Representative William Brock and Senator Bob Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Abe said Brock implied that the porposed export of Alaskan crude to Japan might be impracticable for the present. But the chief U.S. trade negotiator indicated that crude exports to Japan might become possible in the near future. He was quoted as telling Abe that "such exports will be difficult unless production is increased, but we would like to consider stepping up the output in a year or so."

Haig expressed hope for an early agreement at Japan-U.S. civil aviation talks, while Reagan hoped that the talks on quarantine of Mediterranean fruit fly-infected Californian fruit, now underway in Tokyo, would produce a favorable result, according to Abe. He said Haig hailed what he called Japan's "vigorous and courageous" stance on Poland, and said it would help strengthen Washington's Soviet policies. Japanese briefers said Haig told Abe that if Japan and the United States failed to settle their trade problems, West European countries might move toward protectionism, damaging the interests of the two nations, which enjoy benefits from the free trade system.

Brock, who met newsmen after his talks with Abe, suggested that Japan should limit its car exports to the U.S. market to 1.68 million units or less in the year beginning April 1. But Japanese briefers said the auto issue was taken up only briefly during Abe's meetings with U.S. officials.

In meetings with Vice President Bush and Secretary of Energy James Edwards, Abe proposed that the two governments speed up negotiations on cooperation in reprocessing of U.S.-produced nuclear fuel.

Meeting With Dole

OW190403 Tokyo KYODO in English 0339 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Washington, Jan 18 (KYODO) -- Japan's International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe Monday asked U.S. Congress not to rush into protectionist actions to settle bilateral trade disputes. Abe told Senator Bob Dole he understood the policy of "reciprocity" as advocated by some U.S. congressmen had some positive aspects. But he warned that if reciprocity was applied in a "backward, negative way," the consequences could be dangerous to Japan-U.S. relations, Abe told newsmen later.

The senator quoted Abe as asking him to delay congressional action until the Japanese have had the opportunity to effect changes in trade policy.

SUZUKI COMMENTS ON KEY BISCAYNE TRADE TALKS

OW180519 Tokyo KYODO in English 0434 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 18 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Monday every country should cooperate to activate the world economy and expand trade in a balanced form. The prime minister made the remark in reply to a question about the two-day meeting of top trade officials of the United States, Canada, the European Community and Japan in Key Biscayne, Florida, last Friday and Saturday.

Trade disputes, for example, exist not only between Japan and the United States, but between the U.S. and the European Community, he pointed out. World trade might be reduced if each party took protectionist actions, he said. Suzuki told newsmen that it is important to take every opportunity for better understanding.

SUZUKI DISCUSSES TRADE, OTHER ISSUES IN SPEECH

OW191145 Tokyo KYODO in English 1128 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 19 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Tuesday he will extend every effort to reduce Japan's huge trade surplus with the United States and European Community (EC) countries. He quickly added: "I don't think the trade imbalance will be settled right away." Speaking at the Japan National Press Club in Tokyo, Suzuki called the trade dispute with the United States and EC countries the "top issue" facing his government. Suzuki said the government is therefore moving to cut import tariffs ahead of schedule, ease import regulations and remove other nontariff barriers so that foreign goods can find easier access to the Japanese market. "I'll exert all my effort to settle" the trade imbalance, Suzuki said, but added that there would be no instant remedy for the problem.

He noted Japan's trade surplus with the United States hit $20 billion in 1981, and said Japan is ready to import coal and Alaskan crude oil from the United States. According to U.S. estimates, the United States had a deficit of about $18 billion in trade with Japan last year.

Suzuki said he has told Shintaro Abe, Japanese international trade and industry minister, now in Washington, to talk about possible coal and oil deals with U.S. officials. At the moment, however, the supplying of oil to Japan seems difficult, Suzuki said.

Abe was in the U.S. capital en route home from a meeting with top trade officials from the United States, Japan, Canada and EC, held in Key Biscayne, Florida, last week. Suzuki told reporters Tuesday he plans to have a private meeting with U.S. President Ronald Reagan when they visit Paris in June for the annual conference of seven major Western democracies.

During his 90-minute speech, Suzuki also said recent Japan-South Korean talks succeeded in getting the stalled bilateral negotiations on Seoul's massive economic aid request "into orbit." He referred to working-level consultations held in Seoul last week to discuss South Korea's capital aid request of $6 billion to underwrite that country's 1982-86 economic development plan. Suzuki said such talks would be held once or twice more before agreement is reached on the loan request. "This way we can pin down Japan's economic cooperation with South Korea, leading to positive foreign ministers and summit meetings," Suzuki said.

On other matters, Suzuki said: The government-proposed 7.75 percent defense spending increase in fiscal 1982 despite an austere national budget does not mean defense outlays will rise unchecked in future. Russo-Japanese friendship will be achieved only after the Soviet Union returns the four occupied islands off eastern Hokkaido to Japan.

FURTHER REPORTS ON STRAFED TANKER INCIDENT

Tanker's Skipper Questioned

OW210129 Tokyo KYODO in English 0034 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Naha, Jan 20 (KYODO) -- The 5,307-ton Japanese chemical tanker Hegg, which was strafed by two Philippine planes while sailing off Mindanao Island last week, arrived in Naha port Thursday morning, and the 30-year-old South Korean cook who was wounded in the incident was taken to a hospital for treatment.

Officials of the 11th Regional Maritime Safety Headquarters in Naha boarded the tanker on Wednesday morning while the ship was heading for Naha and questioned Hideo Takakuwa, 51, skipper, and the 21 other crew members of the Hegg on the incident. They plan to conduct further detailed questioning of the crew members on Thursday. The maritime safety officials also searched the ship on Wednesday, but there were no signs to indicate that the Hegg carried terrorists or strategic material for Philippine guerrillas, as claimed by the Philippine authorities.

The 11th Regional Maritime Safety Headquarters plans to submit a formal report on its questioning of the crew members and search of the tanker to the Maritime Safety Agency in Tokyo as early as during Thursday. Based on the report, the government plans to notify the Philippine Government on results of the probe.

Officials Comment

OW210259 Tokyo KYODO in English 0245 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Jan 21 (KYODO) -- The Foreign Ministry is concerned that Japan-Philippine talks may take a long time to solve the strafing of the 5,307-ton Japanese chemical tanker Hegg by Philippine Air Force planes off Mindanao last week, ministry officials said Thursday. They said the ministry is worried because there are many discrepancies between the version of the attack given by the tanker's captain and the one given by the Philippine Government on the incident.

Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos also asked Japan for a rigid investigation on the incident.

A ministry expert on the law of the sea said a debate on the extent of territorial waters between the two countries is feared to deepen mutual antagonism, rather than to lead to a solution of the incident.

20 JAN SR-71 INFILTRATION TERMED 'PROVOCATION'

SK201550 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1500 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] At around 1103 on 20 January, the U.S. imperialist aggressors committed an act of espionage against the northern half of the republic by again infiltrating a high-speed, high-altitude SR-71 reconnaissance plane deep into the sides over the Kangyong Peninsula in the southwest of South Hwanghae Province of our country. Again at around 1244 on 20 January, they committed an adventurous provocation by infiltrating a spyplane deep into our territorial airspace, east of Kosong, Kangwon Province.

The U.S. imperialist aggressors' espionage acts against our country are becoming more naked as they are increasing new aggressive armed forces in South Korea, including an electronic intelligence unit, on a large-scale and are, at the same time, frenziedly accelerating large-scale war exercises.

The U.S. imperialist aggressors infiltrated a high-speed, high-altitude spyplane into the territorial airspace of our country six times in the past 1 week alone and a total of 15 times since the beginning of the new year.

All of these unusual moves committed by the U.S. imperialist war maniacs show that their maneuvers to provoke a new war in Korea have reached an extremely dangerous state. Our people are keenly watching the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers for provoking a war, which are getting more adventurous with each passing day. The U.S. imperialists should give up their anachronistic dream and immediately stop all antagonistic acts against our people.

COMMENTARY HITS SOUTH'S 'WELFARE SOCIETY'

SK211026 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1014 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 21 (KCNA) — NODONG SINMUN Thursday comes out with a commentary titled "Tragedies Behind Welfare Screen" on the increase of deaths from hunger and cold in South Korea, which include three deaths from cold in Pusan a few days ago.

Declaring that the tragedies reported from South Korea in an unbroken chain are consequences of the misrule of the Chon Tu-hwan traitor clique, the author of the commentary says: The Chon Tu-hwan group has never let a chance pass by without stringing out a mishmash about "the building of a welfare society," "liberation from poverty," and the like, feigning concern for the improvement of the living of the impoverished people. But how the South Korean reality stands today?

A South Korean publication reported that over 23 million people go hungary all the year round in South Korea. Now, in South Korea, millions of unemployed people are swarming about to find jobs and 6.6 million "absolute paupers" are awaiting immediate relief. Even the employed people go without meals more often than not. Such being the situation, it is not difficult to guess what gnawing hunger the jobless people and "absolute paupers" must be undergoing. It is not accidential that 4,000 or more people die of hunger in South Korea every year.

Nevertheless, the puppet clique plunder the people more harshly, while sharply raising the prices, including the rice price, thus driving the working people into greater miseries. The puppets also force an acute housing shortage upon the South Korean people. Nearly a half of the South Korean population, without a shelter to their names, live in others' side rooms or in dugouts and plank hovels, or under bridges or in "mat houses" by cesspools.

When a tiny handful elements of the privileged clan are lolling in wealth and luxury, never ceasing tragic deaths from hunger, cold or diseases and suicide occur among millions of working people who live from hand to mouth. This appalling reality is the true picture of the South Korean society where showy advertisements of "the building of a welfare society" strike your eyes everywhere. The South Korean people cannot be delivered from the present tragedies without destroying the military fascist rule of the puppet clique.

VRPR SCORES SOUTH'S UN REPRESENTATIVE'S REMARKS

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] On 18 January, before leaving to assume his new post, Kim Kyong-won, new South Korean ambassador to the United Nations, held a press conference at the press room of the Foreign Ministry. He babbled that the North's opposition to simultaneous entry of North and South into the United Nations is an act to perpetuate division. This is an absurd and incoherent remark which puts the cart before the horse.

As you know, the theory of simultaneous entry by North and South into the United Nations is a product of the U.S. imperialists' aggressive policy toward the Korean Peninsula and a theory aimed at perpetuating the nation's division with a view to fabricating two Koreas. The U.S. imperialists have long schemed to forever hang onto at least South Korea as their colony and military base by realizing the theory of a simultaneous entry into the United Nations.

Entry into the United Nations by North and South can only be interpreted as sacrificing our nation's interests to the splittist policy of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges. If the North and the South should separately enter the United Nations, our country, which is a single nation-state, would be internationally recognized as two countries. Therefore, if the North and the South separately enter the United Nations and two Koreas are fabricated, the North and the South, which have long maintained different ideologies and systems, would find it even more difficult to understand and unite with each other. Division would be perpetuated forever, and the danger of a new war on the Korean Peninsula would grow greater. This is surely a great danger to peace in Asia and the world as well as to peace and the peaceful reunification on the Korean Peninsula.

This being the case, the North has consistently opposed the simultaneous entry of North and South into the United Nations, claiming that it is aimed at fabricating two Koreas and perpetuating the present division. This notwithstanding, it is really preposterous that Kim Kyong-won babbled that the North's opposition to simultaneous entry into the United Nations by North and South is an act for perpetuating division. In a word, Kim Kyong-won's gibberish represents the present dictatorial regime's position, revealing its splittist nature by slandering the correct stand of the North for reunification and by perpetuating the present division.

That day Kim Kyong-won babbled that he would try his best to have the political arena known as the United Nations function as a more effective forum for efforts on the question of the Korean Peninsula. This is also shameless gibberish aimed at perpetuating division. Basically, the issues of the Korean Peninsula and the fatherland's reunification are the supreme tasks for our people to resolve, and they are our nation's internal affairs. Thus, as long as the United Nations does not represent us as a nation, it has no right to intervene in the Korean issue.

Nevertheless, Kim Kyong-won said that he would try his best to make the political arena -- the United Nations -- function as a more effective forum for the Korean issue. He exposed that they will cover up their hostile nature, aggravating tension on the Korean Peninsula, in the name of the United Nations, and they will further stick to machinations of war and division.

In conclusion, Kim Kyong-won's remarks are criminal gibberish which openly exposed their intention to keep on trying to perpetuate the present division by slandering the correct reunification policy of the North and covering up their splittist nature. The Chon Tu-hwan ring cannot cover up its splittist nature with any tactics. Our people will never tolerate the Chon Tu-hwan ring's criminal splittist machinations. The Chon Tu-hwan ring should not adhere to splittist machinations aimed at maintaining his easy life and long-term power, but should immediately step down from power.

VRPR SAYS CHON'S FATE TO BE DECIDED IN FEBRUARY

SK151513 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] According to the NEW KOREA TIMES, a paper published by Koreans in Canada, a source from the Korean residents in Japan reported on the crisis of the Chon Tu-hwan clique, saying that its destiny will be decided around February 1982. The source did not attempt to conceal the fact that such intelligence was leaked overseas via a retired general of the (?South Korean) Army.

The source also reported that reports are widespread in Seoul that the U.S. side, in view of daily increasing anti-U.S. sentiment in South Korea, has reached the conclusion that Chon Tu-hwan is not able to pacify public sentiment. The report said that members of the U.S. Embassy and intelligence officials visited Kwangju to sample popular sentiment and that they were shocked by the undisguised anti-U.S. sentiments exhibited by the citizens of Kwangju.

Citing the example of Vietnam, the source from Japan said that there are clear signs that the United States is seriously considering the expulsion of Chon Tu-hwan, just as it drove out General Minh, whom it used to murder Ngo Dinh Diem.

The report noted that U.S. officials in Seoul are disappointed over the fact that Chon Tu-hwan is exploiting Mun Son-myong to maintain long-term power. The news source said that U.S. intelligence agencies in Seoul are very concerned over increasing anti-U.S. sentiment in South Korea. The source also said that the U.S. plan of shirking its responsibility for the Kwangju incident and blaming it on Chon Tu-hwan is being smoothly carried out. The source said that, while coldly treating retired generals, Chon Tu-hwan and his faction are granting financial favors to field grade officers who graduated from the military academy to curry favor with them. The source said that many young officers dislike the present policy of making the rich richer and the poor poorer.

Referring to the February crisis, the source pointed to economic causes. Foreign loans total more than $30 billion at present, and there will be a shortage of $9.2 billion in foreign currency this year, the source said. The source said that Chon Tu-hwan will meet a fate similar to that of Pak Chong-hui.

VRPR ON KIM CHONG-IL'S BENEVOLENT LOVE

SK210452 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 3 Jan 82

[Talk on "Benevolent Love"]

[Excerpts] One day in September 1960, a young man named (Choe Yong-hui) who hailed from Seoul, South Korea, entered Kim Il-song University. After he went to the North during the Korean war as a member of the South Korean Volunteer Army, he was leading a happy life thanks to the care of the great Gen Kim Il-song. (Choe Yong-hui) married a girl who was also a member of the South Korean Volunteer Army. He was already the father of two children. His wife was also a student at Hamhung Communist College. Gen Kim Il-song sent (Choe Yong-hui) to Kim Il-song University to foster him as an able cadre so that he can work in his birthplace after the country is reunified.

Entering Kim Il-song University, (Choe Yong-hui) received the warm love of Gen Kim Il-song and the care of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il.

One day right after he entered Kim Il-song University, (Choe Yong-hui) met the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il for the first time. He went to a classroom of the university to hear the regular lecture. He was the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il walking into the classroom with a smile. He went over to Comrade Kim Chong-il together with other students to greet him.

The dear comrade leader warmly exchanged greetings with the students. Finding that (Choe Yong-hui) hailed from the South, the dear comrade leader asked him about his name, age, birthplace and family status, holding his hands and encouraging him to study hard for the people in the South. The dear comrade leader continued: The leader loves functionaries from the southern half of the republic [words indistinct]. So, you should not forget the leader's love toward the comrades from the South and study hard.

The comrade leader cordially said that the revolution should continue for the country's reunification and that we should therefore more firmly prepare ourselves politically, ideologically and practically. Moved by this statement by the dear comrade leader, (Choe Yong-hui) once again felt his happiness and the warm love of the leader and the dear comrade leader.

One day in early April 1961, (Choe Yong-hui) heard a news report at a classroom of the university that the South Korean youth and students had waged a demonstration, demanding that a conference of students of the North and South be convened at Panmunjom. This news deeply moved (Choe Yong-hui) who hails from Seoul. He discussed this report with his fellow students until late at night. At that moment, the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il walked into the classroom. He asked the students what they were discussing. (Choe Yong-hui) stood up and explained their discussion, asking him to comment on the South Korean situation and South Korean students' struggle.

The dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il with a big smile declined to comment on this at first, saying that he had little knowledge about the South Korean situation. However, repeatedly asked by the students, the dear comrade leader finally agreed to comment on the South Korean situation.

The dear comrade leader sharply analyzed some of the noticeable characteristics found in the South Korean situation and the South Korean students' struggle. He then said: The South Korean revolution and the country's reunification can be successfully achieved only by the outstanding ideology and policy of the great leader.

The dear comrade leader continued: The purpose of our study at the university is also to achieve this goal. We should not forget the fact that the South Korean people are struggling with blood even at this moment when we are leading a happy life in the North. We should study hard.

The happy and rewarding days of (Choe Yong-hui) passed amid the warm love and care of the dear comrade leader. One night in autumn the dear comrade leader called in (Choe Yong-hui) and asked about his family and birthplace.

Then he said as follows: Comrade (Choe Yong-hui), you have become a father of two children. But, your parents have never seen their grandchildren. This is indeed a tragedy. This is not merely a tragedy for a family but a tragedy for a nation.

Thanks to the warm love and care of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, a person once rejected in the past has become a stately revolutionary fighter today. He is Mr (Choe Yong-hui).

PRESIDENT URGES WATERTIGHT DEFENSE AGAINST NORTH

SK210226 Seoul YONHAP in English 0208 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 21 (YONHAP) -- North Korea is reviewing and increasing its all-out war capabilities against South Korea, with its leader Kim Il-song's 70th birthday, which is due this spring, serving as momentum for reinforcing war preparations. The warning was issued Thursday by President Chon Tu-hwan while chairing a meeting on counter-espionage measures, attended by key military commanders and law enforcement officials.

We should maintain a water-tight defense posture against any attempt by the North Korean communists to provoke and stir up agitation in the South in any form and at any time, he said.

The chief executive urged the participants not to forget that the North Koreans would not hesitate to initiate provocative acts, and to infiltrate armed spies into the South, if it spots any slight vulnerability in the southern defense posture. There is even a possibility, the president went on, of Pyongyang attempting reckless anti-Seoul maneuvers, in a bid to offset its internal conflicts caused by the establishment in the North of the hereditary ruling system involving Kim and his son.

Chon said he was also worried about Pyongyang's determination to communize the Korean Peninsula by violent means, to further intensify unrest on the peninsula, in order to obstruct development in the South, as the gap between the respective strengths of the two Koreas widens, in favor of Seoul.

ROK-JAPAN SUMMIT TALKS TO BE HELD IN MAY

SK210220 Seoul YONHAP in English 0158 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 21 (YONHAP) -- In an effort to clinch their negotiations on Seoul's standing request for Japanese loans, Japan and South Korea have agreed on a timetable, which provides for a foreign ministers' meeting in March and summit talks in May, Foreign Ministry sources said Thursday. The sources also said that a second round of preparatory talks would be held in Tokyo next month to make necessary arrangements for the Korean-Japanese foreign ministers' meeting.

Last week, officials from both sides met in Seoul for the first round of preparatory talks for the foreign ministers' talks, which is to deal with South Korea's request for six billion U.S. dollars in concessional loans from Tokyo, and another four billion dollars in Japanese Export-Import Bank loans. South Korea is calling for a "political and package deal" on its loan request, while Japan initially requested a project-by-project study. The sources said the two sides were nearing an agreement on how to approach the issue, but they did not elaborate.

According to the sources, South Korea presented a listing of 11 projects which need to be financed by the Japanese loans during last week's working-level talks. They include neither defense nor heavy industry projects. The outline of the list is as follows.

1) Expansion of piped water system
2) Expansion of sewerage facilities
3) Pavement of roads
4) Construction of a multi-purpose dam
5) Augmentation of educational facilities
6) Augmentation of medical facilities
7) Anti-pollution project
8) Construction of a subway in Pusan
9) Creation of a natural gas supply line in Seoul and the adjacent port city of Inchon
10) Modernization of the railway system
11) Construction of housing units.

TRADE DEFICIT WITH JAPAN REACHES $21.64 BILLION

SK210116 Seoul YONHAP in English 0037 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 21 (YONHAP) -- Korea's trade deficit with Japan amounted to 21.64 billion dollars as of last year, since 1966, when the two countries established full diplomatic relations, the Korea Trade Promotion Corp. (KOTRA) said Thursday. Korea's exports to Japan during the period totaled 21.27 billion dollars, while imports from Japan amounted to 42.91 billion dollars, according to KOTRA.

KOTRA officials attributed the trade imbalance to Korea's high dependence on Japanese machinery, materials for textile industry, and steel and other metallic products.

In 1980, Japan accounted for 48.9 percent of Korea's machinery imports and for 50.3 percent of textile industry materials and products. Japan, however, imposes high custom rates on imports of light industry goods, which represent Korea's chief export to Japan.

ROK TO INVITE JAPANESE LAWMAKERS TO IMPROVE TIES

SK210211 Seoul YONHAP in English 0111 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 21 (YONHAP) -- The Seoul side of the Korean-Japanese Parliamentarians' Union has decided to invite a number of Japanese lawmakers and politicians to visit Korea this year in bid to step up political and diplomatic cooperation between the two countries. Officials at the parliamentarians' union said Thursday that among those invited would be factional leaders of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party and bosses of such middle-of-the-road and lef-wing parties as the New Liberal Club, the Socialist Democratic League and the Komeito Party.

The decision was arrived at during this year's first meeting of secretaries of the union's subcommittees and higher officials, held Wednesday in the National Assembly building, under the chairmanship of Yi Chae-hyong of the fuling Democratic Justice Party. Some 60 lawmakers from the Liberal Democratic Party are expected to visit Seoul before May. Among them are Kunikichi Saito, the party's former secretary general of incumbent Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's group, and Daisuke Akita, the lower house's former vice speaker of former Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda's group. Some 30 politicians from middle-of-the-road and left-wing parties will also be invited to visit Seoul in the first half of this year. Among them are Chairman Seiichi Dakawa of the New Liberal Club and leader Hideo Den of the Socialist Democratic League and ranking officials of the Komeito Party and the Democratic Socialist Party.

Also discussed during the Wednesday meeting were preparations for a joint meeting of secretaries of the two countries' parliamentary unions, slated for April 7 in Seoul, and preparations for the 10th joint annual meeting of the unions, slated for early September in Tokyo, according to officials. As a means of invigorating the unions' subcommittee activities, a meeting of subcommittees for the legal status of Korean residents in Japan will be held in Tokyo Feb. 15, which will be followed by meetings of the social-culture subcommittees and of the security-diplomacy subcommittees, the officials said.

TWO MORE NUCLEAR POWERPLANTS TO BE CONSTRUCTED

SK210235 Seoul YONHAP in English 0212 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 21 (YONHAP) -- Korea will complete the construction of the Kori No. Two and the Wolsong No. One nuclear power plants, the country's second and third nuclear power facilities, by January next year, sources at the Ministry of Energy and Resources said Thursday. According to the sources, the government plans to advance by one year the construction of the Kori No. Two plant which has a capacity of 650,000 kW and by four months the construction of the Wolsong No. One plant which has a capacity of 678,000 kW. The two nuclear stations will be under test operation beginning July this year.

The advance of construction will result in the reduction of the country's electricity cost by an average of 180 billion won (about 257 million U.S. dollars) per year, according to a ministry estimate. When completed, the U.S.-supplied Kori No. Two and the Canadian-supplied Wolsong No. One nuclear reactors will also contribute significantly to reducing Korea's reliance on imported oil.

INDUSTRIAL PROJECTS FUNDING SET AT 14 BILLION WON

SK210521 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 21 Jan 82 p 8

[Text] The government plans to concentrate on developing special technology which industries require immediately by investing some 70 percent of the budget earmarked for the development of science and technology this year, the first year of the Five-Year Social and Economic Development Plan. According to a special research and development plan worked out by the Ministry of Science and Technology in accordance with the five-year plan, the government earmarked a total of 14 billion won of the budget this year for the initiation of large-scale government projects and short-term industrial projects.

By the plan, the long- and mid-term government projects will include genetic engineering, advanced computer applied designing, and manufacturing technology, the safety study of nuclear power plants, small personal airplane and the safety of chemicals, officials said.

The industrial projects are expected to be advanced mechanical engineering, fine chemistry, solid state, computer system, and metal materials. Some 70 percent of the total budget will be invested in the projects in order to develop technology which industries need, officials said.

PREMIER ADDRESSES DIPLOMATIC MISSION CHIEFS

SK200209 Seoul YONHAP in English 0206 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 20 (YONHAP) -- Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun Wednesday called on Korean diplomatic missions to do their best in promoting trade with the governments to which they are posted, to help attain the nation's export target for 1982, set at 25 billion dollars, and to smoothly implement the Fifth Five-Year Socio-Economic Plan, which starts from this year.

In a speech delivered at the opening of a four-day meeting of Korean diplomatic mission chiefs posted in Europe, North America, South America and Asia, the premier also urged the exerting of efforts to rally different governments' support for Seoul's peace initiatives to resume a dialogue with Pyongyang for the ultimate unification of the divided peninsula. The prime minister also said that the mission chiefs abroad should take the 1986 Asian Games and the 1988 Summer Olympics, scheduled to be held in Seoul, as opportunities for improving relations with communist bloc countries. The diplomatic mission chiefs were also urged to take proper measures to protect the rights of Korean residents abroad who keep growing in number.

Thirty-six diplomatic chiefs, including Ambassador to the United States Yu Pyong-hyon, and Ambassador to Japan Choe Kyong-nok, are attending the meeting at the capitol building. Foreign Minister No Sin-yong is presiding over the annual meeting, in which the government's foreign policy and guidelines for the new year will be given, and developments in the diplomats' host countries, as well as the international situation in general, will be reviewed.

SIANG PASASON SUPPORTS SRV ATTITUDE TOWARD PRC

BK191258 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 19 Jan 82

[SIANG PASASON 19 January commentary: "Support the SRV's Correct Attitude"]

[Text] China launched a war of aggression against Vietnam in February 1979, using as many as 600,000 military personnel to nibble away at Vietnam's territory. However, this aggression was defeated by the Vietnamese army and people. Since then the situation in the border areas between the two countries has become so tense that a new war could break out any time. This is attributable to continuous provocations commited by Chinese authorities.

In the face of such a tense situation, the people and Government of the SRV have always adhered to the principle of solving all Vietnam-China problems through negotiations aimed at restoring relations between the two nations and the friendship which existed for many generations between the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples.

The Vietnamese side has, on several occasions, sought every possible method to resolve the problems, proposing the signing of a bilateral agreement on the existence of peace between the two countries and persistently calling on the Chinese side to continue talks. Nevertheless, China has unilaterally attempted to sabotage this effort. Meanwhile, the Vietnamese side has proposed annually that the two sides halt military activities and agree to a cease-fire in the border areas during the traditional Tet festival, in an attempt to enable the two peoples living in the border areas to celebrate the festival joyfully and peacefully. However, the Chinese authorities have categorically rejected Vietnam's good intentions.

On 14 January 1982, the Chinese authorities once again resolutely rejected the 28 December 1981 official notes sent by the SRV Foreign Ministry to the PRC counterpart. The note proposed that the two sides halt military activities and agree to a cease-fire in the border areas from 20 to 29 January 1982.

The Chinese authorities' rejection and their armed provocations in the past few weeks in Vietnam's northern provinces constitute serious opposition to the aspirations of the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples living in the border areas, who want to celebrate the festival joyfully. At the same time, such acts show the bellicose nature of the Chinese authorities, who want to swallow up other countries and continue to create a tense situation, which runs contrary to the common interests of the peoples of the two countries.

Nevertheless, displaying the good intentions of the SRV people and government, and for the friendship between the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples, Vietnam's armed forces and border defense units posted in the border areas will unilaterally and strictly implement the above-mentioned official note of the SRV Foreign Ministry. If the Chinese side takes advantage of Vietnam's good intentions to create disturbances against the SRV, the Vietnamese armed forces and people will inevitably exercise their legitimate right to self-defense. The Chinese authorities must be held responsible for all the consequences caused by their actions.

The people and Government of the LPDR approve the just stand of the SRV and would like to denounce the stubborn stand unilaterally taken by the Chinese side.

VNA INTERVIEWS SALI VONGKHAMSAO ON STATE PLANS

BK161028 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0430 GMT 13 Jan 82

["Answers" of Sali Vongkhamsao, secretary in the Secretariat of the LPRP Central Committee, deputy prime minister and chairman of the National Planning Committee, in an interview with Do Van Phuong, chief of the VNA office in Laos -- date not given, read by announcer]

[Text] The first year of the First 5-Year State Plan was 1981, during which excellent achievements were recorded in the implementation of the national plan. At present, the Lao people of all nationalities are joyously marching forward to implement this plan in 1982, which is the second year of the plan.

Achievements scored in each year of the plan will create favorable conditions for the overall fulfillment of the 5-year state plan. The achievements of the 5-year plan will create a profound significance for our society and economy because such a development will effect a change in the situation in our country, and will gear all economic foundations to serve our economic construction and will transform our economy into a genuinely independent and sovereign economy, thus creating the necessary conditions for the formulation of a new plan in the new period -- a plan which will effect appropriate and timely development.

Achievements in the Implementation of the National Plan in 1981

In conjunction with the historic victories scored by the Vietnamese people in 1975 as well as by the Kampuchean revolution in the recent past, the Lao revolution also scored a total nationwide victory in the struggle to liberate our country, to overthrow the monarchical regime, to establish the LPDR and to open a new era in the history of the Lao nation.

Over the past 5 years -- 1975 to 1980 -- under the leadership of the LPRP headed by General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan, the Lao people of all nationalities, uniting as one, scored glorious achievements in the tasks of rehabilitating production, transforming and building the economy and culture, healing the wounds of war, and safeguarding and building the young LPDR, which is an outpost of socialism in Southeast Asia. The achievements scored by the Lao people in the past cannot be separated from the overall victory of the three Indochinese peoples and the assistance rendered by the international community, including the cooperation among the three Indochinese countries and the assistance given by the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries.

Through our experience and actual deeds, we can testify that it is true that the development and enhancement of the special relationship and all-round cooperation between the Indochinese countries and the Soviet Union is a necessary and decisive factor for all victories of the revolution and socialist construction in Laos.

The implementation of the national plan in 1981 has resulted in an overall increase of 8.6 percent in national production compared to that in 1980. Of this, production of primary goods has increased as follows: the agricultural sector by 18.8 percent, and the industrial sector by 13.1 percent -- light industry by 23.6 percent and heavy industry by 4.9 percent. The national income has increased by 9.2 percent, including internal revenue, which has increased by 16.8 percent. Even though the achievements in the production of primary goods are the main source of national revenues, the government also appropriated part of the national budgets for economic and social development. In 1981 the national savings funds increased by 33.9 percent while the national spending funds increased by 11.4 percent compared to 1980. Government appropriations for 1981 economic and social development increased by 33.9 percent compared to the previous year. Relying on prevailing conditions, the government used about 60 percent of the total investment for agricultural and transport and communications development. As a result, the material facilities in these sectors have increased markedly.

It can be said that our agricultural production in the past 2 years was excellent. We produced over 1 million tons of rice in 1980 and 1,154,000 tons in 1981. On average, each Lao citizen could produce about 330 kilos of grain per year. Production of starch and industrial crops in 1981 also increased as follows: corn by 15 percent, cassava and taro by 21 percent, green peas by 15 percent, soybeans by 18 percent, peanuts by 9 percent, tobacco by 154.5 percent, coffee beans by 13 percent, and cotton by 3 percent compared to 1980. Thanks to the increase in grain production, we did not have to import rice for consumption as before. This was a great victory unprecedented in Lao history. It clearly shows that we are now capable of becoming self-sufficient in food production.

In addition, several industrial enterprises managed to overfulfill the 1981 production targets. For example, the electricity generating enterprise produced 807 million kilowatt/hours — an average of 230 kilowatt/hours per person; the machine repair enterprise stepped up work by 144 percent; the electrical cords enterprise increased production by 200 percent; brick factories increased production by 133 percent; wood furniture increased production by 100 percent; soap factories increased production by 159 percent; and the cigarette enterprise increased production by 100 percent.

In the cultural and social sector, we enthusiastically continued educational development and training of technical cadres and workers for various important national economic branches. The number of formal education students in the 1981-82 school year increased by 11 percent compared to that of the 1980-81 school year: that of the higher education level by 51 percent; that of the intermediate education level by 41 percent; and that of the primary education level by 78 percent; on average, 1 out of 3.5 persons is now in school.

The literacy campaign and the cultural training program have been carried out extensively throughout the country. So far about two-thirds of all the provinces in the country have completed literacy campaigns. These great achievements would never have been realized if the campaigns had been carried out under the old regime.

The cultural, propaganda, press, photography, film projection, and sports services also have been developed along with other services. The vestiges of colonialist and neocolonialist culture have been gradually wiped out, and a new progressive culture has been installed. The party and state have paid close attention to carrying out public health and disease control services to serve the people and cadres and train more medical cadres for the public. The number of intermediate and highly qualified medical cadres has increased by 8 percent, and that of the primary level by 27 percent, while the number of hospitals beds increased by 4.3 percent compared to 1980.

All the achievements scored in the implementation of the national plan in 1981 have created a new atmosphere conducive for marching forward to implement the plan in 1982.

Capabilities for the Implementation of the National Plan in 1982

The direction of the national plan for 1982 is aimed at mobilizing the entire party, army and people to launch emulation campaigns joyously, to promote production further with a view to improving the people's living conditions, to consolidate and develop the socialist production relations step by step, and to practice thrift in national construction. At the same time, we must strive to consolidate the national defense and public security tasks, and safeguard and securely preserve the LPDR, a Southeast Asian outpost of the socialist system. According to this direction, the fundamental duty of the national plan for 1982 is to ensure the rapid development of all branches of the national economy.

It is predicted that overall national production in 1982 will increase by 16 percent compared to 1981, and national revenues by 65 percent -- of which internal revenues will increase by 7 percent. The national savings funds will increase by 19 percent, while the national spending funds will increase by 6.5 percent in 1982 compared to 1981.

Investment for building foundations for social and economic development in 1982 will increase by 19 percent. Of this, investment from domestic sources will increase by 32.4 percent, and from foreign sources by 13.6 percent compared to 1981.

To meet requirements in agricultural development and to improve transport and communications work, the government plans to increase investment in the agricultural sector by 28.2 percent, and the transport and communications sector by 31.1 percent. It is predicted that food production in 1982 will be 1,218,000 tons -- 1,183,000 of which will be paddy. As a result, each citizen will be provided with an average of 335 kilos of paddy per year.

Industrial and handicraft production in 1982 will increase by 47 percent. Of this, the production of industrial enterprises in category A will increase by 44 percent, and category B by 50 percent compared to 1981. Electricity production will increase by 1 percent, chemical production by 64 percent, machine production by 41 percent, timber exploitation and processing industry by 80 percent, construction materials production by 44 percent, food processing production by 55 percent, household utensils production by 27 percent, medicine production by sixfold, and other industrial services by 82 percent compared to 1981.

The circulation of goods through state and collective shops will increase by 33.1 percent. The value of export goods will increase by 2.4 times compared to 1981.

As for the cultural and social sectors, it will continue to develop. The number of formal education students for the 1982-83 school year will increase by 7.9 percent, the kindergarten pupils by 22.3 percent, the vocational students by 5.2 percent, and the students sent to schools abroad by 32.7 percent compared to the 1981-82 school year.

The satellite communications station built with Soviet assistance will begin relaying television programs from various countries throughout the world for local viewers by 1982.

The fulfillment of the targets of the national plan for 1982 will result in the improvement of the Lao people's material and moral life. To ensure the fulfillment of the targets of the national plan for 1982, the party Central Committee and the government have outlined procedures and methods to do away with all weak points which post obstacles to our economic management and the work in organizing and guiding the implementation of the plan.

Under the leadership of the LPRP led by Comrade General Secretary and Prime Minister Kaysone Phomvihan, with the determination of the entire party, army and people, and with the assistance and cooperation from the socialist countries, we are confident that the national plan for 1982 will be fulfilled gloriously.

ARMY ISSUES INSTRUCTION ON 33D ANNIVERSARY

[Instruction issued by army Political Department on the traditional celebration of the 33d founding anniversary of the LPLA -- dated 12 January 1982]

[Text] To the party committees and commanders at all levels in the entire army: The 33d founding anniversary of the LPLA, 20 January 1982, is approaching. This historical day comes at a time when our various armed forces have been qualitatively and quantitatively built, consolidated and developed to another higher level in all political, ideological and organizational fields. Under the talented, clear-sighted leadership of the party, our army, together with the people of various nationalities, has carried out activities to smash all enemy schemes, thereby securely defending the country and maintaining peace and public order. Tranquillity in the country has been basically maintained.

On the battlefield of national construction and development, particularly in the economic field, in 1980-81 our army and people have scored great, basic and firm achievements. In the past 2 consecutive years, our army and people have fulfilled in advance the rice-harvesting plan adopted by the party and state. As a result, the slogan on endeavor to be self-sufficient and self-reliant in food, particularly in rice, has been realized.

This is an unprecedented, historical success of our army and people. Many achievements have also been scored in building economic establishments as well as in the educational, cultural, public health and other fields.

The world situation has continued to become more complicated. This is because the imperialists, with the U.S. imperialists as chieftains, the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists, and other reactionaries have continued to collude in an extremely reactionary manner in the era in opposing the Soviet Union, socialism and world revolution. They have competed absurdly in producing and accumulating weapons, carrying out strategic schemes, and practicing a new, total war and psychological warfare to change peacefully [as heard] the situation in Southeast Asia, in particular in the three countries of Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea. They have striven repeatedly to implement their strategic schemes against the revolution in a very brutal, barbarous manner. However, they have fallen into a position of decline in wantonly carrying out the strategic schemes against the revolution. They now have been driven into an all-round crisis and have become weakened with each passing day. Their bloodthirsty acts have been denounced and opposed by socialist and progressive public opinion throughout the world. As a result, they have been isolated daily and repeatedly have suffered ever more serious defeats. These have created favorable conditions for the cause of socialist transformation and construction in our country to continue to march forward firmly.

Our entire army and people, after successfully fulfilling the 1981 plan, now are endeavoring continuously to carry out large-scale emulation campaigns in an enthusiastic atmosphere in the defense and building of the country in the second year of the First 5-Year Plan of the socialist state. This is in order to score achievements to welcome the 33d founding anniversary of the LPLA on 20 January and the 27th founding anniversary of our glorious LPRP on 22 March. Our entire armed forces are opening campaigns to carry on political life and maintain a new line of thinking and attitude. It is true that the enemies have suffered repeated, serious defeats, but they have not yet abandoned their ruthless intention against the revolution. They have continued to collude in stepping up the implementation of all their schemes and tricks of infiltration, aggression, destruction and sabotage with a view to swallowing up our country and all three Indochinese countries. They have continuously pursued schemes of psychological warfare in a very cruel and subtle manner with the hope of changing the situation peacefully in the three Indochinese countries. Therefore, we absolutely cannot ease or relax our vigilance.

To organize the celebration to mark the anniversary of 20 January this year appropriately with profound significance, the army Political Department issues the following introductory instruction:
